CHAPTER I.

The genealogy of Christ divided into three classes of fourteen generations each: The first fourteen, from Abraham to David, 2-6. The second fourteen, from Solomon to Jechonias, 7-10. The third fourteen, from Jechonias to Christ, 11-16. The sum of these generations, 17. Christ is conceived by the Holy Ghost, and born of the Virgin Mary, when she was espoused to Joseph, 18. Joseph's anxiety and doubts are removed by the ministry of an Angel, 19, 20; by whom the child is named JESUS, 21. The fulfilment of the prophecy of Isaiah relative to this, 22, 23. Joseph takes home his wife, Mary, and Christ is born, 24, 25.

THE book of the * generation of Jesus Christ, ^b the son of David, ^c the son of Abraham. 2 ^d Abraham begat Isaac; and ^e Isaac begat Jacob; and ^f Jacob begat Judas and his brethren;

3 And ^g Judas begat Phares and Zara of Thamar; and ^h Phares begat Esrom; and Esrom begat Aram;

4 And Aram begat Aminadab; and Aminadab begat Naasson; and Naasson begat Salmon;

5 And Salmon begat Booz of Rachab; and Booz begat Obed of Ruth; and Obed begat Jesse;

Verse 1. The book of the generation of Jesus Christ] I suppose these words to have been the original title to this Gospel; and that they signify, according to the Hebrew phraseology, not only the account of the genealogy of Christ, as detailed below, but the history of his birth, acts, sufferings, death, resurrection, and ascension.

The son of David, the son of Abraham.] No person ever born could boast, in a direct line, a more illustrious ancestry than Jesus Christ. Among his progenitors, the regal, sacerdotal, and prophetic offices, existed in all their glory and splendour. DAVID, the most renowned of sovereigns, was king and prophet: ABRAHAM, the most perfect character in all antiquity, whether sacred or profane, was priest and prophet: but the three offices were never united except in the person of Christ; he alone was prophet, priest, and king; and possessed and executed these offices in such a supereminent degree, as no human being ever did, or ever could do.

It is remarkable, that the Evangelist names David before Abraham, though the latter was many generations older: the reason seems to be this, that David was not only the most illustrious of our Lord's predecessors, as being both king and prophet; but because that promise, which at first was given to Abraham, and afterwards, through successive generations, confirmed to the Jewish people, was at last determined and restricted to the family of David.

6 And ⁱ Jesse begat David the king; and ^j David the king begat Solomon of her that had been the wife of Urias;

7 And ^k Solomon begat Roboam; and Roboam begat Abia; and Abia begat Asa;

8 And Asa begat Josaphat; and Josaphat begat Joram; and Joram begat Ozias;

9 And Ozias begat Joatham; and Joatham begat Achaz; and Achaz begat Ezekias;

10 And ^l Ezekias begat Manasses; and Manasses begat Amon; and Amon begat Josias; xxix. 35.—^g Gen. xxxviii. 27.—^h Ruth iv. 13, &c. 1 Chron. ii. 6, 9, &c.—ⁱ Sam. xvi. 1. xvii. 12.—^j 2 Sam. xii. 24.—^k 1 Chron. iii. 10, &c.—^l 2 Kings xx. 21. 1 Chron. iii. 13.

Verse 2. Abraham begat Isaac] In this genealogy, those persons only, among the ancestors of Christ, which formed the direct line, are specified.

Verse 3. Phares and Zara] The remarkable history of these twins may be seen in Gen. xxxviii.

Verse 8. Jesse begat Ozias] See 2. Chron. xxvi. 16, &c. Ozias was ^{the} immediate son of Joram; there were three kings between them, Ahaziah, Joash, and Amaziah, which swell the fourteen generations to seventeen; but omissions of this kind are not uncommon in the Jewish genealogies.

St. Matthew took up the genealogies just as he found them in the public Jewish records, which, though they were in the main correct, yet were deficient in many particulars.

Verse 11. Josias begat Jechonias, &c.] There are three considerable difficulties in this verse. 1. Josias was not the father of Jechonias; he was only the grand-father of that prince: 1 Chron. iii. 14—16. 2. Jechonias had no brethren; at least, none are on record. 3. Josias died 20 years before the Babylonish captivity took place, and therefore Jechonias and his brethren could not have been begotten about the time they were carried away to Babylon. To this may be added a fourth difficulty, viz., there are only thirteen in this 2d class of generations; or forty-one, instead of forty-two, in the whole. But all these difficulties disappear, by adopting a reading found in many MSS. And Josias begat JEHOIAKIM, 11 And ^aJosias^b begat Jechonias and his brethren, about the time they were ^ccarried away to Babylon:

12 And after they were brought to Babylon, ^dJechonias begat Salathiel; and Salathiel begat ^eZorobabel;

13 And Zorobabel begat Abiud; and Abiud begat Eliakim; and Eliakim begat Azor;

14 And Azor begat Sadoc; and Sadoc begat Achim; and Achim begat Eliud;

15 And Eliud begat Eleazar; ^fand Eleazar begat Matthan; and Matthan begat Jacob;

16 And ^gJacob begat Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ.

17 So all the generations from Abraham to David, are fourteen generations; and from David until the carrying away into Babylon, are fourteen generations; and from the carrying away into Babylon, unto Christ, are fourteen generations.

18 Now the ^hbirth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child ⁱof the Holy Ghost,

19 Then Joseph, her husband, being a just man,

^aSome read, Josias begat Jakim and Jakim begat Jechonias.—^bSee 1 Chron. iii. 15, 16.—^c2 Kings xxiv. 14, 15, 16. xxy 11, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 10, 20. Jer. xxvii. 20. xxxix. 9. iii. 1, 15, 28, 29, 30. or Joakim, and JOAKIM begat Jechonias. Josiah was the immediate father of Jehoiakim (called also Eliakim and Joakim) and his brethren, who were Johanan, Zedekiah, and Shallum; see 1 Chron. iii. 15. Joakim was the father of Joachin or Jechonias, about the time of the first Babylonish captivity: for we may reckon three Babylonish captivities. [This reading rests on a slender authority, and the solution of the difficulty must be sought elsewhere.]

Verse 16. Jesus, who is called Christ. As the word Christ signifies the anointed or anointer, it answers exactly to the Hebrew mashiach, which we pronounce Messiah, or Messias; this word comes from the root mashac, signifying the same thing.

Priests, prophets, and kings, among the Jews, were anointed in order to the legitimate exercise of their respective offices. Hence the word Christ, or Mashiach, became a name of dignity, and often signified the same as king. See Isa. xlv. 1. Psal. cv. 15. Lev. iv. 3, vi. 20. 1 Sam. ii. 10.

Verse 18. Espoused to Joseph] The original word refers to the previous marriage agreement, in which the parties mutually bound themselves to each other; without which, no woman was ever married among the Jews.

Before they came together] The woman was espoused at her own, or her father's house; and, generally, some time elapsed before she was taken home to the house of her husband. Deut. xx. 7. Judg. xiv. 7, 8.

Among the Jews, the espousal, though the marriage had not been consummated, was considered as perfectly legal and binding on both sides; and hence, a breach of this contract was considered as a case of adultery, and punished exactly in the same way. See Deut. xxii. 23, 24. Nor could a contract of this kind, though there was no cohabitation, be broken but by a regular divorce.

She was found with child] What conversation passed between her and Joseph, on this discovery, we are not informed, but the issue proves that it was not satisfactory to him: nor could he resolve to consider her as his wife, till God had sent his angel to bear the most unequivocal testimony to the virgin's innocence.

Verse 19. To make her a public example] Though Joseph was a righteous man, and knew that the law required that such persons as he supposed his wife to be should be put to death, yet, as righteousness is ever directed by mercy, he determined to put her away or divorce her privately, i. e., without assigning any cause, that her life might be saved; and, as the offence was against himself, he had a right to pass it by if he chose.

Verse 20. That which is conceived (or formed) in her] So I think the original should be translated in this place; and not willing ^jto make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily.

20 But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife: ^kfor that which is ^lconceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.

21 ^mAnd she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name ⁿJESUS: for ^ohe shall save his people from their sins.

22 Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying,

23 ^pBehold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and ^qthey shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us.

24 Then Joseph, being raised from sleep, did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife:

25 And knew her not till she had brought forth ^rher first-born son: and he called his name JESUS.

—^hLuke i. 27.—ⁱLuke i. 35.—Deut. xxiv. 1.—^jLuke i. 85.—^kGr. begotten.—^lLuke i. 81.—^mThat is, Saviour, Heb.—ⁿActs iv. 12. v. 31. xiii. 23, 38.—^oIsa. vii. 14.—^pOr, his name shall be called.—^qExod. xiii. 2. Luke ii. 7, 21.

as it appears that the human nature of Jesus Christ was a real creation in the womb of the virgin, by the power of the Holy Spirit. The angel mentioned here was probably Gabriel, who, six months before, had been sent to Zacharias and Elisabeth, to announce the birth of Christ's forerunner, John the Baptist.

Verse 21. JESUS] The same as Joshua, Yehoshua, from yashd, he saved, delivered, put in a state of safety.

He shall save his people from their sins.] This shall be his great business in the world: the great errand on which he is come, viz., to make an atonement for, and to destroy, sin; deliverance from all the power, guilt, and pollution of sin, is the privilege of every believer in Christ Jesus. Less than this is not spoken of in the gospel; and less than this would be unbecoming the gospel. The perfection of the gospel system is not that it makes allowances for sin, but that it makes an atonement for it: not that it tolerates sin, but that it destroys it.

Verse 23. Behold, a virgin shall be with child] This prophecy is taken from Isa. vii. 14; see the notes in loco.

It may be asked, In what sense could this name Immanuel be applied to Jesus Christ, if he be not truly and properly GOD? In what sense is Christ GOD WITH US? Jesus is called Immanuel, or God with us, in his incarnation.—God united to our nature—God with man—God in man—God with us, by his continual protection.—God with us, by the influences of his Holy Spirit—in the holy sacrament—in the preaching of his word—in private prayer. And God with us, through every action of our life, that we begin, continue, and end in his name. He is God with us, to comfort, enlighten, protect, and defend us in every time of temptation and trial, in the hour of death, in the day of judgment; and God with us, and in us, and we with and in him to all eternity.

Verse 25. Her first-born son] Literally, That son of her's, the first-born one. That Mary might have had other children, any person may reasonably and piously believe; that she had others, many think exceedingly probable, and that this text is at least an indirect proof of it. However this may be, the perpetual virginity of Mary should not be made an article of faith. God has not made it one: indeed it can hardly bear the light of several texts in the Gospels.

He knew her not] Had no matrimonial intercourse with her—TILL she had brought forth that son of her's, of whom the Evangelist had been just speaking, the first-born, the eldest of the family, to whom the birth-right belonged, and who was miraculously born before she knew any man, being yet in a state of virginity. The virginity of Mary, previously to the birth of Christ, is an article of the utmost consequence to the Christian system; and therefore it is an article of faith.

He called his name JESUS.] This name was given by the command of God, see ver. 16, and was imposed on Christ when eight days old; for then, according to the Jewish law, he was circumcised: thus he had the name of Saviour given when he first began to shed that blood, without which, there could be no remission of sins.

The state of the royal family of David, the circumstances of the holy virgin and her spouse Joseph, the very remarkable prophecy of Isaiah, the literal and circumstantial fulfilment of it, the names given to our blessed Lord, the genealogical scroll of the family, &c. &c., are all so many proofs of the wisdom, goodness, and providence of God. Every occurrence seems, at first view, to be abandoned to fortuitous influence, and yet the result of each shows that God managed the whole. These circumstances are of the greatest importance; nor can the Christian Reader reflect on them without an increase of his faith and his piety.

CHAPTER II.

Wise men come from the East to worship Christ, 1, 2. Herod, hearing of the birth of our Lord, is greatly troubled, 3; and makes inquiry of the chief priests and scribes, where the Christ should be born, 4. They inform him of the prophecy relative to Bethlehem, 5, 6. The wise men, going to Bethlehem, are desired by Herod to bring him word when they have found the child, pretending that he wished to do him homage, 7, 8. The wise men are directed by a star to the place where the young child lay, adore him, and offer him gifts, 9-11. Being warned of God not to return to Herod, they depart into their own country another way, 12. Joseph and Mary are divinely warned to escape into Egypt, because Herod sought to destroy Jesus, 13, 14. They obey, and continue in Egypt till the death of Herod, 15. Herod, finding that the wise men did not return, is enraged, and orders all the young children in Bethlehem, under two years of age, to be massacred, 16-18. Herod dies, and Joseph is divinely warned to return to the land of Israel, 19-21. Finding that Archelaus reigned in Judea in place of his father Herod, he goes to Galilee, and takes up his residence at Nazareth, 22, 23.

NOW when * Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men ^b from the East to Jerusalem.

2 Saying, ^c Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen ^d his star in the East, and are come to worship him.

3 When Herod the king had heard these things, ^e he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

* Luke ii. 4, 6, 7.—^b Gen. x. 30 xxv. 6. 1 Kings iv. 30.—^c Luke ii. 11.—^d Num. xxiv. 17. Isa. lx. 3.—^e Prov. xxi. 1, 2.—^f 2 Chron. xxxvi. 14.—^g 2 Chron. xxxiv. 13. 1 Mac. v. 42. vii. 12.—^h Mal.

Verse 1. Bethlehem of Judea] This city is mentioned in Judges xvii. 7, and must be distinguished from another of the same name in the tribe of Zebulun, Josh. xix. 15. It is likewise called Ephrath, Gen. xlviii. 7, or Ephratah, Mic. v. 2, and its inhabitants, Ephrathites, Ruth i. 2. 1 Sam. xvii. 12. It is situated on the declivity of a hill, about six miles from Jerusalem. Beth-lechem, in Hebrew, signifies the house of bread. And the name may be considered as very properly applied to that place where Jesus, the Messiah, the true bread that came down from heaven, was manifested, to give life to the world. But lehem also signifies flesh, and is applied to that part of the sacrifice which was burnt upon the altar. See Lev. iii. 11-16., xxi. 6. Hence it is more proper to consider the name as signifying the house of flesh, or as some might suppose, the house of the incarnation, i.e., the place where God was manifested in the flesh for the salvation of a lost world.

In the days of the king] This was HEROD, improperly denominated the GREAT, the son of Antipater, an Idumean: he reigned 37 years in Judea, reckoning from the time he was created king of that country, by the Romans. Our blessed Lord was born in the last year of his reign; and, at this time, the sceptre had literally departed from Judah, a foreigner being now upon the throne.

There came wise men from the East] Or, Magi came from the eastern countries. It is very probable that the persons mentioned by the Evangelist were a sort of astrologers, probably of Jewish extraction, that they lived in Arabia Felix, and that, seeing this unusual appearance, they considered it as a sign that God was about to manifest himself among men, and came to worship their new-born sovereign.

Verse 2. We have seen his star] They probably considered this to be the star mentioned by Balaam, Numb. xiv. 17.

4 And when he had gathered all ⁱ the chief priests and ^j scribes of the people together, ^k he demanded of them, where Christ should be born.

5 And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet, 6 ^l And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, ^m that shall ⁿ rule my people Israel.

ii. 7.—ⁱ Mic. v. 2. John vii. 42. Luke ii. 4.—^j Rev. ii. 27.—^k Or, feed.

In the East] At its rise.

To worship him.] Or, To do him homage. The original word signifies to crouch and fawn like a dog at his master's feet. It means, to prostrate oneself to another, according to the eastern custom, which is still in use.

Verse 3. When Herod—heard these things, he was troubled] Herod's consternation was probably occasioned by the agreement of the account of the Magi with an opinion predominant throughout the East, and particularly in Judea, that some great personage would soon make his appearance for the deliverance of Israel from their enemies; and would take upon himself universal empire.

Verse 4. The chief priests] Not only the high-priest for the time being, and his deputy, with those who had formerly borne the high-priest's office; but also, the chiefs or heads of the twenty-four sacerdotal families, which David distributed into so many classes, 1 Chron. xxiv.

Scribes] The word used in the Septuagint implies a political officer, whose business it was to assist kings and civil magistrates, and to keep an account in writing of public acts and occurrences.

The word is often used, by the LXX., for a man of learning, especially for one skilled in the Mosaic law: and, in the same sense, it is used by the New Testament writers.

The word is used Acts xix. 35, for a civil magistrate at Ephesus, probably such an one as we would term recorder. It appears that Herod at this time gathered the whole Sanhedrin, in order to get the fullest information on a subject by which all his jealous fears had been alarmed.

Verse 6. And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda] To distinguish it from Bethlehem, in the tribe of Zebulun. Josh. xix. 15. See on ver. 1.

Among the princes of Juda] In Micah v. 2, it is, the thousands of Judah. There is much reason to believe that each tribe was divided into small portions called thousands, as in 7 Then * Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, inquired of them diligently, what time the star appeared.

8 And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

9 When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the East, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.

10 When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

11 And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, * they * presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

12 And being warned of God ^a in a dream, that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way.

13 And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt; and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him.

14 When he arose, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt;

15 And was there, until the death of Herod: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, * Out of Egypt have I called my son.

16 Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently inquired of the wise men.

17 Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by * Jeremy the prophet, saying, 18 In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not.

19 But when Herod was dead, behold, an angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, 20 Saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and go into the land of Israel: for they are dead, which sought the young child's life.

21 And he arose, and took the young child and his mother, and came into the land of Israel.

22 But when he heard that Archelaus did reign in Judea, in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither: notwithstanding, being warned of God in a dream, he turned aside * into the parts of Galilee:

23 And he came and dwelt in a city called ^b Nazareth: that it might be fulfilled ^c which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene.

^aPsalm ii. 1, &c. Acts iv. 25, &c.—^b1 Kings xix. 2. Ch. xxi. 19. Job v. 12. Isa. xlv. 25.—^cOr, offered. Ps. lxxii. 10.

England certain small divisions of counties are called hundreds.

That shall rule my people Israel.] Who shall FEED my people. That is, as a shepherd feeds his flock. Among the Greeks, kings are called shepherds of the people. This appellation probably originated from the pastoral employment, which kings and patriarchs did not blush to exercise in the times of primitive simplicity; and it might particularly refer to the case of David, the great type of Christ, who was a keeper of his father's sheep, before he was raised to the throne of Israel.

Verse 8. That I may come and worship him also.] What exquisite hypocrisy was here! He only wished to find out the child that he might murder him; but see how that God who searches the heart prevents the designs of wicked men from being accomplished!

Verse 9. Stood over where the young child was.] It appears to have been a simple luminous meteor, in a star-like form, which having hitherto directed them, now encompassed the head of the child; and probably this gave the first idea to the ancient painters, of representing Christ in the manger, with a glory surrounding his head. [The original does not sustain this sense.]

Verse 11. They presented unto him gifts.] The people of the East never approach the presence of kings or great personages, without a present in their hands.

Gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.] Some will have these gifts to be emblematic of the Divinity, regal office, and manhood of Christ. Rather, they offered him the things which were in most esteem among themselves; and which were productions of their own country. The gold was probably a very providential supply, as on it, it is likely, they subsisted while in Egypt.

Verse 13. Flee into Egypt] Egypt was now a Roman province, and the rage of Herod could not pursue the holy family to this place.

Verse 15. Out of Egypt have I called my son.] This is quoted from Hos. xi. 1, where the deliverance of Israel, and that only, is referred to. But as that deliverance was extraordinary, it is very likely that it had passed into a proverb, so that "Out of Egypt have I called my son," might have been used to express any signal deliverance.

Isa. lx. 6.—^dch. i. 20.—^eHos. xi. 1.—^fJer. xxxi. 15.—^gCh. iii. 13. Luke ii. 39.—^hJohn i. 45.—ⁱJudg. xlii. 6. 1 Sam. i. 11.

Verse 18. In Rama was there a voice heard] These words, quoted from Jer. xxxi. 15, were originally spoken concerning the captivity of the ten tribes; but are here elegantly applied to the murder of the innocents at Bethlehem.

Verse 20. They are dead] Both Herod and Antipater his son; though some think the plural is here used for the singular, and that the death of Herod alone is here intended.

Verse 22. When he heard that Archelaus did reign] Herod, having put Antipater his eldest son to death, gave the tetrarchy of Galilee and Perea to his son Antipas; the tetrarchy of Gaulonitis, Trachonitis, Batanea, and Panædis, to his son Philip; and the kingdom of Judea, to his eldest remaining son, Archelaus. For his tyranny and cruelty, Augustus deprived him of the government, and banished him.

He turned aside into the parts of Galilee] Here Antipas governed, who is allowed to have been of a comparatively mild disposition. He was besides in a state of enmity with his brother Archelaus; this was a most favourable circumstance to the holy family.

Verse 23. That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets] It is difficult to ascertain by what prophets this was spoken. The margin refers to Judg. xiii. 5. The second passage usually referred to is Isai. xi. 1. Both passages may have been in the eye of the Evangelist, as well as the whole institution relative to the Nazarene, delivered at large, Num. vi., where see the notes. The Evangelist evidently designed to state, that neither the sojourning at Nazareth, nor our Lord being called a Nazarene were fortuitous events, but were wisely determined and provided for in the providence of God; and therefore foretold by inspired men, or fore-represented by significant institutions.

I may add here, that the writers of the New Testament seem often to differ from those of the Old, because they appear uniformly to quote from some copy of the Septuagint version, and most of their quotations agree verbally, and often even literally, with one or others of the copies of that version which subsist to the present day.

CHAPTER III.

John the Baptist begins to preach, 1. The subject of his preaching, 2, 3. Description of his clothing and food, 4. The success of his ministry, 5, 6. His exhortation to the Pharisees, 7-9. He denounces the judgments of God against the impenitent, 10. The design of his baptism, and that of Christ, 11, 12. He baptizes Christ in Jordan, 13-15; who is attested to be the Messiah by the Holy Spirit, and a voice from heaven, 16, 17.

IN those days came *John the Baptist, preaching^b in the wilderness of Judea, 2 And saying, Repent ye: for ^cthe kingdom of heaven is at hand.

3 For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, ^dThe voice of one crying in the wilderness, ^ePrepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

4 And ^fthe same John ^ghad his raiment of Verse 1. John the Baptist] John, surnamed the Baptist, was the son of a priest named Zacharias, and his wife Elisabeth, and was born about six months before our blessed Lord. Of his almost miraculous conception and birth, we have a circumstantial account in the Gospel of Luke, chap. i. His ministry was short; for he appears to have been put to death in the 27th or 28th year of the Christian era.

Came—preaching] Proclaiming, as a herald, a matter of great and solemn importance to men; the subject not his own, nor of himself, but from that God from whom alone he had received his commission.

The wilderness of Judea] That is, the country parts, as distinguished from the city; for in this sense the word wilderness, midbar, or midbariath, is used among the Rabbins. John's manner of life gives no countenance to the hermit's life, so strongly recommended and applauded by the Roman church.

Verse 2. Repent] This was the matter of the preaching. The original verb signifies that, after hearing such preaching, the sinner is led to understand, that the way he has walked in was the way of misery, death, and hell. Repentance implies that a measure of divine wisdom is communicated to the sinner, and that he thereby becomes wise to salvation. That his mind, purposes, opinions, and inclinations are changed; and that, in consequence, there is a total change in his conduct.

The kingdom of heaven is at hand.] See Daniel, chap. vii. 13, 14, where the reign of Christ among men is expressly foretold. This phrase, and the kingdom of God, mean the same thing, viz., the dispensation of infinite mercy, and manifestation of eternal truth, by Christ Jesus. This is called a kingdom, because it has its laws, all the moral precepts of the Gospel: its subjects, all who believe in Christ Jesus: and its king, the Sovereign of heaven and earth. Jesus Christ never saved a soul which he did not govern; nor is Christ precious or estimable to any man who does not feel a spirit of subjection to the Divine will.

But why is it called the kingdom of HEAVEN? Because God designed that his kingdom of grace here should resemble the kingdom of glory above. The kingdom of heaven is not meat and drink, says St. Paul, Rom. xiv. 17; does not consist in the gratification of sensual passions, or worldly ambition; but is righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. Now what can there be more than this in glory? Righteousness, without mixture of sin; peace, without strife or contention; joy in the Holy Ghost, spiritual joy, without mixture of misery! And all this, it is possible, by the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, to enjoy here below. How then does heaven itself differ from this state? It makes the righteousness eternal, the peace eternal, and the joy eternal. This is the heaven of heavens!

Verse 3. The voice of one crying in the wilderness] The idea is taken from the practice of eastern monarchs, who, whenever they entered upon an expedition, or took a journey through a desert country, sent harbingers before them, to prepare all things for their passage; and pioneers to open the passes, to level the ways, and to remove all impediments.

Verse 4. His raiment of camel's hair] A sort of coarse camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins: and his meat was ^blocusts and ^cwild honey.

5 ^dThen went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, 6 ^eAnd were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.

7 But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, or rough covering, which, it appears, was common to the prophets, Zech. xiii. 4. In such a garment we find Elijah clothed, 2 Kings. i. 8.

Zech. xiii. 4.—^bLev. xi. 22.—^c1 Sam. xiv. 25, 26.—^dMark i. 5. Luke iii. 7.—^eActs xix. 4, 18.

His meat was locusts] This may either signify the insect called the locust, which still makes a part of the food in the land of Judea; or the top of a plant. Many eminent commentators are of the latter opinion; but the first is the most likely.

Wild honey.] Such as he got in the rocks and hollows of trees, and which abounded in Judea. See 1 Sam. xiv. 26.

Verse 6. Were baptized] Were the people dipped or sprinkled? for it is certain the original words mean both. They were all dipped, say some. Can any man suppose that it was possible for John to dip all the inhabitants of Jerusalem and Judea, and of all the country round about the Jordan? Were both men and women dipped, for certainly both came to his baptism? This could never have comported either with safety or with decency. Were they dipped in their clothes? This would have endangered their lives, if they had not with them change of raiment: and as such a baptism as John's (however administered) was, in several respects, a new thing in Judea, it is not at all likely that the people would come thus provided. But suppose these were dipped, which I think it would be impossible to prove, does it follow that, in all regions of the world, men and women must be dipped, in order to be evangelically baptized? In the eastern countries, bathings were frequent, because of the heat of the climate, it being there so necessary to cleanliness and health; but could our climate, or a more northerly one, admit of this with safety, for at least three-fourths of the year? We may rest assured that it could not. And may we not presume, that if John had opened his commission in the North of Great Britain, for many months of the year, he would have dipped neither man nor woman, unless he could have procured a tepid bath? Those who are dipped or immersed in water, in the name of the Holy Trinity, I believe to be evangelically baptized—those who are washed or sprinkled with water in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, I believe to be equally so; and the repetition of such a baptism I believe to be profane. Others have a right to believe the contrary, if they see good. After all, it is the thing signified, and not the mode, which is the essential part of the sacrament.

Confessing their sins.] Earnestly acknowledging that their sins were their own. And thus taking the whole blame upon themselves, and laying nothing to the charge of God or man. This is essential to true repentance; and, till a man take the whole blame on himself, he cannot feel the absolute need he has of casting his soul on the mercy of God, that he may be saved.

Verse 7. Pharisees] A very numerous sect among the Jews, who, in their origin, were, very probably, a pure and holy people. It is likely that they got the name of Pharisees i.e., Separatists (from pharash, to separate), from their separating themselves from the pollution of the Jewish national worship.

Sadducees] A sect who denied the existence of angels and spirits, consequently all divine influence and inspiration,

* O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from ^b the wrath to come?

and also the resurrection of the dead. The Sadducees of that time were the Materialists and Deists of the Jewish nation. They were the followers of one Sadok, a disciple of Antigonus Sochmaus, who flourished about three centuries before Christ. There was a third sect among the Jews, called the Essenes. See chap. xix. 12.

O generation of vipers] A terribly expressive speech. A serpentine brood, from a serpentine stock. As their fathers were, so were they, children of the wicked one. This is God's estimate of a SINNER, whether he wade in wealth, or soar in fame.

The wrath to come] The desolation which was about to fall on the Jewish nation for their wickedness, and threatened in the last word of their own Scriptures. See Mal. iv. 6.

Verse 10. And now also the axe is laid] Or, Even now the axe lieth. There is an allusion here to a woodman, who, having marked a tree for excision, lays his axe at its root, and strips off his outer garment, that he may yield his blows more powerfully, and that his work may be quickly performed. For about sixty years before the coming of Christ, this axe had been lying at the root of the Jewish tree, Judea having been made a province to the Roman empire, from the time that Pompey took the city of Jerusalem, during the contentions of the two brothers Hyrcanus and Aristobulus, which was about sixty-three years before the coming of Christ.

Verse 11. But he that cometh after me] Or, Is coming after me, who is now on his way, and will shortly make his appearance. Jesus Christ began his ministry when he was thirty years of age, Luke iii. 23, which was the age appointed by the Law, Numb. iv. 3.

Whose shoes I am not worthy to bear] This saying is expressive of the most profound humility and reverence. To put on, take off, and carry the shoes of their masters, was not only among the Jews, but also among the Greeks and Romans, the work of the vilest slaves.

With the Holy Ghost, and with fire] ^g But the influences of the Spirit of God are here designed, need ^h but little proof. Christ's religion was to be a spiritual religion, and was to have its seat in the heart. Outward precepts, however well they might describe, could not produce inward spirituality. This was the province of the Spirit of God, and of it alone; therefore he is represented here under the similitude of fire, because he was to illuminate and invigorate the soul, penetrate every part, and assimilate the whole to the image of the God of Glory.

With fire] The baptism of fire has been differently understood among the primitive Fathers. Some say, it means the tribulations, crosses, and afflictions, which believers in Christ are called to pass through. St. Chrysostom says, it means the superabundant graces of the Spirit. Basil and Theophilus explain it of the fire of hell. Cyril, Jerome, and others, understand by it the descent of the Holy Spirit, on the day of Pentecost.

Hilary says it means a fire that the righteous must pass through in the day of judgment, to purify them from such 14 But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?

15 And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him.

16 ^l And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw ^m the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him:

17 ⁿ And, lo, a voice from heaven, saying, ^o This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

defilements as necessarily cleaved to them here, and with which they could not be admitted into glory.

Ambrose says, this baptism shall be administered at the gate of Paradise by John Baptist; and he thinks that this is what is meant by the flaming sword, Gen. iii. 24.

Origen and Lactantius conceive it to be a river of fire, at the gate of heaven, something similar to the Phlegethon of the heathens; but they observe, that when the righteous come to pass over, the liquid flames shall divide, and give them a free passage: that Christ shall stand on the brink of it, and receive through the flames all those, and none but those, who have received in this world the baptism of water in his name: and that this baptism is for those who, having received the faith of Christ, have not, in every respect, lived conformably to it; for, though they laid the good foundation, yet they built hay, straw, and stubble upon it, and this work of theirs must be tried, and destroyed by this fire. This they think, is St. Paul's meaning, 1 Cor. iii. 13—15. From this fire, understood in this way, the Fathers of the following ages, and the schoolmen, formed the famous and lucrative doctrine of PURGATORY.

Verse 12. Whose fan is in his hand] The Romans are here termed God's fan, as, in ver. 10, they were called his axe, and, in chap. xxii. 7, they are termed his troops or armies. His floor] Does not this mean the land of Judea, which had been long, as it were, the threshing-floor of the Lord?

Verse 14. John forbade him] Earnestly and pressingly opposed him.

Verse 15. To fulfil all righteousness.] That is, Every righteous ordinance: so I think the words should be translated; and so our common version renders a similar word, Luke i. 6.

But was this an ordinance? Undoubtedly; it was the initiatory ordinance of the Baptist's dispensation. Now, as Christ had submitted to circumcision, which was the initiatory ordinance of the Mosaic dispensation, it was necessary that he should submit to this, which was instituted by no less an authority, and was the introduction to his own dispensation of eternal mercy and truth. But it was necessary on another account: Our Lord represented the High-priest, and was to be the High-priest over the house of God:—now, as the High-priest was initiated into his office by washing and anointing, so must Christ: and hence he was baptized, washed, and anointed by the Holy Ghost. Thus he fulfilled the righteous ordinance of his initiation into the office of High-priest, and thus was prepared to make an atonement for the sins of mankind.

Verse 16. The heavens were opened unto him] That is, to John the Baptist—and he, John, saw the Spirit of God—lighting upon him, i. e. Jesus. St. Luke iii. 22, says it was in a bodily shape like to a dove: and this likeness to a dove some refer to a hovering motion, like to that of a dove, and not to the form of the dove itself; but the terms of the text are too precise to admit of this far-fetched interpretation.

This passage affords no mean proof of the doctrine of the Trinity. That three distinct persons are here represented, there can be no dispute. 1. The person of Jesus Christ, baptized by John in Jordan. 2. The person of the Holy Ghost in a bodily shape like a dove. 3. The person of the Father; a voice came out of heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, &c. The voice is here represented as proceeding from a different place to that in which the persons of the Son and Holy Spirit were manifested; and merely, I think, more forcibly to mark this divine personality.

Verse 17. In whom I am well pleased.] By this voice, and overshadowing of the Spirit, the mission of the Lord Jesus was publicly and solemnly accredited; God intimating that he had before delighted in him: the Law, in all its ordinances, having pointed him out, for they could not be pleasing to God, but as they were fulfilled in, and showed forth, the Son of Man, till he came.

CHAPTER IV.

Jesus, in the wilderness, is tempted by Satan, 1-11. He goes into Galilee, 12; and Capernaum, 13. The prophecy which was thus fulfilled, 14-16. He begins to preach publicly, 17. Calls Simon Peter, and his brother, Andrew, 18-20. Calls also James and John, the sons of Zebedee, 21, 22. Preaches and works miracles throughout Galilee, 23. Becomes famous in Syria, and is followed by multitudes from various quarters, among whom he works a great variety of miracles, 24, 25.

THEN was ^a Jesus led up of ^b the Spirit into the wilderness, to be tempted of the devil.

2 And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward an hungred.

3 And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread.

4 But he answered and said, It is written, ^c Man

Verse 1. Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit] This transaction appears to have taken place immediately after Christ's baptism; and this bringing up of Christ was through the influence of that Spirit of God; the Spirit which had rested upon him in his baptism.

To be tempted] The first act of the ministry of Jesus Christ was a combat with Satan.

Verse 2 And when he had fasted forty days] It is remarkable that Moses, previously to his receiving the Law from God, fasted forty days in the mount; that Elijah fasted also forty days; and that Christ, the giver of the New Covenant, should act in the same way. Was not all this intended to show, that God's kingdom on earth was to be spiritual and divine?—that it should not consist in meat and drink, but in righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost? Rom. xiv. 17.

Verse 3. And when the tempter] This onset of Satan was made (speaking after the manner of men) judiciously: he came upon Jesus, when, having fasted forty days and forty nights, he was hungry: now, as hunger naturally diminishes the strength of the body, the mind gets enfeebled, and becomes easily irritated; and, if much watching and prayer be not employed, the uneasiness which is occasioned by a lack of food may soon produce impatience, and in this state of mind the tempter has great advantages. The state of our bodily health and worldly circumstances may afford our adversary many opportunities of doing us immense mischief. In such cases, the sin to which we are tempted may be justly termed, as in Heb. xii. 1, the well circumstanced sin, because all the circumstances of time, place, and state of body and mind, are favourable to it.

If thou be the son of God] Or, a son of God, for it is here, and in Luke iv. 3, written without the article; and therefore should not be translated THE Son, a phrase that is applicable to Christ as the Messiah: but it is certain, whatever Satan might suspect, he did not fully know that the person he tempted was the true Messiah. Perhaps one grand object of his temptation was to find this out.

Command that these stones] The meaning of this temptation is: "Distrust the divine providence and support, and make use of illicit means to supply thy necessities."

Verse 4. But by (or, upon) every word] The word in shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

5 Then the devil taketh him up ^d into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple.

6 And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, ^e He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

^e Deut. viii. 3. — ^d Neh. xi. 1, 18. Isa. xlviii. 2. iii. 1. Ch. xvii. 53. Rev. xi. 2. — ^e Ps. xci. 11, 12.

Greek answers to dabar in Hebrew, which means not only a word spoken, but also thing, purpose, appointment, &c. Our Lord's meaning seems to be this: God purposes the welfare of his creatures—all his appointments are calculated to promote this end. Some of them may appear to man to have a contrary tendency; but even fasting itself, when used in consequence of a divine injunction, becomes a means of supporting that life which it seems naturally calculated to impair or destroy.

Verse 5. Pinnacle of the temple] It is very likely that this was what was called the king's gallery; "from the top of which, if any looked down, he would grow dizzy, his eyes not being able to reach so vast a depth."

Verse 6. Cast thyself down] Our Lord had repelled the first temptation by an act of confidence in the power and goodness of God; and now Satan solicits him to make trial of it. Through the unparalleled subtlety of Satan, the very means we make use of to repel one temptation may be used by him as the groundwork of another.

He shall give his angels charge, &c.] This is a mutilated quotation of Psal. xci. 11. That God has promised to protect and give up his servants, admits of no dispute; but, as the path of safety is the way of safety, they are entitled to no good when they walk out of it.

Verse 7. Thou shalt not tempt] To expose myself to any danger naturally destructive, with the vain presumption that God will protect and defend me from the ruinous consequence of my imprudent conduct, is to tempt God.

Verse 8. An exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him] Probably St. Matthew, in the Hebrew original, wrote haarets, which signifies the world, the earth, and often the land of Judea only. What renders this more probable is, that at this time Judea was divided into several kingdoms, or governments, under the three sons of Herod the Great, viz., Archelaus, Antipas, and Philip; which are not only called Ethnarchs, and Tetrarchs in the Gospels, but also kings, and are said to reign, as Rosenmüller has properly remarked.

Verse 9. If thou wilt fall down and worship me.] As if he had said, "The whole of thy land is now under my government; do me homage for it, and I will deliver it into thy hand."

Verse 10. Get thee hence] Or, behind me. This tempta-

8 Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them :

9 And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.

10 Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan : for it is written, ^b Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

11 Then the devil leaveth him, and, behold, ^c angels came and ministered unto him.

12 ^d Now when Jesus had heard that John was ^e cast into prison, he departed into Galilee ;

tion savouring of nothing but diabolical impudence, Jesus did not treat it as the others ; but, with divine authority, commanded the tempter to return to his own place.

Verse 11. Behold, angels came and ministered unto him.] That is, brought that food which was necessary to support nature.

From the whole we may learn :—That no man, howsoever holy, is exempted from temptation ; for God manifested in the flesh was tempted by the devil. That the best way to foil the adversary is by the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, Eph. vi. 17 ; that to be tempted even to the greatest abominations (while a person resists) is not sin : for Christ was tempted to worship the Devil ; and that there is no temptation which is from its own nature, or favouring circumstances, irresistible. We may learn farther, that the fear of being tempted may become a most dangerous snare ; that when God permits a temptation or trial to come, he will give grace to bear or overcome it ; that our spiritual interests shall be always advanced, in proportion to our trials and faithful resistance, and that a more than ordinary measure of divine consolation shall be the consequence of every victory.

The name given to Satan in the third verse is very emphatic, a word signifying the temper, or trier, from peiro, to pierce through. The quality and goodness of many things are proved by piercing or boring through ; for this shows what is in the heart. Perhaps nothing tends so much to discover what we are, as trials either from men or devils.

Verse 13. And leaving Nazareth.] It seems that, from this time, our blessed Lord made Capernaum his ordinary place of residence : and utterly forsook Nazareth, because they had wholly rejected his word, and even attempted to take away his life.

Galilee was bounded by Mount Lebanon on the north, by the river Jordan and the sea of Galilee on the east, by Chisou on the south, and by the Mediterranean on the west.

Nazareth, a little city in the tribe of Zabulon, in lower Galilee, with Tabor on the east, and Ptolemais on the west. It is supposed that this city was the usual residence of our Lord for the first thirty years of his life.

Capernaum stood on the sea-coast of Galilee, on the borders of Zabulon and Nephthalim, as mentioned in the text. This was called his own city, chap. ix. 1, &c., and here, as a citizen, he paid the half shekel, chap. xvii. 24.

Zabulon, the country of the tribe in which Nazareth and Capernaum were situated, bordered on the lake of Genesareth, stretching to the frontiers of Sidon, Gen. xlix. 13. Nephthalim was contiguous to it, and both were on the east side of Jordan, Josh. xix. 34.

Verse 15. Galilee of the Gentiles.] Or of the Nations. So called, because it was inhabited by the Egyptians, Arabians, and Phœnicians, according to the testimony of Strabo and others.

Verse 16. The people which sat in darkness.] This is quoted from Isa. ix. 2, where, instead of sitting, the prophet uses the word walked. The Evangelist might on purpose change the term, to point out the increased misery of the state of these persons.

The region and shadow of death.] DEATH's country, where, in a peculiar manner Death lived, reigned, and triumphed, subjecting all the people to his sway.

Capernaum, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthalim :

14 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying,

15 ^a The land of Zabulon, and the land of Nephthalim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles :

16 ^b The people which sat in darkness saw great light ; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death, light is sprung up.

17 ^c From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, ^d Repent : for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

18 ^e And Jesus, walking by the sea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Simon ^f called Peter, and Andrew —^a Mark i. 14, 15.—^b Ch. iii. 2. x. 7.—^c Mark i. 14, 17, 18. Luke v. 2.—^d John i. 42.

Shadow of death.] It is not easy to enter fully into the ideal meaning of this term. As in the former clause, Death is personified, so here. A shadow is that darkness cast upon a place by a body raised between it and the light or sun. Death is here represented as standing between the land above-mentioned, and the Light of Life, or Sun of Righteousness ; in consequence of which, all the inhabitants were involved in a continual cloud of intellectual darkness, misery, and sin. The heavenly Sun was continually eclipsed to them, till the glorious time, when Jesus Christ, the true Light, shone forth in the beauty of holiness and truth.

Verse 17. Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent.] See on chap. iii. 1, 2. Every preacher commissioned by God to proclaim salvation to a lost world, begins his work with preaching the doctrine of repentance.

Verse 18. Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother.] Why did not Jesus Christ call some of the eminent scribes or Pharisees to publish his gospel, and not poor unlearned fishermen, without credit or authority ? Because it was the kingdom of heaven they were to preach, and their teaching must come from above : besides, the conversion of sinners, though it be effected instrumentally by the preaching of the gospel, yet the grand agent in it is the Spirit of God. As the instruments in it were comparatively mean, and the work which was accomplished by them was grand and glorious, the excellency of the power at once appeared to be of God, and not of man ; and thus the glory, due alone to his name, was secured, and the great Operator of all good had the deserved praise. Seminaries of learning, in the order of God's providence and grace, have great and important uses ; and, in reference to such uses, they should be treated with great respect : but to make preachers of the gospel is a matter to which they are utterly inadequate ; it is a prerogative that God never did, and never will, delegate to man.

Men-made ministers have almost ruined the heritage of God. To prevent this, our Church requires that a man be inwardly moved to take upon himself this ministry, before he can be ordained to it. And he who cannot say, that he trusts (has rational and scriptural conviction) that he is moved by the Holy Ghost to take upon himself this office, is an intruder into the heritage of God, and his ordination, ipso facto, vitiated and of none effect.

Fishers.] Persons employed in a lawful and profitable avocation, and faithfully discharging their duty in it.

Verse 19. Follow me.] Receive my doctrines, imitate me in my conduct—in every respect be my disciples. Most of the calls of God to man are expressed in a few solemn words, which alarm the conscience, and deeply impress the heart.

I will make you fishers of men.] Ezek. chap. xlvii. 8-10, casts much light on this place ; and to this Prophet our Lord probably alludes. To follow Christ, and be admitted into a partnership of his ministry, is a great honour ; but those only who are by himself fitted for it, God calls. Miserable are those who do not wait for this call—who presume to take the name of fishers of men, and know not how to cast the net of the divine word, because not brought to an acquaintance with the saving power of the God who bought them. Such persons, having only their secular interest in view, study not to catch men, but to catch money : and though, for charity's sake, it may be said of a pastor of this his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers.

19 And he saith unto them, Follow me, and * I will make you fishers of men.

20 ^b And they straightway left their nets, and followed him.

21 ^c And going on from thence, he saw other two brethren, James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, in a ship with Zebedee their father, mending their nets: and he called them.

22 And they immediately left the ship, and their father, and followed him.

Following a person, in the Jewish phrase, signifies being his disciple or scholar. See a similar mode of speech, 2 Kings vi. 19.

Verse 20. They straightway left their nets] A change, as far as it respected secular things, every way to their disadvantage.

Verse 22. Left the ship and their father] By the ship, we are to understand the more fishing-boat, used for extending their nets in the water, and bringing the hawser or rope of the farther end to shore, by which the net was pulled to land. But why should these be called to leave their employment and their father, probably now aged? To this I answer, that to be obedient to, provide for, and comfort our parents, is the highest duty we owe or can discharge, except that to God. But, when God calls to the work of the ministry, father and mother and all must be left. Were we necessary to their comfort and support before? Then God, if he calls us into another work or state, will take care to supply to them our lack of service some other way; and, if this be not done, it is a proof we have mistaken our call. But what an honour was the vocation of James and John, to old Zebedee their father!

Verse 23. Teaching in their synagogues] Synagogue, a public assembly of persons, or the place where such persons publicly assembled. Synagogues, among the Jews, were not probably older than the return from the Babylonish captivity. They were erected not only in cities and towns, but in the country, and especially by rivers, that they might have water for the convenience of their frequent washings.

Not less than ten persons of respectability composed a synagogue; as the Rabbins supposed that this number of persons, of independent property, and well skilled in the law, were necessary to conduct the affairs of the place, and keep up the divine worship. Therefore, where this number could not be found, no synagogue was built; but there might be many synagogues in one city or town, provided it were populous. Jerusalem is said to have contained 480. This need not be wondered at, when it is considered that every Jew was obliged to worship God in public, either in a synagogue, or in the temple.

The synagogue was governed by a council or assembly, over whom was a president, called in the Gospels, the ruler of the synagogue. These are sometimes called chiefs of the Jews, the rulers, the priests or elders, the governors, the overseers, the fathers of the synagogue. Service was performed in them three times a day—morning, afternoon, and night. Synagogue, among the Jews, had often the same meaning as congregation among us, or place of judicature, see James ii. 2.

Preaching the gospel of the kingdom] Or, proclaiming the glad tidings of the kingdom. Behold here the perfect pattern of an evangelical preacher: 1. He goes about seeking sinners, that he may show them the way to heaven. 2. He proclaims the glad tidings of the kingdom, with a freedom worthy of the King whom he serves. 3. He makes his reputation and the confidence of the people subservient not to his in their synagogues, and preaching * the gospel of the kingdom, ¹ and healing all manner of sickness, and all manner of disease among the people.

24 And his fame went throughout all Syria: and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases, and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatic, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them.

25 * And there followed him great multitudes of people from ^b Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan.

own interest, but to the salvation of souls. 4. To his preaching he joins, as far as he has ability, all works of mercy, and temporal assistance to the bodies of men. 5. He takes care to inform men that diseases, and all kinds of temporal evils, are the effects of sin, and that their hatred to iniquity should increase in proportion to the evils they endure through it. 6. And that nothing but the power of God can save them from sin and its consequences.

All manner of sickness, and all manner of disease] There is a difference between the word translated here sickness, and that which is translated disease. The first is a disease of some standing, the second a temporary disorder of the body.

Verse 24. And torments] Such as colics, gouts, and rheumatisms, which racked every joint.

Possessed with devils] Demoniacs. Persons possessed by evil spirits. This is certainly the plain obvious meaning of demoniac in the Gospels.

Many eminent men think that the sacred writers accommodated themselves to the unfounded prejudices of the common people, in attributing certain diseases to the influence of evil spirits, which were merely the effects of natural causes; but that this explanation can never comport with the accounts of these persons shall be proved as the places occur.

Our common version, which renders the word, those possessed by devils, is not strictly correct; as the word is not found in the plural in any part of the Sacred Writings, when speaking of evil spirits: for though there are multitudes of demons, Mark v. 9, yet it appears there is but one DEVIL, who seems to be supreme, or head, over all the rest. The word signifies an accuser or slanderer, 1 Tim. iii. 11. 2 Tim. iii. 3. Tit. ii. 3. From the Greek for cast, or shoot, because of the influence of his evil suggestions; compared, Eph. vi. 16, to fiery darts; and thus it is nearly of the same meaning with two words signifying "he who pierces through."

Lunatic] Persons afflicted with epileptic or other disorders, which are always known to have a singular increase at the change and full of the moon. But sometimes even these diseases were caused by demons. See on chap. viii. 16, 34, and xvii. 15.

He healed them.] Either with a word or a touch; and thus proved that all nature was under his control.

Verse 25. * is immediately connected with the fifth chapter, and should not be separated from it.

Great multitudes] This, even according to the Jews, was one proof of the days of the Messiah: for they acknowledged that in his time there should be a great famine of the word of God; and thus they understood Amos viii. 11.

Decapolis] A small country, situated between Syria and Galilee of the Nations.

From beyond Jordan.] Or, From the side of Jordan. Probably this was the country which was occupied anciently by the two tribes of Reuben and Gad, and the half tribe of Manasseh; for the country of Decapolis lay on both sides of the river Jordan. See Numb. xxxii. 5, 33.

Verse 1. And seeing the multitudes] These multitudes, viz., those mentioned in the preceding verse which should make the first verse of this chapter.

He went up into a mountain] That he might have the greater advantage of speaking, so as to be heard by that great concourse of people which followed him. It is very probable that nothing more is meant here than a small hill or eminence. [Or it may mean, the mountain district.]

And when he was set] The usual posture of public teachers among the Jews, and among many other people. Hence sitting was a synonymous term for teaching among the Rabbins.

His disciples] The word signifies literally a scholar. This is still the characteristic of a genuine disciple of Christ.

Verse 3. Blessed are the poor in spirit, &c.] Or, happy: intimating that such persons were endued with immortality, and consequently were not liable to the caprices of fate.

From this definition we may learn, that the person whom Christ terms happy is one who is not under the influence of fate or chance, but is governed by an all-wise providence, having every step directed to the attainment of immortal glory, being transformed by the power into the likeness of the ever-blessed God.

Poor in spirit] One who is deeply sensible of his spiritual poverty and wretchedness. Being destitute of the true riches, he is tremblingly alive (for such is the sense of the word) to the necessities of his soul, shrinking with fear lest he should perish without the salvation of God. Such Christ pronounces happy, because there is but a step between them and that kingdom which is here promised.

Kingdom of heaven.] A participation of all the blessings of the New Covenant here, and the blessings of Glory above.

Verse 4. Blessed are they that mourn] That is, those who, feeling their spiritual poverty, mourn after God, lamenting the iniquity that separated them from the fountain of blessedness. Only such persons as are deeply convinced of the sinfulness of sin, feel the plague of their own heart, and turn with disgust from all worldly consolations, because of their insufficiency to render them happy, have God's promise of solid comfort. He will call them to himself, and speak the words of pardon, peace, and life eternal, to their hearts. See this notion of the word expressed fully by our Lord, chap. xi. 28.

Verse 5. Blessed are the meek] Those who are of a quiet gentle spirit, in opposition to the proud and supercilious Scribes and Pharisees, and their disciples. We have a compound word in English, which once fully expressed the meaning of the original, viz., gentleman; but it has now almost wholly lost its original signification.

For they shall inherit the earth.] Under this expression which was commonly used by the prophets to signify the 5 ^d Blessed are the meek: for ^e they shall inherit the earth.

6 Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; ^f for they shall be filled.

7 Blessed are the merciful: ^g for they shall obtain mercy.

8 ^h Blessed are the pure in heart: for ⁱ they shall see God.

land of Canaan, in which all temporal good abounded, Judg. xviii. 9, 10, Jesus Christ points out that abundance of spiritual good, which was provided for men in the gospel. Besides, Canaan was a type of the kingdom of God; and who is so likely to inherit glory as the man in whom the meekness and gentleness of Jesus dwell?

Verse 6. They which do hunger and thirst] As the body has its natural appetites of hunger and thirst for the food and drink suited to its nourishment, so has the soul. Heavenly things cannot support the body; they are not suited to its nature: earthly things cannot support the soul for the same reason. When hunger takes place in the stomach, we know we must get good food or perish. When the soul begins to hunger and thirst after righteousness or holiness, which is its proper food, we know that it must be purified by the Holy Spirit, and be made a partaker of that living bread, John viii. 48, or perish everlastingly. Now, as God never inspires a prayer but with the design to answer it, he who hungers and thirsts after the full salvation of God, may depend on being speedily and effectually blessed or satisfied, well-fed, as the word implies.

Verse 7. The merciful] The word mercy, among the Jews, signified two things: the pardon of injuries, and almsgiving. Our Lord undoubtedly takes it in its fullest latitude here. Mercy supposes two things: 1. A distressed object; and, 2. A disposition of the heart, through which it is affected at the sight of such an object. This virtue, therefore, is no other than a lively emotion of the heart, which is excited by the discovery of any creature's misery; and such an emotion as manifests itself outwardly, by effects suited to its nature.

They shall obtain mercy.] Mercy is not purchased but at the price of mercy itself; and even this price is a gift of the mercy of God. Whatever mercy a man shows to another, God will take care to show the same to him.

Verse 8. Pure in heart] A principal part of the Jewish religion consisted in outward washings and cleansings: on this ground they expected to see God, to enjoy eternal glory: but Christ here shows that a purification of the heart, from all vile affections and desires, is essentially requisite in order to enter into the kingdom of God. He whose soul is not delivered from all sin, through the blood of the covenant, can have no scriptural hope of ever being with God.

Shall see God.] This is a Hebraism, which signifies, possesses God, enjoy his felicity: as seeing a thing was used among the Hebrews for possessing it. See Psal. xvi. 10.

Verse 9. The peace-makers] A peace-maker is a man who being endowed with a generous public spirit, labours for the public good, and feels his own interest promoted in promoting that of others: therefore, instead of fanning the fire of strife, he uses his influence and wisdom to reconcile the contending parties, adjust their differences, and restore them to 9 Blessed are the peace-makers: for they shall be called the children of God.

10 * Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.

11 ^b Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you ^a falsely, for my sake.

12 * Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for 'so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

a state of unity. As all men are represented to be in a state of hostility to God and each other, the Gospel is called the Gospel of peace, because it tends to reconcile men to God and to each other. Hence our Lord here terms peace-makers, the children of God: for as he is the Father of peace, those who promote it are reputed his children. But whose children are they who foment divisions in the church, the state, or among families?

Verse 10. They which are persecuted] They are happy who suffer, seems a strange saying; and that the righteous should suffer, merely because they are such, seems as strange. But such is the enmity of the human heart to everything of God and goodness, that all those who live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution in one form or other. As the religion of Christ gives no quarter to vice, so the vicious will give no quarter to this religion, or to its professors.

Verse 11. When men shall revile you, and persecute] The persecution mentioned in the preceding verse comprehends all outward acts of violence—all that the hand can do. This comprehends all calumny, slander, &c., all that the tongue can effect.

Verse 12. Rejoice] In the testimony of a good conscience; for, without this, suffering has nothing but misery in it.

Be exceeding glad] Leap for joy.

Verse 13. Ye are the salt of the earth] The salt of the earth, to preserve the world from putrefaction and destruction.

But if the salt have lost its savour] Mr. Maundrell, describing the Valley of Salt, says, "I broke a piece of it, of which that part of it which was exposed to the rain, sun, and air, though it had the sparks and particles of salt, YET IT HAD PERFECTLY LOST ITS SAVOUR: the inner part, which was connected to the rock, retained its savour, as I found by proof." A preacher, or private Christian, who has lost the life of Christ, and the witness of his Spirit, out of his soul, may be likened to this salt. He may have the sparks and glittering particles of true wisdom, but without its unction or comfort. Only that which is connected with the rock, the soul that is in union with Christ Jesus by the Holy Spirit, can preserve its savour, and be instrumental of good to others.

To be trodden under foot] There was a species of salt in Judea, which was generated at the lake Asphaltites, and hence called bituminous salt, easily rendered vapid, and of no other use but to be spread in a part of the temple, to prevent slipping in wet weather. This is probably what our Lord alludes to in this place.

Verse 14. Ye are the light of the world.] That is, the instruments which God chooses to make use of, to illuminate the minds of men; as he uses the sun (to which probably he pointed) to enlighten the world.

Verse 15. Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel] A measure both among the Greeks and Romans, containing a little more than a peck English. From some ancient writers we learn, that only those who had bad designs hid a candle under a bushel; that, in the dead of the night, when all were asleep, they might rise up, and have light at hand to help them to effect their horrid purposes of murder, &c.

Verse 16. Let your light so shine] Or, more literally, Thus let your light shine. As the sun is lighted up in the firma-14 ^a Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid.

15 Neither do men ¹ light a candle, and put it under ^a a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.

16 Let your light so shine before men, ^a that they may see your good works, and ¹ glorify your Father which is in heaven.

17 ^a Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil.

18 For, verily I say unto you, ^a Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled.

19 ^a Whosoever therefore shall break one of these viii. 16. xi. 33.—¹ The word in the original signifieth a measure containing about a pint less than a peck.—¹ 1 Pet. ii. 12.—¹ John xv. 8. 1 Cor. xiv. 25.—^a Rom. iii. 31. and x. 4. Gal. iii. 24.—^a Luke xvi. 17.—^a James ii. 10.

ment of heaven to diffuse its light and heat freely to every inhabitant of the earth; and as the lamp is not set under the bushel, but placed upon the lamp-stand that it may give light to all in the house; thus let every follower of Christ, and especially every preacher of the Gospel, diffuse the light of heavenly knowledge, and the warmth of divine love, through the whole circle of their acquaintance.

That they may see your good works] It is not sufficient to have light—we must walk in the light, and by the light. Our whole conduct should be a perpetual comment on the doctrine we have received, and a constant exemplification of its power and truth.

And glorify your Father] Real Christians are the children of God—they are partakers of his holy and happy nature: they should ever be concerned for their Father's honour, and endeavour so to recommend him, and his salvation, that others may be prevailed on to come to the light and walk in it. Then God is said to be glorified, when the glorious power of his grace is manifested in the salvation of men.

Verse 17. Think not that I am come to destroy the law] Do not imagine that I am come to violate the Law, to loose or dissolve—I am not come to make the law of none effect—to dissolve the connexion which subsists between its several parts, or the obligation men are under to have their lives regulated by its moral precepts; nor am I come to dissolve the connecting reference it has to the good things promised. But I am come, to complete—to perfect its connexion and reference, to accomplish every thing shadowed forth in the Mosaic ritual, to fill up its great design; and to give grace to all my followers, to fill up, or complete, every moral duty. In a word, Christ completed the Law: 1st. In itself, it was only the shadow, the typical representation, of good things to come; and he added to it that which was necessary to make it perfect, HIS OWN SACRIFICE, without which it could neither satisfy God, nor sanctify men. 2nd. He completed it in himself, by submitting to its types with an exact obedience, and verifying them by his death upon the cross. 3rd. He completes this law, and the sayings of his Prophets, in his members, by giving them grace to love the Lord with all their heart, soul, mind, and strength, and their neighbour as themselves; for this is all the Law and the Prophets.

Verse 18. One jot or one tittle] One yod, the smallest letter in the Hebrew alphabet. One tittle, or point, either meaning those points which serve for vowels in the language, if they then existed; or the points of certain letters, the change of any of which would make a most essential alteration in the sense. Or our Lord may refer to the little ornaments which certain letters assume on their tops, which cause them to appear like small branches.

Till all be fulfilled.] Though all earth and hell should join together to hinder the accomplishment of the great designs of the Most High, yet it shall all be in vain—even the sense of a single letter shall not be lost.

Verse 19. Whosoever shall break one of these least commandments] The Pharisees were remarkable for making a distinction between weightier and lighter matters in the Law, and between what has been called, in a corrupt least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.

20 For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

21 Ye have heard that it was said ^b by them of old time, ^c Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment:

22 But I say unto you, That ^d whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment: and whosoever shall say to his brother, ‘Raca,’ shall be in danger of the council: but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire.

23 Therefore ^e if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee;

24 ^f Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift.

25 ^g Agree with thine adversary quickly, ^h whiles thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison.

part of the Christian Church, mortal and venial sins. Whosoever shall break] He who, by his mode of acting, speaking, or explaining the words of God, sets the holy precept aside, or explains away its force and meaning, shall be called least—shall have no place in the kingdom of Christ here, nor in the kingdom of glory above.

Verse 20. Except your righteousness shall exceed] Unless your righteousness abound more—unless it take in, not only the letter, but the spirit and design of the moral and ritual precept; the one directing you how to walk so as to please God; the other pointing out Christ, the great Atonement, through and by which a sinner is enabled to do so—more than that of the Scribes and Pharisees, who only added to the letter of the Law, and had indeed made even that of no effect by their traditions—ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

Verse 21. Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time] To or by the ancients. By the ancients, we may understand those who lived before the Law, and those who lived under it; for murder was, in the most solemn manner, forbidden before, as well as under the Law, Gen. ix. 5, 6.

But it is very likely that our Lord refers here merely to traditions and glosses relative to the ancient Mosaic ordinance; and such as, by their operation, rendered the primitive command of little or no effect. Murder from the beginning has been punished with death; and it is, probably, the only crime that should be punished with death. There is much reason to doubt, whether the punishment of death, inflicted for any other crime, is not in itself murder, whatever the authority may be that has instituted it. GOD, and the greatest legislators that have ever been in the universe, are of the same opinion.

Verse 22. Whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause] What our Lord seems here to prohibit, is not merely that miserable facility which some have of being angry at every trifle, continually taking offence against their best friends; but that anger which leads a man to commit outrages against another, thereby subjecting himself to that punishment which was to be inflicted on those who brake the peace. Vainly, or, as in the common translation, without a cause, is wanting in the famous Vatican MS. and others.

Shall be in danger of the judgment] That is, to have the matter brought before a senate, composed of twenty-three magistrates, whose business it was to judge in cases of murder and other capital crimes.

Raca] From the Hebrew rak, to be empty. It signifies a vain, empty, worthless fellow, shallow brains, a term of great contempt.

The council] Known among the Jews by the name of Sanhedrin. It was composed of seventy-two elders, six chosen out of each tribe. This grand Sanhedrin not only received appeals from the inferior Sanhedrins, or court of twenty-three, mentioned above; but could alone take cognizance, in the first instance, of the highest crimes, and alone inflict the punishment of stoning.

Thou fool] Moreh, probably from marah, to rebel, a rebel against God, apostate from all good. This term implied, among the Jews, the highest enormity, and most aggravated guilt.

Shall be in danger of hell fire.] Our Lord here alludes to the valley of the son of Hinnom. This place was near Jeru-

ii. 8. 1 Pet. iii. 7.—ⁱ Prov. xxv. 8. Luko xii. 58, 59.—^j See Ps. xxxii. 6. Isa. lv. 6:

salem, and had been formerly used for those abominable sacrifices, in which the idolatrous Jews had caused their children to pass through the fire to Molech. A particular place in this valley was called Tophet, from tophet, the fire-stove, in which some suppose they burnt their children alive to the above idol. See 2 Kings xxiii. 10. 2 Chron. xxviii. 3. Jer. vii. 31, 32. From the circumstance of this valley having been the scene of those infernal sacrifices, the Jews in our Saviour's time, used the word for hell, the place of the damned. It is very probable, that our Lord means no more here than this: If a man charge another with apostasy from the Jewish religion, or rebellion against God, and cannot prove his charge, then he is exposed to that punishment (burning alive) which the other must have suffered, if the charge had been substantiated.

Now, if the above offences were to be so severely punished which did not immediately affect the life of another, how much sorer must the punishment of murder be! ver. 21. And as there could not be a greater punishment inflicted than death, in the above terrific forms, and this was to be inflicted for minor crimes; then the punishment of murder must not only have death here, but a hell of fire in the eternal world, attached to it. It seems that these different degrees of guilt, and the punishment attached to each, had not been properly distinguished among the Jews. Our Lord here calls their attention back to them, and gives them to understand, that in the coming world there are different degrees of punishment prepared for different degrees of vice; and that not only the outward act of iniquity should be judged and punished by the Lord, but that injurious words, and evil passions, should all meet their just recompence and reward.

Verse 23. Therefore if thou bring thy gift] Evil must be nipped in the bud. An unkind thought of another may be the foundation of that which leads to actual murder. If a tender forgiving spirit was required, even in a Jew, when he approached God's altar with a bullock or a lamb, how much more necessary is this in a man who professes to be a follower of the Lamb of God; especially when he receives the symbols of that Sacrifice which was offered for the life of the world, in what is commonly called the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper!

Verse 24. Leave there thy gift before the altar] This is as much as to say, "Do not attempt to bring any offering to God whilst thou art in a spirit of enmity against any person; or hast any difference with thy neighbour, which thou hast not used thy diligence to get adjusted." A religion, the very essence of which is love, cannot suffer at its altars a heart that is revengeful and uncharitable, or which does not use its utmost endeavours to revive love in the heart of another.

Then come and offer thy gift.] Then, when either thy brother is reconciled to thee, or thou hast done all in thy power to effect this reconciliation.

Verse 25. Agree with thine adversary quickly] Adversary, properly a plaintiff in law—a perfect law term. Our Lord enforces the exhortation given in the preceding verses, from the consideration of what was deemed prudent in ordinary law-suits. In such cases, men should make up matters with the utmost speed, as running through the whole course of a law-suit must not only be vexatious, but be attended with great expense; and in the end, though the loser may be ruined, yet the gainer has nothing.

26 Verily I say unto thee, Thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing.

27 Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, 'Thou shalt not commit adultery:

28 But I say unto you, That whosoever ^blooketh on a woman, to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

29 ^c And if thy right eye ^d offend thee, ^e pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

30 And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

Those who make the adversary, God; the judge, Christ; the officer, Death; and the prison, Hell, abuse the passage, and highly dishonour God.

Verse 26. [The uttermost farthing.] The kodrantēs, or farthing, was the smallest coin among the Romans. If the matter issue in law, strict justice will be done, and your creditor be allowed the fulness of his just claim; but if, while you are on the way, going to the magistrate, you come to a friendly agreement with him, he will relax in his claims, take a part for the whole, and the composition be, in the end, both to his and your profit.

This text has been considered a proper foundation on which to build not only the doctrine of a purgatory, but also that of universal restoration. But the most unwarrantable violence must be used before it can be pressed into the service of either of the above antisciptural doctrines. At the most, the text can only be considered as a metaphorical representation of the procedure of the great Judge; and no metaphor is ever to be produced in proof of any doctrine. In the things that concern our eternal salvation, we need the most pointed and express evidence on which to establish the faith of our souls.

Verse 28. Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her] The verb is undoubtedly used here by our Lord, in the sense of coveting through the influence of impure desire. In all such cases, our blessed Lord points out the spirituality of the Law; which was a matter to which the Jews paid very little attention. Indeed it is the property of a Pharisee to abstain only from the outward crime. Men are very often less inquisitive to know how far the will of God extends, that they may please him in performing it, than they are to know how far they may satisfy their lusts without destroying their bodies and souls utterly, by an open violation of his law.

Hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.] It is the earnest wish or desire of the soul, which, in a variety of cases, constitutes the good or evil of an act. If a man earnestly wish to commit an evil, but cannot, because God puts time, place, and opportunity out of his power, he is fully chargeable with the iniquity of the act, by that God who searches and judges the heart. So, if a man earnestly wish to do some kindness, which it is out of his power to perform, the act is considered as his; because God, in this case, as in that above, takes the will for the deed.

Verse 29. And if thy right eye offend thee] The right eye and the right hand are used here to point out those sins which appear more pleasing and profitable to us; from which we must be separated, if we desire ever to see the kingdom of God.

Offend thee] Cause thee to stumble.

Verses 29, 30. Pluck it out—cut it off] We must shut our senses against dangerous objects, to avoid the occasions of sin, and deprive ourselves of all that is most dear and profitable to us, in order to save our souls, when we find that these things, however innocent in themselves, cause us to sin against God.

It is profitable for thee that one of thy members] Men often part with some members of the body, at the discretion of a surgeon, that they may preserve the trunk, and die a little later; and yet they will not deprive themselves of a look, a touch, a small pleasure, which endangers the eternal death of the soul. It is not enough to shut the eye, or stop the hand; the one must be plucked out, and the other cut off. Neither is this enough: we must cast them both from us. Not one moment's truce with an evil passion, or a sinful appetite.

Verse 31. Whosoever shall put away his wife] The Jewish doctors gave great license in the matter of divorce. Among them, a man might divorce his wife if she displeased him even in the dressing of his virtuals.

A writing of divorcement] God permitted this evil to prevent a greater; and perhaps, to typify his repudiating the Jews, who were his first spouse.

Verse 32. Saving for the cause of fornication] On account of whoredom. As fornication signifies no more than the unlawful connexion of unmarried persons, it cannot be used here with propriety, when speaking of those who are married. It does not appear that there is any other case in which Jesus Christ admits of divorce. A real Christian ought rather to beg of God the grace to bear patiently and quietly the imperfections of his wife, than to think of the means of being parted from her. Those who form a matrimonial connexion in the fear and love of God, and under his direction, will never need a divorce. But those who marry as passion or money lead the way, may be justly considered adulterers and adulteresses as long as they live.

Verse 33. Thou shalt not forswear thyself] They dishonour the great God, and break this commandment, who use frequent oaths and imprecations, even in reference to things that are true; and those who make vows and promises, which they either cannot perform, or do not design to fulfil, are not less criminal.

Verse 34. Swear not at all] Much has been said in vindication of the propriety of swearing in civil cases before a magistrate, and much has been said against it. The best way is to have as little to do as possible with oaths. An oath will not bind a knave nor a liar; and an honest man needs none, for his character and conduct swear for him.

Verses 34, 35. Neither by heaven, &c.] When we make any promise contrary to the command of God, taking as a pledge of our sincerity, either God, or something belonging to him, we engage that which is not ours, without the Master's consent.

Verse 36. Neither shalt thou swear by thy head] For these plain reasons: 1st. God commands thee not to do it. 2nd. Thou hast nothing which is thy own, and thou shouldst not pledge another's property. 3rd. It never did, and never can, answer any good purpose. And 4th. Being a breach of the law of God, it is the way to everlasting misery.

Verse 37. Let your communication be, Yea, yea, Nay, nay] That is, a positive affirmation, or negation, according to your knowledge of the matter concerning which you are called to testify. Do not equivocate; mean what you assert, and adhere to your assertion.

Whatsoever is more than these] That is, more than a bare affirmation or negation, according to the requirements of Eternal Truth, cometh of evil ; or, is of the wicked one—i. e. the Devil, the father of superfluities and lies.

Verse 38. An eye for an eye] Our Lord refers here to the law of retaliation mentioned, Exod. xxi. 24 (see the note there, and on Levit. xxiv. 20), which obliged the offender to suffer the same injury he had committed.

Verse 39. Resist not evil] Or, the evil person. So, I am fully persuaded, the original ought to be translated. Our Lord's meaning is, "Do not repel one outrage by another." He that does so, makes himself precisely what the other is, a wicked person.

Turn to him the other also.] That is, rather than avenge thyself, be ready to suffer patiently a repetition of the same injury. But these exhortations belong to those principally who are persecuted for righteousness' sake. Let such leave the judgment of their cause to Him for whose sake they suffer.

Verse 40. And if any man will sue thee at the law] Every where our blessed Lord shows the utmost disapprobation of such litigations as tended to destroy brotherly kindness and charity. It is evident, he would have his followers to suffer rather the loss of all their property, than to have recourse to such modes of redress, at so great a risk.

Verse 41. Shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.] The original word is said to be derived from the Persians, among whom the king's messengers, or posts, had the royal authority for pressing horses, ships, and even men, to assist them in the business on which they were employed. [Josephus says that the Jews particularly objected to the duty of furnishing posts for the Roman government.]

Verse 42. Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow] That God, who makes use of the beggar's hand to ask our charity, is the same from whom we ourselves beg our daily bread : and dare we refuse HIM ! To give and to lend, are two duties of charity which Christ joins together, and which he sets on equal footing. A rich man is one of God's stewards : God has given him money for the poor, and he cannot deny it without an act of injustice. But no man, from what is called a principle of charity or generosity, should give that in alms which belongs to his creditors. Generosity is godlike ; but justice has ever, both in Law and Gospel, the first claim.

Verse 43. Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy.] Instead of neighbour, the Codex Grævii, a MS. of the eleventh century, reads friend. This was certainly the meaning which the Jews put on it : for neighbour, with them, implied those of the Jewish race, and all others were considered by them as natural enemies.

Verse 44. Love your enemies] This is the most sublime piece of morality ever given to man. This one precept is a sufficient proof of the holiness of the Gospel, and of the truth of the Christian religion. Every false religion flatters man, and accommodates itself to his pride and his passions. None but God could have imposed a yoke so contrary to self-love ; and nothing but the supreme eternal love can enable men to practise a precept so insupportable to corrupt nature. Sentiments like these are found among Asiatic writers, and in select cases were strongly applied ; but as a general command this was never given by them, or any other people. It is not an absolute command in any of the books which they consider to be divinely inspired.

Bless them that curse you] Give them good words for their bad words.

Do good to them that hate you] We must not love in tongue, but in deed and in truth.

Pray for them which despitefully use you] Those who are making continual war upon you, and constantly harassing and calumniating you. Pray for them—This is another exquisitely reasonable precept. I cannot change that wicked man's heart ; and while it is unchanged he will continue to harass me : God alone can change it : then I must implore him to do that which will at once secure the poor man's salvation, and contribute so much to my own peace.

And persecute you] Those who press hard on and pursue you with hatred and malice, accompanied with repeated acts of enmity.

Verse 45. That ye may be the children of your Father] Some MSS., and several of the primitive Fathers, read, that ye may be like to, or resemble, your Father who is in heaven. This is certainly our Lord's meaning. As a man's child is called his, because a partaker of his own nature, so a holy person is said to be a child of God, because he is a partaker of the divine nature.

He maketh his sun to rise on the evil] If God had not loved us while we were his enemies, we could never have become his children : and we shall cease to be such, as soon as we cease to imitate him.

Verse 46. For if ye love them which love you] He who loves only his friends, does nothing for God's sake. He who loves for the sake of pleasure or interest, pays himself. God has no enemy which he hates but sin ; we should have no other.

The publicans] That is, tax-gatherers, farmers, or collectors of the taxes or public revenues. Of these there were two classes ; the Superior, who were Romans of the equestrian order, and the Inferior, those mentioned in the Gospels, who it appears were mostly Jews. This class of men was detestable among the Romans, the Greeks, and the Jews, for their intolerable rapacity and avarice. They were abhorred in an especial manner by the Jews, to whom the Roman government was odious : those, assisting in collecting the Roman tribute, were considered as betrayers of the liberties of their country, and abettors of those who enslaved it.

Verse 47. And if ye salute your brethren only] Instead of brethren, upwards of one hundred MSS., and several of them of great authority and antiquity, have friends. I scarcely know which to prefer ; as brother is more conformable to the Jewish mode of address, it should be retained in the text : the other reading, however, tends to confirm that of the Codex Grævii on ver. 42.

If not to salute be a heathenish indifference, to hide hatred under outward civilities is a diabolic treachery. To pretend much love and affection for those for whom we have neither —to use towards them complimentary phrases, to which we affix no meaning, but that they mean nothing, is highly offensive in the sight of that God by whom actions are weighed and words judged.

Do not—the publicans] Heathens, is adopted by Griesbach, instead of publicans on the authority of many MSS., and several of the primitive Fathers.

Verse 48. Be ye therefore perfect—as your Father] God himself is the grand law, sole giver, and only pattern of the perfection which he recommends to his children. The words are very emphatic. Ye shall be therefore perfect—ye shall be filled with the spirit of that God whose name is Mercy, and whose nature is love. God has many imitators of his power, independence, justice, &c., but few of his love, condescension, and kindness. He calls himself LOVE, to teach us that in this consists that perfection, the attainment of which he has made both our duty and privilege: for these words of our Lord include both a command and a promise.

"Can we be fully saved from sin in this world?" is an important question, to which this text gives a satisfactory answer: "Ye shall be perfect, as your Father, who is in heaven, is perfect." As in his infinite nature there is no sin, nothing but goodness and love, so in your finite nature there shall dwell no sin, for the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus shall make you free from the law of sin and death, Rom. viii. 2. God shall live in, fill, and rule your hearts; and, in what He fills and influences, neither Satan nor sin can have any part.

Verse 1. That ye do not your alms] Perform not your acts of righteousness—such as alms-giving, fasting, and prayer, mentioned immediately after. Instead of righteousness, or acts of righteousness, the reading in the text, that which has been commonly received is alms. But the first reading has been inserted in several editions, and is supported by the Codd. Vatican, and Bezae, some others, and several versions, all the Itala except one, and the Vulgate. The Latin Fathers have justitiam, a word of the same meaning.

Before men] Our Lord does not forbid public alms-giving, fasting, and prayer, but simply censures those vain and hypocritical persons who do those things publicly that they may be seen of men, and receive from them the reputation of saints, &c.

Verse 2. Therefore when thou doest thine alms] In the first verse the exhortation is general: Take ye heed. In this verse the address is pointed—and THOU—man—woman—who readest—hearest.

Do not sound a trumpet] It is very likely that this was literally practised among the Pharisees. Having something to distribute by way of alms, it is very probable they caused this to be published by blowing a trumpet or horn, under pretence of collecting the poor; though with no other design than to gratify their own ambition.

It must be granted, that in the Jewish writings there is no such practice referred to as that which I have supposed above, viz, blowing a trumpet to gather the poor, or the poor blowing a horn when relieved. Hence some learned men have thought that the word shopher, a trumpet, refers to the hole in the public alms chest, into which the money was dropped which was allotted for the service of the poor. Such holes, because they were wide at one end and grew gradually narrow towards the other, were actually termed shopheroth, trumpets, by the Rabbins. An ostentatious man, who wished to attract the notice of those around him, would throw in his money with some force into these trumpet-resembling holes, and thus he might be said to sound the trumpet.

Our Lord uses the words, so as to be tantamount to our term jingle. Do not make a public ostentatious jingle of that money which you give to public charities. Pride and hypocrisy are the things here reprehended.

may have *glory of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

trumpet to be sounded. Prov. xx. 6.—2 Kings x. 16.—^fPs. xlv. 21. 2 Cor. ix. 7.—^gLuke xiv. 14.

In the synagogues and in the streets] Schoettgen supposes that courts or avenues in the temple and in the synagogues may be intended—places where the people were accustomed to walk for air, amusement, &c., for it is not to be supposed that such chests were fixed in the public streets.

They have their reward.] That is, the honour and esteem of men which they sought. God is under no obligation to them—they did nothing with an eye to his glory, and from HIM they can expect no recompence. They had their recompence in this life; and could expect none in the world to come.

Verse 3. Let not thy left hand know] In many cases, works of charity must be hidden from even our nearest relatives, who, if they knew, would hinder us from doing what God has given us power and inclination to perform. We must go even farther; and conceal them as far as is possible from ourselves, by not thinking of them, or eyeing them with complacency. They are given to God, and should be hidden in HIM.

Verse 4. Which seeth in secret] We should ever remember that the eye of the Lord is upon us, and that he sees not only the act, but also every motive that led to it.

Shall reward thee openly.] Will give thee the fullest proofs of his acceptance of thy work of faith, and labour of love, by increasing that substance which, for his sake, thou sharest with the poor; and will manifest his approbation in thy own heart, by the witness of his Spirit.

Verse 5. And when thou prayest] A proper idea of prayer is, a pouring out of the soul unto God, as a free-will offering, solemnly and eternally dedicated to him, accompanied with the most earnest desire that it may know, love, and serve him alone. He that comes thus to God will ever be heard and blessed. Prayer is the language of dependence; he who prays not is endeavouring to live independently of God: this was the first curse, and continues to be the great curse of mankind. In the beginning Satan said, Eat this fruit; ye shall then be as God; i.e., ye shall be independent; the man hearkened to his voice, sin entered into the world, and notwithstanding the full manifestation of the deception the ruinous system is still pursued; man will, if possible, live independently of God; hence he either prays not at all, or uses the language without the spirit of prayer.

Thou shalt not be as the hypocrites] Properly a stage-

5 And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

6 But thou, when thou prayest, * enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

7 But when ye pray, ^b use not vain repetitions, player, who acts under a mask, personating a character different from his own; a counterfeit, a dissembler; one who would be thought to be different from what he really is. A person who wishes to be taken for a follower of God, but who has nothing of religion except the outside.

Love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets] It would not have answered their end to kneel before God, for then they might have been unnoticed by men; and consequently have lost that reward which they had in view: viz., the esteem and applause of the multitude. This hypocritical pretension to devotion is common among the Asiatics.

Verse 6. But thou, when thou prayest] This is a very impressive and emphatic address. But THOU! whosoever thou art, Jew, Pharisee, Christian—enter into thy closet. Prayer is the most secret intercourse of the soul with God, and as it were the conversation of one heart with another. The world is too profane and treacherous to be of the secret. We must shut the door against it: endeavour to forget it, with all the affairs which busy and amuse it. Prayer requires retirement, at least of the heart; for this may be fitly termed the closet in the house of God, which house the body of every real Christian is, 1 Cor. iii. 16. To this closet we ought to retire even in public prayer, and in the midst of company.

Reward thee openly.] What goodness is there equal to this of God! to give, not only what we ask, and more than we ask, but to reward even prayer itself!

Verse 7. Use not vain repetitions] Prayer requires more of the heart than of the tongue. The eloquence of prayer consists in the fervency of desire, and the simplicity of faith. The abundance of fine thoughts, studied and vehement motions, and the order and politeness of the expressions, are things which compose a mere human harangue, not a humble and Christian prayer. Our trust and confidence ought to proceed from that which God is able to do in us, and not from that which we can say to him.

As the heathen] The Vatican MS. reads, like the hypocrites. Unmeaning words, useless repetitions, and complimentary phrases in prayer, are in general the result of heathenism, hypocrisy, or ignorance.

Verse 8. Your father knoweth what things ye have need of] Prayer is not designed to inform God, but to give man a sight of his misery; to humble his heart, to excite his desire, to inflame his faith, to animate his hope, to raise his soul from earth to heaven, and to put him in mind that THERE is his Father, his country, and inheritance.

Verse 9. After this manner therefore pray ye] Forms of prayer were frequent among the Jews; and every public teacher gave one to his disciples. Some forms were drawn out to a considerable length, and from these abridgments were made: to the latter sort the following prayer properly belongs, and consequently, besides its own very important use, it is a plan for a more extended devotion. What satisfaction must it be to learn from God himself, with what words, and in what manner, he would have us pray to him, so as not to pray in vain!

Our Father] This prayer was evidently made in a peculiar manner for the children of God. And hence we are taught to say, not MY Father, but OUR Father. The heart, says one, of a child of God, is a brotherly heart, in respect of all other Christians: it asks nothing but in the spirit of unity, fellowship, and Christian charity; desiring that for its brethren which it desires for itself.

The word Father, placed here at the beginning of this prayer, includes two grand ideas, which should serve as a foundation to all our petitions: 1st. That tender and respectful love which we should feel for God, such as that which children feel for their fathers. 2nd. That strong as the heathen do: * for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

8 Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him.

9 After this manner therefore pray ye: * Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

10 Thy kingdom come. * Thy will be done in earth, 'as it is in heaven.

11 Give us this day our * daily bread.

confidence in God's love to us, such as fathers have for their children. Thus all the petitions in this prayer stand in strictest reference to the word Father; the first three referring to the love we have for God; and the three last to that confidence which we have in the love he bears to us.

Which art in Heaven] This phrase in the Scriptures seems used to express:—1st. HIS OMNIPRESENCE. 1 Kings viii. 27. 2nd. HIS MAJESTY and DOMINION over his creatures. 2 Chron. xx. 6. 3rd. HIS POWER and MIGHT. Ps. cxv. 3. 4th. HIS OMNISCIENCE. Ps. xi. 4; Ps. xxxiii. 13-15. 5th. His infinite PURITY and HOLINESS. Deut. xvi. 15; Isa. lvii. 15.

Hallowed] As the word sanctified, or hallowed, in Scripture, is frequently used for the consecration of a thing or person to a holy use or office, so the Divine Majesty may be said to be sanctified by us, when we separate him from, and in our conceptions and desires exalt him above, earth and all things.

Thy name.] That is, God himself, with all the Attributes of his Divine Nature—his Power, Wisdom, Justice, Mercy, &c.

We hallow God's name, 1st. With our lips, when all our conversation is holy, and we speak of those things which are meet to minister grace to the hearers.

2nd. In our thoughts, when we suppress every rising evil, and have our tempers regulated by his grace and Spirit.

3rd. In our lives, when we begin, continue, and end our works to his glory. If we have an eye to God in all we perform, then every act of our common employment will be an act of religious worship.

4th. In our families, when we endeavour to bring up our children in the discipline and admonition of the Lord; instructing also our servants in the way of righteousness.

5th. In a particular calling or business, when we separate the falsity, deception, and lying, commonly practised, from it; buying and selling as in the sight of the holy and just God.

Verse 10. Thy kingdom come.] The universal sway of the sceptre of Christ. The ancient Jews scrupled not to say: He prays not at all, in whose prayers there is no mention of the kingdom of God.

Thy will be done] This petition is properly added to the preceding; for when the kingdom of righteousness, peace, and joy, in the Holy Spirit, is established in the heart, there is then an ample provision made for the fulfilment of the Divine will.

As it is in heaven.] Observe, 1st. The salvation of the soul is the result of two wills conjoined: the will of God, and the will of man. If God will not the salvation of man, he cannot be saved: If man will not the salvation God has prepared for him, he cannot be delivered from his sins. 2nd. This petition certainly points out a deliverance from all sin; for nothing that is unholy can consist with the divine will, and if this be fulfilled in man, surely sin shall be banished from his soul. 3rd. This is further evident from these words, as it is in heaven; i.e., as the angels do it: viz., with all zeal, diligence, love, delight, and perseverance. 4th. Does not the petition plainly imply, we may live without sinning against God? Surely the holy angels never mingle iniquity with their loving obedience; and as our Lord teaches us to pray, that we do his will here as they do it in heaven, can it be thought he would put a petition in our mouths, the fulfilment of which was impossible? 5th. This certainly destroys the assertion; "There is no such state of purification to be attained here, in which it may be said, the soul is redeemed from sinful passions and desires;" for it is on EARTH that we are commanded to pray that this will, which is our sanctification, may be done.

12 ^aAnd forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

13 ^bAnd lead us not into temptation, but ^cdeliver us from evil: ^aFor thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

14 ^aFor if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you:

15 But ^aif ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

16 Moreover ^awhen ye fast, be not, as the hypocrites, of a ^bsad countenance: for they disfigure their faces, that they may appear unto men to fast. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

17 But thou, ^awhen thou fastest, ^aanoint thine head, and wash thy face;

18 That thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in secret: and thy Father which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

19 ^aLay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:

^a Ch. xviii. 21, &c.—^b Ch. xxvi. 41. Luke xlii. 40, 46. 1 Cor. x. 13. 2 Pet. ii. 9. Rev. iii. 10.—^c John xvii. 15.—^d 1 Chron. xix. 11.—^e Ecclesi. xxviii. 1, &c. Mark xi. 25, 26. Eph. iv. 32. Col. iii. 13.—^f Ch. xviii. 35. Jam. ii. 13.—^g 1 Kings xxi. 27. Isa.

6th. Our souls can never be truly happy, till our WILLs be entirely subjected to, and become one with, the will of God. 7th. How can any person offer this petition to his Maker who thinks of nothing less than the performance of the will of God, and of nothing more than doing his own?

Some see the mystery of the Trinity in the three preceding petitions. The first being addressed to the Father, as the source of all holiness. The second, to the Son, who establishes the kingdom of God upon earth. The third, to the Holy Spirit, who by his energy works in men to will and to perform.

To offer these three petitions with success at the Throne of God, three graces, essential to our salvation, must be brought into exercise; and, indeed, the petitions themselves necessarily suppose them. FAITH, Our Father—for he that cometh to God, must believe that he is.

HOPE, Thy kingdom come—for this grace has for its object good things to come.

LOVE, Thy will be done—For love is the incentive to and principle of all obedience to God, and beneficence to man.

Verse 11. Give us this day our daily bread.] The word translated daily has greatly perplexed critics and commentators. The interpretation of Theophylact, one of the best of the Greek Fathers, has ever appeared to me to be the most correct, Bread, sufficient for our substance and support, i.e., That quantity of food which is necessary to support our health and strength, by being changed into the substance of our bodies. There is probably an allusion here to the custom of travellers in the East, who were wont to reserve a part of the food given them the preceding evening to serve for their breakfast or dinner the next day. But as this was not sufficient for the whole day, they were therefore obliged to depend on the providence of God for the additional supply.

The word is so very peculiar and expressive, and seems to have been made on purpose by the Evangelists, that more than merely bodily nourishment seems to be intended by it. Indeed, many of the primitive fathers understood it as comprehending that daily supply of grace which the soul requires to keep it in health and vigour. He who uses the petition would do well to keep both in view.

Verse 12. And forgive us our debts.] Sin is represented here under the notion of a debt, and as our sins are many, they are called here debts.

Forgive us—Man has nothing to pay: if his debts are not forgiven, they must stand charged against him for ever, as he is absolutely insolvent. Forgiveness, therefore, must come from the free mercy of God in Christ: and how strange is it, we cannot have the old debt cancelled, without (by that very means) contracting a new one, as great as the old! but the credit is transferred from Justice to Mercy. While sinners, we are in debt to infinite Justice; when pardoned, in debt to endless Mercy: and as a continuance in a state of grace necessarily implies a continual communication of mercy, so the debt goes on increasing ad infinitum.

As we forgive our debtors.] That man condemns himself to suffer eternal punishment, who makes use of this prayer with revenge and hatred in his heart. The condition of forgiving our neighbour, though it cannot possibly merit any thing, is that condition without which God will pardon no man.

Verse 13. And lead us not into temptation.] That is, bring us not into sore trial. The word not only implies violent assaults from Satan, but also sorely afflictive circumstances, none of which we have, as yet, grace or fortitude sufficient to bear. Bring us not in, or lead us not in. This is a mere Hebraism: God is said to do a thing which he only permits or suffers to be done.

But deliver us from evil.] From the wicked one. Satan is expressly called the wicked one. Matt. xiii. 19, and 38, compare with Mark iv. 15. Luke viii. 12. This epithet of Satan comes from ponos, sorrow, misery, because of the drudgery which is found in the way of sin, the sorrow that accompanies the commission of it, and the misery which is entailed upon it, and in which it ends.

Deliver us.] Break our chains, and loose our bands—snatch, pluck us from the evil, and its calamitous issue. For thine is the kingdom, &c.] The whole of this Doxology is rejected by the most eminent critics. As however it is very ancient, and was in use among the Jews, as well as all the other petitions of this excellent prayer, it should not, in my opinion, be left out of the text, merely because some MSS. have omitted it, and it has been variously written in others.

For ever and ever.] Well expressed by our common translation—ever in our ancient use of the word taking in the whole duration of time; the second ever, the whole of eternity. May thy name have the glory both in this world, and in that which is to come!

Verse 14. If ye forgive men.] He who shows mercy to men receives mercy from God. For a king to forgive his subjects a hundred millions of treasons against his person and authority, on this one condition, that they will henceforth live peaceably with him and with each other, is what we shall never see; and yet this is but the shadow of that which Christ promises on his Father's part to all true penitents. A man can have little regard for his salvation, who refuses to have it on such advantageous terms.

Verse 15. But if ye forgive not.] He who does not awake at the sound of so loud a voice, is not asleep but dead. A vindictive man excludes himself from all hope of eternal life, and himself seals his own damnation.

Trespasses.] What a remarkable difference there is between this word and debts, in verse 12! Men's sins against us are only their stumblings, or fallings off from the duties they owe us; but ours are debts to God's justice, which we can never discharge.

Verse 16. When ye fast.] Abstaining from flesh, and living on fish, vegetables, &c. is no fast, or may be rather considered a burlesque on fasting. Many pretend to take the true definition of a fast from Isaiah lviii. 3, and say that it means a fast from sin. This is a mistake; there is no such term in the Bible as fasting from sin; the very idea is ridiculous and absurd, as if sin were a part of our daily food. In the fast mentioned by the Prophet, the people were to divide their bread with the hungry, ver. 7; but could they eat their bread, and give it too? No man should save by a fast: he should give all the food he might have eaten to the poor. He who saves a day's expense by a fast, commits an abomination before the Lord.

As the hypocrites, of a sad countenance.] A hypocrite has always a difficult part to act: when he wishes to appear as a penitent, not having any godly sorrow at heart, he is obliged to counterfeit it the best way he can, by a gloomy and austere look.

Verse 17. Anoint thine head and wash thy face.] These were forbidden in the Jewish Canon on days of fasting and humiliation; and hypocrites availed themselves of this 20 * But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:

21 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

22 ^b The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light.

23 But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!

* Eccles. xix. 11. Ch. xix. 21. Luke xii. 33, 34. xviii. 22. 1 Tim. vi. 19. 1 Pet. i. 4.—^b Luke xi. 34, 36.— Luke xvi. 13.—^d Gal. i. 10. 1 Tim. vi. 17. Jam. iv. 4. 1 John ii. 15.—^e Ps. lv. 22.

ordinance, that they might appear to fast. Our Lord, therefore, cautions us against this: as if he had said: Affect nothing—dress in thy ordinary manner, and let the whole of thy deportment prove that thou desirest to recommend thy soul to God, and not thy face to men. That factitious mourning, which consists in putting on black clothes, crapes, &c., is utterly inconsistent with the simplicity of the gospel of Christ: and, if practised in reference to spiritual matters, is certainly forbidden here: but sin is so common, and so boldly persisted in, that not even a crape is put on, as an evidence of deploring its influence, or of sorrow for having committed it.

Verse 18. Thy Father which seeth in secret] Let us not be afraid that our hearts can be concealed from God; but let us fear lest he perceive them to be more desirous of the praise of men than they are of that glory which comes from Him.

Verse 19. Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth] A heart designed for God and eternity is terribly degraded by being fixed on those things which are subject to corruption. “But may we not lay up treasure innocently?” Yes 1st. If you can do it without setting your heart on it, which is almost impossible: and 2nd. If there be neither widows nor orphans, destitute nor distressed persons in the place where you live. “But there is a portion which belongs to my children; shall I distribute that among the poor?” If it belongs to your children, it is not yours, and therefore you have no right to dispose of it. “But I have a certain sum in stock, &c.; shall I take that and divide it among the poor?” By no means; for, by doing so, you would put it out of your power to do good after the present division: keep your principal and devote, if you possibly can spare it, the product to the poor; and thus you shall have the continual ability to do good.

Rust] Or canker, as in the Greek. This word cannot be properly applied to rust, but to anything that consumes or cankers clothes or metals.

Where thieves do not break through] Literally, dig through, i.e., the wall, in order to get into the house. This was not a difficult matter, as the house was generally made of mud and straw, kneaded together.

Verse 20. Lay up—treasures in heaven] It is certain we have not the smallest portion of temporal good, but what we have received from the unmerited bounty of God; and if we give back to him all we have received, yet still there is no merit that can fairly attach to the act, as the goods were the Lord's; for I am not to suppose that I can purchase any thing from a man by his own property. On this ground, the doctrine of human merit is one of the most absurd that ever was published among men, or credited by sinners. Yet he who supposes he can purchase heaven by giving that meat which was left at his own table, and that of his servants; or by giving a garment which he could no longer in decency wear, must have a base ignorant soul, and a very mean opinion of the heaven he hopes for. But shall not such works as these be rewarded? Yes, yes, God will take care to give you all that your refuse victuals and old clothes are worth. Yet he who, through love to God and man, divides his bread with the hungry, and covers the naked with a garment, shall not lose his reward; a reward which the mercy of God appoints, but to which, in strict justice, he can lay no claim.

Verse 21. Where your treasure is] If God be the treasure of our souls, our hearts, i.e., our affections and desires, will be placed on things above. An earthly minded man proves 24 * No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. ^a Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

25 Therefore I say unto you, ^c Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?

26 ^d Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet that his treasure is below; a heavenly minded man shows that his treasure is above.

Luke xii. 22, 23. Phil. iv. 6. 1 Pet. v. 7.—^f Job. xxxviii. 41 Ps. cxlvii. 9. Luke xii. 24, &c.

Verse 22. The light of the body is the eye] That is, the eye is to the body what the sun is to the universe in the day time, or a lamp or candle to a house at night.

If—thine eye be single] Simple, uncompounded, i.e., so perfect in its structure as to see objects distinctly and clearly, and not confusedly, or in different places to what they are, as is often the case in certain disorders of the eye. This state of the eye is termed, ver. 23, evil, i.e., diseased or defective. An evil eye was a phrase in use, among the ancient Jews, to denote an envious, covetous man or disposition; a man who repined at his neighbour's prosperity, loved his own money, and would do nothing in the way of charity for God's sake. Our blessed Lord, however, extends and sublimates this meaning, and uses the sound eye as a metaphor, to point out that simplicity of intention, and purity of affection, with which men should pursue the supreme good.

Verse 24. No man can serve two masters] The master of our heart may be fitly termed the love that reigns in it. We serve that only which we love supremely. A man cannot be in perfect indifference betwixt two objects which are incompatible: he is inclined to despise and hate whatever he does not love supremely, when the necessity of a choice presents itself.

He will hate the one and love the other.] The word hate has the same sense here as it has in many places of Scripture; it merely signifies to love less—so Jacob loved Rachel, but hated Leah, i.e., he loved Leah much less than he loved Rachel.

Ye cannot serve God and mammon.] The word plainly denotes riches, Luke xvi. 9, 11, in which latter verse mention is made not only of the deceitful mammon, but also of the true.

Our blessed Lord shows here the utter impossibility of loving the world and loving God at the same time; or, in other words, that a man of the world cannot be a truly religious character. He who gives his heart to the world robs God of it, and, in snatching at the shadow of earthly good, loses substantial and eternal blessedness. How dangerous is it to set our hearts upon riches, seeing it is so easy to make them our god!

Verse 25. Therefore] On this account, viz., that ye may not serve mammon, but have unshaken confidence in God, I say unto you:

Take no thought] Be not anxiously careful. The proper meaning of the word is, Anxious solicitude, from a verb which signifies dividing or distracting the mind. Prudent care is never forbidden by our Lord, but only that anxious, distracting solicitude, which, by dividing the mind, and drawing it different ways, renders it utterly incapable of attending to any solemn or important concern. To be anxiously careful concerning the means of subsistence is to lose all satisfaction and comfort in the things which God gives, and to act as a mere infidel. On the other hand, to rely so much upon providence as not to use the very powers and faculties with which the Divine Being has endowed us, is to tempt God.

Verse 26. Behold the fowls of the air] We never knew an earthly father take care of his fowls, and neglect his children; and shall we fear this from our heavenly Father? God forbid! That man is utterly unworthy to have God for his father, who depends less upon his goodness, wisdom, and power, than upon a crop of corn, which may be spoiled either in the field or in the barn.

Verse 27. Which of you by taking thought can add one your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?

27 Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?

28 And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin:

29 And yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

30 Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?

* Luke ii. 52. xii. 25, 26.—^b Luke xii. 27.—^c Luke xii. 28.—^d Ch. xiv. 31.—^e See 1 Kings iii. 13. Ps. xxxvii. 25. Mark x. 30. Luke xii. 31. 1 Tim. iv. 8.—^f Mark x. 30. Luke xii.

cubit unto his stature? What can our uneasiness do but render us still more unworthy of the divine care? The passage from distrust to apostasy is very short and easy; and a man is not far from murmuring against Providence, who is dissatisfied with its conduct. We should depend as fully upon God for the preservation of his gifts as for the gifts themselves.

Cubit unto his stature? I think the word should be rendered age here, and so our Translators have rendered it in John ix. 21. No difficulty can arise from applying a cubit, a measure of extension, to time, and the age of man: as place and time are both quantities, and capable of increase and diminution: and, as no fixed material standard can be employed in the mensuration of the fleeting particles of time, it was natural and necessary, in the construction of language, to apply parallel terms to the discrimination of time and place. Besides, it is evident that the phrase of adding one cubit is proverbial, denoting something minute; and is therefore applicable to the smallest possible portion of time; but, in a literal acceptance, the addition of a cubit to the stature would be a great and extraordinary accession of height.

Verse 28. And why take ye thought for raiment? Or, why are ye anxiously careful about raiment? The herbs and flowers of the field have their being, nourishment, exquisite flavours, and beautiful hues from God himself. They are not only without anxious care, but also without care or thought of every kind. Your being, its excellence and usefulness, do not depend on your anxious concern: they spring as truly from the beneficence and continual superintendence of God, as the flowers of the field do; and were you brought into such a situation, as to be as utterly incapable of contributing to your own preservation and support as the lilies of the field are to theirs, your Heavenly Father could augment your substance, and preserve your being, when for his glory and your own advantage.

Consider Diligently consider this, lay it earnestly to heart, and let your confidence be unshaken in the God of infinite bounty and love.

Verse 29. Solomon in all his glory Some suppose that as the robes of state worn by the eastern kings were usually white, as were those of the nobles among the Jews, that therefore the lily was chosen for the comparison.

Verse 30. If God so clothe the grass of the field Christ confounds both the luxury of the rich in their superfluities, and the distrust of the poor as to the necessities of life. Let man, who is made for God and eternity, learn from a flower of the field how low the care of Providence stoops.

To-morrow is cast into the oven The inhabitants of the East, to this day, make use of dry straw, withered herbs and stubble, to heat their ovens.

31 Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed?

32 (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things.

33 But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.

34 Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

31 Rom. xiv. 17.—^a Lev. xxii. 30. Prov. xxvii. 1.—^b Job xiv. 1. Luke xii. 20.

Verse 31. What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? &c. These three inquiries engross the whole attention of those who are living without God in the world. The belly and back of a worldling are his compound god; and these he worships in the lust of the flesh, in the lust of the eye, and in the pride of life.

Verse 32. For after all these things do the Gentiles seek To concern ourselves about these wants with anxiety, as if there was no such thing as a providence in the world; with great affection towards earthly enjoyments, as if we expected no other; and without praying to God or consulting his will, as if we could do anything without him: this is to imitate the worst kind of heathens, who live without hope, and without God in the world.

Seek Seek intensely, earnestly, again and again: the true characteristic of the worldly man; his soul is never satisfied—give! give! is the ceaseless language of his earth-born heart.

Your heavenly Father knoweth, &c. It is the property of a wise and tender father to provide necessities, and not superfluities, for his children. Not to expect the former is an offence to his goodness; to expect the latter is injurious to his wisdom.

Verse 33. His righteousness That holiness of heart and purity of life which God requires of those who profess to be subjects of that spiritual kingdom mentioned above.

All these things shall be added unto you. To this verse, probably, belong the following words, quoted often by Clement, Origen, and Eusebius, as the words of Christ: "Ask great things, and little things shall be added unto you; ask heavenly things, and earthly things shall be added unto you."

Verse 34. Take therefore no thought That is, Be not therefore anxiously careful.

The future falls under the cognizance of God alone: we encroach, therefore, upon his rights, when we would fain foresee all that may happen to us, and secure ourselves from it by our cares. How much good is omitted, how many evils caused, how many duties neglected, how many innocent persons deserted, how many good works destroyed, how many truths suppressed, and how many acts of injustice authorized by those timorous forecasts of what may happen; and those faithless apprehensions concerning the future! Let us do now what God requires of us, and trust the consequences to him.

Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. Sufficient for each day is its own calamity. Each day has its peculiar trials: we should meet them with confidence in God. As we should live but a day at a time, so we should take care to suffer no more evils in one day than are necessarily attached to it.

CHAPTER VII.

Our Lord warns men against rash judgment and uncharitable censures, 1-5. Shows that holy things must not be profaned, 6; gives encouragement to fervent persevering prayer, 7-11. Shows how men should deal with each other, 12. Exhorts the people to enter in at the strait gate, 13, 14; to beware of false teachers, who are to be known by their fruits, 15-20. Shows that no man shall be saved by his mere profession of Christianity, however specious, 22, 23. The parable of the wise man who built his house upon a rock, 24, 25. Of the foolish man who built his house, without a foundation, on the sand, 26, 27. Christ concludes his sermon, and the people are astonished at his doctrine, 28, 29.

JUDGE *not, that ye be not judged. 2 For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: ^band with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

3 *And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

4 Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and, behold, a beam is in thine own eye?

5 Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.

6 ^dGive not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

Verse 1. Judge not, that ye be not judged.] These exhortations are pointed against rash, harsh, and uncharitable judgments, the thinking evil, where no evil seems, and speaking of it accordingly. This is one of the most important exhortations in the whole of this excellent sermon. By a secret and criminal disposition of nature, man endeavours to elevate himself above others, and, to do it more effectually, depresses them. It is from this criminal disposition, that evil surmises, rash judgments, precipitate decisions, and all other unjust procedures against our neighbour, flow.

Verse 2. For with what judgment] He who is severe on others will naturally excite their severity against himself.

Verse 3. And why beholdest thou the mote] This might be translated the splinter: for splinter bears some analogy to beam, but mote does not. It often happens that the faults which we consider as of the first enormity in others are, to our own iniquities, as a chip is, when compared to a large beam.

Verse 4. Or how wilt thou say] That man is utterly unfit to show the way of life to others who is himself walking in the way of death.

Verse 5. Thou hypocrite] Our Lord unmasks the vile pretender to sainthood, and shows him that his hidden hypocrisy, covered with the garb of external sanctity, is more abominable in the sight of God than the openly professed and practised iniquity of the profligate.

Verse 6. Give not that which is holy] The holy or sacred thing; i.e., any thing, especially of the sacrificial kind, which had been consecrated to God. The members of this sentence should be transposed thus:

*Give not that which is holy unto the dogs,
Lest they turn again and rend you:
Neither cast ye your pearls before swine,
Lest they trample them under their feet.*

Verse 7. Ask—seek—knock] These three words include the ideas of want, loss, and earnestness. Ask: turn beggar at the door of Mercy; thou art destitute of all spiritual good, and it is God alone who can give it to thee; and thou hast no claim but what his mercy has given thee on itself.

Seek: Thou hast lost thy God, thy paradise, thy soul. Look about thee—leave no stone unturned; there is no peace,

7 *Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you:

8 For ^cevery one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

9 *Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?

10 Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent?

11 If ye then, ^bbeing evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?

12 Therefore all things, ^dwhatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for ^ethis is the law and the prophets.

13 ^fEnter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat.

no final salvation for thee till thou get thy soul restored to the favour and image of God.

Knock: Be in earnest—be importunate: Eternity is at hand! and, if thou die in thy sins, where God is thou shalt never come.

Verse 8. For every one that asketh receiveth] Prayer is always heard after one manner or other. No soul can pray in vain that prays as directed above. The truth and faithfulness of the Lord Jesus are pledged for its success. Ye SHALL receive—ye SHALL find—it SHALL be opened. These words are as strongly binding on the side of God, as thou shalt do no murder is on the side of man. Bring Christ's word, and Christ's sacrifice with thee, and not one of Heaven's blessings can be denied thee.

Verse 9. Or what man is there—whom if his son] Men are exhorted to come unto God, with the persuasion that he is a most gracious and compassionate Parent, who possesses all heavenly and earthly good, knows what is necessary for each of his creatures, and is infinitely ready to communicate that which they need most.

Will he give him a stone?] Will he not readily give him bread if he have it? This was a proverb in other countries.

Verse 11. If ye, then, being evil] If ye who are radically and diabolically depraved, yet feel yourselves led, by natural affection, to give those things to your children which are necessary to support their lives, how much more will your Father who is in heaven, whose nature is infinite goodness, mercy, and grace, give good things—his grace and Spirit (the Holy Ghost, Luke xi. 13), to them who ask him? What a picture is here given of the goodness of God! Reader, ask thy soul, could this heavenly Father reprobate to unconditional eternal damnation any creature he has made?

Verse 12. Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men] This is a most sublime precept, and highly worthy of the grandeur and beneficence of the just God who gave it. None but he whose heart is filled with love to God and all mankind can keep it, either in its spirit or letter. Self-love will feel itself sadly cramped when brought within the limits of this precept; but God hath spoken it: it is the spirit and design of the law and the prophets; the sum of all that is 14 * Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.

15 ^b Beware of false prophets, * which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ^a ravening wolves.

16 * Ye shall know them by their fruits. 'Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?

17 Even so * every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

18 A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

19 ^b Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

laid down in the Sacred Writings, relative to men's conduct towards each other.

Verse 13. Enter ye in at the strait gate] Our Saviour seems to allude here to the distinction between the public and private ways mentioned by the Jewish lawyers. The public roads were allowed to be sixteen cubits broad, the private ways only four. The words in the original are very emphatic: Enter in (to the kingdom of heaven) through THIS strait gate, i.e., of doing to every one as you would he should do unto you; for this alone seems to be the strait gate which our Lord alludes to.

For wide is the gate] And very broad, that leadeth forward, into THAT destruction, meaning eternal misery; intimating, that it is much more congenial to the revengeful, covetous heart of fallen man, to take every advantage of another, and to enrich himself at his expense, rather than to walk according to the rule laid down before, by our blessed Lord; and that acting contrary to it is the way to everlasting misery. With those who say it means repentance, and forsaking sin, I can have no controversy. That is certainly a gate, and a strait one too, through which every sinner must turn to God, in order to find salvation. But the doing to every one as we would they should do unto us, is a gate extremely strait, and very difficult, to every unregenerate mind.

Verse 14. Because strait is the gate] Instead of because, I should prefer how, which reading is supported by a great majority of the best MSS., version, and fathers. How strait is that gate! This mode of expression more forcibly points out the difficulty of the way to the kingdom.

Few there be that find it.] Men are so wedded to their own passions, and so determined to follow the imaginations of their own hearts that still it may be said: There are few who find the way to heaven; fewer yet who abide any time in it; fewer still who walk in it; and fewest of all who persevere unto the end. Nothing renders this way either narrow or difficult to any person, but sin.

Verse 15. Beware of false prophets] By false prophets, we are to understand teachers of erroneous doctrines, who come professing a commission from God, but whose aim is not to bring the heavenly treasure to the people, but rather to rob them of their earthly good.

Verse 16. Ye shall know them by their fruits.] Fruits, in the Scripture and Jewish phraseology, are taken for works of any kind. "A man's works," says one, "are the tongue of his heart, and tell honestly whether he is inwardly corrupt or pure."

Verse 17. So every good tree] A man cannot be a saint and a sinner at the same time. Let us remember, that as the good tree means a good heart, and the good fruit, a holy life, and that every heart is naturally vicious; so there is none but God who can pluck up the vicious tree, create a good heart, plant, cultivate, water, and make it continually fruitful in righteousness and true holiness.

Verse 18. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit] Love to God and man is the root of the good tree; and from this principle all its fruit is found. To teach, as some have done, that a state of salvation may be consistent with the greatest crimes (such as murder and adultery in David), or that the righteous necessarily sin in all their best works, is really to 20 Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

21 Not every one that saith unto me, 'Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

22 Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we 'not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

23 And * then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: 'depart from me ye that work iniquity.

24 'Therefore' whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock:

^a Hos. viii. 2. Ch. xxv. 11, 12. Luke vi. 46. xiii. 25. Acts xix. 13. Rom. ii. 13. James i. 22.—^a Num. xxiv. 4. John xi. 51. 1 Cor. xiii. 2.—^a Ch. xxv. 12. Luke xiii. 25, 27. 2 Tim. ii. 19.—^a Ps. v. 5. vi. 8. Ch. xxv. 41.—^a Luke vi. 47, &c.

make the good tree bring forth bad fruit, and to give the lie to the Author of Eternal Truth.

Verse 19. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit] What a terrible sentence is this against Christless pastors, and Christless hearers! Every tree that produceth not good fruit is to be now cut down; the act of excision is now taking place: the curse of the Lord is even now on the head and the heart of every false teacher and impenitent hearer.

Verse 20. Wherefore by their fruits, &c.] This truth is often repeated, because our eternal interests depend so much upon it. Not to have good fruit is to have evil: there can be no innocent sterility in the invisible tree of the heart. He that brings forth no fruit, and he that brings forth bad fruit, are both only fit for the fire.

Verse 21. Not every one] The sense of this verse seems to be this: No person, by merely acknowledging my authority, believing in the divinity of my nature, professing faith in the perfection of my righteousness, and infinite merit of my atonement, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven—shall have any part with God in glory; but he who doeth the will of my father—he who gets the bad tree rooted up, the good tree planted, and continues to bring forth fruit to the glory and praise of God.

Verse 22. Many will say to me in that day] In that very day, viz., the day of judgment—have we not prophesied, taught, publicly preached, in thy name; acknowledging thee to be the only Saviour, and proclaiming thee as such to others; cast out demons, impure spirits, who had taken possession of the bodies of men; done many miracles, being assisted by supernatural agency to invert even the course of nature, and thus prove the truth of the doctrine we preached?

Verse 23. Will I profess] I will fully and plainly tell them I never knew you—I never approved of you; for so the word is used in many places, both in the Old and New Testaments. Alas! alas! how many preachers are there who appear prophets in their pulpits; how many writers, and other evangelical workmen, the miracles of whose labour, learning, and doctrine, we admire, who are nothing, and worse than nothing, before God, because they perform not his will, but their own?

Depart from me] What a terrible word! What a dreadful separation! Depart from ME! from the very Jesus whom you have proclaimed, in union with whom alone eternal life is to be found. For, united to Christ, all is heaven; separated from him, all is hell.

Verse 24. Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine] That is, the excellent doctrines laid down before in this and the two preceding chapters.

I will liken him unto a wise man.] To a prudent man—a man of sense and understanding, who, foreseeing the evil, hideth himself, who proposes to himself the best end, and makes use of the proper means to accomplish it. True wisdom consists in getting the building of our salvation completed: to this end, we must build on the Rock, CHRIST JESUS, and make the building firm, by keeping close to the maxims of his Gospel, and having our tempers and lives conformed to its word and spirit; and when, in order to this, we lean on nothing but the grace of Christ, we then build upon a solid Rock.

25 And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock.

26 And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand:

27 And the rain descended, and the floods came,

* Ch. xiii. 54. Mark i. 22. & vi. 2. Luke iv. 32.

Verse 25. And the rain descended—floods came—winds blew] In Judea, and in all countries in the neighbourhood of the tropics, the rain sometimes falls in great torrents, producing rivers, which sweep away the soil from the rocky hills; and the houses, which are builded of brick only dried in the sun, of which there are whole villages in the East, literally melt away before those rains, and the land-floods occasioned by them.

Verse 26. And every one that heareth—and doeth them not] Was there ever a stricter system of morality delivered by God to man, than in this sermon? He who reads or hears it, and does not look to God to conform his soul and life to it, and notwithstanding is hoping to enter into the kingdom of heaven, is like the fool who built his house on the sand. Talking about Christ, his righteousness, merits, and atonement, while the person is not conformed to his word and spirit, is no other than solemn self-deception.

Verse 28. The people were astonished] The multitudes; for vast crowds attended the ministry of this most popular and faithful of all preachers. They were astonished at his doctrine. They heard the law defined in such a manner as they had never thought of before; and this sacred system of and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

28 And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine:

29 For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes.

morality urged home on their consciences with such clearness and authority as they had never felt under the teaching of their Scribes and Pharisees. Here is the grand difference between the teaching of Scribes and Pharisees, the self-created or men-made ministers, and those whom God sends. The first may preach what is called very good and very sound doctrine; but it comes with no authority from God to the souls of the people: therefore, the unholy is unholy still; because preaching can only be effectual to the conversion of men, when the unction of the Holy Spirit is in it; and, as these are not sent by the Lord, therefore they shall not profit the people at all. Jer. xxiii. 32.

Verse 29. Having authority] They felt a commanding power and authority in his word, i.e. his doctrine. His statements were perspicuous; his exhortations persuasive, his doctrine sound and rational, and his arguments irresistible.

Thus ends a sermon, the most strict, pure, holy, profound, and sublime, ever delivered to man; and yet so amazingly simple is the whole that almost a child may apprehend it! Lord! write all these thy sayings upon our hearts, we beseech thee! Amen.

CHAPTER VIII.

Great multitudes follow Christ, 1. He heals a leper, 2-4. Heals the Centurion's servant, 5-13. Heals Peter's wife's mother, 14, 15; and several other diseased persons, 16, 17. Departs from that place, 18. Two persons offer to be his disciples, 19-22. He and his disciples are overtaken with a tempest, which he miraculously stills, 23-27. He cures Demoniacs, and the Demons which were cast out enter into a herd of swine, which, rushing into the sea, perish, 28-32. The swine-herds announce the miracle to the Gergesenes, who request Christ to depart from their country, 33, 34.

WHEN he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him.
2 And, behold, there came a leper and worshipped him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

* Ch. v. 1. Luke vii. 1.—^b Mark i. 40, &c. Luke v. 12, &c.

Verse 1. From the mountain] That mountain on which he had delivered the preceding inimitable sermon.

Great multitudes followed him.] Having been deeply impressed with the glorious doctrines which they had just heard.

Verse 2. And, behold, there came a leper] The eastern leprosy was a distemper of the most loathsome kind, highly contagious, so as to infect garments (Lev. xiii. 47, &c.) and houses (Lev. xiv. 84, &c.), and was deemed incurable by any human means.

Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.] As this leper may be considered as a fit emblem of the corruption of man by sin; so may his cure, of the redemption of the soul by Christ. A sinner, truly penitent, seeks God with a respectful faith; approaches him in the spirit of adoration; humbles himself under his mighty hand, acknowledging the greatness of his fall, and the vileness of his sin; his prayer, like that of the leper, should be humble, plain, and full of confidence in that God who can do all things, and of dependence upon his will or mercy, from which all good must be derived. It is peculiar to God that he need only what he intends to perform. His power is his will. The ability of God to do what is necessary to be done, and his willingness to make his creatures happy, should be deeply considered by all those who approach him in prayer. The leper had no doubt of the former, but he was far from being equally satisfied in respect of the latter.

3 And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean. And immediately his leprosy was cleansed.

4 And Jesus saith unto him, See thou tell no man; but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest,

^c Ch. ix. 30. Mark v. 43.

Verse 3. Jesus put forth his hand—I will; be thou clean.] The most sovereign authority is assumed in this speech of our blessed Lord—I WILL: there is here no supplication of any power superior to his own; and the event proved to the fullest conviction, and by the clearest demonstration, that his authority was absolute, and his power unlimited. Be thou cleansed.—a single word is enough.

And immediately his leprosy was cleansed.] What an astonishing sight! A man whose whole body was covered over with the most loathsome disease, cleansed from it in a moment of time! Was it possible for any soul to resist the evidence of this fact?

Verse 4. Jesus saith—See thou tell no man] Had our Lord, at this early period fully manifested himself as the Messiah, the people in all likelihood would have proclaimed him King; this, however refused by him, must have excited the hatred of the Jewish rulers, and the jealousy of the Roman government; and, speaking after the manner of men, his farther preachings and miracles must have been impeded.

Shew thyself to the priest] This was to conform to the law instituted in this case, Lev. xiv. 1, &c.

Offer the gift] See the notes on Lev. xiv. All this was to be done for a testimony to them; to prove that this leper, who was doubtless well known in the land, had been thoroughly cleansed; and thus, in this private way, to give full proof to the priesthood that Jesus was the true Messiah.

and offer the gift that ^a Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

5 ^b And when Jesus was entered into Capernaum, there came unto him a centurion, beseeching him,

6 And saying, Lord, my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented.

7 And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him.

8 The centurion answered and said, Lord, ^c I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof: but ^d speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed.

9 For I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

10 When Jesus heard it he marvelled, and said

^a Lev. xiv. 3, 4, 10. Luke v. 14.—^b Luke vii. 1, &c.—^c Luke xv. 19, 21.—^d Ps. cvii. 20.—Gen. xii. 3. Isa. ii. 2, 3. xi. 10. Mal. i. 11. Luke xlii. 29. Acts x. 45. xi. 18. xiv. 27. Rom. xv. 9, &c. Eph. iii. 6.—^e Ch. xiii. 43.—^f Ch. xiii. 42, 60. xxii. 13.

Verse 5. A centurion] A Roman military officer who had the command of one hundred men.

Verse 6. Lord] Rather, Sir, for so the word should always be translated when a Roman is the speaker.

Lieth at home] Lieth all along; intimating that the disease had reduced him to a state of the utmost impotence, through the grievous torments with which it was accompanied.

Sick of the palsy] Or paralytic. This centurion did not act as many masters do when their servants are afflicted, have them immediately removed to an infirmary, often to a work-house; or sent home to friends or relatives, who probably either care nothing for them, or are unable to afford them any of the comforts of life.

Verse 7. I will come and heal him.] I am coming, and will heal him. This saying is worthy of observation. Jesus did not positively say, I will come and heal him; this could not have been strictly true, because our Lord healed him without going to the house; and the issue shows that the words ought to be taken in the most literal sense: thus understood, they contained a promise which it seems none of them distinctly comprehended.

Verse 8. But speak the word only.] Or, speak by word or command. This reading is supported by the most extensive evidence from MSS., versions, and fathers. See here the pattern of that living faith and genuine humility which ought always to accompany the prayer of a sinner: Jesus can will away the palsy, and speak away the most grievous torments. The first degree of humility is to acknowledge the necessity of God's mercy, and our own inability to help ourselves; the second, to confess the freeness of his grace, and our own utter unworthiness. Ignorance, unbelief, and presumption will ever retard our spiritual cure.

Verse 9. For I am a man under authority.] That is, under the authority of others. The argument of the centurion seems to run thus. If I, who am a person subject to the control of others, yet have some so completely subject to myself, that I can say to one, Come, and he cometh, to another, Go, and he goeth, and to my slave, Do this, and he doeth it; how much more then canst thou accomplish whatsoever thou wilt, being under no control, and having all things under thy command.

Verse 10. I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.] That is, I have not found so great an instance of confidence and faith in my power, even among the Jews, as this Roman, a Gentile, has shown himself to possess.

From Luke vii. 5, where it is said of this centurion, "he loveth our nation, and has built us a synagogue," we may infer that this man was like the centurion mentioned Acts x. 1, a devout Gentile, a proselyte of the gate, one who believed in the God of Israel, without conforming to the Jewish ritual, or receiving circumcision. Though the military life is one of the most improper nurses for the Christian religion, yet in all nations there have been found several instances of genuine humility, and faith in God, even in soldiers.

Verse 11. Many shall come from the east and west] Men of every description, of all countries, and of all professions; and shall sit down, that is, to meat, intimating the recur-to them that followed, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

11 And I say unto you, that ^a many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven.

12 But ^b the children of the kingdom ^c shall be cast ^d out into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

13 And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; ^e and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the self same hour.

14 ^f And when Jesus was come into Peter's house, he saw ^g his wife's mother laid, and sick of a fever.

15 And he touched her hand, and the fever left lent posture used by the Easterns at their meals. The Rabbins represent the blessedness of the kingdom of God under the notion of a banquet.

With Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob] In the closest communion with the most eminent followers of God.

Verse 12. Shall be cast out into outer darkness] As the enjoyment of that salvation which Jesus Christ calls the kingdom of heaven is here represented under the notion of a nuptial festival, at which the guests sat down in a reclining posture, with the master of the feast; so the state of those who were excluded from the banquet is represented as deep darkness; because the nuptial solemnities took place at night. And because they who were shut out were not only exposed to shame, but also to hunger and cold; therefore it is added, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Verse 13. As thou hast believed; so be it done] Let the mercy thou requestest be equal to the faith thou hast brought to receive it by. ACCORDING TO thy faith be it done unto thee is a general measure of God's dealings with mankind. To get an increase of faith is to get an increase of every grace which constitutes the mind that was in Jesus, and prepares fully for the enjoyment of the kingdom of God. God is the same in the present time which he was in ancient days; and miracles of healing may be wrought on our own bodies and souls, and on those of others, by the instrumentality of our faith. But, alas! where is faith to be found!

And his servant was healed in the selfsame hour.] Christ never says, believe now for a salvation which thou now needest, and I will give it to thee in some future time. That salvation which is expected through works or sufferings must of necessity be future, as there must be time to work or suffer in; but the salvation which is by faith must be for the present moment, for this simple reason, IT IS BY FAITH, that God may be manifested and honoured; and not by works or by sufferings, lest any man should boast.

Verse 14. Peter's house] That Peter lived at Capernaum, and that Christ lodged with him, is fully evident from this verse, compared with chap. xvii. 24.

Peter's—wife's mother] Learn hence, says Theophylact, that marriage is no hindrance to virtue, since the chief of the Apostles had his wife. Marriage is one of the first of divine Institutions, and is a positive command of God. He says, the state of celibacy is not good, Gen. ii. 18. Those who pretend to say that the single state is more holy than the other, slander their Maker, and say in effect, "We are too holy to keep the commandments of God."

Verse 15. He touched her hand] Can any thing on this side the unlimited power of God effect such a cure with only a touch?

Ministered unto them.] Them is the reading of most of the printed editions, but to him has the utmost evidence in its support from MSS., Versions, and Fathers.

Verse 16. When the even was come] The Jews kept their sabbath from evening to evening, according to the law, Lev. xlii. 32. Hence it was that the sick were not brought out to our Lord till after sunset, because then the sabbath was ended.

16 * When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick:

17 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, ^b Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.

18 Now when Jesus saw great multitudes about him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other side.

19 * And a certain scribe came, and said unto him, Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

20 And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

21 ^d And another of his disciples said unto him, Lord, * suffer me first to go and bury my father.

22 But Jesus said unto him, Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead.

* Mark i. 32, &c. Luke iv. 40, 41.—^b Isa. llii. 4. 1 Pet. ii. 24.—^c Luke ix. 57, 58.—^d Luke ix. 59, 60.—^e See 1 Kings xix. 20.—

Many that were possessed with devils] If the whole business of Demonism had been only a vulgar error (as wise men now tell us), what a fine opportunity had the wise men then to unmask the whole matter, and thus pour contempt on the pretensions of our blessed Lord and his followers, who held it to be one proof of their divine mission, that Demons were subject to them!

And healed all that were sick] Not a soul did the Lord Jesus ever reject who came to him soliciting his aid. Need any sinner despair who comes to him, conscious of his spiritual malady, to be healed by his merciful hand?

Verse 17. Himself took our infirmities] The text in Isaiah refers properly to the taking away of sin; and this in the Evangelist, to the removal of corporeal afflictions: but, as the diseases of the body are the emblems of the sin of the soul, Matthew, referring to the prediction of the prophet, considered the miraculous healing of the body as an emblem of the soul's salvation by Christ Jesus.

Verse 18. Unto the other side.] Viz., of the lake of Genesareth, whence he proceeded to the country of the Gergesenes, ver. 28.

Verse 19. Master] Rather, teacher.

I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.] Every teacher among the Jews had disciples, and some especially that followed or accompanied them wherever they went, that they might have some person at hand with whom they might converse concerning the divine law.

Verse 20. The foxes have holes, &c.] Reader! art thou a poor man? and dost thou fear God? Then, what comfort must thou derive from the thought, that thou so nearly resemblest the Lord Jesus! But how unlike is the rich man, who is the votary of pleasure and slave of sin, to this heavenly pattern!

Son of Man] A Hebrew phrase, expressive of humiliation and debasement; and, on that account, applied emphatically to himself, by the meek and lowly Jesus. Besides, it seems here to be used to point out the incarnation of the Son of God, according to the predictions of the prophets, Psalm viii. 5. Dan. vii. 18. And as our Lord was now showing forth his eternal Divinity in the miracles he wrought, he seems studious to prove to them the certainty of his incarnation, because on this depended the atonement for sin.

Verse 21. Another of his disciples] This does not mean any of the twelve, but one of those who were constant hearers of our Lord's preaching; the name of disciple being common to all those who professed to believe in him, John vi. 66. Bury my father: probably his father was old, and apparently near death; but it was a maxim among the Jews, that, if a man had any duty to perform to the dead, he was, for that time, free from the observance of any other precept or duty.

Verse 22. Let the dead bury their dead] Our Lord's saying, being in common use, had nothing difficult in it to a Jew. Natural death is the separation of the body and soul; spiritual death, the separation of God and the soul: men who live in sin are dead to God. Leave the spiritually dead 23 And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him.

24 * And, behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, inasmuch that the ship was covered with the waves: but he was asleep.

25 And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, Lord, save us: we perish.

26 And he saith unto them, Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Then * he arose, and rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm.

27 But the men marvelled, saying, What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!

28 ^b And when he was come to the other side into the country of the Gergesenes, there met him two possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass by that way.

29 And, behold, they cried out, saying, What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God? art thou come hither to torment us before the time?

* Mark iv. 37, &c. Luke viii. 23, &c.—^a Ps. lxxv. 7. lxxxix. 9, cvii. 29.—^b Mark v. 1, &c. Luke viii. 26, &c.

to bury their natural dead. All the common offices of life may be performed by any person; to preach the glad tidings of the kingdom of God is granted but to a few, and to these only by an especial call; these should immediately abandon worldly concerns and employments, and give themselves wholly up to the work of the ministry.

Verse 24. Arose a great tempest in the sea] Probably excited by Satan, the prince of the power of the air, who, having got the author and all the preachers of the gospel together in a small vessel, thought by drowning it to defeat the purposes of God, and thus to prevent the salvation of a ruined world. What a noble opportunity must this have appeared to the enemy of the human race!

Verse 25. Lord save us; we perish.] One advantage of trials is to make us know our weakness, so as to oblige us to have recourse to God by faith in Christ. It is by faith alone that we may be said to approach him; by love we are united to him, and by prayer we awake him. All good perishes in us without Christ; without his grace, there is not so much as one moment in which we are not in danger of utter ruin. How proper, then, is this short prayer for us, and how familiar should it be to us!

Verse 26. Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith?] Faith is ever bold—incredulity always timid. When faith fails in temptation, there is the utmost danger of shipwreck.

Then he arose and rebuked the winds, &c.] As the agitation of the sea was only the effect of the wind, it was necessary to remove the cause of the disturbance, that the effect might cease.

There was a great calm.] One word of Christ can change the face of nature; one word of his can restore calm and peace to the most troubled and disconsolate soul. There was at first a great agitation; then a great calm. Thus God ever proportions the comfort to the affliction.

Verse 27. The men marvelled] Every part of the creation (man excepted) hears and obeys the Creator's voice. Sinners have an ear for the world, the devil, and the flesh: till this ear is shut, God's voice is not discerned; for when it is shut to its enemies it is open to its friends.

What manner of man is this] How great is this person! Here was God fully manifest; but it was in the flesh—there were the hidings of his power.

Verse 28. The country of the Gergesenes] This word is variously written in the MSS. and Versions; Gergasenes, Gerasenes, Gadarenes, Gergesions, and Gersedonians. The three first are supported by the greater authorities. [Probably Gadara, one of the ten cities of Decapolis, is intended.]

Two possessed with devils] Persons possessed by evil demons. Mark and Luke mention only one demoniac, probably the fiercer of the two.

Coming out of the tombs] It is pretty evident that uncopas were generally built over the graves among the Jews, and that these demoniacs had their dwelling under such: the evil spirits which were in them delighting more in these abodes of desolation and ruin, as being more congenial to 30 And there was a good way off from them, a herd of many swine feeding.

31 So the devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into the herd of swine.

32 And he said unto them, Go. And when they were come out, they went into the herd of swine: and, behold, the whole herd of swine ran violently their fierce and diabolic nature, and therefore would drive the possessed into them. [The tombs were generally hewn out of rocks by the wayside.]

Verse 29. What have we to do with thee? The literal translation is, What is it to us, and to thee? it is a Jewish phrase, which often occurs in the Old Testament, signifying an abrupt refusal of some request, or a wish not to be troubled with the company or importunity of others.

Jesus, thou Son of God! I heartily concur with the MSS., &c., which omit the word Jesus, for this simple reason, among others, that the word Jesus, i. e., Saviour, was of too ominous an import to the Satanic interest to be used freely, in such a case, by any of his disciples or subalterns.

Art thou come hither to torment us before the time? From this it appears that a greater degree of punishment awaited these demons than they at that time endured; and that they knew there was a time determined by the Divine Judge when they should be sent into greater torments.

Verse 30. A herd of many swine. These were in all probability Jewish property, and kept and used in express violation of the law of God; and therefore their destruction, in the next verse, was no more than a proper manifestation of the justice of God.

Verse 31. Suffer us to go away. This is the common reading; send us away, appears more likely to be genuine. Send us away seems to express more fully the absolute power Jesus Christ had over them—permission alone was not sufficient; the very power by which they were to go away, must come from Christ himself! Since a demon cannot enter even into a swine without being sent by God himself, how little is the power or malice of any of them to be dreaded by those who have God for their portion and protector!

33 And they that kept them fled, and went their ways into the city, and told everything, and what was befallen to the possessed of the devils.

34 And, behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus: and when they saw him, they besought him that he would depart out of their coasts.

† See Deut. v. 25. 1 Kings xvii. 18. Luke v. 8. Acts xvi. 89.

Verse 32. Ran violently down a steep place, &c. The prayer of these demons is heard and answered! Strange! But let it be noted, that God only hears demons and certain sinners when their prayer is the echo of his own justice. Christ permits the demons to do that in the swine which he did not permit them to do in the possessed, on purpose to show us what rage they would exercise on us if left to their liberty and malice. "But the owners of the swine lost their property." Yes; and learn from this of how small value temporal riches are in the estimation of God. He suffers them to be lost, sometimes to disengage us from them through mercy; sometimes out of justice, to punish us for having acquired or preserved them either by covetousness or injustice.

Verse 33. And they that kept them fled. Terrified at what had happened to the swine.

Verse 34. The whole city came out. Probably with the intention to destroy Jesus for having destroyed their swine; but, having seen him, they were awed by his presence, and only besought him to depart from their borders. Many love even their swine better than their salvation.

Certain doctors in both sciences, divinity and physic, gravely tell us that these demoniacs were only common madmen, and that the disease was supposed, by the superstitious Jews, to be occasioned by demons. But, with due deference to great characters, may not a plain man be permitted to ask, by what figure of speech can it be said that "two diseases besought,—went out—filled a herd of swine—rushed down a precipice? &c." What silly trifling is this! Some people's creed will neither permit God nor the devil to work; and in several respects, hardly to exist. For he who denies Divine inspiration, will scarcely acknowledge diabolic influence.

CHAPTER IX.

Christ heals a paralytic person at Capernaum, 1-8. Calls Matthew, 10. Eats with publicans and sinners, at which the Pharisees are offended, and he vindicates his conduct, 11, 12. The disciples of John come to him and inquire about fasting, 14-17. A ruler requests him to heal his daughter, 18, 19. On his road to the ruler's house, he heals a diseased woman, 20-22. Arriving at the ruler's house, he restores the young woman to life, 23-26. Heals two blind men, 27-31. Casts out a dumb demon, 32-34. Preaches and works miracles in all the cities and villages, 35. Is greatly affected at the desolate and dark state of the Jewish people, 36. Exhorts his disciples to pray to God to send them proper instructors, 37, 38.

AND he entered into a ship, and passed over, and came into his own city.

2 And, behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed: and

*Ch. iv. 18.—† Mark ii. 3. Luke v. 18.

Verse 1. He came into his own city. Viz., Capernaum, where he seems to have had his common residence at the house of Peter.

Verse 2. Lying on a bed. A couch or sofa, such as they reclined on at meals.

Seeing their faith. The faith of the paralytic person, and the faith of those who brought him; see on Mark ii. 4.

Be of good cheer. Son, take courage! Probably he began to despond, and Christ spoke thus to support his faith.

Thy sins be forgiven thee. Moral evil has been the cause of all the natural evil in the world. Christ goes to the source of the malady, which is sin; and to that as the procuring cause we should refer in all our afflictions. It was a maxim among the Jews that no diseased person could be healed till all his sins were blotted out. Hence our Lord first forgives the sins, and then heals the body, of the paralytic person. It may be observed, also, that most people are more in earnest about their souls when in sickness than in health, and therefore are more earnest in prayer for salvation.

Jesus, seeing their faith, said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee.

3 And, behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, This man blasphemeth.

Verse 3. This man blasphemeth. From a word signifying

4 And Jesus, *knowing their thoughts, said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts?

5 For whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and walk?

6 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth *to forgive sins, (then saith he to the sick of the palsy,) Arise, take up thy bed, and go into thine house.

7 And he arose, and departed to his house.

8 But when the multitudes saw it, they marvelled, and glorified God, which had given such power unto men.

9 *And as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man, named Matthew, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he saith unto him, Follow me. And he arose, and followed him.

10 *And it came to pass, as Jesus sat at meat in the house, behold, many publicans and sinners came and sat down with him and his disciples.

11 And when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto his disciples, Why eateth your Master with 'publicans and 'sinners?

12 But when Jesus heard that, he said unto them, They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick.

13 But go ye and learn what that meaneth, *I will have mercy and not sacrifice; for I am not come to call the righteous, 'but sinners to repentance.

14 Then came to him the disciples of John, saying, 'Why do we and the Pharisees fast oft, but thy disciples fast not?

15 And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bride-chamber mourn, as long as the bridegroom is with them? but the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken from them, and 'then shall they fast.

to hurt or blast the reputation or credit of another, or to smite with reports. Whenever it is used in reference to God, it simply signifies, to speak impiously of his nature, or attributes, or works. Injurious speaking is its proper translation when referred to man.

Verse 4. Jesus knowing (seeing) their thoughts] In telling them what the thoughts of their hearts were (for they had expressed nothing publicly), he gave them the fullest proof of his power to forgive sins; because God only can forgive sins, and God only can search and know the heart.

Verse 5. For whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise and walk?] Both are equally easy and equally difficult; for both require unlimited power to produce them. And every thing is equally easy to that power which is unlimited. A universe can be as easily produced by a single act of the Divine Will as the smallest elementary part of matter.

Verse 6. But that ye may know, &c.] External miracles are the proofs of internal ones. Three miracles are wrought in this case. (I mean, by miracle, something produced or known that no power is capable of but that which is omnipotent, and no knowledge adequate to but that which is omniscient.) 1st. The remission of the poor man's sins. 2nd. The discernment of the secret thoughts of the Scribes. 3rd. The restoring of the paralytic, in an instant, to perfect soundness.

Arise, take up thy bed] Being enabled to obey this command was the public proof that the man was made whole. A man gives proof of his conversion from sin to God who imitates this paralytic person. He who does not rise, and stand upright, but either continues grovelling on the earth, or falls back as soon as he is got up, is not yet cured of his spiritual palsy.

Verse 8. When the multitudes saw it, they marvelled] Divine things make a deeper impression on the hearts of the simple multitude than on those of the doctors, who, puffed up with a sense of their own wisdom, refuse to receive the truth as it is in Jesus. The conversion of one rebellious soul is a greater miracle, and more to be admired, than all that can be wrought on inanimate creatures.

Verse 9. Named Matthew] Generally supposed to be the same who wrote this history of our blessed Lord. Matthai signifies a gift in Syriac; probably so named by his parents as implying a gift from God.

The receipt of custom] The custom-house,—the place where the taxes levied by the Romans, of the Jews, were collected.

And he arose, and followed him.] How blessed it is to be obedient to the first call of Christ—how much happiness and glory are lost by delays, though conversion at last may have taken place!

Verse 10. Sat at meat in the house] Viz., of Matthew, who it appears, from Luke v. 29, made a great feast on the occasion, thus testifying his gratitude for the honour done him; and, that his friends and acquaintances might profit by the teaching of his new master, he invites them to the entertainment that was honoured by the presence of Christ. His companions, it appears, were not of the most creditable kind.

Verse 11. When the Pharisees saw it] He who, like a Pharisee, never felt himself indebted to infinite mercy for his own salvation, is rarely solicitous about the salvation of others. The grace of Christ alone inspires the soul with true benevolence.

Verse 12. They that be whole need not a physician] A common proverb, which none could either misunderstand or misapply.

Verse 13. I will have mercy, and not sacrifice] Quoted from 1 Sam. xv. 22. These are remarkable words. We may understand them as implying, 1st. That God prefers an act of mercy, shown to the necessitous, to any act of religious worship to which the person might be called at that time. 2nd. That the whole sacrificial system was intended only to point out the infinite mercy of God to fallen man, in his redemption by the blood of the new covenant. And 3rd. That we should not rest in the sacrifices, but look for the mercy and salvation prefigured by them.

Go ye and learn] A form of speech in frequent use among the Rabbins, when they referred to any fact or example in the Sacred Writings.

Verse 14. Thy disciples fast not?] Probably meaning that they did not fast so frequently as the others did, or for the same purposes, which is very likely, for the Pharisees had many superstitious fasts.

Verse 15. Can the children of the bride-chamber] These persons were the companions of the bridegroom, who accompanied him to the house of his father-in-law when he went to bring the bride to his own home. Marriage feasts were times of extraordinary festivity, and even of riot, among several people of the East.

Verse 16. No man putteth a piece of new cloth] No man putteth a patch of unscoured cloth upon an old garment. This is the most literal translation I can give of this verse, to convey its meaning to those who cannot consult the original.

It—taketh from the garment] Instead of closing up the rent, it makes a larger, by tearing away with it the whole breadth of the cloth over which it was laid.

Verse 17. New wine into old bottles] It is still the custom in the eastern countries, to make their bottles of goat skins; if these happened to be old, and new wine were put into them, the violence of the fermentation must necessarily burst them; and therefore newly made bottles were employed for the purpose of putting that wine in which had not yet gone through its state of fermentation.

Christian prudence requires that the weak and newly converted, should be managed with care and tenderness. To impose such duties and mortifications as are not absolutely necessary to salvation before God has properly prepared the heart by his grace for them, is conduct as absurd and old garment, for that which is put in to fill it up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse.

17 Neither do men put new wine into old bottles: else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish: but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved.

18 * While he spake these things unto them, behold, there came a certain ruler, and worshipped him, saying, My daughter is even now dead: but come and lay thy hand upon her, and she shall live.

19 And Jesus arose, and followed him, and so did his disciples.

20 ^b And, behold, a woman which was diseased with an issue of blood twelve years, came behind him, and touched the hem of his garment:

21 For she said within herself, If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole.

22 But Jesus turned him about, and when he saw her, he said, Daughter, be of good comfort; * thy faith hath made thee whole. And the woman was made whole from that hour.

ruinous as putting a piece of raw, unscoured cloth on an old garment; it is, in a word, requiring the person to do the work of a man, while as yet he is but a little child. Preachers of the gospel, and especially those who are instruments in God's hand of many conversions, have need of much heavenly wisdom, that they may know to watch over, guide, and advise those who are brought to a sense of their sin and danger.

Verse 18. A certain ruler] There were two officers in the synagogue, the bishop or overseer of the congregation, and the head or ruler of the congregation. The Chazan takes the book of the Law, and gives it to the Rosh, or ruler; and he appoints who shall read the different sections, &c. Jairus, who is the person intended here, was, in this latter sense, the ruler or governor of one of the synagogues, probably at Capernaum.

My daughter is even now dead] Or, my daughter was just now dying; or, is by this time dead, i.e., she was so ill when I left home that she must be dead by this time. This turn of the expression reconciles the account given here with that in Mark and Luke.

Verse 19. Jesus arose, and followed him] Our blessed Lord could have acted as well at a distance as present; but he goes to the place to teach his ministers not to spare either their steps or their pains when the salvation of a soul is in question. Let them not think it sufficient to pray for the sick in their closets; but let them go to their bed-sides, that they may instruct and comfort them. He can have little unction in private, who does not also give himself up to public duties.

Verse 20. The hem of his garment] The tsitsith, or fringes, which the Jews were commanded to wear on their garments. See Num. xv. 38, and the note there.

Verse 21. She said within herself, If I may but touch his garment] Her disorder was of that delicate nature that modesty forbade her to make any public acknowledgement of it; and therefore she endeavoured to transact the whole business in private. Besides, the touch of such a person was by the law reputed unclean. By faith in Christ Jesus, little things are often rendered efficacious to our salvation. What more simple than a morsel of bread, and a few drops of wine, in the Lord's Supper! And yet, they who receive them by faith in the sacrifice they represent, are made partakers of the blessings purchased by the crucified body and spilled blood of the Lord Jesus!

Verse 22. Daughter, be of good comfort] The reason of this kind speech was—Jesus, finding that virtue had proceeded from him, made inquiry who had touched him. The woman, finding that she could not be hid, came fearing and trembling (Mark v. 33) and confessed the truth: to dispel these fears, and to comfort her mind, Jesus said, Daughter, take courage.

Thy faith hath made thee whole.] This thy faith hath 25 But when the people were put forth, he went in, and took her by the hand, and the maid arose.

26 And * the fame hereof went abroad into all that land.

27 And when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, crying, and saying, ^b Thou son of David, have mercy on us.

28 And when he was come into the house, the blind men came to him: and Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord.

29 Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you.

30 And their eyes were opened; and Jesus straightly charged them, saying, ^c See that no man know it.

saved thee, i.e., thy faith in my power has interested that power in thy behalf, so that thou art saved from thy disorder, and from all its consequences.

Verse 23. Saw the minstrels and the people making a noise] Pipers. That pipes were in use among the Jews, in times of calamity or death, is evident from Jer. xlviii. 36. And among the Greeks and Romans, as well as among the Jews, persons were hired on purpose to follow the funeral processions with lamentations. See Jer. ix. 17-21; Amos v. 16. Even the poorest among the Jews were required to have two pipers, and one mourning woman.

Verse 24. The maid is not dead, but sleepeth.] That is, she is not dead so as to continue under the power of death; but shall be raised from it as a person is from natural sleep.

They laughed him to scorn.] People of the world generally ridicule those truths which they neither comprehend nor love, and deride those who publish them; but a faithful minister of God (copying the example of Christ) keeps on his way, and does the work of his Lord and Master.

Verse 25. He—took her by the hand, and the maid arose.] The fountain of life thus communicating its vital energy to the dead body. Where death has already taken place, no power but that of the great God can restore to life; in such a case, vain is the help of man. So the soul that is dead in trespasses and sins—that is, sentenced to death because of transgression—and is thus dead in law, can only be restored to spiritual life by the mighty power of the Lord Jesus; because He alone has made the atonement, and He alone can pardon transgression.

Verse 26. And the fame hereof went abroad] In this business Jesus himself scarcely appears, but the work effected by his sovereign power is fully manifested; to teach us that it is the business of a successful preacher of the gospel to conceal himself as much as possible, that God alone may have the glory of his own grace.

Verse 27. Son of David] This was the same as if they had called him Messiah.

Have mercy on us.] That man has already a measure of heavenly light who knows that he has no merit; that his cry should be a cry for mercy; that he must be fervent, and that in praying he must follow Jesus Christ as the true Messiah, the son of David expected from heaven.

Verse 28. When he was come into the house] That is, the house of Peter at Capernaum, where he ordinarily lodged.

Believe ye that I am able to do this?] Without faith Jesus does nothing to men's souls now, no more than he did to their bodies in the days of his flesh.

They said unto him, Yea, Lord.] Under a sense of our spiritual blindness we should have, 1st. A lively faith in the almighty grace of Christ. 2nd. A fervent, incessant cry for the communication of this grace. 3rd. A proper view of his incarnation, because it is through his union with our nature, and by his sufferings and death, we are to expect salvation.

31 * But they, when they were departed, spread abroad his fame in all that country.

32 ^b As they went out, behold, they brought to him a dumb man possessed with a devil.

33 And when the devil was cast out, the dumb spake: and the multitudes marvelled, saying, It was never so seen in Israel.

Verse 30. Straitly charged them] He charged them severely, on pain of his displeasure, not to make it as yet public.

Verse 31. But they—spread abroad his fame] They should have held their peace; for to obey is better than sacrifice, 1 Sam. xv. 22; but man must always be wiser than God.

Verse 32. A dumb man possessed with a devil.] It was the interest of Satan to hide his influences under the appearance of natural disorders. A man who does not acknowledge his sin to God, who prays not for salvation, who returns no praises for the mercies he is continually receiving, may well be said to be possessed with a dumb demon.

Verse 33. And when the devil was cast out, the dumb spake] The very miracle which was now wrought was to be the demonstrative proof of the Messiah's being manifested in the flesh.

It was never so seen in Israel.] This was the remark of the people; and thus we find that the poor and the simple were more ready to acknowledge the hand of God than the rich and the learned.

Verse 35. Jesus went about all the cities and villages] Of Galilee. A real minister of Jesus Christ, after his example, is neither detained in one place by a comfortable provision made by some, nor discouraged from pursuing his work by the calumny and persecution of others.

Verse 36. Moved with compassion] The Jews esteemed the bowels to be the seat of sympathy and the tender passions, and so applied the organ to the sense.

They fainted] The margin says, They were tired and lay down.

ing the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people.

36 ^f But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they ^g fainted, and were scattered abroad, ^h as sheep having no shepherd.

37 Then saith he unto his disciples, ⁱ The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few;

And were scattered abroad] Thrown down, or, all along. They were utterly neglected as to the interests of their souls, and rejected by the proud and disdainful Pharisees. This people (this mob) that knoweth not the Law is accursed, John vii. 49. Thus those execrable men spoke of the souls that God had made, and of whom they should have been the instructors.

Verse 37. The harvest] The souls who are ready to receive the truth are very numerous; but the labourers are few. There are multitudes of Scribes, Pharisees, and Priests, of reverend and right reverend men; but there are few that work. Jesus wishes for labourers, not gentlemen, who are either idle drones, or slaves to pleasure and sin.

The place of the harvest is the whole earth: it signifies little where a man works, provided it be by the appointment, in the Spirit, and with the blessing of God.

Verse 38. That he will send forth labourers] That he would thrust forth labourers. Those who are fittest for the work are generally most backward to the employment. The man who is forward to become a preacher knows little of God, of human nature, or of his own heart. It is God's province to thrust out such preachers as shall labour; and it is our duty to entreat him to do so. A minister of Christ is represented as a day-labourer: he comes into the harvest, not to become lord of it, not to live on the labour of others, but to work, and to labour his day. Though the work may be very severe, yet, to use a familiar expression, there is good wages in the harvest home; and the day, though hot, is but a short one.

CHAPTER X.

Jesus calls, commissions, and names his twelve disciples, 1-4. Gives them particular instructions relative to the objects of their ministry, 5, 6. Mode of preaching, &c., 7-15. Foretells the afflictions and persecutions they would have to endure, and the support they should receive, 16-25. Cautions them against betraying his cause, in order to procure their personal safety, 26-39. And gives special promises to those who should assist his faithful servants in the execution of their work, 40-42.

AND ^a when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power ^b against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness, and all manner of disease.

* Mark iii. 13, 14. vi. 7. Luke vi. 13. ix. 1.

Verse 1. Twelve disciples] Our Lord seems to have had the twelve Patriarchs, heads of the congregation of Israel, in view, in his choosing twelve disciples. That he had the plan of the ancient Jewish church in his eye is sufficiently evident from chap. xix. 28; and from Luke x. i. xxii. 30. John xvii. 1 &c., and Rev. xxi. 12-14.

He gave them power against unclean spirits] The word against, which our translators have supplied in Italic, is found in many MSS. of good note, and in the principal Versions. Here we find the first call to the Christian ministry, and the end proposed by the commission given. To call persons to the ministry belongs only to Him who can give them power to cast out unclean spirits. He whose ministry is not accompanied with healing to diseased souls, was never called of God. But let it be observed, that, though the spiritual gifts requisite for the ministry must be supplied by God himself, yet this does not preclude the importance of human learning. No man can have his mind too well cultivated, to whom a dispensation of the Gospel is committed.

Verse 2. Apostles] An apostle comes from a word signifying I send a message. The word was anciently used to signify a person commissioned by a king to negotiate an affair between him and any other power or people. Hence apostles and heralds are of the same import.

6 * But go rather to the ^e lost sheep of the house of Israel.

7 * And as ye go, preach, saying, ^b The kingdom of heaven is at hand.

8 Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: ^f freely ye have received, freely give.

It is worthy of notice, that those who were Christ's apostles were first his disciples; to intimate, that men must be first taught of God, before they be sent of God. Jesus Christ never made an apostle of any man who was not first his scholar or disciple.

The first, Simon, who is called Peter, and Andrew his brother, &c.] We are not to suppose that the word first refers to any kind of dignity, as some have imagined; it merely signifies the first in order—the person first mentioned.

Verse 8. Bartholomew] Many are of opinion that this was Nathanael, mentioned John i. 46, whose name was probably Nathanael bar Talmat, Nathanael, the son of Talmat: here, his own name is repressed, and he is called Bar Talmat, or Bartholomew, from his father.

Matthew the publican] The writer of this history. James the son of Alphaeus.] This person was also called Cleopas, or Clopas, Luke xxiv. 18: John xix. 25. He had married Mary, sister to the blessed Virgin, John xix. 25.

Verse 4. Simon] He was third son of Alphaeus, and brother of James and Jude, or Judas, Matt. xiii. 55.

The Canaanite] This word is not put here to signify a particular people, as it is elsewhere used in the Sacred Writings; but it is formed from the Hebrew kana, which signifies zealous, literally translated by Luke, chap. vi. 15, zelotes, or the zealous, probably from his great fervency in preaching the Gospel of his Master. [He may have belonged previously to the Zealots.]

Judas Iscariot] Probably from the Hebrew ish kerieth, a man of Kerieth, which was a city in the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 25, where it is likely this man was born.

Who also betrayed him] Rather, even he who betrayed him, or, delivered him up; for so, I think, it should be translated.

Verse 5. These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded] To be properly qualified for a minister of Christ, a man must be, 1. filled with the spirit of holiness; 2. called to this particular work; 3. instructed in its nature, &c.; and 4. commissioned to go forth, and testify the Gospel of the grace of God. To these let him add all the human qualifications he can possibly attain; as in his arduous work he will require every gift and every grace.

Go not into the way of the Gentiles] Our Lord only intended that the first offers of salvation should be made to the Jewish people; and that the heathen should not be noticed in this first mission, that no stumbling-block might be cast in the way of the Jews.

Into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not] The Samaritans had afterwards the Gospel preached to them by Christ himself, John iv. 4, &c. for the reason assigned above. Such as God seems at first to pass by are often those for whom he has designed his greatest benefits (witness the Samaritans, and the Gentiles in general), but he has his own proper time to discover and reveal them.

Verse 6. But go rather to the lost sheep, &c.] The Jewish Church was the ancient fold of God; but the sheep had wandered from their Shepherd, and were lost. Our blessed Lord sends these under-shepherds to seek, find, and bring them back to the Shepherd and Overseer of their souls.

Verse 7. And as ye go, preach] And as you proceed, proclaim like heralds—make this proclamation wherever ye go, and while ye are journeying. Preach and travel; and, as ye travel, preach, proclaim salvation to all you meet.

9 * Provide ^a neither gold, nor silver, nor ^b brass in your purses, 10 Nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet ^c staves: ^d for the workman is worthy of his meat.

11 * And into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, inquire who in it is worthy; and there abide till ye go thence.

12 And when ye come into a house, salute it.

13 * And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it: ^e but if it be not worthy, let your peace return to you.

14 * And whosoever shall not receive you, nor

Verse 8. Raise the dead] This is wanting in many MSS. and versions. There is no evidence that the disciples raised any dead person previously to the resurrection of Christ. The words should certainly be omitted, unless we could suppose that the authority now given respected not only their present mission, but comprehended also their future conduct. But that our blessed Lord did not give this power to his disciples at this time, is I think, pretty evident from verse 1, and from Luke ix. 6, 10, x. 19, 20, where, if any such power had been given, or exercised, it would doubtless have been mentioned.

Freely ye have received, freely give.] A rule very necessary, and of great extent. He who preaches to get a living, or to make a fortune, is guilty of the most infamous sacrilege.

Verse 9. Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass, in your purses] In your GIRDLES. It is supposed that the people of the East carry their money in a fold of their girdles. This is scarcely correct: they carry it in a purse in their bosom, under their girdles.

Have no money in your purse, is a command, obedience to which was secured by the narrow circumstances of most of the primitive genuine preachers of the gospel. Whole herds of friars mendicants have professed the same principle, and abandoned themselves to voluntary poverty; but if the money be in the heart it is a worse evil. In the former case, it may be a temptation to sin; in the latter, it must be ruinous.

Verse 10. Nor scrip for your journey] To carry provisions. It was a leathern pouch hung about their necks, in which they put their victuals. This was, properly, the shepherd's bag.

Neither two coats, &c.] Nothing to encumber you. Nor yet staves] A staff, as in the margin; but, instead of staff, which is the common reading, many MSS. and versions have staves. This reading is of great importance, as it reconciles this place with Luke ix. 3, and removes the seeming contradiction from Mark vi. 8; as if he had said: "Ye shall take nothing to defend yourselves with, because ye are the servants of the Lord, and are to be supported by his bounty, and defended by his power."

The workman is worthy of his meat.] Of his maintenance. It is a maintenance, and that only, which a minister of God is to expect, and that he has a divine right to; but not to make a fortune, or lay up wealth: besides, it is the workman, he that labours in the word and doctrine, that is to get even this.

Verse 11. Into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter] In the commencement of Christianity, Christ and his preachers were all Itinerant.

Inquire who in it is worthy] That is, of a good character; for a preacher of the gospel should be careful of his reputation, and lodge only with those who are of a regular life.

There abide till ye go thence.] Go not about from house to house, Luke x. 7. Acting contrary to this precept has often brought great disgrace on the gospel of God. Stay in your own lodging as much as possible, that you may have time for prayer and study. Seldom frequent the tables of the rich and great; if you do, it will unavoidably prove a snare to you. The unction of God will perish from your mind, and your preaching be only a dry barren repetition of old things; the bread of God in your hands will be like the dry, mouldy, Gibeonish crusts, mentioned Josh. ix. 5.

Verse 12. Salute it]; Saying, "Peace be to this house."

hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet.

15 Verily I say unto you, ^b It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah, in the day of judgment, than for that city.

16 Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: ^a be ye therefore wise as serpents, and ^c harmless as doves.

17 But beware of men: for ^d they will deliver you up to the councils, and ^e they will scourge you in their synagogues:

18 And ^f ye shall be brought before governors and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them and the Gentiles.

19 But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak: for ^g it shall be given you in that same hour, what ye shall speak:

20 ^h For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you.

21 And the brother shall deliver up the brother to death, and the father the child: and the children shall rise up against their parents, and cause them to be put to death.

22 And ⁱ ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: ^j but he that endureth to the end shall be saved.

23 But ^k when they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another: for verily I say unto you, Ye shall not ^l have gone over the cities of Israel, ^m till the Son of man be come.

This clause, which, as explanatory of the word is necessary to the connexion in which it now stands, is added by some MSS. and versions.

Verse 13. If the house be worthy] If that family be proper for a preacher to lodge in, and the master be ready to embrace the message of salvation.

Your peace] The blessings you have prayed for shall come upon the family: God will prosper them in their bodies, souls, and substance.

Let your peace] The blessings prayed for, return to you.

Verse 14. Shake off the dust of your feet.] To shake the dust of any city of Israel from off one's clothes or feet was an emblematical action, signifying a renunciation of all farther connexion with them, and placing them on a level with the cities of the Heathen.

Verse 15. In the day of judgment] Or, punishment. Perhaps not meaning the day of general judgment, nor the day of the destruction of the Jewish state by the Romans; but a day in which God should send punishment on that particular city, or on that person, for their crimes.

If men are thus treated for not receiving the preachers of the gospel, what will it be to despise the gospel itself—to decry it—to preach the contrary—to hinder the preaching of it—to abuse those who do preach it in its purity—or to render it fruitless by calumnies and lies? Their punishment, our Lord intimates, shall be greater than that inflicted on the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah!

Verse 16. Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves] He who is called to preach the gospel is called to embrace a state of constant labour, and frequent suffering. He who gets ease and pleasure, in consequence of embracing the ministerial office, neither preaches the gospel, nor is sent of God. If he did the work of an Evangelist, wicked men and demons would both oppose him.

Wise (prudent) as serpents, and harmless as doves.] There is a beauty in this saying which is seldom observed. The serpent is represented as prudent to excess, being full of cunning, Gen. iii. 1, 2; Cor. xi. 8; and the dove is simple, even to stupidity, Hos. vii. 11; but Jesus Christ corrects here the cunning of the serpent, by the simplicity of the dove; and the too great simplicity of the dove, by the cunning of the serpent.

Verse 17. But beware of men] Or, be on your guard against men, these men, i.e., your countrymen; those from whom you might have reasonably expected comfort and support; and especially those in power, who will abuse that power to oppress you.

Verse 18. Ye shall be brought before governors, &c.] By governors and kings we may understand, the Roman proconsuls, governors of provinces, and the kings who were tributary to the Roman government, and the emperors themselves, before whom many of the primitive Christians were brought.

For a testimony against them and the Gentiles.] That is, to render testimony, both to Jews and Gentiles, of the truth and power of my Gospel.

Verse 19. Take no thought how or what ye shall speak] Be not anxiously careful, because such anxiety argues distrust in God, and infallibly produces a confused mind. In such a state, no person is fit to proclaim or vindicate the truth. The promise, It shall be given you, &c., banishes all distrust and inquietude on dangerous occasions; but without encouraging sloth and negligence, and without dispensing with the obligation we are under to prepare ourselves by the meditation of sacred truths, by the study of the Holy Scriptures, and by prayer.

Verse 20. For it is—the Spirit of your Father, &c.] This was an extraordinary promise, and was literally fulfilled to those first preachers of the Gospel; and to them it was essentially necessary, because the New Testament dispensation was to be fully opened by their extraordinary inspiration. In a certain measure, it may be truly said that the Holy Spirit animates the true disciples of Christ, and enables them to speak. The Head speaks in his members, by his Spirit; and it is the province of the Spirit of God to speak for God.—Neither surprise, defect of talents, nor even ignorance itself, could hurt the cause of God in the primitive times, when the hearts and minds of those divine men were influenced by the Holy Spirit.

Your Father] This is added to excite and increase their confidence in God.

Verse 21. And the brother shall deliver up the brother, &c.] What an astonishing enmity is there in the soul of man against God and goodness! That men should think they did God service, in putting to death those who differ from them in their political or religious creed, cannot be accounted for but on the principle of an indescribable depravity.

Verse 22. Ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake] Because ye are attached to me, and saved from the corruption that is in the world; therefore the world will hate you.

He that endureth to the end shall be saved.] This verse is commonly understood to refer to the destruction of Jerusalem. It is also true that they who do not hold fast faith and a good conscience till death have no room to hope for an admission into the kingdom of God.

Verse 23. But when they persecute you] It is prudence and humility (when charity or righteousness obliges us not to the contrary) to avoid persecution. This flight is a precept to those who are highly necessary to the church of Christ, an advice to those who might imprudently draw upon themselves persecution, and an indulgence for those who are weak. But this flight is highly criminal in those mercenary preachers who, through love to their flesh and their property, abandon the flock of Christ to the wolf.

Verse 24. The disciple is not above his master] Or in plainer terms, A scholar is not above his teacher. The saying itself requires no comment, its truth and reasonableness are self-evident, but to the spirit and design we should carefully attend. Jesus is the great teacher: we profess to be his scholars. He who keeps the above saying in his heart will never complain of what he suffers.

Verse 25. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master. Can any man who pretends to be a scholar or disciple of Jesus Christ, expect to be treated well by the world? Will not the world love its own, and them only?

Beelzebub It is supposed that this idol was the same with Baalzebub the God fly, worshipped at Ekron, 2 Kings i. 2, &c., who had his name changed afterwards by the Jews to Baal zebul, the dung God, a title expressive of the utmost contempt. It seems probable that the worship of this vile idol continued even to the time of our Lord; and the title, being applied by the Jews to our blessed Lord, affords the strongest proof of the inveteracy of their malice.

Verse 26. Fear them not. A general direction to all the persecuted followers of Christ. Fear them not, for they can make you suffer nothing worse than they have made Christ suffer; and under all trials he has promised the most ample support.

For there is nothing covered, &c. God sees everything; this is consolation to the upright, and dismay to the wicked; and he will bring into judgment every work, and every secret thing, whether good or bad.

Verse 27. What I tell you in darkness. A man ought to preach that only which he has learned from God's Spirit, and his testimonies; but let him not pretend to bring forth anything new, or mysterious.

What ye hear in the ear. The spirit of our Lord's direction appears to be this: whatever I speak to you is for the benefit of mankind,—keep nothing from them, declare explicitly the whole counsel of God; preach ye on the housetops. The houses in Judea were flat-roofed, with a balustrade round about, which were used for the purpose of taking the air, prayer, meditation, and it seems, from this place, for announcing things in the most public manner.

Verse 28. Fear not them which kill the body. Those who slay with acts of cruelty, alluding probably to the cruelties which persecutors should exercise on his followers in their martyrdom. But are not able to kill the soul. Hence we find that the body and the soul are distinct principles, for the body may be slain and the soul escape; and, secondly, that the soul is immaterial, for the murderers of the body are not able to injure it.

Fear him. It is not hell-fire we are to fear, but it is God; without the stroke of whose justice hell itself would be no punishment, and whose frown would render heaven itself insupportable.

Verse 29. Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? A Roman As was one-tenth of a DENARIUS, which was about sevenpence-halfpenny, and one-tenth of sevenpence-halfpenny makes just three farthings.

Without your Father. Without the will of your Father. All things are ordered by the counsel of God. This is a great consolation to those who are tried and afflicted. The belief of an all-wise, all-directing Providence, is a powerful support under the most grievous accidents of life.

Verse 30. But the very hairs of your head are all numbered.

men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven.

33 ^aBut whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.

34 ^bThink not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.

36 And ^da man's foes shall be they of his own household.

37 ^eHe that loveth father or mother more than me, is not worthy of me: and he that loveth son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me.

38 ^fAnd he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.

39 ^gHe that findeth his life shall lose it: and Nothing is more astonishing than the care and concern of God for his followers. The least circumstances of their life are regulated, not merely by that general providence which extends to all things, but by a particular providence, which fits and directs all things to the design of their salvation, causing them all to co-operate for their present and eternal good. Rom. v. 1-5.

Verse 31. Fear ye not—ye are of more value. None can estimate the value of a soul, for which Christ has given his blood and life!

Verse 32. Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men. That is, whosoever shall acknowledge me to be the Messiah, and have his heart and life regulated by my spirit and doctrine. It is not merely sufficient to have the heart right before God; there must be a firm, manly, and public profession of Christ before men.

We confess or own Christ when we own his doctrine, his ministers, his servants, and when no fear hinders us from supporting and assisting them in times of necessity.

Verse 33. Whosoever shall deny me. Whosoever prefers his worldly interest to his duty to God, sets a greater value on earthly than on heavenly things, and prefers the friendship of men to the approbation of God.

Verse 34. Think not that I am come to send peace, &c. The meaning of this difficult passage will be plain, when we consider the import of the word peace, and the expectation of the Jews. The expectation of the Jews was, that, when the Messiah should come, all temporal prosperity should be accumulated on the land of Judea; therefore the original in this verse, should not be translated the earth, but this land. The import of our Lord's teaching here is this, Do not imagine, as the Jews in general vainly do, that I am come to send forth, by forcing out the Roman power, that temporal prosperity which they long for; I am not come for this purpose, but to send forth the Roman sword, to cut off a disobedient and rebellious nation, the cup of whose iniquity is already full, and whose crimes cry aloud for speedy vengeance.

Verse 35. I am come to set a man at variance. The spirit of Christ can have no union with the spirit of the world. Even a father, while unconverted, will oppose a godly child.

Verse 36. A man's foes shall be they of his own household. Our Lord refers here to their own traditions.

Verse 37. He that loveth father or mother more than me. If, in order to please a father or mother who are opposed to vital godliness, we abandon God's ordinances and followers, we are unworthy of anything but hell.

Verse 38. He that taketh not his cross. He who is not ready, after my example, to suffer death in the cause of my religion, is not worthy of me, does not deserve to be called my disciple.

This alludes to the custom of causing the criminal to bear his own cross to the place of execution.

Verse 39. He that findeth his life, &c. i. e., He who, for the sake of his temporal interest, abandons his spiritual concerns, shall lose his soul; and he who, in order to avoid martyrdom, abjures the pure religion of Christ, shall lose his soul, and perhaps his life too.

Verse 40. He that receiveth you] Treats you kindly, receiveth me; I will consider the kindness as shown to myself; for he who receiveth me, as the true Messiah, receiveth that God by whose counsels and through whose love I am come.

Verse 41. He that receiveth a prophet] A teacher, not a foreteller of future events, for this is not always the meaning of the word; but one commissioned by God to teach the doctrines of eternal life. It is no small honour to receive into one's house a minister of Jesus Christ. If the teacher should be weak, or even if he should be found afterwards to have been worthless, yet the person who has received him in the name, under the sacred character, of an evangelist, shall not lose his reward; because what he did he did

for the sake of Christ, and through love for his church

Verse 42. Verily—he shall in no wise lose his reward.] Love heightens the smallest actions, and gives a worth to them which they cannot possess without it. Under a just and merciful God, every sin is either punished or pardoned, and every good action rewarded. The most indigent may exercise the works of mercy and charity; seeing even a cup of cold water, given in the name of Jesus, shall not lose its reward. How astonishing is God's kindness! It is not the rich merely whom he calls on to be charitable; but even the poor, and the most impoverished of the poor! God gives the power and inclination to be charitable, and then rewards the work which, it may be truly said, God himself hath wrought. It is the name of Jesus that sanctifies everything, and renders services, in themselves comparatively contemptible, of high worth in the sight of God.

CHAPTER XI.

Christ, having finished his instructions to his disciples, departs to preach in different cities, 1. John sends two of his disciples to him to enquire whether he were the Christ, 2-6. Christ's testimony concerning John, 7-15. He upbraids the Jews with their capriciousness, 16-19. The condemnation of Chorazin, and Bethsaida, and Capernaum, for their unbelief and impenitence, 20-24. Praises the divine wisdom for revealing the gospel to the simple-hearted, 25, 26. Shows that none can know God but by the revelation of his Son, 27. Invites the distressed to come unto him, and gives them the promise of rest for their souls, 28-30.

AND it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of commanding his twelve disciples, he departed thence to teach and to preach in their cities.

2 ^a Now when John had heard ^b in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples,

^a Luke vii. 18, 19, &c.—^b Ch. xiv. 8.—^c Gen. xlix. 10. Num. xxiv. 17. Dan. ix. 24. John vi. 14.

Verse 1. To teach and to preach] To teach, to give private instructions to as many as came unto him; and to preach, to proclaim publicly, that the kingdom of God is at hand; two grand parts of the duty of a gospel minister.

Verse 2. John had heard in the prison] John was cast into prison by order of Herod Antipas, chap. xiv. 8, &c. (where see the notes) a little after our Lord began his public ministry, chap. xiv. 12; and after the first passover, John iii. 24.

Verse 3. Art thou he that should come] He that cometh, seems to have been a proper name of the Messiah; to save or deliver is necessarily implied.

There is some difficulty in what is here spoken of John. Some have thought he was utterly ignorant of our Lord's divine mission, that he sent merely for his own information; but this is certainly inconsistent with his own declaration, Luke iii. 15, &c.; John i. 15, 26, 33, iii. 28, &c. Others suppose he sent the message merely for the instruction of his disciples; that, as he saw his end approaching, he wished them to have the fullest conviction that Jesus was the Messiah, that they might attach themselves to him.

A third opinion takes a middle course between the two former, and states that, though John was at first perfectly convinced that Jesus was the Christ, yet, entertaining some hopes that he would erect a secular kingdom in Judea, wished to know whether this was likely to take place speedily. It is very probable that John now began, through

3 And said unto him, Art thou ^c he that should come, or do we look for another?

4 Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and shew John again those things which ye do hear and see:

5 ^d The blind receive their sight, and the lame the length of his confinement, to entertain doubts, relative to his kingdom, which perplexed and harassed his mind: and he took the most reasonable way to get rid of them at once, viz. by applying to Christ himself.

Verse 4. Go and shew John the things—ye do hear and see] Christ would have men to judge only of him and of others by their works. This is the only safe way of judging.

Verse 5. The blind receive their sight, &c.] Look upwards, contemplating the heavens which their Lord hath made.

The lame walk] They walk about; to give the fullest proof to the multitude that their cure was real.

Verse 6. Blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in me.] Or, Happy is he who will not be stumbled at me; for the word, in its root, signifies to hit against or stumble over a thing, which one may meet with in the way. The Jews, as was before remarked, expected a temporal deliverer. Many might be tempted to reject Christ, because of his mean appearance, &c., and so lose the benefit of salvation through him. To instruct and caution such, our blessed Lord spoke these words.

Verse 7. What went ye out into the wilderness to see?] The purport of our Lord's design, in this and the following verses, is to convince the Scribes and Pharisees of the inconsistency of their conduct in acknowledging John Baptist for a divinely authorised teacher, and not believing in the very Christ which he pointed out to them.

A reed shaken with the wind?] An emblem of an irresowalk; the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear; the dead are raised up, and * the poor have the gospel preached to them :

6 And blessed is he, whosoever shall not ^b be offended in me.

7 * And as they departed, Jesus began to say unto the multitudes concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderness to see ? ^c A reed shaken with the wind ?

8 But what went ye out for to see ? A man clothed in soft raiment ? behold they that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses.

9 But what went ye out for to see ? A prophet ? yea, I say unto you, * and more than a prophet :

10 For this is he of whom it is written, ' Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

11 Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women, there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist : notwithstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he, lute, unsteady mind, which believes and speaks one thing to-day, and another to-morrow.

Verse 8. A man clothed in soft raiment ? A second excellency in John was, his sober and mortified life. A preacher of the Gospel should have nothing about him which savours of effeminacy and worldly pomp : he is awfully mistaken who thinks to prevail on the world to hear him and receive the truth, by conforming himself to its fashions and manners. Is not a worldly-minded preacher, in the most peculiar sense, an abomination in the eyes of the Lord ?

Are in kings' houses. A third excellency in John was, he did not affect high things. He was contented to live in the desert, and to announce the solemn and severe truths of his doctrine to the simple inhabitants of the country.

Verse 9. A prophet ? yea—and more than a prophet. That is, one more excellent than a prophet ; one greatly beyond all who had come before him, being the immediate forerunner of Christ (see below), and who was especially commissioned to prepare the way of the Lord.

Verse 11. A greater than John the Baptist He was greater than any prophet from the beginning of the world till that time :—1st. Because he was prophesied of by them, Isa. xl. 8, and Mal. iii. 1, where Jesus Christ himself seems to be the speaker. 2ndly. Because he had the privilege of showing the fulfilment of their predictions, by pointing out that Christ as now come, which they foretold should come. And 3rdly. Because he saw and enjoyed that salvation which they could only foretell.

Notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven. The meanest preacher of a crucified, risen, and glorified Saviour, was greater than John, who was not permitted to live to see the plenitude of gospel grace, in the pouring out of the Holy Spirit. Let the reader observe, 1st. That the kingdom of heaven here does not mean the state of future glory. See chap. iii. 2. 2ndly. That it is not in holiness or devotedness to God that the least in this kingdom is greater than John ; but 3rdly. That it is merely in the difference of the ministry.

Verse 13. The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence He that will take, get possession of the kingdom of righteousness, peace, and spiritual joy, must be in earnest ; all hell will oppose him in every step he takes ; and if a man be not absolutely determined to give up his sins and evil companions, and have his soul saved at all hazards, and at every expense, he will surely perish everlastingly. This requires a violent earnestness.

Verse 13. All the prophets and the law prophesied until John. I believe the word means here, they taught or continued to instruct. They were the instructors concerning the Christ who was to come, till John came and showed that all the predictions of the one, and the types and ceremonies of the other, were now about to be fully and finally accomplished ;

12 * And from the days of John the Baptist until now, the kingdom of heaven ^b suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.

13 ^c For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John.

14 And if ye will receive it, this is ^d Elias, which was for to come.

15 ^e He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

16 ^f But whereunto shall I liken this generation ? It is like unto children sitting in the markets, and calling unto their fellows, 17 And saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced ; we have mourned unto you, and ye have not lamented.

18 For John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say, ^g He hath a devil.

19 The Son of Man came eating and drinking, and they say, Behold a man gluttonous, and a wine-bibber, ^h a friend of publicans and sinners. ⁱ But wisdom is justified of her children.

20 ^j Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein for Christ was now revealed. The word is spoken in that sense, Matt. vii. 23.

Verse 14. This is Elias, which was for to come. This should always be written Elijah, that as strict a conformity as possible might be kept up between the names in the Old Testament and the New.

Verse 15. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. As if our Lord had said, These things are so clear and manifest that a man has only to hear them to be convinced and fully satisfied of their truth.

Verse 16. But whereunto shall I liken this generation ? That is, the Jewish people, this race : and so the word is often to be understood in the Evangelists.

In the markets. Or, places of concourse ; not a marketplace only, but any place of public resort : probably meaning here, places of public amusement.

Verse 17. We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced. We have begun the music, which should have been followed by the dance, but ye have not attended to it.

We have mourned—and ye have not lamented. Ye have not smote the breast ; to strike, or beat the breasts with the hands, particularly in lamentation. There is an allusion here to those funeral lamentations explained chap. ix. 23.

Verse 18. For John came neither eating nor drinking Leading a very austere and mortified life : and yet, ye did not receive him.

He hath a devil. He is a vile hypocrite, influenced by a demon to deceive and destroy the simple.

Verse 19. The Son of Man came eating and drinking That is, went wheresoever he was invited to eat a morsel of bread, and observed no rigid fasts ; how could he, who had no corrupt appetites to mortify or subdue ?

They say, Behold a man gluttonous, &c. Whatever measures the followers of God may take, they will not escape the censure of the world : the best way is not to be concerned at them. Iniquity, being always ready to oppose and contradict the Divine conduct, often contradicts and exposes itself.

But wisdom is justified of her children. Those who follow the dictates of true wisdom ever justify, point out as excellent, the holy maxims by which they are guided, for they find the way, pleasantness and the path, peace. Of, here, and in many places of our translation, ought to be written by, in modern English.

The children of true wisdom can justify all God's ways in their salvation ; as they know that all the dispensations of Providence work together for the good of those who love and fear God. See on Luke vii. 35.

Verse 21. Woe unto thee, Chorazin—Bethsaida] It would be better to translate this alas for thee, than woe to thee. The former is an exclamation of pity ; the latter a denunciation of wrath. It is evident that our Lord used it in the former sense. It is not known precisely where most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not:

21 Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago * in sackcloth and ashes.

22 But I say unto you, ^b It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment than for you.

23 And thou, Capernaum, * which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day.

24 But I say unto you, ^d That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment than for thee.

Chorazin was situated; but as Christ joins it in the same censure with Bethsaida, which was in upper Galilee, beyond the sea, Mark vi. 45, it is likely that Chorazin was in the same quarter. Though the people in these cities were (generally) impenitent, yet there is little doubt that several received the word of life. Indeed, Bethsaida itself furnished not less than three of the twelve apostles, Philip, Andrew, and Peter. See John i. 44.

Tyre and Sidon] Were two heathen cities, situated on the shore of the Mediterranean Sea, into which it does not appear that Christ ever went, though he was often very nigh them; see chap. xv. 21.

They would have repented long ago] Formerly, seems here to refer to the time of Ezekiel, who denounced destruction against Tyre and Sidon, Ezek. xxvi. xxvii. and xxviii.

Verse 22. But—it shall be more tolerable] Everything will help to overwhelm the impenitent at the tribunal of God—the benefits and favours which they have received, as well as the sins which they have committed.

Verse 23. Thou Capernaum—exalted unto heaven] A Hebrew metaphor, expressive of the utmost prosperity, and the enjoyment of the greatest privileges. This was properly spoken of this city, because that in it our Lord dwelt, and wrought many of his miraculous works.

Shalt be brought down to hell] Perhaps not meaning, here, the place of torment, but rather a state of desolation. The original word is Hades. The prediction of our Lord was literally fulfilled; for, in the wars between the Romans and the Jews, these cities were totally destroyed, so that no traces are now found of Bethsaida, Chorazin, or Capernaum.

Verse 24. But it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom] The land of the Sodomites; i.e., the ancient inhabitants of that city and its neighbourhood.

In Jude, ver. 7, we are told that these persons are suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. The destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah happened A. M. 2107, which was 1897 years before the incarnation. What a terrible thought is this! It will be more tolerable for certain sinners, who have already been damned nearly four thousand years, than for those who live and die under the Gospel! There are various degrees of punishment in hell, answerable to various degrees of guilt; and the contempt manifested to, and the abuse made of, the preaching of the Gospel, will rank semi-infidel Christians in the highest list of transgressors, and purchase them the hottest place in hell!

Day of judgment] May either refer to that particular time in which God visits for iniquity, or to that great day in which he will judge the world by the Lord Jesus Christ.

Verse 25. I thank thee] I fully agree with thee—I am perfectly of the same mind. Thou hast acted in all things according to the strictest holiness, justice, mercy, and truth.

Wise and prudent] The scribes and Pharisees. Let it be observed, that our Lord does not thank the Father that he had hidden these things from the wise and prudent, but that, seeing they were hidden from them, he had revealed them to the others.

25 * At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because 'thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, * and hast revealed them unto babes.

26 Even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.

27 ^b All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; ^c neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and ^d he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.

28 Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

29 Take my yoke upon you, ^e and learn of me; for I am meek and ^f lowly in heart: ^g and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

30 ^h For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

Verse 26. Even so, Father] An emphatical ratification of the preceding address.

Verse 27. All things are delivered unto me of my Father] This is a great truth, and the key of the science of salvation. The man Christ Jesus receives from the Father, and in consequence of his union with the Eternal Godhead becomes the Lord and Sovereign Dispenser of all things. All the springs of the divine favour are in the hands of Christ, as Priest of God, and atoning sacrifice for men: all good proceeds from him, as Saviour, Mediator, Head, Pattern, Pastor, and Sovereign Judge of the whole world.

No man knoweth the Son, but the Father, neither knoweth any man, &c.] None can fully comprehend the nature and attributes of God, but Christ; and none can fully comprehend the nature, incarnation, &c. of Christ, but the Father. The full comprehension and acknowledgment of the Godhead, and the mystery of the Trinity belong to God alone.

Verse 28. Come unto me] This phrase in the New Covenant implies simply, believing in Christ, and becoming his disciple, or follower.

All ye that labour and are heavy laden] The metaphor here appears to be taken from a man who has a great load upon him, which he must carry to a certain place: every step he takes reduces his strength, and renders his load the more oppressive. However, it must be carried on: and he labours, uses his utmost exertions, to reach the place where it is to be laid down. A kind person passing by, and seeing his distress, offers to ease him of his load, that he may enjoy rest.

The Jews, heavily laden with the burdensome rites of the Mosaic institution; sinners, wearied in the ways of iniquity; penitents, burdened with the guilt of their crimes; believers sorely tempted, and oppressed by the remains of the carnal mind, all are invited to come, and all are promised rest. If few find rest from sin and vile affections, it is because few come to Christ to receive it.

Verse 29. Take my yoke upon you] Strange paradox! that a man already weary and overladen must take a new weight upon him, in order to be eased and find rest!

I am meek and lowly in heart] Wherever pride and anger dwell, there is nothing but mental labour and agony; but where the meekness and humility of Christ dwell, all is smooth, even, peaceable, and quiet; for the work of righteousness is peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness and assurance for ever. Isa. xxxii. 17.

Verse 30. For my yoke is easy] My Gospel imposes nothing that is difficult; on the contrary, it provides for the complete removal of all that which oppresses and renders man miserable, viz. sin. The commandments of Christ are not grievous. Hear the whole: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbour as thyself. Can any thing be more congenial to the nature of man than love?—such a love as is inspired by God, and in which the soul rests supremely satisfied and infinitely happy? Taste, and know, by experience how good the Lord is, and how worthy his yoke is to be taken, borne, and loved. This most tender invitation of the compassionate Jesus is sufficient to inspire the most diffident soul with confidence. See on Mark viii. 34.

CHAPTER XII.

Jesus and his disciples go through the corn-fields on the Sabbath, and the latter pluck and eat some of the ears, at which the Pharisees take offence, 1, 2. Our Lord vindicates them, 3-8. The man with the withered hand cured, 9-13. The Pharisees seek his destruction, 14. He heals the multitudes, and fulfils certain prophecies, 15-21. Heals the blind and dumb demoniac, 22, 23. The malice of the Pharisees reproved by our Lord, 24-30. The sin against the Holy Ghost, 31, 32. Good and bad trees known by their fruits—evil and good men by their conduct, 33-37. Jonah, a sign of Christ's death and resurrection, 38-40. The men of Nineveh and the queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment against the Jews, 41, 42. Of the unclean spirit, 43-45. Christ's mother and brethren seek him, 46-50.

AT that time * Jesus went on the Sabbath-day through the corn; and his disciples were an hungred, and began to pluck the ears of corn, and to eat.

2 But when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto him, Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the Sabbath-day.

3 But he said unto them, Have ye not read ^b what David did, when he was an hungred, and they that were with him;

4 How he entered into the house of God, and did eat ^c the shew bread, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them that were with him, ^d but only for the priests?

5 Or have ye not read in the ^e law, how that on the Sabbath-days, the priests in the temple profane the Sabbath, and are blameless?

6 But I say unto you, That in this place is ^f one greater than the temple.

Verse 1. His disciples were an hungred] Were hungry. The former is a mode of expression totally obsolete. We may well wonder at the extreme poverty of Christ and his disciples. He was himself present with them, and yet permitted them to lack bread! A man, therefore, is not forsaken of God because he is in want. It is more honourable to suffer the want of all temporal things in fellowship with Christ and his followers, than to have all things in abundance in connexion with the world.

Verse 2. Thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do] Those who know not the spirit and design of the divine Law are often superstitious to inhumanity, and indulgent to impiety. An intolerant and censorious spirit in religion is one of the greatest curses a man can well fall under.

Verse 3-4. Have ye not read what David did] The original history is in 1 Sam. xxi. 1-6.

He entered into the house of God] Viz., the house of Ahimelech the priest, who dwelt at Nob, with whom the tabernacle then was, in which the divine presence was manifested.

And did eat the shew bread] See the notes on Exod. xxv. 23 and 30.

Verse 5. The priests—profane the Sabbath] Profane, i.e. put it to what might be called a common use, by slaying and offering up sacrifices, and by doing the services of the temple, as on common days, Exod. xxix. 38; Num. xxviii. 9.

Verse 6. In this place is one greater than the temple] Does not our Lord refer here to Mal. iii. 1? Compare this with Heb. iii. 3. The Jews esteemed nothing greater than the temple, except that God who was worshipped in it. Christ, by asserting he was greater than the temple, asserts that he was God; and this he does, in still more direct terms, ver. 8, The Son of man is Lord of the Sabbath—is Institutor and Governor of it. Compare this with Gen. ii. 3, and see the notes there.

Verse 7. I will have mercy, &c.] See this explained, ch. ix. 18. There are four ways in which positive laws may cease to oblige: by the natural law of necessity; by a particular law, which is superior; by the law of charity and mercy; and by the dispensation and authority of the Lawgiver.

7 But if ye had known what this meaneth, ^a I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless.

8 For the Son of man is Lord even of the Sabbath-day.

9 ^b And when he was departed thence, he went into their synagogue:

10 And, behold, there was a man which had his hand withered. And they asked him, saying, 'Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath-days? that they might accuse him.

11 And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and ^c if it fall into a pit on the Sabbath-day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out?

12 How much then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore, it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath-days.

13 Then saith he to the man, Stretch forth thine

Verse 8. The Son of man is Lord even of the Sabbath-day] The change of the Jewish into the Christian Sabbath, called the Lord's day, Rev. i. 10, shows that Christ is not only the Lord, but also the truth and completion of it. For it seems to have been by an especial providence that this change has been made and acknowledged all over the Christian world.

Verse 10. A man which had his hand withered] Probably through a partial paralysis. The man's hand was withered; but God's mercy had still preserved to him the use of his feet: he uses them to bring him to the public worship of God, and Jesus meets and heals him there. How true is the proverb—It is never so ill with us, but it might be much worse!

Verse 11. If it fall into a pit on the Sabbath-day, &c.] Self-interest is a very decisive casuist, and removes abundance of scruples in a moment. It is always the first consulted, and the most readily obeyed. It is not sinful to hearken to it, but it must not govern nor determine by itself.

Verse 12. How much then is a man better than a sheep?] Our Lord's argument is what is called argumentum ad hominem; they are taken on their own ground, and confuted on their own maxims and conduct.

Wherefore, it is lawful to do well, &c.] This was allowed by a multitude of Jewish canons.

Verse 13. Stretch forth thine hand] The bare command of God is a sufficient reason of obedience. This man might have reasoned thus: "Lord, my hand is withered; how then can I stretch it out? Make it whole first, and afterwards I will do as thou commandest." This may appear reasonable, but in his case it would have been foolishness. At the command of the Lord he made the effort, and in making it the cure was effected! Faith disregards apparent impossibilities, where there is a command and promise of God. The effort to believe is, often, that faith by which the soul is healed.

It is worthy of remark, that as the man was healed with a word, without even a touch, the Sabbath was unbroken, even according to their most rigid interpretation of the letter of the Law.

Verse 14. Held a council against him] Nothing sooner leads to utter blindness, and hardness of heart, than envy.

Verse 15. Jesus—withdrew himself from thence] It is the hand. And he stretched it forth; and it was restored whole, like as the other.

14 Then ^a the Pharisees went out, and ^b held a council against him, how they might destroy him.

15 But when Jesus knew it, ^c he withdrew himself from thence: ^d and great multitudes followed him, and he healed them all:

16 And ^e charged them that they should not make him known:

17 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying,

18 'Behold my servant, whom I have chosen; my beloved, ^f in whom my soul is well pleased; I will put my spirit upon him, and he shall show judgment to the Gentiles.

19 He shall not strive, nor cry; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets.

20 A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory.

21 And in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

part of prudence and Christian charity not to provoke, if possible, the blind and the hardened; and to take from them the occasion of sin. Yield to the stream when you cannot stem it.

Great multitudes followed him, and he healed them all.] The rejection of the gospel in one place has often been the means of sending it to and establishing it in another. Jesus healed all that followed him, i.e. all who had need of healing, and who desired to be healed; for thus the passage must be understood:—and is he not still the same? No soul shall ever implore his healing power in vain; but let it be remembered, that only those who follow Christ, and apply to him, are healed of their spiritual maladies.

Verse 16. Charged them that they should not make him known.] See chap. viii. 4.

Verse 18. Behold my servant.] This title was given to our blessed Lord in several prophecies. See Isa. xlii. 1. liii. 2. Christ assumes it, Psal. xl. 7-9. Compare these with John xvii. 4, and Phil. ii. 7. God required an acceptable and perfect service from man; but man, being sinful, could not perform it. Jesus, taking upon him the nature of man, fully performed the whole will of God, and communicates grace to all his followers, to enable them perfectly to love and worthily to magnify their Maker.

And he shall show judgment to the Gentiles.] That is, He will publish the gospel to the heathens; for the word here answers to the word mishpat of the prophet, and it is used among the Hebrews to signify laws, precepts, and a whole system or body of doctrine. See Psal. xix. 19, cxix. 30, 39; Isa. lviii. 2.

Verse 19. He shall not strive, nor cry.] The spirit of Christ is not a spirit of contention, murmuring, clamour, or litigiousness. He who loves these does not belong to him.

Verse 20. A bruised reed shall he not break.] A reed is, in Scripture, the emblem of weakness, Ezek. xxix. 6; and a bruised reed must signify that state of weakness that borders on dissolution and death.

And smoking flax shall he not quench.] The wick of a lamp; intended to point out its expiring state, when the oil has been all burnt away from it, and nothing is left but a mere snuff, emitting smoke. Some suppose the Jewish state, as to ecclesiastical matters, is here intended, the prophecy declaring that Christ would not destroy it, but leave it to expire of itself, as it already contained the principles of its own destruction. Others have considered it as implying that great tenderness with which the blessed Jesus should treat the weak and the ignorant, whose good desires must not be stifled, but encouraged. The bruised reed may recover itself, if permitted to vegetate under the genial influences of heaven; and the life and light of the expiring lamp may be supported by the addition of fresh oil.

Judgment unto victory.] By judgment, understand the gospel, and by victory, its complete triumph over Jewish 22 ^b Then was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind, and dumb; and he healed him, insomuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw.

23 And all the people were amazed, and said, Is not this the son of David?

24 ^c But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by ^d Beelzebub the prince of the devils.

25 And Jesus ^e knew their thoughts, and said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand:

26 And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand?

27 And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out? therefore they shall be your judges.

28 But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then ^f the kingdom of God is come unto you.

opposition, and Gentile impiety. He will continue by these mild and gentle means to work till the whole world is christianized, and the universe filled with his glory.

Verse 21. And in his name shall the Gentiles trust.] They shall hope. Jesus Christ is the sole hope and trust of mankind.

Verse 22. One possessed with a devil, blind, and dumb.] A person from whom the indwelling demon took away both sight and hearing.

Verse 23. Is not this the son of David? Is not this the true Messiah? Do not these miracles sufficiently prove it? See Isa. xxxv. 5.

Verse 25. Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation.] Our Lord's argument runs thus: "The welfare of any kingdom, city, or family, depends on its concord and unanimity; Satan, like every other potentate, must wish to rule his empire in peace and security; how then can he be in league with me, who oppose his authority, and am destroying his kingdom?"

Verse 26. If Satan cast out Satan.] A good cause will produce a good effect, and an evil cause an evil effect. Were I on Satan's side, I would act for his interest, and confirm his influence among you; but I oppose his maxims by my doctrine, and his influence by my power.

Verse 27. By whom do your children cast them out? From Acts xix. 13, 14, it is evident there were exorcists among the Jews, and, from our Lord's saying here, it is also evident that the disciples of the Pharisees did cast out demons, or, at least, those who educated them wished to have it believed that they had such a power. Our Lord's argument here is extremely conclusive: If the man who casts out demons proves himself thereby to be in league with and influenced by Satan, then your disciples, and you who taught them, are all of you in league with the devil: ye must either give up your assertion, that I cast out demons by Beelzebub, or else admit this conclusion, in its fullest force and latitude, that ye are all children of the devil, and leagued with him against God.

Evry causes persons often to condemn, in one, what they approve in another.

Verse 28. But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God.] Perhaps the Spirit of God is here mentioned by way of opposition to the magical incantations of the Jews; for it is well known that, by fumigations and magical washings, they professed to cast out devils.

Then the kingdom of God.] For the destruction of the kingdom of Satan plainly implies the setting up of the kingdom of God.

Is come unto you.] It is come unexpectedly upon you.

Verse 29. Else how can one enter into a strong man's house.] Men, through sin, are become the very house and dwelling-place of Satan, having, of their own accord, surrendered themselves to this unjust possessor; for whoever house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man⁹ and then he will spoil his house.

30 He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad.

31 Wherefore I say unto you, *All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: ^bbut the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.

32 And whosoever * speaketh a word against the Son of man, ^dit shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.

33 Either make the tree good, and *his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt; for the tree is known by his fruit.

gives up his soul to sin gives it up to the Devil. It is Jesus, and Jesus alone, who can deliver from the power of this bondage. When Satan is cast out, Jesus purifies and dwells in the heart.

Verse 30. He that is not with me is against me] There is no medium between loving the Lord and being his enemy—between belonging to Christ or to Satan. If we be on the side of the Devil, we must expect to go to the Devil's hell; if we be on the side of Christ, we may expect to go to his heaven.

Scattereth abroad.] This seems to have been a proverbial form of speech, and may be a metaphor taken from shepherds. He who does not help the true shepherd to gather his flock into the fold is, most likely, one who wishes to scatter them, that he may have the opportunity of stealing and destroying them. [The allusion is rather to the harvest field.]

Verse 31. All manner of sin and blasphemy] Injurious or impious speaking, chap. ix. 8.

But the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost] Even personal reproaches, revilings, persecutions against Christ, were remissible; but blasphemy, or impious speaking, against the Holy Spirit, was to have no forgiveness: i.e., when the person obstinately attributed those works to the Devil, which he had the fullest evidence could be wrought only by the Spirit of God. That this, and nothing else, is the sin against the Holy Spirit, is evident from the connexions in this place, and more particularly from Mark iii. 28, 29, 30.

Here the matter is made clear beyond the smallest doubt—the unpardonable sin, as some term it, is neither less nor more than ascribing the miracles Christ wrought by the power of God, to the spirit of the Devil. Many sincere people have been grievously troubled with apprehensions that they had committed the unpardonable sin; but let it be observed that no man who believes the divine mission of Jesus Christ, ever can commit this sin: therefore let no man's heart fail because of it, from henceforth and for ever, Amen.

Verse 32. Neither in this world, neither in the world to come.] Though I follow the common translation, yet I am fully satisfied the meaning of the words is neither in this dispensation (viz., the Jewish) nor in that which is to come, viz., the Christian. The sin here spoken of by our Lord ranks high in the catalogue of presumptuous sins, for which there was no forgiveness under the Mosaic dispensation. See Num. xv. 30, 31. xxxv. 31. Lev. xx. 10. 1 Sam. ii. 25. When our Lord says that such a sin hath no forgiveness, is he not to be understood as meaning that the crime shall be punished under the Christian dispensation, as it was under the Jewish, viz., by the destruction of the body? And is not this the same mentioned 1 John i. 7, called there the sin unto death; i.e., a sin that was to be punished by the death of the body, while mercy might be extended to the soul? The punishment for presumptuous sins, under the Jewish law, to which our Lord evidently alludes, certainly did not extend to the damnation of the soul, though the body was destroyed: therefore I think that, though there was no such forgiveness to be extended to this crime as to absolve the man from the punishment of temporal death, yet, on repenevil, speak good things? * for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

35 A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things: and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things.

36 But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment.

37 For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.

38 ^bThen certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee.

39 But he answered and said unto them, An evil and ^cadulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas:

xxiii. 33.—^a Luke vi. 45.—^b Ch. xvi. 1. Mark viii. 11. Luke xi. 16, 29. John ii. 18. 1 Cor. i. 22.—^c Isa. lvii. 3. Ch. xvi. 4. Mark viii. 38. John iv. 48.

tance, mercy might be extended to the soul; and every sin may be repented of under the gospel dispensation. [The Rabbinical sense under which Dr. Clarke regards this passage cannot be correct. Christ could not have spoken of the Christian dispensation as "to come." It had already come.]

Verse 33. Either make the tree good] That is, the effect will be always similar to the cause; a bad tree will produce bad fruit, and a good tree, good fruit.

Verse 34. O generation of vipers] These are apparently severe words; but they were extremely proper in reference to that execrable people to whom they were addressed: the whole verse is an inference from what was spoken before.

Out of the abundance (the overflowings) of the heart] Wicked words and sinful actions may be considered as the overflowings of a heart that is more than full of the spirit of wickedness: and holy words and righteous deeds may be considered as the overflowings of a heart that is filled with the Holy Spirit, and running over with love to God and man.

Verse 35. A good man out of the good treasure of the heart] The good heart is the good treasure, and the treasure that is in it is the love of God, and of all mankind. The bad heart is the bad treasure, and its treasure is the carnal mind, which is enmity against God, and ill-will to man.

Verse 36. Every idle word] A word that does nothing, that neither ministers grace nor instruction to them who hear it. The word corresponds to the Hebrew shavé, which signifies not only vain or empty, but also wicked and injurious, such as a false testimony against a neighbour, compare Deut. v. 11 and 20. Our Lord must be understood here as condemning all false and injurious words; the scope of the place necessarily requires this meaning.

Verse 37. By thy words thou shalt be justified] That is, the whole tenor of thy conversation will be an evidence for or against thee, in the great day.

Verse 38. We would see a sign from thee.] Pride, vain curiosity, and incredulity, have never proof sufficient of the truth: for they will not be satisfied.

Verse 39. An evil and adulterous generation] Or, race of people; for so should it be translated here, and in most other places in the Gospels; for our Lord, in general, uses it to point out the Jewish people.

Seeketh after a sign] Or, seeketh another sign, so I think this word should be translated. Our Lord had already given the Jews several signs: and here they desire sign upon sign.

Verse 40. Three days and three nights] Our Lord rose from the grave on the day but one after his crucifixion: so that, in the computation in this verse, the part of the day on which he was crucified, and the part of that on which he rose again, are severally estimated as an entire day; and this, no doubt, exactly corresponded to the time in which Jonah was in the belly of the fish.

Three days and three nights, according to the Jewish method of reckoning, included any part of the first day, the whole of the following night, the next day and its night; and any part of the succeeding or third day.

In the whale's belly] That a fish of the shark kind, and not a whale, is here meant, Bochart has abundantly proved. Some say, that the great fish means a vessel so called, into which Jonah went, and into the hold of which he was 40 *For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly: so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.

41 ^bThe men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and ^cshall condemn it: ^dbecause they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

42 *The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here.

43 ^eWhen the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, ^fhe walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and findeth none:

44 Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished.

45 Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven thrown, where he continued three days and three nights. In short, it must be anything but a real miracle, the existence of which the wise men, so called, of the present day, cannot admit. Perhaps these very men are not aware that they have scarcely any belief even in the existence of God himself!

Verse 41. The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment] The voice of God, threatening temporal judgments, caused a whole people to repent, who had neither Moses nor Christ, neither the Law, or the prophets; and who perhaps never had but this one preacher among them. What judgment may not we expect, if we continue impenitent, after all that God has bestowed upon us?

A greater than Jonas is here.] The evidence offered by Jonah sufficed to convince and lead the Ninevites to repentance; but here was more evidence, and a greater person; and yet so obstinate are the Jews that all is ineffectual. 1. Christ, who preached to the Jews, was infinitely greater than Jonah, in his nature, person, and mission. 2. Jonah preached repentance in Nineveh only forty days, and Christ preached among the Jews for several years. 3. Jonah wrought no miracles to authorize his preaching; but Christ wrought miracles every day, in every place where he went, and of every kind. And, 4. Notwithstanding all this, the people of Judea did not repent, though the people of Nineveh did.

Verse 42. The queen of the south] In 1 Kings x. 1, this queen is said to be of Saba, which was a city and province of Arabia Felix, to the south, or southeast of Judea.

Uttermost parts of the earth] A form of speech which merely signifies a great distance.

Verse 43. When the unclean spirit] If there had been no reality in demoniacal possessions, our Lord would have scarcely appealed to a case of this kind here, to point out the real state of the Jewish people, and the desolation which was coming upon them.

He walketh through dry places] There seems to be a reference here to the Orphee demonology, in which evil spirits were divided into various classes, according to the different regions of their abode, or places in which they delighted. [This criticism is gratuitous.]

Seeking rest] Or refreshment. Strange! a fallen corrupt spirit can have no rest but in the polluted human heart: the corruption of the one is suited to the pollution of the other, and thus like cleaves to like.

other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: ^band the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation.

46 While he yet talked to the people, ^c'behold, his mother and ^dhis brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him.

47 Then one said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee.

48 But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren?

49 And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren!

50 For ^ewhosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.

[Ch. xiii. 55. Mark vi. 3. John ii. 12. vii. 8, 5. Acts i. 14. 1 Cor. ix. 5. Gal. i. 19.—^bSee John xv. 14. Gal. v. 6. vi. 15. Col. iii. 11. Heb. ii. 11.]

Verse 44. Into my house] The soul of that person from whom he had been expelled by the power of Christ, and out of which he was to have been kept by continual prayer, faith, and watchfulness.

He findeth it empty] Unoccupied, empty of the former inhabitant, and ready to receive a new one: denoting a soul that has lost the life and power of godliness, and the testimony of the Holy Spirit.

Swept and garnished.] As the original signifies to be idle or unemployed, it may refer here to the person, as well as to his state. His affections and desires are no longer busied with the things of God, but gad about, like an idle person, among the vanities of a perishing world. Swept, from love, meekness, and all the fruits of the Spirit; and garnished or adorned, decorated with the vain showy trifles of folly and fashion.

Verse 45. Seven other spirits more wicked] Seven was a favourite number with the Jews, implying frequently, with them, something perfect, completed, filled up. Seven demons—as many as could occupy his soul, harassing it with pride, anger, self-will, lust, &c., and torturing the body with disease.

The last state of that man is worse than the first] His soul, before influenced by the Spirit of God, dilated and expanded under its heavenly influences, becomes more capable of refinement in iniquity, as its powers are more capacious than formerly.

So shall it be also unto this wicked generation.] And so it was: for they grew worse and worse, as if totally abandoned to diabolic influence; till at last the besom of destruction swept them and their privileges, national and religious, utterly away.

Verse 46. His mother and his brethren] These are supposed to have been the cousins of our Lord, as the word brother is frequently used among the Hebrews in this sense. But there are others who believe Mary had other children besides our Lord, and that these were literally his brothers, who are spoken of here.

Verse 48. Who is my mother? and who are my brethren?] The reason of this seeming disregard of his relatives was this: they came to seize upon him, for they thought he was distracted. See Mark iii. 21.

Verse 50. Whosoever shall do the will of my Father, &c.] Those are the best acknowledged relatives of Christ who are united to him by spiritual ties, and who are become one with him by the indwelling of his Spirit.

CHAPTER XIII.

Christ teaches the multitudes out of a ship, they standing on the shore, 1, 2. The parable of the sower, 3-9. He gives his reasons for speaking in parables, 10-17. Explains the parable of the sower, 18-23. Parable of the tares and the wheat, 24-30. Of the grain of mustard seed, 31, 32. Of the leaven, 33. The prophecy fulfilled by this mode of teaching, 34, 35. He explains the parable of the tares and the wheat, 36-43. Parable of the treasure hid in a field, 44. Of the pearl-merchant, 45, 46. Of the drag-net, 47-50. His application of the whole, 51, 52. He teaches in his own country, and his neighbours take offence, 53-56. Our Lord's observations on this, 57. He works no miracle among them because of their unbelief, 58.

THE same day went Jesus out of the house, * and sat by the sea side.

2 ^b And great multitudes were gathered together unto him, so that ^c he went into a ship, and sat; and the whole multitude stood on the shore.

3 And he spake many things unto them in parables, saying, ^d Behold, a sower went forth to sow;

4 And when he sowed, some seeds fell by the way side, and the fowls came and devoured them up:

5 Some fell upon stony places, where they had not much earth: and forthwith they sprung up, because they had no deepness of earth:

6 And when the sun was up, they were scorched; and because they had no root, they withered away.

* Mark iv. 1.—^b Luke viii. 4.—^c Luke v. 3.—^d Luke viii. 5.—^e Gen. xxvi. 12.—^f Ch. xi. 15.—^g Ch. xi. 25. xvi. 17. Mark iv. 11.

Verse 1. The same day] Our Lord scarcely ever appears to take any rest: he is incessant in his labours, and instant in season and out of season; and in this he has left all his successors in the ministry an example, that they should follow his steps: for he who wishes to save souls will find few opportunities to rest.

Went Jesus out of the house] This was the house of Peter, See chap. xvii. 24.

Sat by the sea side.] The Sea of Galilee, on the borders of which the City of Capernaum was situated.

Verse 2. Into a ship] The vessel or boat. A particular vessel seems to have been kept on the lake for the use of Christ and his Apostles: it probably belonged to some of the fishermen (see chap. iv. 22) who, occasionally, at least, followed their former occupation.

Verse 3. He spake many things unto them in parables] Parable. A comparison or similitude, in which one thing is compared with another, especially spiritual things with natural, by which means these spiritual things are better understood, and make a deeper impression on an attentive mind. No scheme of Jewish rhetoric was more familiarly used than that of parables; which, perhaps, creeping in from thence among the heathens, ended in fables.

Verse 4. Some seeds fell by the way side] The hard beaten path, where no plough had broken up the ground.

Verse 5. Stony places] Where there was a thin surface of earth, and a rock at the bottom.

Verse 7. Among thorns] Where the earth was ploughed up, but the brambles and weeds had not been cleared away.

Verse 8. Good ground] Where the earth was deep, the field well ploughed, and the brambles and weeds all removed.

Some a hundred-fold] The power of grain to multiply itself, even in the same year, is a subject as much of curiosity and astonishment, as of importance and general utility.

Verse 11. It is given unto you to know the mysteries, &c.] By mysteries here we may understand not only things concerning the scheme of salvation, which had not yet been revealed; but also the prophetic declarations concerning the future state of the Christian Church, expressed in the ensuing parables. It is not given to them to know the purport and design of these things—they are gross of heart, earthly and sensual, and do not improve the light they have received: but to you it is given, because I have appointed you not only to be the first preachers of my gospel to sinners, but also the 7 And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprung up, and choked them:

8 But other fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit, some ^a a hundred-fold, some sixty-fold, some thirty-fold.

9 ^f Who hath ears to hear, let him hear,

10 And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables?

11 He answered and said unto them, Because ^g it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given.

12 ^h For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath.

13 Therefore speak I to them in parables: because

1 Cor. ii. 10. 1 John i. 27.—^a Ch. xxy. 29. Mark iv. 25. Luke viii. 18. xix. 26.

persons who shall transmit accounts of all these things to posterity. The knowledge of these mysteries, in the first instance, can be given only to a few; but when these faithfully write and publish what they have heard and seen, unto the world, then the science of salvation is revealed and addressed to all. From ver. 17, we learn that many prophets and righteous men had desired to see and hear these things, but had not that privilege—to them it was not given; not because God designed to exclude them from salvation, but because HE who knew all things knew, either that they were not proper persons, or that that was not the proper time: for the choice of the PERSONS by whom, and the choice of the TIME in which it is most proper to reveal divine things, must for ever rest with the all-wise God.

Verse 12. Whosoever hath, to him shall be given] This is an allusion to a common custom in all countries: he who possesses much, or is rich, to such a person presents are ordinarily given.

Whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath.] That is, the poor man: he that has little may be easily made a prey of, and so lose his little. This is a proper sense of the word in sacred and profane writers. In 1 Cor. xi. 22, those who have not, means simply THE POOR.

Verse 13. Therefore speak I to them in parables] On this account, viz., to lead them into a proper knowledge of God. I speak to them in parables, natural representations of spiritual truths, that they may be allured to inquire, and to find out the spirit, which is hidden under the letter; because, seeing the miracles which I have wrought, they see not, i.e., the end for which I have wrought them; and hearing my doctrines, they hear not, so as to profit by what is spoken; neither do they understand, they do not lay their hearts to it. Is not this obviously our Lord's meaning? Who can suppose that he would employ his time in speaking enigmatically to them, on purpose that they might not understand what was spoken? Could the God of truth and sincerity act thus? If he had designed to act otherwise, he might have saved his time and labour, and not spoken at all, which would have answered the same end, viz., to leave them in gross ignorance.

Verse 14. In them is fulfilled] Is AGAIN fulfilled: this proper meaning of the Greek word has been generally overlooked.

they seeing, see not; and hearing, they hear not; neither do they understand.

14 And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, 'By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive:

15 For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

16 But ^c blessed are your eyes, for they see, and your ears, for they hear.

17 For verily I say unto you, ^d That many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

18 * Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower.

19 When any one heareth the word ^f of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart. This is he which received seed by the way side.

20 But he that received the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the word, and anon ^g with joy receiveth it;

21 Yet hath he not root in himself, but dureth for a while: for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by ^h he is offended.

22 ⁱ He also that received seed ^j among the thorns, is he that heareth the word; and the care of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful.

23 But he that received seed into the good ground, is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it; which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, ^k some a hundred-fold, some sixty, some thirty.

24 Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed ^l good seed in his field:

25 But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed ^m tares among the wheat, and went his way.

26 But when the blade was sprung up, and Verse 23. Good ground] That which had depth of mould, was well ploughed, and well weeded.

Which also beareth fruit] His fruitfulness being an almost necessary consequence of his thus laying the divine message to heart. Let it be observed, that to hear, to understand, and to bring forth fruit, are the three grand evidences of a genuine believer.

From the different portions of fruit produced by the good ground, we may learn that all sound believers are not equally fruitful; all hear, understand, and bring forth fruit, but not in the same degrees—occasioned, partly, by their situation and circumstances not allowing them such extensive opportunities of receiving and doing good; and partly by lack of mental capacity—for every mind is not equally improvable.

Let it be farther observed, that the unfruitfulness of the different lands was not owing to bad seed or an unskilful sower—the same sower sows the same seed in all, and with the same gracious design—but it is unfruitful in many because they are careless, inattentive, and worldly-minded.

Verse 24. The kingdom of heaven] God's method of managing the affairs of the world, and the concerns of his church.

Is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field] In general, the world may be termed the field of God; and, in particular, those who profess to believe in God through Christ are his field or farm; among whom God sows nothing but the pure unadulterated word of his truth.

Verse 25. But while men slept] When the professors were lukewarm, and the pastors indolent; his enemy came and sowed tares, degenerate or bastard wheat.

The word zizania, which is here translated tares, should rather be translated bastard or degenerate wheat, that which was wholly a right seed in the beginning, but afterwards became degenerate. This interpretation throws much light on the scope and design of the whole passage. Christ seems to refer, first, to the origin of evil. God sowed good seed in his field; made man in his own image and likeness; but the enemy, the devil (ver. 30), corrupted this good seed, and caused it to degenerate. Secondly, he seems to refer to the state of the Jewish people; God had sowed them, at first, wholly a right seed, but now they were become utterly degenerate, and about to be plucked up and destroyed by the Roman armies, which were the angels or messengers of God's justice, whom he had commissioned to sweep these rebellious people from the face of the land. Thirdly, he seems to refer also to the state in which the world shall be found, when he comes to judge it. The righteous and the wicked shall be permitted to grow together, till God comes to make a full and final separation.

By hearing ye shall hear] Jesus Christ shall be sent to you, his miracles ye shall fully see, and his doctrines ye shall distinctly hear; but God will not force you to receive the salvation which is offered.

Verse 15. Heart is waxed gross] Is become fat—inattentive, stupid, insensible.

Lest—they should see, &c.] Lest they should see their lost estate, and be obliged to turn unto God, and seek his salvation.

Verse 17. Many prophets and righteous men] These lived by, and died in the faith of the promised Messiah: the fullness of the time was not then come for his manifestation in the flesh.

Verse 19. When any one heareth the word of the kingdom] Viz., the preaching of the gospel of Christ.

And understandeth it not] Perhaps more properly, regardeth it not, does not lay his heart to it.

The wicked one] He who distresses and torments the soul. Mark, chap. iv. 15, calls him the adversary or opposer, because he resists men in all their purposes of amendment, and opposes, in order to frustrate the influences of divine grace upon the heart. In the parallel place in Luke, chap. viii. 12, he is called the devil, from a word signifying to shoot, or dart through. See Eph. vi. 16.

Catcheth away] Makes the utmost haste to pick up the good seed, lest it should take root in the heart.

A careless inattentive hearer is compared to the way side—his heart is an open road, where evil affections, and foolish and hurtful desires, continually pass and repass without either notice or restraint.

Verse 20. But he that received the seed into stony places—is he] That is, is a fit emblem of that man who, hearing the gospel, is affected with its beauty and excellency, and immediately receiveth it with joy—is glad to hear what God has done to make man happy.

Verse 21. Yet hath he not root in himself] His soul is not deeply convinced of its guilt and depravity; the fallow ground is not properly ploughed up, nor the rock broken.

Verse 22. He also that received seed among the thorns] In land ploughed, but not properly cleared and weeded.

The deceitfulness of riches] Which promise peace and pleasure, but can never give them.

Choke the word] Or, together choke the word, meaning, either that these grow up together with the word, overtop, and choke it; or that these united together, viz. caring worldly cares, with the delusive hopes and promises of riches, cause the man to abandon the great concerns of his soul, and seek, in their place, what he shall eat, drink, and where-withal he shall be clothed.

brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also.

27 So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares?

28 He said unto them, 'An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, 'Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?

29 But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them.

30 Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles, to burn them; but 'gather the wheat into my barn.

31 Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, 'The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took and sowed in his field:

32 Which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof.

33 'Another parable spake he unto them: The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three 'measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

34 'All these things spake Jesus unto the mul-

Verse 26. When the blade was sprung up—then appeared the tares also.] Satan has a shoot of iniquity for every shoot of grace; and, when God revives his work, Satan revives his also.

Verse 27. So the servants—said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow? A faithful and vigilant minister of Christ fails not to discover the evil, to lament it, and to address himself to God by prayer, in order to find out the cause of it, and to receive from him proper information how to behave on this occasion.

Verse 28. An enemy hath done this.] It is the interest of Satan to introduce hypocrites and wicked persons into religious societies, in order to discredit the work of God, and to favour his own designs.

Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up? A zeal, which is rash and precipitate, is as much to be feared as the total lack of strict discipline.

Verse 29. But he said, Nay.] God judges quite otherwise than men of this mixture of good and evil in the world; he knows the good which he intends to produce from it, and how far his patience towards the wicked should extend, in order to their conversion, or the farther sanctification of the righteous. The zeal which leads persons to persecute others for religious opinions is not less a seed of the devil than a bad opinion itself is.

Verse 30. Let both grow together.] Though every minister of God should separate from the church of Christ every incorrigible sinner, yet he should proceed no farther; the man is not to be persecuted in his body or goods, because he is not sound in the faith—God tolerates him; so should men. False doctrines are against God—he alone is the judge and punisher of them—man has no right to interfere in this matter.

Verse 31. The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed.] This parable is a representation of the progress of the gospel in the world; and of the growth of grace in the soul. That grace which leads the soul to the fullness of glory may begin, and often does, in a single good desire—a wish to escape hell, or a desire to enjoy God in heaven.

Verse 32. Which is indeed the least of all seeds.] That is, of all those seeds which produce plants, whose stems and branches, according to the saying of the botanists, are apt, to grow into a ligneous or woody substance.

Becometh a tree.] That is, it is not only the largest of titude in parables; and without a parable spake he not unto them:

35 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, 'I will open my mouth in parables; 'I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world.

36 Then Jesus sent the multitude away, and went into the house: and his disciples came unto him, saying, Declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field.

37 He answered and said unto them, He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man;

38 'The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are 'the children of the wicked one;

39 The enemy that sowed them is the devil; 'the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels.

40 As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world.

41 The Son of man shall send forth his angels, 'and they shall gather out of his kingdom all 'things that offend, and them which do iniquity;

42 'And shall cast them into a furnace of fire: 'there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

43 'Then shall the righteous shine forth as the plants which are produced from such small seeds, but partakes, in its substance, the close woody texture, especially in warm climates, where we are informed it grows to an almost incredible size.

Verse 33. The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven.] As the property of leaven is to change, or assimilate to its own nature, the meal or dough with which it is mixed, so the property of the grace of Christ is to change the whole soul into its own likeness; and God intends that this principle should continue in the soul till the whole bear the image of the heavenly, as it before bore the image of the earthly.

Verse 34. All these things spake Jesus—in parables.] Divine things cannot be taught to man but through the medium of earthly things. If God should speak to us in that language which is peculiar to heaven, clothing those ideas which angelic minds form, how little should we comprehend of the things thus described!

Verse 35. By the prophet.] As the quotation is taken from Psal. lxxviii. 2, which is attributed to Asaph, he must be the prophet who is meant in the text; and, indeed, he is expressly called a prophet, 1 Chron. xxv. 2.

Verse 36. Jesus—went into the house: and his disciples came.] Those who attend only to the public preaching of the Gospel of God are not likely to understand fully the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven. To understand clearly the purport of the divine message, a man must come to God by frequent, fervent, secret prayer.

Verse 44. The kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field.] To a hidden treasure. We are not to imagine that the treasure here mentioned, and to which the Gospel salvation is likened, means a pot or chest of money hidden in the field, but rather a gold or silver mine, which he who found out could not get at, or work, without turning up the field, and for this purpose he bought it.

Our Lord's meaning seems to be this:

The kingdom of heaven—the salvation provided by the gospel—is like a treasure—something of inestimable worth—hidden in a field: it is a rich mine, the veins of which run in all directions in the sacred Scriptures; therefore, the field must be dug up, the records of salvation diligently and carefully turned over, and searched. *Which, when a man hath found—*when a sinner is convinced that the promise of life eternal is to him, he kept secret—pondered the matter deeply in his heart; he examines the preciousness of the treasure, and counts the cost of purchase; for joy thereof—sun in the kingdom of their Father. * Who hath ears to hear let him hear.

44 Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which, when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

45 Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls:

46 Who, when he had found * one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it.

47 Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind;

48 Which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away.

49 So shall it be at the end of the world: the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just,

50 * And shall cast them into the furnace of fire: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

51 Jesus saith unto them, Have ye understood all

* Ver. 9.—^a Phil. iii. 7. 8.—^b Isa. lv. 1. Rev. iii. 18.—^c Prov. ii. 4. iii. 14, 15. viii. 10, 19.—^d Ch. xxii. 10.—^e Ch. xxv. 32.—^f Ver. 43.—^g Cant. vii. 13.—^h Ch. ii. 23. Mark vi. 1. Luke iv. 16, 23.—

finding that this salvation is just what his needy soul requires, and what will make him presently and eternally happy, went and sold all that he had—renounces his sins, abandons his evil companions, and relinquishes all hope of salvation through his own righteousness; and purchased that field—not merely bought the book for the sake of the salvation it described, but, by the blood of the covenant, buys gold tried in the fire, white raiment, &c.; in a word, pardon and purity, which he receives from God for the sake of Jesus.

Verse 45. A merchant man, seeking goodly pearls] The meaning of this parable is the same with the others; and both were spoken to impress more forcibly this great truth on the souls of the people—eternal salvation from sin and its consequences is the supreme good of man, should be sought after above all things, and prized beyond all that God has made.

Verse 47. Is like unto a net] A drag-net. This is the proper meaning. As this is dragged along it keeps gathering all in its way, both good and bad, small and great; and, when it is brought to the shore, those which are proper for use are preserved, and those which are not are either destroyed or thrown back into the water.

By the net may be understood the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom, which keeps drawing men into the profession of Christianity, and into the fellowship of the visible Church of Christ. By the sea may be represented that abyss of sin, error, ignorance, and wickedness in which men live, and out of which they are drawn, by the truth and spirit of God, who cordially close in with the offers of salvation made to them in the preaching of the Gospel.

By drawing to shore, may be represented the consummation of all things, see ver. 49, when a proper distinction shall be made between those who served God, and those who served him not; for many shall doubtless be found who shall bear the name without the nature of Christ. By picking out the good, and throwing away the bad, ver. 48, is meant that separation which God shall make between false and true professors, casting the former into hell, and bringing the latter to heaven.

Verse 51. Have ye understood all these things?] Divine truths must not be lightly passed over.—Our Lord's question here shows them to be matters of the utmost weight and importance; and that they should be considered again and again, till they be thoroughly understood.

Verse 52. Every scribe] Minister of Christ; who is instructed—taught of God; in the kingdom of heaven—in the mysteries of the gospel of Christ; out of his treasury—his granary or store-house; things new and old—a Jewish phrase for great plenty. A small degree of knowledge is not sufficient for a preacher of the gospel. The Sacred Writings should be his treasure, and he should properly understand these things? They say unto him, Yea, Lord.

52 Then said he unto them, Therefore every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is a householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old.

53 And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these parables, he departed thence.

54 * And when he was come into his own country, he taught them in their synagogue, insomuch that they were astonished, and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works?

55 * Is not this the carpenter's son? is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren, James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas?

56 And his sisters, are they not all with us? Whence then hath this man all these things?

57 And they were offended in him. But Jesus said unto them, * A prophet is not without honour, save in his own country, and in his own house.

58 And he did not many mighty works there, because of their unbelief.

them. Again, it is not enough for a man to have these advantages in possession: he must bring them forth, and distribute them abroad. A good pastor will not, like a miser, keep these things to himself to please his fancy; nor, like a merchant, traffic with them, to enrich himself; but, like a bountiful father or householder, distribute them with a liberal though judicious hand, for the comfort and support of the whole heavenly family.

Verse 54. And when he was come into his own country] Probably Nazareth, where his parents lived, and where he had continued till his thirtieth year, though it appears he had a lodging in Peter's house at Capernaum.

They were astonished] It appears, hence, that our blessed Lord had lived in obscurity all the time above specified; for his countrymen appear not to have heard his doctrines, nor seen his miracles, until now. 'Tis a melancholy truth, that those who should know Christ best are often the most ignorant of himself, the doctrines of his word, and the operations of his Spirit.

Verse 55. Is not this the carpenter's son?] It is likely our Lord, during the thirty years of his abode at Nazareth, wrought at the same trade with Joseph: and perhaps this is what is intended, Luke ii. 51. An honest trade is no discredit to any man. He who spends his time in idleness is fit for any business in which the Devil chooses to employ him.

Is not his mother—Mary, and his brethren, James, &c.] This insulting question seems to intimate that our Lord's family was a very obscure one; and that they were of small repute among their neighbours, except for their piety.

Verse 57. And they were offended in him.] They took offence at him, making the meanness of his family the reason why they would not receive him as a prophet, though they were astonished at his wisdom, and at his miracles, ver. 54. So their pride and their envy were the causes of their destruction.

A prophet is not without honour] This seems to have been a proverbial mode of speech, generally true, but not without some exceptions.

Verse 58. And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief.] Miracles. So the word is used, ch. vii. 22. xi. 20. Acts xix. 11. 1. Cor. xii. 28. Gal. iii. 5. Heb. ii. 4.

Unbelief and contempt drive Christ out of the heart, as they did out of his own country. Faith seems to put the almighty power of God into the hands of men; whereas unbelief appears to tie up even the hands of the Almighty. A man, generally speaking, can do but little good among his relatives, because it is difficult for them to look with the eyes of faith upon one whom they have been accustomed to behold with the eyes of the flesh.

CHAPTER XIV.

Herod, having heard the fame of Christ, supposes him to be John the Baptist, risen from the dead, 1, 2. A circumstantial account of the beheading of John the Baptist, 3-12. Five thousand men, besides women and children, fed with five loaves and two fishes, 13-21. The disciples take ship, and Jesus stays behind, and goes privately into a mountain to pray, 22, 23. A violent storm arises, by which the lives of the disciples are endangered, 24. In their extremity, Jesus appears to them, walking upon the water, 25-27. Peter, at the command of his master, leaves the ship, and walks on the water to meet Christ, 28-31. They both enter the ship, and the storm ceases, 32, 33. They come into the land of Gennesaret, and he heals many diseased people, 34-36.

AT that time * Herod the tetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus,

2 And said unto his servants, This is John the Baptist; he is risen from the dead; and therefore mighty works ^b do shew forth themselves in him.

3 * For Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison, for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife.

4 For John said unto him, ^c It is not lawful for thee to have her.

5 And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, ^e because they counted him as a prophet.

6 But when Herod's birth-day was kept, the daughter of Herodias danced ^f before them and pleased Herod.

7 Whereupon he promised with an oath, to give her whatsoever she would ask.

* Mark vi. 14. Luke ix. 7.—^b Or, are wrought by him.—^c Mark vi. 17. Luke iii. 19, 20.—^d Lev. xviii. 16. xx. 21.—^e Ch. xxi. 28.

Verse 1. Herod the tetrarch] This was Herod Antipas, the son of Herod the Great. The word tetrarch properly signifies a person who rules over the fourth part of a country; but it is taken in a more general sense by the Jewish writers, meaning sometimes a governor simply, or a king; see ver. 9.

Verse 2. This is John the Baptist] See the power of conscience! He is miserable, because he is guilty; being continually under the dominion of self-accusation, reproach, and remorse. No need for the Baptist now: conscience performs the office of ten thousand accusers! But, to complete the misery, a guilty conscience offers no relief from God—points out no salvation from sin.

He is risen from the dead] From this we may observe: That the resurrection of the dead was a common opinion among the Jews; and 2, that the materiality of the soul made no part of Herod's creed.

Verse 3. For Herodias' sake] This infamous woman was the daughter of Aristobulus and Berenice, and granddaughter of Herod the Great. Her first marriage was with Herod Philip, her uncle, by whom she had Salome: some time after, she left her husband, and lived publicly with Herod Antipas, her brother-in-law, who had been before married to the daughter of Arotas, the king of Arabia Petrea.

Verse 4. For John said unto him, It is not lawful for thee to have her] Here is an instance of zeal, fidelity, and courage highly worthy of imitation. Plainness, mildness, and modesty, are qualifications necessary to be observed when we reprove the great. The best service a subject can render his prince is to lay before him, in the plainest, but most respectful manner, what the law of God requires of him, and what it forbids. How unutterable must the punishment of those be who are chaplains to princes, or great men, and who either flatter them in their vices, or wink at their sins!

Verse 5. He feared the multitude] Miserable prince! who fears more to offend his people, than to sin against his God, by shedding innocent blood.

Verse 6. Herod's birthday] Either the day on which he was born, or the day on which he began to reign; for both were termed birthdays. See 1 Sam. xiii. 1, and Hos. vii. 5. The kings of Persia were accustomed to reject no petition that was preferred to them during the entertainment.

8 And she, being before instructed of her mother, said, Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger.

9 And the king was sorry: nevertheless, for the oath's sake, and them which sat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her.

10 And he sent, and beheaded John in the prison.

11 And his head was brought in a charger, and given to the damsel: and she brought it to her mother.

12 And his disciples came, and took up the body, and buried it, and went and told Jesus.

13 * When Jesus heard of it, he departed thence by ship into a desert place apart: and when the people had heard thereof, they followed him on foot out of the cities.

14 And Jesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, and ^b was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick.

The daughter—danced] This was Salome, mentioned before.

Verse 8. Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger] A dish, or platter: anything is better than charger, which never conveyed much meaning, and now conveys none. What a most infernal mother, to give such instructions to her child! and what a promising daughter to receive them! What a present for a young lady!—the bloody head of the murdered forerunner of Jesus! and what a gratification for an adulterous wife, and incestuous mother!

Verse 9. The king was sorry] He knew John to be a righteous man, and at first did many things gladly which John told him it was his duty to perform. Mark vi. 20.

Nevertheless, for the oath's sake] The OATHS,—he had probably sworn again and again—one sin begets many.

And them which sat with him at meat] Who were probably such as himself, and would have considered it a breach of honour if he had not fulfilled his sworn promise: he therefore commanded it to be given!

Verse 11. His head was—given to the damsel: and she brought it to her mother] There is no person so revengeful as a lascivious woman when reproved and blamed.

Verse 12. His disciples came, and took up the body] The HEAD was in the possession of Herodias, who, 'tis probable, took a diabolic pleasure in viewing that speechless mouth which had often been the cause of planting thorns in her criminal bed: and in offering indignities to that tongue from which she could no longer dread a reproof. Behold here, ye professedly religious parents, the fruits of what was doubtless called in those times elegant breeding and accomplished dancing! Fix your eyes on that vicious mother, that prostituted daughter; and especially on that murdered ambassador of God, and then send your children to genteel boarding-schools, to learn the accomplishment of DANCING! where the fear of God makes no part of the education.

Verse 13. When Jesus heard of it, he departed thence] Had the blessed Jesus continued in that place it is probable the hand of this impure female murderer would have been stretched out against him also: he withdrew therefore, not through fear, but to teach his messengers rather to yield to the storm than expose themselves to destruction, where, from circumstances, the case is evidently hopeless.

15 'And when it was evening, his disciples came to him, saying, This is a desert place, and the time is now past; send the multitude away, that they may go into the villages, and buy themselves victuals.

16 But Jesus said unto them, They need not depart; give ye them to eat.

17 And they say unto him, 'We have here but five loaves, and two fishes.

18 He said, Bring them hither to me.

19 And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass, and took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, 'he blessed, and brake, and gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

20 And they did all eat, and were filled: 'and they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets full.

21 And they that had eaten were about five thousand men, beside women and children.

22 And straightway Jesus constrained his disciples to get into a ship, 'and to go before him

The people—followed him on foot] Or, by land, which is a common acceptance of the word in the best Greek writers.

Verse 14. Jesus—was moved with compassion] He was moved with tender compassion, so I think the word should in general be translated: see the note on chap. ix. 30.

Verse 15. Send the multitude away, that they may go—and buy] The disciples of Christ are solicitous for the people's temporal, as well as spiritual welfare: and he is not worthy to be called a minister of Christ, who does not endeavour to promote both to the uttermost of his power.

Verse 16. They need not depart] He that seeks first the kingdom of heaven is sure to have every temporal requisite.

Give ye them to eat.] Should we say, Lord, how shall thy poor, feeble, ministering servants, feed so many hungry souls as attend thy word? Begin at the command of Jesus—make the attempt—divide what you have—and the bread of God shall be multiplied in your hands, and all shall eat and be satisfied.

Verse 17. We have here but five loaves and two fishes] God often permits his servants to be brought low, that they may have repeated opportunities of proving the kindness and mercy of their gracious Lord and Master.

Verse 18. Bring them hither to me.] If thou have but even a handful of meal and a few herbs, bring them to Christ by prayer and faith, and he will make them a sufficiency for thy body, and a sacrament to thy soul. Let the minister of the Gospel attend—bring all his gifts and graces to his Maker—let him ever know that his word can be of no use, unless the blessing of Christ be in it.

Verse 19. And took the five loaves, &c.] This was the act of the father of a family among the Jews—his business it was to take the bread into his hands, and render thanks to God, before any of the family was permitted to taste of it.

Looking up to heaven] To teach us to acknowledge God as the Supreme Good, and fountain of all excellence.

He blessed] The word God should, I think, be rather inserted here than the word them, because it does not appear that it was the loaves which Christ blessed, but that God who had provided them; and this indeed was the Jewish custom, not to bless the food, but the God who gave it.

And brake] We read often in the Scriptures of breaking bread, never of cutting it: because the Jews made their bread broad and thin like cakes, and to divide such, being very brittle, there was no need of a knife.

Verse 20. They did all eat and were filled] Little or much is the same in the hands of Jesus Christ. Here must have been a manifest creation of substance—the parts of the bread were not dilated to make them appear large, nor was there any delusion in the eating—for they all ate, and were all filled. Here then is one miracle of our Lord attested by at least five thousand persons!

They took up—twelve baskets] It was customary for many of the Jews to carry a basket with them at all times.

The simple reason appears to be this:—When they went into Gentile countries, they carried their own provision with unto the other side, while he sent the multitudes away.

23 'And when he had sent the multitudes away, he went up into a mountain apart, to pray: 'and when the evening was come, he was there alone.

24 But the ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves: for the wind was contrary.

25 And in the fourth watch of the night Jesus went unto them, walking on the sea.

26 And when the disciples saw him 'walking on the sea, they were troubled, saying, It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear.

27 But straightway Jesus spake unto them, saying, Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid.

28 And Peter answered him and said, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water.

29 And he said, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship, he walked on the water, to go to Jesus.

30 But when he saw the wind 'boisterous, he was afraid; and, beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me.

them, as they were afraid of being polluted by partaking of the meat of heathens.

Verse 22. Jesus constrained his disciples to get into a ship] Either they were afraid to return into the jurisdiction of Herod, or they were unwilling to embark without their Lord and Protector, and would not enter their boat till Christ had commanded them to embark.

Unto the other side] Towards Capernaum, ver. 34. John vi. 16, 17, or Bethesda, see on Mark vi. 45.

Verse 23. He went up into a mountain apart, to pray] He whom God has employed in a work of mercy had need to return, by prayer, as speedily, to his Maker, as he can, lest he should be tempted to value himself on account of that in which he has no merit—for the good that is done upon earth, the Lord doth it alone.

Verse 24. Tossed with waves] Grievously agitated. This is the proper meaning of the word.

Verse 25. The fourth watch] This division the Romans had introduced in Judea, as also the custom of dividing the day into twelve hours: see John xi. 9. The first watch began at six o'clock in the evening, the second at nine, the third at twelve, and the fourth at three. It was therefore between the hours of three and six in the morning that Jesus made this appearance to his disciples.

Walking on the sea.] This suspending the laws of gravitation was a proper manifestation of unlimited power. Jesus did this by his own power; therefore Jesus showed forth his Godhead.

Verse 26. It is a spirit] That the spirits of the dead might, and did appear, was a doctrine held by the greatest and holiest of men that ever existed; and a doctrine which the cavillers, free-thinkers, and bound-thinkers, of different ages, have never been able to disprove.

Verse 27. It is I; be not afraid.] Nothing but this voice of Christ could, in such circumstances, have given courage and comfort to his disciples: those who are grievously tossed with difficulties and temptations, require a similar manifestation of his power and goodness.

Verse 28. Bid me come unto thee on the water] A weak faith is always wishing for signs and miracles. To take Christ at his word, argues not only the perfection of faith, but also the highest exercise of sound reason.

Verse 29. Peter—walked on the water] However impossible the thing commanded by Christ may appear, it is certain he will give power to accomplish it to those who receive his word by faith; but we must take care never to put Christ's power to the proof for the gratification of a vain curiosity; or even for the strengthening of our faith, when the ordinary means for doing that are within our reach.

Verse 30. When he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid] It was by faith in the power of Christ he was upheld; when that faith failed, by which the laws of gravitation were suspended, no wonder that those laws returned to their wonted action, and that he began to sink. It was 31 And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?

32 And when they were come into the ship, the wind ceased.

33 Then they that were in the ship came and worshipped him, saying, Of a truth thou art the Son of God.

* Ps. ii. 7. Mark i. 1. Ch. xvi. 16. xxvi. 63. Luke iv. 41. John i. 49. vi. 69. xi. 27. Acts viii. 37. Rom. i. 4.—b Ma. k vi. 53.—

not the violence of the winds, nor the raging of the waves, which endangered his life, but his littleness of faith.

Verse 31. Jesus stretched forth his hand] Every moment we stand in need of Christ: while we stand, we are upheld by his power only; and when we are falling, or have fallen, we can be saved only by his mercy.

Verse 32. The wind ceased.] Jesus is the Prince of Peace, and all is peace and calm where he condescends to enter and abide.

Verse 33. Thou art the Son of God.] It is probable that these words were spoken either by the sailors or passengers, and not by the disciples. It would have been a strange thing indeed, if the disciples, after all the miracles they had seen Jesus work, after their having left all to follow him, &c., 34 And when they were gone over, they came into the land of Gennesaret.

35 And when the men of that place had knowledge of him, they sent out into all that country round about, and brought unto him all that were diseased; were only now persuaded that he was the promised Messiah. Verse 35. The men of that place had knowledge of him] i. e., They knew him again.

36 And besought him that they might only touch the hem of his garment: and as many as touched were made perfectly whole.

They brought unto him all that were diseased] And Jesus received and healed every man and woman of them. And is not the soul, in the sight of God, of more value than the body? and will he withhold his healing power from the former, and grant it so freely to the latter? This cannot be.

Verse 36. That they might only touch the hem of his garment] What mighty influence must the grace and Spirit of Christ have in the soul, when even the border or hem of his garment produced such wonders in the bodies of those who touched it!

CHAPTER XV.

The Pharisees accuse the disciples of eating with unwashed hands, 1, 2. Our Lord answers, and convicts them of gross hypocrisy, 3-9. Teaches the people and the disciples what it is that renders men unclean, 10-20. Heals the daughter of a Canaanish woman, 21-28. Heals many diseased people on a mountain of Galilee, 29-31. With seven loaves, and a few little fishes, he feeds 4,000 men, besides women and children, 32-38. Having dismissed the multitudes, he comes to the coast of Magdala, 39.

THEN came to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem, saying,

2 Why do thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands when they eat bread.

3 But he answered and said unto them, Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition?

4 For God commanded, saying, Honour thy father and mother: and, He that curseth father or mother, let him die the death.

Verse 1. The scribes and Pharisees—of Jerusalem] Our Lord was now in Galilee, chap. xiv. 34.

Verse 2. Elders] Rulers and magistrates among the Jews.

For they wash not their hands] What frivolous nonsense! These Pharisees had nothing which their malice could fasten on in the conduct or doctrine of our blessed Lord and his disciples, and therefore they must dispute about washing of hands! All sorts of Pharisees are troublesome people in religious society; and the reason is, they take more pleasure in blaming others than in amending themselves.

The tradition of the elders] The word tradition, has occupied a most distinguished place, both in the Jewish and Christian Church. Man is ever fond of mending the work of his Maker; and hence he has been led to put his finishing hand even to Divine revelation! This supplementary matter has been called tradition, from trado, to deliver, especially from one to another;—to hand down. Among the Jews, TRADITION signifies what is also called the oral law, which they distinguish from the written law: this last contains the Mosaic precepts, as found in the Pentateuch;

5 But ye say, Whosoever shall say to his father or his mother, It is a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me;

6 And honour not his father or his mother, he shall be free. Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition.

7 Ye hypocrites, well did Esaias prophesy of you, saying,

8 This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me.

* Mark vii. 11, 12. Prov. xx. 25. Ch. xxiii. 16, 18.—s Mark vii. 6.—b Isa. xxix. 13. Ezek. xxxiii. 31.

the former, the traditions of the elders, i. e., traditions, or doctrines, that had been successively handed down from Moses through every generation, but not committed to writing.

They wash not their hands] On washing of hands, before and after meat, the Jews laid great stress: they considered eating with unwashed hands to be no ordinary crime.

Verse 3. Why do ye—transgress the commandment] Ye accuse my disciples of transgressing the traditions of the elders—I accuse you of transgressing the commands of God, and that too in favour of your own tradition; thus preferring the inventions of men to the positive precepts of God.

Verse 4. Honour thy father and mother] This word was taken in great latitude of meaning among the Jews: it not only meant respect and submission, but also to take care of a person, to nourish and support him, to enrich.

Verse 5. It is a gift] Korban, Mark vii. 11, an offering of approach; something consecrated to the service of God in the temple, by which a man had the privilege of approaching his Maker.

Verse 8. Their heart is far from me.] The true worship

9 But in vain they do worship me, * teaching, for doctrines, the commandments of men.

10 And he called the multitude, and said unto them, Hear, and understand:

11 Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man.

12 Then came his disciples, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Pharisees were offended, after they heard this saying?

13 But he answered and said, Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up.

14 Let them alone: * they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch.

15 Then answered Peter and said unto him, Declare unto us this parable.

16 And Jesus said, Are ye also yet without understanding?

* Isa. xxix. 13. Col. ii. 18-22. Tit. i. 14.—^b Mark vii. 14. —^c Acts x. 15. Rom. xiv. 14, 17, 20. 1 Tim. iv. 4. Tit. i. 15. —^d John xv. 2. 1 Cor. iii. 12, &c.—^e Isa. ix. 16. Mal. ii. 8. Ch.

of God consists in the union of the heart to him—where this exists not, a particle of the spirit of devotion cannot be found.

Verse 9. In vain they do worship me, &c. By the traditions of the elders, not only the word of God was perverted, but his worship also was greatly corrupted. But the Jews were not the only people who have acted thus: whole Christian churches, as well as sects and parties, have acted in the same way. Men must not mould the worship of God according to their fancy—it is not what they think will do—is proper, innocent, &c., but what God himself has prescribed, that he will acknowledge as his worship. However sincere a man may be in a worship of his own invention, or of man's commandment, yet it profits him nothing.

Verse 10. Hear and understand A most important command. Hear—make it a point of conscience to attend to the ministry of the word. Understand—be not satisfied with attending places of public worship merely; see that the teaching be of God, and that you lay it to heart.

Verse 11. Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth If, in eating with unwashed hands, any particles of dust, &c., cleaving to the hands, might happen to be taken into the mouth with the food, this did not defile, did not constitute a man a sinner.

That which cometh out of the mouth That is, what springs from a corrupt unregenerate heart—a perverse will and impure passions—these defile, i. e., make him a sinner.

Verse 12. The Pharisees were offended None so liable to take offence as formalists and hypocrites, when you attempt to take away the false props from the one, and question the sincerity of the other. Besides, a Pharisee must never be suspected of ignorance, for they are the men, and wisdom must die with them!

Verse 13. Every plant Every plantation. This gives a different turn to the text. The Pharisees, as a religious body, were now a plantation of trees, which God did not plant, water, nor own; therefore, they should be rooted up, not left to wither and die, but the fellers, and those who root up (the Roman armies), should come against and destroy them, and the Christian Church was to be planted in their place. [It is better to adopt the ordinary version. The "plant" is the doctrine of the Pharisees.]

Verse 14. Let them alone The whole connexion of the place evidently proves that our blessed Lord meant, give them up, have no kind of religious connexion with them, and the strong reason for which he immediately adds, because they are blind leaders. This passage does not at all mean that blind leaders should not be pointed out to the people, that they may avoid being deceived by them; for this our Lord does frequently, and warns his disciples, and the people in general, against all such false teachers as the Pharisees were.

Probably the words may be understood as a sort of proverbial expression for—Don't mind them; pay no regard to them—"They are altogether unworthy of notice."

17 Do not ye yet understand, that whatsoever entereth in at the mouth, goeth into the belly, and is cast out into the draught?

18 But those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart; and they defile the man.

19 For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies:

20 These are the things which defile a man: but to eat with unwashed hands defileth not a man.

21 Then Jesus went thence, and departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon.

22 And, behold, a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts, and cried unto him, saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil.

23 But he answered her not a word. And his disciples came and besought him, saying, Send her away; for she crieth after us.

And if the blind lead the blind This was so self-evident a case, that an apter parallel could not be found—if the blind lead the blind, both must fall into the ditch. Like priests, like people. If the minister be ignorant, he cannot teach what he does not know; and the people cannot become wise unto salvation under such a ministry—he is ignorant and wicked, and they are profligate.

Verse 15. Declare unto us this parable The true knowledge of the spirit of the gospel is a thing more uncommon than we imagine, among the generality of Christians, and even of the learned.

Verse 17. Cast out into the draught Diodati translates it properly, nella latrina, into the privy.

Verse 19. Out of the heart In the heart of an unregenerate man, the principles and seeds of all sin are found. And iniquity is always conceived in the heart before it be spoken or acted. Is there any hope that a man can abstain from outward sin till his heart, that abominable fountain of corruption, be thoroughly cleansed? I trow not.

Evil thoughts Wicked dialogues—for in all evil surmises the heart holds a conversation, or dialogue, with itself.

Blasphemies The verb when applied to men, signifies to speak INJURIOUSLY of their persons, characters, &c., and, when applied to God, it means to speak IMPIOUSLY of his nature, works, &c.

Verse 20. These—defile a man Our Lord's argument is very plain. What goes into the mouth descends into the stomach and other intestines; part is retained for the nourishment of the body, and part is ejected, as being improper to afford nourishment. Nothing of this kind defiles the soul, because it does not enter into it; but the evil principles that are in it, producing evil thoughts, murders, &c., these defile the soul, because they have their seat and operation in it.

Verse 21. Departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon Towards the coasts or confines. Tyre and Sidon are usually joined together, principally because they are but a few miles distant from each other.

Verse 22. A woman of Canaan Matthew gives her this name because of the people from whom she sprung—the descendants of Canaan, Judg. i. 81, 82 but Mark calls her a Syrophenician, because of the country where she dwelt.

Have mercy on me, &c. How proper is this prayer for a penitent! there are many excellencies contained in it; 1. It is short; 2. humble; 3. full of faith; 4. fervent; 5. modest; 6. respectful; 7. rational; 8. relying only on the mercy of God; 9. preserving.

Son of David An essential character of the true Messiah.

Verse 23. He answered her not a word Seemed to take time to consider her request, and to give her the opportunity of exercising her faith, and manifesting her fervour.

Verse 24. I am not sent but unto the lost sheep By the divine appointment, I am come to preach the Gospel to the Jews only.

Verse 26. The children's bread The salvation provided for the Jews, who were termed the children of the kingdom.

24 But he answered and said, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

25 Then came she and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me.

26 But he answered and said, It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to ^b dogs.

27 And she said, Truth, Lord: yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their masters' table.

28 Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

29 ^c And Jesus departed from thence, and came nigh ^d unto the sea of Galilee; and went up into a mountain, and sat down there.

30 ^e And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet; and he healed them:

31 Inasmuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see: and they glorified the God of Israel.

And cast it to the little dogs—to the curs; such the Gentiles were reputed by the Jewish people, and our Lord uses that form of speech which was common among his countrymen. What terrible repulses! and yet she still perseveres!

Verse 27. Truth, Lord] Yes, Lord. This appears to be not so much an assent, as a bold reply to our Lord's reason for apparently rejecting her suit.

The little dogs share with the children, for they eat the crumbs which fall from their masters' table. I do not desire what is provided for these highly favoured children, only what they leave; a single exertion of thy almighty power, in the healing of my afflicted daughter, is all that I wish for; and this the highly favoured Jews can well spare, without lessening the provision made for themselves. Is not this the sense of this noble woman's reply?

Verse 28. O woman, great is thy faith] Her faith resembles a river which becomes enlarged by the dykes opposed to it, till at last it sweeps them entirely away with it.

Her daughter was made whole] Persevering faith and prayer are next to omnipotent. No person can thus pray and believe, without receiving all his soul requires. This is one of the finest lessons in the book of God for a penitent or for a discouraged believer.

Verse 29. Went up into a mountain] THE mountain; some particular mountain which he was accustomed to frequent.

Verse 30. Those that were—maimed] Mr. Wakefield is fully of opinion that this means those who had lost a limb, and brings an incontestable proof from Matth. xviii. 8. Mark ix. 43. "If thy hand cause thee to offend, cut it off; it is better 32 ' Then Jesus called his disciples unto him, and said, I have compassion on the multitude, because they continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat: and I will not send them away fasting, lest they faint in the way.

33 ^f And his disciples say unto him, Whence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, as to fill so great a multitude?

34 And Jesus saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven, and a few little fishes.

35 And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the ground.

36 And ^h he took the seven loaves and the fishes, and ⁱ gave thanks, and brake them, and gave to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

for thee to enter into life WITHOUT A LIMB, than having thy two hands, to go away into hell." What an astonishing manifestation of omnipotent and creative energy must the reproduction of a hand, foot, &c., be at the word or touch of Jesus! [But there is no reason for attaching this sense to the original word here.]

Verse 31. The multitude wondered] And well they might, when they had such proofs of the miraculous power and love of God before their eyes.

Verse 33. Whence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, &c.] Human foresight, even in the followers of Christ, is very short. In a thousand instances, if we supply not its deficiency by faith, we shall be always embarrassed, and often miserable. This world is a desert, where nothing can be found to satisfy the soul of man, but the salvation which Christ has procured.

Verse 37. They did all eat, and were filled] They were satisfied. The husks of worldly pleasures may fill the man, but cannot satisfy the soul.

Verse 38. Four thousand] Let the poor learn from these miracles to trust in God for support. Whatever his ordinary Providence denies, his miraculous power will supply.

Verse 39. He sent away the multitude] But not before he had instructed their souls, and fed and healed their bodies.

The coasts of Magdala.] In the parallel place, Mark viii. 10, this place is called Dalmanutha. Magdala, variously pronounced, seems to have been the place or country; Dalmanutha, the chief town or capital.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Pharisees insidiously require our Lord to give them a sign, 1. They are severely rebuked for their hypocrisy and wickedness, 2-5. The disciples are cautioned to beware of them and their destructive doctrine, 6-12. The different opinions formed by the people of Christ, 13, 14. Peter's confession, and our Lord's discourse on it, 15-20. He foretells his sufferings, and reproves Peter, 21-23. Teaches the necessity of self-denial, and shows the reasons on which it is founded, 24-26. Speaks of a future judgment, 27. And promises the speedy opening of the glory of his own kingdom on earth, 28.

THE Pharisees also with the Sadducees came, and tempting, desired him that he would shew them ^a a sign from heaven.

2 He answered and said unto them, When it is evening, ye say, ^c It will be fair weather: for the sky is red.

3 And in the morning, It will be foul weather to day: for the sky is red and lowring. ^d O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?

4 ^e A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas. And he left them, and departed.

5 And ^f when his disciples were come to the other side, they had forgotten to take bread.

6 Then Jesus said unto them, ^g Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees.

7 And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is because we have taken no bread.

8 Which, when Jesus perceived, he said unto them, O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves, because ye have brought no bread?

9 ^h Do ye not yet understand, neither remember the five loaves of the five thousand, and how many baskets ye took up?

Verse 1. The Pharisees also with the Sadducees] A short account of these has already given in a note on ch. iii. 7. Shew them a sign]. These sects, however opposed among themselves, most cordially unite in their opposition to Christ and his truth.

Tempting—him] Feigning a desire to have his doctrine fully proved to them, that they might credit it, and become his disciples; but having no other design than to betray and ruin him.

Verse 2. When it is evening] There are certain signs of fair and foul weather, which ye are in the constant habit of observing, and which do not fail.—The signs of the times: the doctrine which I preach, and the miracles which I work among you, are as sure signs that the day-spring from on high has visited you for your salvation.

Verse 3. The sky is red and lowring.] The signs of fair and foul weather were observed in a similar manner among the Romans, and indeed among most other people.

Verse 4. Wicked and adulterous generation] Our blessed Lord had already wrought miracles sufficient to demonstrate both his divine mission and his divinity; only one was further necessary to take away the scandal of his cross and death, to fulfil the Scriptures, and to establish the Christian religion; and that was, his resurrection from the dead, which, he here states, was typified in the case of Jonas.

Verse 5. Come to the other side] Viz., the coast of Bethsaida, by which our Lord passed, going to Cæsarea, for he was now on his journey thither.

Verse 6. Beware of the leaven] Bad doctrines act in the soul as leaven does in meal; they assimilate the whole spirit to their own nature. A man's particular creed has a greater influence on his tempers and conduct than most are aware of. Pride, hypocrisy, and worldly-mindedness, which constituted the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees, ruin the major part of the world.

Verse 7. They reasoned] For the term leaven was very rarely used among the Jews to signify doctrine, and therefore the disciples did not immediately apprehend his meaning.

Verse 8. O ye of little faith] There are degrees in faith, as well as in the other graces of the Spirit. Little faith may be the seed of great faith, and therefore is not to be despised.

Verses 9 and 10. Do ye not yet understand—the five loaves—neither the seven] Though men quickly perceive their 11 How is it that ye do not understand that I spake it not to you concerning bread, that ye should beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees?

12 Then understood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees.

13 When Jesus came into the coasts of Cæsarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, ^j Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?

bodily wants, and are querulous enough till they get them supplied, yet they as quickly forget the mercy which they have received; and thus God gets few returns of gratitude for his kindness.

Verse 11. How is it that ye do not understand] How deep and ruinous must our ignorance be, if God did not give line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little!

Verse 13. Cæsarea Philippi] A city, in the tribes of Naphtali, near to mount Libanus, in the province of Iturea. Its ancient name was Dan, Gen. xiv. 14; afterwards called Laïs, Judg. xviii. 7. But Philip the tetrarch, having rebuilt and beautified it, gave it the name of Cæsarea, in honour of Tiberius Cæsar, the reigning emperor; but to distinguish it from another Cæsarea, which was on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, and to perpetuate the fame of him who rebuilt it, it was called Cæsarea Philippi, or Cæsarea of Philip.

When Jesus came] When Jesus was coming. Mark expressly mentions that it happened in the way to Cæsarea Philippi, chap. viii. 27, and he is Matthew's best interpreter.

Whom do men say] He asked his disciples this question to have the opportunity, in getting an express declaration of their faith from themselves, to confirm and strengthen them in it: but see on Luke ix. 20. Some, John the Baptist, &c. By this and other passages we may learn, that the Pharisaic doctrine of the Metempsychosis, or transmigration of souls, was pretty general; for it was upon this ground that they believed that the soul of the Baptist, or of Elijah, Jeremias, or some of the prophets, had come to a new life, in the body of Jesus.

Verse 16. Thou art the Christ, the son of the living God] Every word here is emphatic—a most concise, and yet comprehensive, confession of faith.

The Christ, or Messiah, points out his divinity, and shows his office; the Son—designates his person: on this account it is that both are joined together so frequently in the New Covenant. Of the living God—literally, of the Living One.

Verse 17. Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona] Or Simon, son of Jonas; so Bar-jona should be translated, and so it is rendered by our Lord, John i. 43. Flesh and blood—i. e., MAN:—no human being hath revealed this. Is it not evident, from our Lord's observation, that it requires an express revelation of God in a man's soul, to give him a saving acquaintance with Jesus Christ; and that not even the bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

20 *Then charged he his disciples that they should tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ.

21 From that time forth began Jesus ^b to shew unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders, and chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day.

22 Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, ^c Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee.

23 But he turned, and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, ^d Satan: * thou art an offence unto me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

miracles of our Lord, wrought before the eyes, will effect this? The darkness must be removed from the heart by the Holy Spirit, before a man can become wise unto salvation.

Verse 18. Thou art Peter] This was the same as if he had said, I acknowledge thee for one of my disciples—for this name was given him by our Lord when he first called him to the Apostleship. See John i. 42.

Peter, signifies a stone, or fragment of a rock: and our Lord, whose constant custom it was to rise to heavenly things, through the medium of earthly, takes occasion from the name, the metaphorical meaning of which was strength and stability, to point out the solidity of the confession, and the stability of that cause which should be founded on THE CHRIST, the SON OF THE LIVING GOD.

Upon this very rock—this true confession of thine—that I am THE MESSIAH, that am come to reveal and communicate the LIVING GOD, that the dead, lost world may be saved—upon this very rock, myself, thus confessed (alluding probably to Ps. cxviii. 22, and to Isa. xxviii. 16) will build my Church, my assembly, or congregation, i. e., of persons who are made partakers of this precious faith. That Peter is not designed in our Lord's words, must be evident to all who are not blinded by prejudice. Peter was only one of the builders in this sacred edifice, Eph. ii. 20, who, himself tells us, (with the rest of the believers) was built on this living foundation stone: 1 Pet. ii. 4, 5; therefore Jesus Christ did not say, on thee, Peter, will I build my church, but changes immediately the expression, and says, upon that very rock, to show that he neither addressed Peter, nor any other of the Apostles. So, the supremacy of Peter, and the infallibility of the Church of Rome, must be sought in some other Scripture, for they certainly are not to be found in this.

Verse 19. The keys of the kingdom] By the kingdom of heaven, we may consider the true Church, that house of God, to be meant; and by the keys, the power of admitting into that house, or preventing any improper person from coming in. In other words, the doctrine of salvation, and the full declaration of the way in which God will save sinners; and who they are that shall be finally excluded from heaven: and on what account. This prophetic declaration of our Lord was literally fulfilled to Peter, as he was made the first instrument of opening, i. e., preaching the doctrines of the kingdom of heaven to the Jews, Acts ii. 41; and to the Gentiles, Acts x. 44–27, xi. 1, &c.

Whatever thou shalt bind on earth] This mode of expression was frequent among the Jews: they considered that everything that was done upon earth, according to the order of God, was at the same time done in heaven: hence they were accustomed to say, that when the priest, on the day of atonement, offered the two goats upon earth, the same were offered in heaven. These words will receive considerable light from Lev. xiii. 8 and 23. So the disciples of our Lord, from having the keys, i. e., the true knowledge of the doctrine of the kingdom of heaven, should be able, at 24 'Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

25 For * whosoever will save his life, shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake, shall find it.

26 For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or ^b what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

27 For 'the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father ^c with his angels; ^d and then he shall reward every man according to his works.

28 Verily I say unto you, ^e There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom.

all times, to distinguish between the clean and the unclean, and pronounce infallible judgment; and this binding and loosing, or pronouncing fit or unfit for fellowship with the members of Christ, being always according to the doctrine of the gospel of God, should be considered as proceeding immediately from heaven, and consequently as divinely ratified.

That binding and loosing were terms in frequent use among the Jews, and that they meant bidding and forbidding, granting and refusing, declaring lawful or unlawful, &c., is fully proved by Dr Lightfoot.

To attempt to press the words into the service long assigned them by the Church of Rome, would, to use the words of Dr. Lightfoot, be "a matter of laughter or of madness." No church can use them in the sense thus imposed upon them, which was done merely to serve secular ends; and least of all can that very church that thus abuses them.

The Christ.] The common text has Jesus the Christ; but the word Jesus is omitted by fifty-four MSS., some of which are not only of the greatest authority, but also of the greatest antiquity. I believe the insertion of it here to be wholly superfluous and improper; for the question is, Who is this Jesus? Peter answers, He is the Messiah. The word Jesus is obviously improper. Jesus here says, Tell no man that I am the Christ, i. e., the MESSIAH; as the time for his full manifestation was not yet come; and he was not willing to provoke the Jewish malice, or the Roman envy, by permitting his disciples to announce him as the Saviour of a lost world. He chose rather to wait, till his resurrection and ascension had set this truth in the clearest light, and beyond the power of successful contradiction.

Verse 21. From that time forth began Jesus, &c.] Before this time our Lord had only spoken of his death in a vague and obscure manner, see chap. xii. 40, because he would not afflict his disciples with this matter sooner than necessity required; but now, as the time of his crucifixion drew nigh, he spoke of his sufferings and death in the most express and clear terms.

Verse 22. Then Peter took him] Took him up. Suddenly interrupted him, as it were calling him to order. A man like Peter, who is of an impetuous spirit, and decides, without consideration, upon every subject, must of necessity be often in the wrong.

Be it far from thee, Lord] Be merciful to thyself, Lord. See the margin. So I think the original should be rendered. How many Peters are there now in the world, who are in effect saying, this cannot be done unto thee—thou didst not give thy life for the sin of the world—it would be injustice to cause the innocent to suffer thus for the guilty. But what saith God? His soul shall be made an offering for sin—he shall taste death for every man—the iniquities of us all were laid upon him. Glorious truth!

Verse 23. Get thee behind me, Satan] Get behind me, thou adversary. This is the proper translation of the Hebrew word Satan, from which the Greek word is taken. Our blessed Lord certainly never designed that men should believe he called Peter, DEVIL, because he, through erring affection, had wished him to avoid that death which he predicted to himself.

Thou art an offence unto me] Thou art a stumbling-block in my way, to impede me in the accomplishment of the great design.

Thou savourest not] That is, dost not relish, or, thou dost not understand or discern the things of God—thou art wholly taken up with the vain thought that my kingdom is of this world. He who opposes the doctrine of the atonement, is an adversary and offence to Christ, though he be as sincere in his profession as Peter himself was.

Verse 24. Will come after me] i. e., to be my disciple. This discourse was intended to show Peter and the rest of the disciples the nature of his kingdom; and that the honour that cometh from the world was not to be expected by those who followed Christ.

Let him deny himself] May well be interpreted, Let him deny, or renounce, himself fully—in all respects—perseveringly. A man's self is to him the prime cause of most of his miseries.

Verse 25. For whosoever will save his life] That is, shall wish to save his life—at the expense of his conscience, and casting aside the cross, he shall lose it—the very evil he wished to avoid shall overtake him; and he shall lose his soul into the bargain.

Verse 26. Lose his own soul] Or, lose his life. On what authority many have translated the word, in the 25th verse, life, and in this verse, soul, I know not, but am certain it means life in both places. If a man should gain the whole world, its riches, honours, and pleasures, and lose his life, what would all these profit him, seeing they can only be enjoyed during life?

Verse 27. For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father] This seems to refer to Dan. vii. 13, 14. This was the glorious Mediatorial kingdom which Jesus Christ was now about to set up, by the destruction of the Jewish nation and polity, and the diffusion of his Gospel through the whole world. It is very likely that the words do not apply to the final judgment, to which they are generally referred; but to the wonderful display of God's grace and power after the day of Pentecost.

Verse 28. There be some—which shall not taste of death] This verse seems to confirm the above explanation, as our Lord evidently speaks of the establishment of the Christian Church after the day of Pentecost, and its final triumph after the destruction of the Jewish polity; as if he had said, "Some of you, my disciples, shall continue to live until these things take place."

CHAPTER XVII.

The transfiguration of Christ, 1-8. Christ's discourse with his disciples on the subject, 9-13. He heals a lunatic, 14-18. His discourse with his disciples on this subject also, 19-21. He foretells his own sufferings and death, 22, 23. He is required to pay tribute at Capernaum, 24-26; and provides the money by a miracle, 27.

AN D after six days, Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into a high mountain, apart.

2 And was transfigured before them: ^a and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.

3 And, behold, there appeared unto them ^c Moses and Elias talking with him.

^aMark ix. 2. Luke ix. 28.—^bRev. i. 16. Dan. x. 6.—^cLuke ix. 30. Rev. xi. 3.—^dLuke ix. 33.—^e2 Pet. i. 17.—^fCh. iii. 17.

Verse 1. After six days] Mark ix. 2, has the same number; but Luke says, ix. 28, after eight days. The reason of this difference seems to be the following: Matthew and Mark reckon the days from that mentioned in the preceding chapter, to that mentioned in this; Luke includes both days, as well as the six intermediate; hence, the one makes eight, the other six, without any contradiction.

Peter, James, and John] He chose those that they might be witnesses of his Transfiguration: two or three witnesses being required by the Scripture to substantiate any fact. The same three were made witnesses of his agony in the garden, chap. xvi. 37.

A high mountain] This was one of the mountains of Galilee; but whether Mount Tabor or not, is uncertain. Some think it was Mount Hermon.

Verse 2. Was transfigured] That fulness of the Godhead, which dwelt bodily in Christ, now shone forth through the human nature, and manifested to his disciples not only that Divinity which Peter had before confessed, chap. xvi. 16, but also the glorious resurrection body, in which they should exist in the presence of God to eternity.

Verse 3. Moses and Elias] Elijah came from heaven in the same body which he had upon earth, for he was translated, and did not see death, 2 Kings ii. 11. And the body of Moses was probably raised again, as a pledge of the 4 Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; ^a one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

5 ^b While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, 'This is my beloved Son, ^c in whom I am well pleased; ^d hear ye him.

resurrection; and as Christ is to come to judge the quick and the dead, for we shall not all die, but all shall be changed, 1 Cor. xv. 51, he probably gave the full representation of this in the person of Moses, who died, and was thus raised to life (or appeared now as he shall appear when raised from the dead in the last day), and in the person of Elijah, who never tasted death. Both their bodies exhibit the same appearance, to show that the bodies of glorified saints are the same, whether the person had been translated, or whether he had died.

We may conceive that the Law in the person of Moses, the great Jewish legislator, and the Prophets in the person of Elijah, the chief of the prophets, came now to do homage to Jesus Christ, and to render up their authority into his hands; as he was the end of the Law, and the grand subject of the predictions of the prophets. This appears more particularly from what St. Luke says, chap. ix. 31, that Moses and Elijah conversed with our Lord on his death, which he was about to accomplish (to fulfil), because in it, all the rites, ceremonies, and sacrifices of the Law, as well as the predictions of the prophets, were fulfilled.

Verse 4. Peter said—Let us make, &c.] That is, when he saw Moses and Elijah ready to depart from the mount, Luke ix. 33, he wished to detain them, that he might always enjoy their company with that of his Lord and Master, still 6 * And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face, and were sore afraid.

7 And Jesus came and ^b touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid.

8 And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.

9 And as they came down from the mountain, ^c Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead.

10 And his disciples asked him, saying, ^d Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come?

11 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and ^e restore all things.

12 ^f But I say unto you, That Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but ^g have done unto him whatsoever they listed: likewise ^h shall also the Son of man suffer of them.

13 ⁱ Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist.

*2 Pet. i. 18.—^b Dan. viii. 18. ix. 21. x. 10, 18.—^c Ch. xvi. 20, Mark viii. 30. ix. 9.—^d Mal. iv. 5. Ob. xi. 14. Mark ix. 11.—^e Mal. iv. 6. Luke i. 16, 17. Acts iii. 21.—^f h. xi. 14. Mark ix. 12, 13.—^g Ch. xiv. 3, 10.—^h Ch. xvi. 21.—ⁱ Ch. xi. 14.

supposing that Christ would set up a temporal kingdom upon earth.

Verse 5. A bright cloud overshadowed them] As a bright cloud, or a cloud of light, could not overshadow, or cast any kind of shade, this should be translated, surrounded them. A cloud was frequently the symbol of the Divine presence; but such a cloud had always something very remarkable in its appearance. But it was generally in a thick, dark cloud, that God manifested himself under the Law; see Exod. xix. 9, and xx. 21. This might be designed as emblematical of the Old Covenant, which was but the shadow of the good things which were to come, Heb. x. 1; and the cloud of light mentioned here, the emblem of that glorious display of God, in his Gospel, by which life and immortality were brought to light, 2 Tim. i. 10.

This is my beloved son] God adds his testimony of approbation to what was spoken of the sufferings of Christ by Moses and Elijah; thus showing that the sacrificial economy of the Old Covenant was in itself of no worth, but as it referred to the grand atonement which Jesus was about to make; therefore he says, In him HAVE I delighted, intimating that it was in him alone, as typified by those sacrifices, that he HAD delighted through the whole course of the legal administration; and that it was only in reference to the death of his Son that he accepted the offerings and oblations made to him under the Old Covenant. Hear HIM.

This Transfiguration must have greatly confirmed the disciples in the belief of a Future State, and in the doctrine of the Resurrection; they saw Moses and Elijah still existing, though the former had been gathered to his fathers upwards of 1400 years, and the latter had been translated nearly 900.

Verse 6. Fell on their face] Dismayed by the voice, and dazzled by the glory of the cloud.

Verse 7. Jesus came and touched them] Exactly parallel to this account is Dan. viii. 18. It is very likely that this Transfiguration took place in the night, which was a more proper season to show forth its glory than the day time, in which a part of the splendour must necessarily be lost by the presence of the solar light.

Verse 9. Tell the vision to no man] As this Transfiguration was intended to show forth the final abolition of the whole Ceremonial Law, it was necessary that a matter which could not fail to irritate the Jewish rulers and people should be kept secret, till Jesus had accomplished vision and prophecy by his death and resurrection.

The whole of this emblematic transaction appears to me to be intended to prove, 1st. The reality of the world of spirits, and the immortality of the soul. 2nd. The resurrection of the body, and the doctrine of future rewards and punishments, see chap. xvi. 27. 3rd. that should follow, 4th. The establishment of the mild, light-bringing, and life-giving Gospel of the Son of God. And 5th. That as the Old Jewish Covenant and Mediatorship had ended, Jesus was now to be considered as the sole Teacher, the only availing offering for sin, and the grand Mediator between God and man.

Verse 10. Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come?] As the disciples saw that Elijah returned to heaven, knowing the tradition of the elders, and the prophecy on which the tradition was founded, Mal. iv. 5, 6, it was natural enough for them to inquire what the meaning of the tradition, and the intention of the prophecy, were.

Verse 11. Elias—shall first come, and restore all things.] Or will reform; this word our Lord quotes from the Septuagint; who render the Hebrew by, who will convert, or restore, the heart of the father to the son. We are not therefore to understand the version of the Septuagint quoted by our Lord in any other sense than the Hebrew will allow. No fanciful restoration of all men, devils, and damned spirits, is spoken of as either being done, or begun, by the ministry of John; but merely that he should preach a doctrine tending to universal reformation of manners, and should be greatly successful; see Matt. iii. 1-7, and especially Luke iii. 3-15, where we find that a general reformation had taken place, 1, among the common people; 2, among the tax-gatherers; and 3, among the soldiers.

Verse 12. Knew him not] Or, They have not acknowledged him. That is, the Jewish rulers have not acknowledged him, did not receive him as the forerunner of the Messiah.

Verse 14. When they were come to the multitude] It appears that a congregation had been collected during our Lord's stay on the mount: how great must have been the desire of those people to hear the words of Christ! The assembly is self-collected, and no delay on the preacher's side discourages them—they continue to wait for him.

Kneeling down to him] Or falling at his knees. The ancients consecrated the EAR to Memory; the FOREHEAD to Genius; the RIGHT HAND to Faith; and the KNEES to Mercy: hence those who entreated favour, fell at, and touched the knees, of the person whose kindness they supplicated.

Verse 15. My son—is lunatic] One who was most affected with his disorder at the change and full of the moon. But this lunacy was occasioned by a demon, see ver. 18, and Mark ix. 17; Luke ix. 38.

Falleth oftentimes into the fire, and oft into the water.] Those who are under the influence of the devil are often driven to extremes in everything. Satan takes advantage of our natural temper, state of health, and outward circumstances, to plague and ruin our souls.

Verse 16. Thy disciples—could not cure him.] No wonder, when the cure must be effected by supernatural agency, and this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you.

they had not faith enough to interest the power of God in their behalf, ver. 20.

Verse 18. Jesus rebuked the devil] Deprived him of all power to torment the child; and obliged him to abandon his present usurped habitation. There are some souls whose cure God reserves to himself alone, and to whom all the applications of his ministers appear to be utterly ineffectual. He sometimes does all without them, that they may know they can never do any good without him.

Verse 19. Why could not we cast him out ?] They were confounded at their want of success—but not at their want of faith, which was the cause of their miscarriage!

Verse 20. Because of your unbelief] The disciples had some faith, but not enough—they believed, but not fully.

As a grain of mustard seed] Some eminent critics think this is a proverbial expression, intimating a GREAT DEGREE of faith, because removing mountains, which St. Paul, 1 Cor. xiii. 2, attributes to ALL FAITH; i. e., the greatest possible degree of faith, is attributed here, by our Lord, to that faith which is as a grain of mustard seed. No doubt our Lord means a thriving and increasing faith; which, like the grain of mustard seed, from being the least of seeds, becomes the greatest of all herbs, even a tree in whose branches the fowls of the air take shelter.

Verse 21. This kind goeth not out but by prayer, &c.] This kind, some apply to the faith which should be exercised on the occasion, which goeth not out, doth not exert itself, but by prayer and fasting; but this interpretation is, in my opinion, far from solid. I strongly suspect the passage to be an interpolation; but, if it be, it is very ancient, as Origen, Chrysostom, and others of the primitive Fathers, acknowledge it. But while I cannot account for the fact here alleged, that a certain class or genus of demons cannot be expelled but by prayer and fasting, while others may be ejected without them, I can give a sense to the passage which all my readers will easily understand: viz., that there are certain evil propensities in some persons, which pampering the flesh tends to nourish and strengthen; and that self-denial and fasting, accompanied by prayer to God, are the most likely means, not only to mortify such propensities, but also to destroy them.

and said, Doth not your master pay tribute?

25 He saith, Yes. And when he was come into the house, Jesus prevented him, saying, What thinkest thou, Simon? of whom do the kings of the earth ^d take custom or tribute? of their own children, or of strangers?

26 Peter saith unto him, Of strangers. Jesus saith unto him, Then are the children free.

27 Notwithstanding, ^e lest we should offend them, go thou to the sea, and cast an hook, and take up the fish that first cometh up; and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find ^f a piece of money: that take, and give unto them for me and thee.

Verse 22. The son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of men] The Son of man is about to be delivered into the hands, &c. The agency, in this case, should be referred to God, not to Judas, Acts iv. 27, 28, Verse 23. They were exceeding sorry.] While they submitted to the counsel of God, their affection for him caused them to feel exquisite distress.

Verse 24. They that received tribute] This was not a tax to be paid to the Roman government; but a tax for the support of the temple, Exod. xxx. 13. The word in the text, which is generally translated tribute—signifies the didrachma, or two drachms. This piece of money was about the value of two Attic drachms, each equal to fifteen pence of our money.

Verse 25. He saith, Yes.] From this reply of Peter, it is evident that our Lord customarily paid all taxes, tributes, &c., which were common among the people wherever he came.

Verse 26. Then are the children free.] As this money is levied for the support of that temple of which I am the Lord, then I am not obliged to pay the tax; and my disciples, like the priests that minister, should be exempted from the necessity of paying.

Verse 27. Lest we—offend them] Be a stumbling-block to the priests, or rulers of the Jews. This piece of money was equal in value to four drachms, or two shekels (five shillings of our money), and consequently was sufficient to pay the tribute for our Lord and Peter, which amounted to about half-a-crown each. If the stater was in the mouth or belly of the fish before, who can help admiring the wisdom of Christ, that discovered it there? If it was not before in the mouth of the fish, who can help admiring the power of Christ, that impelled the fish to go where the stater had been lost in the bottom of the sea, take it up, come towards the shore where Peter was fishing, and, with the stater in its mouth or stomach, catch hold of the hook that was to draw it out of the water? But suppose there was no stater there, which is as likely as otherwise, then Jesus created it for the purpose, and here his Omnipotence was shown; for to make a thing exist that did not exist before, is an act of unlimited power, however small the thing itself may be.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The disciples inquiring who should be greatest in Christ's kingdom, 1. He takes occasion to recommend humility, simplicity, and disinterestedness, 2-6. Warns them against offences, 7. Recommends mortification and self-denial, 8, 9. Charges them to avoid giving offence, 10, 11. Parable of him who had lost one sheep out of his flock consisting of one hundred, 12-14. How to deal with an offending brother, 15-18. A gracious promise to social prayer, 19, 20. How often an offending brother who expresses sorrow, and promises amendment, is to be forgiven, 21, 22. The parable of the king, who calls his servants to account, and finds one who owed him ten thousand talents, who, being unable to pay, and imploring mercy, is forgiven, 23-27. Of the same person, who treated his fellow servant unmercifully, who owed him but a small sum, 28-30. Of the punishment inflicted on this unmerciful servant, 31-35.

AT the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, ^b Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?

2 And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them,

3 And said, Verily I say unto you, ^e Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

4 ^d Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.

5 And ^e whoso shall receive one such little child in my name, receiveth me.

6 ^f But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea.

7 Woe unto the world because of offences! for ^g it must needs be that offences come; but ^h woe to that man by whom the offence cometh!

8 ⁱ Wherefore, if thy hand or thy foot offend thee cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire.

9 And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire.

10 Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven ^j their angels do always ^k behold the face of my Father which is in heaven.

11 ^l For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost.

12 ^m How think ye? if a man have a hundred

For it must needs be that offences come] For the coming of offences is unavoidable.

Woe to that man] He who gives the offence, and he who receives it, are both exposed to ruin.

Verse 10. One of these little ones] One of my simple, loving, humble disciples.

Their angels—always behold] Our Lord here not only alludes to, but, in my opinion, establishes the notion received by almost all nations, viz., That every person has a guardian angel; and that these have always access to God, to receive orders relative to the management of their charge. See Ps. xxxiv. 8; Job. i. 14.

Always behold the face] This is an allusion to the privilege granted by eastern monarchs to their chief favourites; a privilege which others were never permitted to enjoy. The seven princes of Media and Persia, who were the chief favourites and privy-counsellors of Ahasuerus, are said to see the king's face. Esth. i. 14; see also 2 Kings xxv. 19, and Jer. li. 25. Our Lord's words give us to understand that humble-hearted, child-like disciples, are objects of his peculiar care, and constant attention.

Verse 11. For the Son of man, &c.] This is added as a second reason, why no injury should be done to his followers.

That which was lost.] In Rev. ix. 11, Satan is called Apollyon, the destroyer, or him who lays waste. This name bears a near relation to that state in which our Lord tells us he finds all mankind,—lost, desolated, ruined. So it appears that Satan and men have the nearest affinity to each other—as the destroyer and the destroyed,—the desolator and the desolated,—the loser and the lost. But the Son of man came to save the lost! Glorious news!

Verse 12. Doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains] So our common translation reads the verse; others, Doth he not leave the ninety and nine UPON THE MOUNTAINS, and go, &c. This latter reading appears to me to be the best; because in Luke xv. 4, it is said, he leaveth the ninety and nine IN THE DESERT. The allusion, therefore, is to a shepherd feeding his sheep on the mountains, in the desert; not seeking the lost one ON the mountains.

Leaving the ninety and nine, and seeking the one strayed sheep :—This was a very common form of speech among the Jews, and includes no mystery, though there are some who imagine that our Lord refers to the angels who kept not their first estate, and that they are in number, to men, as NINETY are to ONE.

Verse 13. He rejoiceth more] It is justly observed by one, on this verse, that it is natural for a person to express unusual joy at the fortunate accomplishment of an unexpected event.

Verse 14. It is not the will of your Father] If any soul be finally lost, it is not because God's will or counsel was against its salvation, or that a proper provision had not been made for it; but that, though light came into the world, it preferred darkness to light, because of its attachment to its evil deeds.

Verse 1. Who is the greatest] Could these disciples have viewed the kingdom of Christ in any other light than that of a temporal one? Hence they wished to know whom he would make his prime minister—whom his general—whom his chief chancellor—whom supreme judge, &c., &c. From this inquiry we may learn that the disciples had no notion of Peter's supremacy; nor did they understand, as the Roman Catholics will have it, that Christ had constituted him their head, either by the conversation mentioned, chap. xvi. 18, 19, or by the act mentioned in the conclusion of the preceding chapter.

Verse 2. A little child] But this child could walk, for he called him to him.

Verse 3. Except ye be converted] Unless ye be saved from those prejudices which are at present so baneful to your nation (seeking a temporal and not a spiritual kingdom), unless ye be clothed with the spirit of humility, ye cannot enter into the spirit, design, and privileges of my spiritual and eternal kingdom. The name of this kingdom should put you in mind of its nature—1. The KING is heavenly; 2. His SUBJECTS are heavenly minded; 3. Their COUNTRY is heavenly, for they are strangers and pilgrims upon earth; 4. The GOVERNMENT of this kingdom is wholly spiritual and divine.

And become as little children] i. e., Be as truly without worldly ambition, and the lust of power, as little children are, who act among themselves as if all were equal.

Verse 4. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself] So great is the disparity between the kingdom of Christ and the kingdoms of the world, that there is no way of rising to honours in the former, but by humility of mind, and continual self-abasement.

The same is greatest] Thus our Lord shows them that they were all equal, and that there could be no superiority among them, but what must come from the deepest humility.

Verse 5. One such little child] As our Lord in the preceding verse considers a little child an emblem of a genuine disciple, so by the term in this verse he means a disciple only.

Verse 6. But whoso shall offend one of these little ones] Let those who act the part of the devil, in tempting others to sin, hear this declaration of our Lord, and tremble.

A millstone] An ass's millstone, because in ancient times, before the invention of wind and water mills, the stones were turned sometimes by slaves, but commonly by asses or mules.

Drowned in the depth of the sea.] It is supposed that in Syria, as well as in Greece, this mode of punishing criminals was practised; especially in cases of parricide, and when a person was devoted to destruction for the public safety, as in cases of plague, famine, &c.

Verse 7. Woe! Or, alas! It is the opinion of some eminent critics, that this word is ever used by our Lord to express sympathy and concern.

Because of offences] Scandals, stumbling-blocks, persecutions, &c.

sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray?

13 And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, He rejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray.

14 Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish.

15 Moreover *if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, ^bthou hast gained thy brother.

16 But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in ^cthe mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established.

17 And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as a ^dheathen man and a publican.

18 Verily I say unto you, *Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

19 'Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth, as touching any thing that they shall ask, ^eit shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven.

Verse 15. If thy brother] Any who is a member of the same religious society, sin against thee, 1. Go and reprove him alone—it may be in person; if that cannot be so well done, by thy messenger, or in writing (which in many cases is likely to be the most effectual). Observe, our Lord gives no liberty to omit this, or to exchange it for either of the following steps. If this do not succeed

Verse 16. 2. Take with thee one or two more] Men whom he esteems, who may then confirm and enforce what thou sayest; and afterwards, if need require, bear witness of what was spoken. If even this do not succeed, then, and not before,

Verse 17. 3. Tell it unto the church] Lay the whole matter before the congregation of Christian believers, in that place of which he is a member, or before the minister and elders, as the representatives of the Church or assembly. If all this avail not, then,

Let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican.] To whom thou art, as a Christian, to owe earnest and persevering good will, and acts of kindness; but have no religious communion with him, till, if he have been convicted, he acknowledge his fault. Whosoever follows this threefold rule, will seldom offend others, and never be offended himself.

—J. WESLEY.

Verse 18. Whatsoever ye shall bind, &c.] Whatever determinations ye make, in conformity to these directions for your conduct to an offending brother, will be accounted just, and ratified by the Lord. See on chap. xvi. 19.

Verse 19. If two of you shall agree] Symphonise, or harmonise. It is a metaphor taken from a number of musical instruments set to the same key, and playing the same tune: here, it means a perfect agreement of hearts, desires, wishes, and voices, of two or more persons praying to God. It also intimates that, as a number of musical instruments, skilfully played, in a good concert, are pleasing to the ears of men, so a number of persons united together in warm, earnest, cordial prayer, is highly pleasing in the sight and ears of the Lord. Now this conjoint prayer refers, in all probability, to the binding and loosing in the preceding verse; and thus we see what power faithful prayer has with God.

It shall be done for them] What an encouragement to pray! even to two, if there be no more disposed to join in this heavenly work.

Verse 20. For where two— are gathered together in my 20 For where ^atwo or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them.

21 Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? ^btill seven times?

22 Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times: ^cbut, Until seventy times seven.

23 Therefore is the kingdom of heaven likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants.

24 And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him ten thousand ^dtalents.

25 But forasmuch as he had not to pay, his lord commanded him ^eto be sold, and his wife, and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.

26 The servant therefore fell down, and ^fworshipped him, saying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

27 Then the lord of that servant was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt.

28 But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellow-servants, which owed him a hundred ^gpence: and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest.

vi. 14. Mark xi. 25. Col. iii. 13.—^aA talent is 750 ounces of silver, which, after five shillings the ounce, is 187l. 10s.—^b2 Kings iv. 1. Neh. v. 8.—^cOr, besought him.—^dThe Roman penny is the eighth part of an ounce, which, after five shillings the ounce, is sevenpence halfpenny, ch. xx. 2.

name] There are many sayings among the Jews almost exactly similar to this.

In my name] Seems to refer particularly to a public profession of Christ and his Gospel.

There am I in the midst] None but God could say these words, to say them with truth, because God alone is every where present, and these words refer to his omnipresence. Wherever—suppose millions of assemblies were collected in the same moment, in different places of the creation (which is a very possible case), this promise states that Jesus is in each of them. Can any, therefore, say these words, except that God who fills both heaven and earth? But Jesus says these words: ergo—Jesus is God.

Verse 21. Till seven times?] Though seven was a number of perfection among the Hebrews, yet it is evident that Peter uses it here in its plain literal sense, as our Lord's words sufficiently testify. It was a maxim among the Jews never to forgive more than three; Peter enlarges this charity more than one half; and our Lord makes even his enlargement septuple. See ver. 22.

Verse 22. Seventy times seven.] The sum seventy times seven makes four hundred and ninety. Now an offence, properly such, is that which is given wantonly, maliciously, and without ANY PROVOCATION. It is my opinion, that, let a man search ever so accurately, he will not find that he has received, during the whole course of his life, four hundred and ninety such offences. If the man who receives the offence has given any cause for it, in that case, the half of the offence, at least, towards his brother, ceases.

Verse 23. Therefore is the kingdom] In respect to sin, cruelty, and oppression, God will proceed in the kingdom of heaven (the dispensation of the Gospel) as he did in former times; and every person shall give an account of himself to God. Every sin is a debt contracted with the justice of God; men are all God's own servants; and the day is at hand in which their Master will settle accounts with them, inquire into their work, and pay them their wages. By servant, in the text, we are to understand a petty king, or tributary prince; for no hired servant could possibly owe such a sum as is here mentioned.

Verse 24. Ten thousand talents.] A myriad of talents, the highest number known in Greek arithmetical notation. An immense sum, which, if the silver talent be designed, amounts to 4,500,000 sterling; but if the gold talent be 29 And his fellow-servant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, 'Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

30 And he would not: ^b but went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the debt.

31 So when his fellow-servants saw what was done, they were very sorry, and came and told unto their lord all that was done.

32 Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave meant, which is by far the most likely, the amount is 67,500,000 sterling. The margin is incorrect.

Verse 25. He had not to pay] That is, not being able to pay. As there could not be the smallest probability that a servant, wholly dependent on his master, who was now absolutely insolvent, could ever pay a debt he had contracted of more than 67 millions!—so is it impossible for a sinner, infinitely indebted to Divine Justice, ever to pay a mite out the talent.

Commanded him to be sold—his wife—children, &c.] Our Lord here alludes to an ancient custom among the Hebrews, of selling a man and his family to make payment of contracted debts. See Exod. xxii. 8. Lev. xxv. 39, 47. 2 Kings iv. 1.

Verse 26. Fell down, and worshipped him] Crouched as a dog before him, with the greatest deference, submission, and anxiety.

Have patience with me] Be long-minded towards me—give me longer space.

The means which a sinner should use to be saved, are, 1. Deep humiliation of heart—he fell down. 2. Fervent prayer. 3. Confidence in the mercy of God—have patience. 4. A firm purpose to devote his soul and body to his Maker—I will pay thee all. A sinner may be said, according to the economy of grace, to pay all, when he brings the sacrifice of the Lord Jesus to the throne of justice, by faith; thus offering an equivalent for the pardon he seeks, and paying all he owes to divine justice, by presenting the blood of the Lamb.

Verse 27. Moved with compassion] Or with tender pity. This is the source of salvation to a lost world, the tender pity, the eternal mercy of God.

Verse 28. A hundred pence] Rather denarii. The denarius was a Roman coin, worth about sevenpence halfpenny English.

Took him by the throat] There is no word I am acquainted with, which so fully expresses the meaning of the original as the Anglo-Saxon term throtle: it signified (like these all that debt, because thou desiredst me: 33 Shouldest not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, even ^a as I had pity on thee?

34 And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the tormentors, ^d till he should pay all that was due unto him.

35 ^e So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts ^f forgive not every one his brother their trespasses.

the Greek), to half choke a person, by seizing his throat.

Verse 30. And he would not, &c.] To the unmerciful, God will show no mercy; this is an eternal purpose of the Lord, which never can be changed. God teaches us what to do to a fellow-sinner, by what HE does to us. Our fellow-servant's debt to us, and ours to God, are as one hundred denarii to ten thousand talents! When we humble ourselves before him, God freely forgives us all this mighty sum! And shall we exact from our brother recompence for the most trifling faults?

Verse 33. Shouldest not thou also have had compassion] Did it not become thee also? What a cutting reproach! It became ME to show mercy, when thou didst earnestly entreat me, because I am MERCIFUL. It became thee also to have shown mercy, because thou wert so deep in debt thyself, and hadst obtained mercy.

Verse 34. Delivered him to the tormentors] Not only continued captivity is here intended, but the tortures to be endured in it. Before, he and all that he had, were only to be sold. Now, as he had increased his debt, so he has increased his punishment; he is delivered to the tormentors, to the horrors of a guilty conscience, and to a fearful looking for a fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. But if this refers to the day of judgment, then the worm that dieth not, and the fire that is not quenched, are the tormentors.

Verse 35. So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you] The goodness and indulgence of God towards us is the pattern we should follow in our dealings with others. Reader, hast thou a child, or servant who has offended thee, and humbly asks forgiveness? Hast thou a debtor, or a tenant, who is insolvent, and asks for a little longer time? And hast thou not forgiven that child or servant? Hast thou not given time to that debtor or tenant? How, then, canst thou ever expect to see the face of the just and merciful God?

Their trespasses.] The words are evidently an interpolation; the construction of them is utterly improper; and the concord false.

CHAPTER XIX,

Jesus leaves Galilee, and comes into the coasts of Judea, and is followed by great multitudes, whom he heals, 1, 2. The question of the Pharisees concerning divorce answered, and the doctrine of marriage explained, 3-9. The inquiry of the disciples on this subject, 10. Our Lord's answer, explaining the case of eunuchs, 11, 12. Little children brought to Christ for his blessing, 13-15. The case of the young man who wished to obtain eternal life, 16-22. Our Lord's reflections on this case, in which he shows the difficulty of a rich man's salvation, 23-26. What they shall possess who have left all for Christ's sake and the gospel, 27-29. How many of the first shall be last, and the last first, 30.

AND it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these sayings, he departed from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judæa beyond Jordan.

2 ^b And great multitudes followed him; and he healed them there.

3 The Pharisees also came unto him, tempting him, and saying unto him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?

4 And he answered and said unto them, Have ye not read, that he which made them at the beginning, made them male and female,

5 And said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh?

6 Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let no man put asunder.

Verse 1. Beyond Jordan.] Or, by the side of Jordan. Matthew begins here to give an account of Christ's journey (the only one he mentions) to Jerusalem, a little before the passover, at which he was crucified. See Mark x. 1. Luke ix. 51.

Verse 2. Great multitudes followed him.] Some to be instructed—some to be healed—some through curiosity—and some to ensnare him.

Verse 3. Tempting him.] Trying what answer he would give to a question, which, however decided by him, would expose him to censure.

Is it lawful—for every cause?] At this time there were two famous divinity and philosophical schools among the Jews, that of SHAMMAI, and that of HILLEL. On the question of divorce, the school of Shammai maintained, that a man could not legally put away his wife, except for whoredom. The school of Hillel taught, that a man might put away his wife for a multitude of other causes, and when she did not find grace in his sight; i. e., when he saw any other woman that pleased him better. By answering the question, not from Shammai or Hillel, but from Moses, our blessed Lord defeated their malice, and confounded their devices.

Verse 4. He which made them at the beginning.] When Adam and Eve were the first of human kind.

Made them male and female.] Merely through the design of matrimonial union, that the earth might be thus peopled. To answer a case of conscience, a man should act as Christ does here; pay no regard to that which the corruption of manners has introduced into divine ordinances, but go back to the original will, purpose, and institution of God. Christ will never accommodate his morality to the times, nor to the inclinations of men.

Verse 5. For this cause.] Being created for this very purpose, that they might glorify their Maker in a matrimonial connexion. A man shall leave (wholly give up) both father and mother—the matrimonial union being more intimate and binding than even paternal or filial affection—and shall be closely united, shall be firmly cemented to his wife. A beautiful metaphor, which most forcibly intimates that nothing but death can separate them; as a well-glued board will break sooner in the whole wood, than in the glued joint.

And they twain shall be one flesh?] Not only meaning that they should be considered as one body, but also as two souls in one body, with a complete union of interests, and an indissoluble partnership of life and fortune, comfort and support, desires and inclinations, joys and sorrows.

Verse 6. What therefore God hath joined together.] Yoked together, as oxen in the plough, where each must pull equally, in order to bring it on.

Verse 7. Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement?] It is not an unusual case for the impure and unholy to seek for a justification of their conduct from the law of God itself, and to wrest Scripture to their own destruction.

Verse 8. Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts.] Moses perceived that if a divorce were not permitted, in many cases, the women would be exposed to great hardships through the cruelty of their husbands.

7 They say unto him, Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away?

8 He saith unto them, Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts, suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it was not so.

9 ^a And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery: and whoso marrieth her which is put away, doth commit adultery.

10 His disciples say unto him, ^b If the case of the man be so with his wife, it is not good to marry.

11 But he said unto them, ^c All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given.

12 For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men:

Verse 9. Except it be for fornication.] See on chap. v. 33. In this discourse, our Lord shows that marriage (except in one case) is indissoluble, and should be so: 1st, by Divine institution, ver. 4. 2d, By express commandment, ver. 5. 3d, Because the married couple become one and the same person, ver. 6. 4th, By the example of the first pair, ver. 8; and, 5th, Because of the evil consequent on separation, ver. 9.

Verse 10. If the case of the man.] Of a husband, so I think the word should be translated here.

It is not good to marry.] That is, if a man have not the liberty to put away his wife when she is displeasing to him. There are difficulties and trials in all states; but let marriage and celibacy be weighed fairly, and I am persuaded the former will be found to have fewer than the latter. However, before we enter into an engagement which nothing but death can dissolve, we had need to act cautiously, carefully consulting the will and word of God. Where an unbridled passion, or a base love of money, lead the way, marriage is sure to be miserable.

Verse 11. All—cannot receive this saying.] A very wise answer, and well suited to the present circumstances of the disciples. Neither of the states is condemned.

Verse 12. Eunuchs.] They who have the care of the bed, or bed-chamber; this being the principal employment of eunuchs in the Eastern countries, particularly in the apartments of queens and princesses. These are they whom our Lord says are made eunuchs by men, merely for the above purpose.

So born from their mother's womb.] Such as are naturally incapable of marriage, and consequently should not contract any.

For the kingdom of heaven's sake.] I believe our Lord here alludes to the case of the ESSENES, one of the most holy and pure sects among the Jews. These abstained from all commerce with women, hoping thereby to acquire a greater degree of purity, and be better fitted for the kingdom of God: children they had none of their own, but constantly adopted those of poor people, and brought them up in their own way.

He that is able to receive.] The meaning seems to be, Let the man who feels himself capable of embracing this way of life, embrace it; but none can do it but he to whom it is given, who has it as a gift from his mother's womb.

Verse 13. Then were there brought unto him little children.] These are termed by Luke, chap. xviii. 15, infants, very young children; and it was on this account, probably, that the disciples rebuked the parents, thinking them too young to receive good. See on Mark x. 16.

That he should put his hands.] It was a common custom among the Jews to lay their hands on the heads of those whom they blessed, or for whom they prayed. This seems to have been done by way of dedication or consecration to God—the person being considered as a sacred property of God ever after. Often God added a testimony of his approbation, by communicating some extraordinary influence of the Holy Spirit.

Verse 14. For of such is the kingdom of heaven.] Or, the and 'there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

13 ^b Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray; and the disciples rebuked them.

14 But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for ^c of such is the kingdom of heaven.

15 And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence.

16 ^d And behold, one came and said unto him, 'Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?'

17 And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.

18 He saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, 'Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness,

19 ^e Honour thy father and thy mother: and,

^b Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

20 The young man saith unto him, All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?

21 Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, ^f go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me.

kingdom of heaven is composed of such.] This appears to be the best sense of the passage, and utterly ruins the whole inhuman diabolic system of what is called non-elect infants' damnation; a doctrine which must have sprung from Moloch, and can only be defended by a heart in which he dwells.

Verse 15. He—departed thence.] That is, from that part of Judah which was beyond Jordan, ver. 1; and then went to Jericho.

Verse 17. Why callest thou me good?] Or, Why dost thou question me concerning that good thing? This important reading is found in many MSS., Versions, and Fathers, and has the sanction of Erasmus, Grotius, Mill, Bengel, and Criesbach. And instead of, None is good but the one God, Criesbach reads, on nearly the same respectable authorities, There is one that is good. This passage, as it stood in the common editions, has been considered by some writers as an incontrovertible proof against the Divinity or godhead of Christ. But one of the greatest critics in Europe not at all partial to the Godhead of Christ, has admitted the above readings into his text, on evidence which he judged to be unexceptionable. If they be the true readings, they destroy the whole doctrine built on this text; and indeed the utmost that the enemies of the Trinitarian doctrine can now expect from their formidable opponents, concerning this text, is to leave it neuter.

Keep the commandments.] From this we may learn that God's great design, in giving his Law to the Jews, was to lead them to the expectation and enjoyment of eternal life. But as all the Law referred to Christ, and he became the end of the Law for righteousness (justification) to all that believe, so he is to be received, in order to have the end accomplished which the Law proposed.

Verse 20. All these have I kept] I have made these precepts the rule of my life. There is a difference worthy of notice between this and our Lord's word. He says, ver. 17, keep earnestly, diligently, as with watch and ward; probably referring not only to the letter but to the spirit. The young man modestly says, all these have I observed; I have paid attention to, and endeavoured to regulate my conduct by them.

From my youth] Several MSS., Versions, and Fathers, leave out these words.

What lack I yet?] He felt a troubled conscience, and a mind unassured of the approbation of God; and he clearly per-22 But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions.

23 Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, That ^a a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven.

24 And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

25 When his disciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved?

26 But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; but ^b with God all things are possible.

27 ^c Then answered Peter and said unto him, Behold, ^d we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?

28 And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ^e ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

29 ^f And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life.

30 ^g But many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first.

ceived that something was wanting to make him truly happy.

Verse 21. If thou wilt be perfect] To be complete, to have the business finished, and all hindrances to thy salvation removed; go and sell that thou hast—go and dispose of thy possessions, to which it is evident his heart was too much attached, and give to the poor—for thy goods will be a continual snare to thee if thou keep them; and thou shalt have treasure in heaven—the loss, if it can be called such, shall be made amply up to thee in that eternal life about which thou inquired; and come and follow me—be my disciple, and I will appoint thee to preach the kingdom of God to others. This was the usual call which Christ gave to his disciples.

Verse 22. Went away sorrowful] Men undergo great agony of mind while they are in suspense between the love of the world and the love of their souls.

Verse 23. A rich man shall hardly enter] That is, into the spirit and privileges of the gospel in this world, and through them, into the kingdom of glory. Earthly riches are a great obstacle to salvation; because it is almost impossible to possess them, and not to set the heart upon them; and they who love the world have not the love of the Father in them. 1 John ii. 15. To be rich, therefore, is in general a great misfortune: but what rich man can be convinced of this?

Verse 24. A camel] A proverb common enough among the people of the East.

It was also a mode of expression among the Jews, and signified a thing impossible.

Verse 25. Who then can be saved?] The question of the disciples seemed to intimate that most people were rich, and that therefore scarcely any could be saved. They certainly must have attached a different meaning to what constitutes a rich man, to what we in general do. Who is a rich man in our Lord's sense of the word? A rich man, in my opinion, is not one who has so many hundreds or thousands more than some of his neighbours; but is one who gets more than is necessary to supply all his own wants, and those of his household, and keeps the residue still to himself, though the poor are starving through lack of the necessities of life. In a word, he is a man who gets all he can, saves all he can, and keeps all he has gotten.

Verse 26. With men this is impossible] God alone can take the love of the world out of the human heart.

Verse 27. We have forsaken all] "A poor all," says one, "a parcel of rotten nets." No matter—they were their ALL, whether rotten or sound; besides, they were the all they got their bread by; and such an all as was quite sufficient for that purpose: and let it be observed, that that man forsakes much who reserves nothing to himself, and renounces all expectations from this world, taking God alone for his portion.

To forsake all, without following Christ, is the virtue of a philosopher. To follow Christ in profession, without forsaking all, is the state of the generality of Christians. But to follow Christ and forsake all, is the perfection of a Christian.

What shall we have therefore? What REWARD shall we get?

Verse 28. Ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, &c.] The punctuation which I have observed here, is that which is followed by the most eminent critics: the regeneration is thus referred to the time when Jesus shall sit on the throne of his glory, and not to the time of following him, which is utterly improper.

Judging the twelve tribes] From the parallel place, Luke xii. 28-30, it is evident that sitting on thrones, and judging the twelve tribes, means simply obtaining eternal salvation, and the distinguishing privileges of the kingdom of glory, by those who continued faithful to Christ in his sufferings and death.

Verse 29. Shall receive an hundredfold] Viz., in this life, in value, though perhaps not in kind; and in the world to come, everlasting life. A glorious portion for a persevering believer! The fulness of GRACE here, and the fulness of GLORY hereafter!

Verse 30. But many that are first, &c.] That this prediction of our Lord has been literally fulfilled, the present state of the Christian and Jewish Churches sufficiently proves.

CHAPTER

The similitude of the householder hiring labourers into his vineyard, to show that the Gentiles should be preferred to the Jews, according to what was hinted at the close of the last chapter, 1-16. On the way going up to Jerusalem he predicts his sufferings and death, 17-19. The mother of Zebedee's children requests dignities for her sons, 20, 21. Christ, by his answer, shows that sufferings, not worldly honours, are to be the lot of his most faithful followers, and that seats in glory can be given only to those who are prepared for them, 22, 23. From this our Lord takes occasion to teach the necessity of humility, and to show that those who wished to be chief must be servants of all, 24-28. On his coming to Jericho, he restores sight to two blind men, who, being restored, follow him, 29-34.

FOR the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is a householder, which went out early in the morning to hire labourers into his vineyard.

2 And when he had agreed with the labourers for a penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard.

3 And he went out about the third hour, and saw others standing idle in the market place,

4 And said unto them: Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you. And they went their way.

5 Again he went out about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise.

Verse 1. For the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man—a householder] The manner of God's proceeding, under the gospel dispensation, resembles a householder, who went out at day-break to hire labourers, that they might cultivate his vineyard.

To hire labourers] Some workmen, for he had not got all that were necessary, because we find him going out at other hours to hire more.

Verse 2. A penny] A Roman coin, as noted before, chap. xviii. 23, worth about seven pence halfpenny or seven pence three fourths of our money, and equal to the Greek drachma. This appears to have been the ordinary price of a day's labour at that time.

Verse 3. The third hour] Nine o'clock in the morning. Market place] Where labourers usually stood till they were hired.

Verse 5. The sixth hour] Twelve o'clock. Ninth hour—three o'clock in the afternoon.

Verse 6. Eleventh] Five o'clock in the evening, when there

6 And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and saith unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle?

7 They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive.

8 So when even was come, the lord of the vineyard saith unto his steward, Call the labourers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first.

9 And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny.

10 But when the first came, they supposed that five shillings the ounce, is seven-pence halfpenny, ch. xviii. 28. Heb. iii. 7.—John xi. 9.—Col. iv. 1. 1 Cor. xv. 58. Rom. vi. 23.

was only one hour before the end of the Jewish day, which, in matters of labour, closed at six.

Verse 7. No man hath hired us] This was the reason why they were all the day idle.

And whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive.] Ye may expect payment in proportion to your labour, and the time ye spend in it.

Verse 8. When even was come] Six o'clock, the time they ceased from labour, and the workmen came to receive their wages.

Steward] A manager of the household concerns under the master.

Verse 11. They murmured] The Jews made the preaching of the gospel to the Gentiles a pretence why they should reject that gospel; as they fondly imagined they were, and should be, the sole objects of the divine approbation.

Verse 13. Friend, I do thee no wrong] The salvation of the Gentiles can in itself become no impediment to the Jews; there is the same Jesus both for the Jew and for the Greek.

they should have received more; and they likewise received every man a penny.

11 And when they had received it, they murmured against the good man of the house, 12 Saying, These last ^a have wrought but one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, which have born the burden and heat of the day.

13 But he answered one of them, and said, Friend, I do thee no wrong: didst not thou agree with me for a penny?

14 Take that thine is, and go thy way: I will give unto this last, even as unto thee.

15 ^b Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? ^c Is thine eye evil, because I am good?

16 ^d So the last shall be first, and the first last: for many be called, but few chosen.

17 And Jesus going up to Jerusalem took the twelve disciples apart in the way, and said unto them,

18 Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death,

^a Or, have continued one hour only.—^b Rom. ix. 21.—^c Deut. xv. 9. Prov. xxiii. 6. Ch. vi. 23.—^d Ch. xix. 30.—^e Ch. xli. 14.—^f Mark x. 32. Luke xviii. 31. John xli. 12.—^g Ch. xvi. 21.—^h Ch. xxvii. 2. Mark xv. 1, 16, &c. Luke xxiii. 1. John xviii. 28, &c. Acts iii. 13.

Verse 15. Is it not lawful for me] As eternal life is the free gift of God, he has a right to give it in whatever proportions, at whatever times, and on whatever conditions he pleases.

Is thine eye evil] An evil eye among the Jews meant a malicious, covetous, or envious person.

Verse 16. So the last shall be first, and the first last] The GENTILES, who have been long without the true God, shall now enjoy all the privileges of the new covenant; and the Jews, who have enjoyed these from the beginning, shall now be dispossessed of them; for, because they have rejected the Lord, he also hath rejected them.

Many be called, &c.] The simple meaning seems to be: As those who did not come at the invitation of the householder to work in the vineyard did not receive the denarius, or wages, so those who do not obey the call of the gospel, and believe in Christ Jesus, shall not inherit eternal life, Verse 17. And Jesus going up] From Jericho to Jerusalem, ch. xix. 15.

Verse 18. The Son of man shall be betrayed] Or, will be delivered up. This is the third time that our Lord informed his disciples of his approaching sufferings and death. This was a subject of the utmost importance, and it was necessary they should be well prepared for such an awful event.

Verse 19. Deliver him to the Gentiles to mock] This was done by Herod and his Roman soldiers.

To scourge, and to crucify] The punishment of the cross was Roman, not Jewish; but the chief priests condemned him to it, and the Romans executed the sentence. How little did they know that they were, by this process, jointly offering up that sacrifice which was to make an atonement for the Gentiles and for the Jews; an atonement for the sin of the whole world! How often may it be literally said, The wrath of man shall praise thee!

Verse 20. The mother of Zebedee's children] This was Salome.

Verse 21. Grant that these my two sons] James and John. See Mark xv. 40. In the preceding chapter, ver. 28, our Lord had promised his disciples, that they should sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes. Salome, probably hearing of this, and understanding it literally, came to request the chief dignities in this new government for her sons; and it appears it was at their instigation that she made this request, for Mark, chap. x. 35, informs us that these brethren themselves made the request, i. e., they made it through the medium of their mother.

One on thy right hand, and the other on (THEY) left] I have added the pronoun in the latter clause on the authority of almost every MS. and version of repute.

That the sons of Zebedee wished for ecclesiastical, rather 19 And shall deliver him to the Gentiles to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify him: and the third day he shall rise again.

20 Then came to him the mother of Zebedee's children with her sons, worshipping him, and desiring a certain thing of him.

21 And he said unto her, What wilt thou? She saith unto him, Grant that these my two sons may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left, in thy kingdom.

22 But Jesus answered and said, ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto him, We are able.

23 And he saith unto them, Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with: but to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.

24 And when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation against the two brethren.

25 But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Ye than secular, honour, may be thought probable, from the allusion that is made here to the supreme dignities in the great Sanhedrin.

Verse 22. Ye know not what ye ask] How strange is the infatuation, in some parents, which leads them to desire worldly or ecclesiastical honours for their children! He must be much in love with the cross who wishes to have his child a minister of the gospel; for, if he be such as God approves of in the work, his life will be a life of toil and suffering; he will be obliged to sip, at least, if not to drink largely, of the cup of Christ.

And to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized, &c.] According to the rules laid down by critics to appreciate a false or true reading, this clause cannot be considered as forming a part of the sacred text.

They say unto him, We are able.] Strange blindness! You can? No: one drop of this cup would sink you into utter ruin, unless upheld by the power of God. However, the man whom God has appointed to the work, he will preserve in it.

Verse 23. Is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.] The common translation, in which the words, it shall be given to them, are interpolated by our translators, utterly changes and destroys the meaning of the passage. The true construction of the words is this: To sit on my right hand and on my left, is not mine to give, except to them for whom it is prepared of my Father. According to the prediction of Christ, these brethren did partake of his afflictions: James was martyred by Herod, Acts xii. 2; and John was banished to Patmos, for the testimony of Christ, Rev. i. 9.

Verse 24. When the ten heard it they were moved] The ambition which leads to spiritual lordship is one great cause of murmurings and animosities in religious societies, and has proved the ruin of the most flourishing Churches in the universe.

Verse 25. Exercise dominion—and—exercise authority upon them.] They tyrannised and exercised arbitrary power over the people. This was certainly true of the governments in our Lord's time, both in the east and in the west.

The government of the Church of Christ is widely different from secular governments. It is founded in humility and brotherly love: it is derived from Christ, the great Head of the Church, and is ever conducted by his maxims and spirit. When political matters are brought into the Church of Christ, both are ruined. The Church has more than once ruined the State; the State has often corrupted the Church: it is certainly for the interests of both to be kept separate. This has already been abundantly exemplified in both cases, and will continue so to be, over the whole know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them.

26 But ^a it shall not be so among you: but ^b whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister;

27 ^c And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant:

28 ^d Even as the ^e Son of man came not to be ministered unto, ^f but to minister; and ^g to give his life a ransom ^h for many.

32 And Jesus ^k stood still, and called them, and said, What will ye that I shall do unto you?

world, wherever the Church and State are united in secular matters.

Verse 26. Your minister] Or, deacon. I know no other word which could at once convey the meaning of the original, and make a proper distinction between it and servant, in ver. 27. The office of a deacon, in the primitive Church, was the very lowest ecclesiastical office.

Verse 27. Your servant] The lowest secular office, as deacon was the lowest ecclesiastical office.

Verse 28. A ransom for many.] A ransom instead of many—one ransom, or atonement, instead of the many prescribed in the Jewish law. [This criticism cannot be sustained.]

The word which we translate ransom is used by the Sep-tuagint for the Hebrew pidion, the ransom paid for a man's life: see Exod. xxi. 30. Numb. iii. 49, 51; and a similar word is used Num. xxxv. 31, where a satisfaction (Hebrew copher, an atonement) for the life of a murderer is refused.

The whole Gentile world, as well as the Jews, believed in vicarious sacrifices.

Verse 30. Two blind men] Mark, chap. x. 46, and Luke xviii. 35, mention only one blind man, Bartimeus. Probably he was mentioned by the other Evangelists, as being a person well known before and after his cure.

Sitting by the way side] In the likeliest place to receive alms, because of the multitudes going and coming between Jerusalem and Jericho.

Cried out] In the midst of judgments God remembers mercy. Though God had deprived them, for wise reasons, of their eyes, he left them the use of their speech. It is never ill with us, but it might be much worse: let us, therefore, be submissive and thankful.

Have mercy on us] Hearing that Jesus passed by, and not knowing whether they should ever again have so good an opportunity of addressing him, they are determined to call, and call earnestly. They ask for mercy, conscious that they deserve nothing; and they ask with faith—Son of David, acknowledging him as the promised Messiah.

Verse 31. The multitude rebuked them] Whenever a soul begins to cry after Jesus for light and salvation, the world and the devil join together to drown its cries, or force it to be silent.

They cried the more] When the world and the devil begin to rebuke, in this case, it is a proof that the salvation of God is nigh; therefore, let such cry out a great deal the more.

Verse 33. That our eyes may be opened.] He who feels his own sore, and the plague of his heart, has no great need of a prompter in prayer. A hungry man can easily ask bread; he has no need to go to a book to get expressions to state his wants in; his hunger tells him he wants food, and he tells this to the person from whom he expects relief. Helps to devotion, in all ordinary cases, may be of great use; in extraordinary cases they can be of little importance; the afflicted heart alone can tell its own sorrows, with appropriate pleadings.

Verse 34. So Jesus had compassion on them] The tender pity of Christ met the earnest cry of the blind men, and their immediate cure was the result.

They followed him.] As a proof of the miracle that was wrought, and of the gratitude which they felt to their benefactor.

CHAPTER XXI.

Christ rides into Jerusalem upon an ass, and the multitude receive him joyfully, 1-11. He enters the temple, and expels the money changers, &c. 12, 13. The blind and the lame come to him and are healed, 14. The chief priests and scribes are offended, 15. Our Lord confounds them, and goes to Bethany, 16, 17. The barren fig-tree blasted, 18-22. While teaching in the temple, the chief priests and elders question his authority; he answers and confutes them, 23-27. The parable of the man and his two sons, 28-32. The parable of a vineyard let out to husbandmen, 33-42; applied to the priests and Pharisees, 43-45; who wish to kill him, but are restrained by the fear of the people, who acknowledge Christ for a prophet, 46.

AND *when they drew nigh unto Jerusalem, and were come to Bethphage, unto the mount of Olives, then sent Jesus two disciples,

2 Saying unto them, Go into the village over against you, and straightway ye shall find an ass tied, and a colt with her: loose them, and bring them unto me.

3 And if any man say aught unto you, ye shall say, The Lord hath need of them; and straightway he will send them.

4 All this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying,

5 *Tell ye the daughter of Sion, Behold, thy king cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass.

6 ^a And the disciples went, and did as Jesus commanded them,

7 And brought the ass, and the colt, and * put on them their clothes, and they set him thereon.

8 And a very great multitude spread their garments in the way; ⁱ others cut down branches from the trees, and strawed them in the way.

Verse 1. Bethphage] A place on the west declivity of Mount Olivet, from which it is thought the whole declivity and part of the valley took their name.

Verse 2. Ye shall find an ass tied, and a colt] Our blessed Lord takes every opportunity to convince his disciples that nothing was hidden from him: he informs them of the most minute occurrence; and manifested his power over the heart in disposing the owner to permit the ass to be taken away.

Verse 3. The Lord (the proprietor of all things) hath need of them] Jesus is continually humbling himself, to show us how odious pride is in the sight of God: but in his humility he is ever giving proofs of his almighty power, that the belief of his divinity may be established.

Verse 4. Which was spoken] The Spirit of God, which predicted those things that concerned the Messiah, took care to have them literally fulfilled: 1. To show the truth of prophecy in general; and, 2. To designate Christ as the person intended by that prophecy. See the note on chap. ii. 23.

Verse 5. Tell ye the daughter of Sion] The quotation is taken from Zech. ix. 9, but not in the precise words of the prophet.

Verse 7. And put on them their clothes] Thus acknowledging him to be their king, for this was a custom observed by the people when they found that God had appointed a man to the kingdom. 2 Kings ix. 13.

And they set him thereon.] And he sat upon them; but instead of upon THEM, some read upon him, i. e. the colt. This is most likely to be the true reading; for we can scarcely suppose that he rode upon both by turns—this would appear childish; or that he rode upon both at once, for this would be absurd.

Verse 8. Cut down branches from the trees] Carrying palm and other branches was emblematical of victory and success. Rev. vii. 9.

Verse 9. Hosanna to the Son of David] When persons applied to the king for help, or for a redress of grievances, they used the word hosanna, or rather from the Hebrew HOSHIAH NA! Save now! or, Save, we beseech thee!—redress our grievances, and give us help from oppression! Thus both the words and actions of the people prove that they acknowledged Christ as their king, and looked to him for deliverance. 2 Sam. xiv. 4. 2 Kings vi. 26. Ps. cxviii. 25.

Hosanna in the highest.] Either meaning, Let the heavenly hosts join with us in magnifying this august Being!—or, Let the utmost degrees of hosannas, of salvation, and deliverance, be communicated to thy people!

Verse 10. All the city was moved] Was in a tumult—they saw and heard plainly that the multitude had proclaimed Christ king, and Messiah. Who is this? Who is accounted worthy of this honour?

Verse 11. This is Jesus the prophet] That prophet

9 And the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, saying, *Hosanna to the Son of David: ^b Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest.

10 ^c And when he was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved, saying, Who is this?

11 And the multitude said, This is Jesus ^d the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee.

whom Moses spoke of, Deut. xviii. 18. I will raise them up a prophet—like unto thee, &c. Every expression of the multitude plainly intimated that they fully received our blessed Lord as the promised Messiah.

Verse 12. Money-changers] Persons who furnished the Jews and proselytes who came from other countries, with the current coin of Judea, in exchange for their own.

Verse 13. My house shall be called the house of prayer] This is taken from Isa. lvi. 7.

But ye have made it a den of thieves.] This is taken from Jer. vii. 11.

Our Lord alludes here to those dens and caves in Judea, in which the public robbers either hid or kept themselves fortified.

They who are placed in the Church of Christ to serve souls, and do it not, and they who enjoy the revenues of the church, and neglect the service of it, are thieves and robbers in more senses than one.

Verse 14. The blind and the lame came] Having condemned the profane use of the temple, he now shows the proper use of it. The church or chapel in which the blind and the lame are not healed has no Christ in it, and is not worthy of attendance.

Verse 15. The chief priests—were sore displeased] Or, were incensed. Incensed at what? At the purification of the profaned temple! This was a work they should have done themselves, but for which they had neither grace nor influence; and their pride and jealousy will not suffer them to permit others to do it. Strange as it may appear, the priesthood itself, in all corrupt times, has been ever the most forward to prevent a reform in the church.

Verse 16. Out of the mouth of babes] The eighth Psalm, out of which these words are quoted, is applied to Jesus Christ in three other places in the New Covenant, 1 Cor. xv. 27. Ephes. i. 22. Heb. ii. 6. Which proves it to be merely a prophetic Psalm, relating to the Messiah.

Verse 17. And he left them (finally leaving them) and went—into Bethany; and he lodged there.] Bethany was a village about two miles distant from Jerusalem, by Mount Olivet, John xi. 18; and it is remarkable that from this day till his death, which happened about six days after, he spent not one night in Jerusalem, but went every evening to Bethany, and returned to the city each morning. See Luke xxi. 37. xxii. 39. John viii. 1, 2. They were about to murder the Lord of Glory; and the true light, which they had rejected, is now departing from them.

Lodged there.] Not merely to avoid the snares laid for him by those bad men, but to take away all suspicion of his affecting the regal power.

Verse 18. Now in the morning, as he returned into the city] Which was his custom from the time he wholly left never read, * Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?

17 And he left them, and went out of the city into ^b Bethany; and he lodged there.

18 ^c Now in the morning, as he returned into the city, he hungered.

19 ^d And when he saw ^e a fig tree in the way, he came to it, and found nothing thereon, but leaves only, and said unto it, Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever. And presently the fig tree withered away.

20 ^f And when the disciples saw ^g it, they marvelled, saying, How soon is the fig tree withered away!

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, ^h If ye have faith, and ⁱ doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig tree, ^j but also if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; it shall be done.

22 And ^k all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.

23 ^l And when he was come into the temple, the chief priests and the elders of the people came unto him as he was teaching, and ^m said, By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?

Jerusalem, spending only the day time teaching in the temple, see ver. 17. This was probably on Thursday, the 12th day of the month Nisan. He hungered—Probably neither he, nor his disciples, had any thing but what they got from public charity; and the hand of that seems to have been cold at this time.

Verse 19. He saw a fig tree in the way] By the road side. As this fig tree was by the way side, it was no private property; and on this account our Lord, or any other traveller, had a right to take of its fruit. For a full explanation of this difficult passage, see on Mark xi. 13, &c.

Let no fruit grow on thee] Can a professor, who affords Christ nothing but borren words and wishes, expect any thing but his malediction? When the soul continues in unfruitfulness, the influences of grace are removed, and then the tree speedily withers from the very root.

Verse 21. If ye have faith, and doubt not] Removing mountains, and rooting up of mountains, are phrases very generally used to signify the removing or conquering great difficulties—getting through perplexities. In this sense our Lord's words are to be understood. The saying is neither to be taken in its literal sense, nor is it hyperbolic: it is a proverbial form of speech, which no Jew could misunderstand, and with which no Christian ought to be puzzled.

Verse 22. All things—ye shall ask in prayer, believing] In order to get salvation, there must be, 1. a conviction of the want of it: this begets 2. prayer, or warm desires, in the heart: then 3 the person asks, i.e., makes use of words expressive of his wants and wishes: 4. believes the word of promise, relative to the fulfilment of his wants: and 5. receives, according to the merciful promise of God, the salvation which his soul requires.

Verse 23. By what authority doest thou these things?] The things which the chief priests allude to, were his receiving the acclamations of the people as the promised Messiah, his casting the traders out of the temple, and his teaching the people publicly in it.

Verse 24. The baptism of John] Had John a divine commission or not, for his baptism and preaching? Our Lord here takes the wise in their own cunning. He knew the estimation John was in among the people; and he plainly saw that, if they gave any answer at all, they must convict themselves: and so they saw, when they came to examine the question.

Verse 27. We cannot tell.] Simplicity gives a wonderful also will ask you one thing, which if ye tell me, I, in like wise, will tell you by what authority I do these things.

25 The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men? And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say unto us, Why did ye not then believe him?

26 But if we shall say, Of men; we fear the people; ⁿ for all hold John as a prophet.

27 And they answered Jesus, and said, We cannot tell. And he said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

28 But what think ye? A certain man had two sons; and he came to the first, and said, Son, go work to-day in my vineyard.

29 ^o He answered and said, I will not: but afterwards he repented, and went.

30 And he came to the second, and said likewise. And he answered and said, I go, sir: and went not.

31 Whether of them twain did the will of his father? They say unto him, The first. Jesus saith unto them, ^p Verily I say unto you, That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you.

32 For ^q John came unto you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not: ^r but the publicans and the harlots believed him: and ye, confidence and peace of mind; but double dealing causes a thousand inquietudes and troubles.

We cannot tell, said they; which, in the words of truth, should have been, We will not tell, for we will not have this man for the Messiah: because, if we acknowledge John as his forerunner, we must, of necessity, receive Jesus as the Christ.

Verse 28. A certain man had two sons] Under the emblem of these two sons, one of whom was a libertine, disobedient, and insolent, but who afterwards thought on his ways, and returned to his duty; and the second, a hypocrite, who promised all, and did nothing; our Lord points out, on the one hand, the tax-gatherers and sinners of all descriptions, who, convicted by the preaching of John and that of Christ, turned away from their iniquities and embraced the Gospel; and, on the other hand, the scribes, Pharisees, and self-righteous people, who, pretending a zeal for the law, would not receive the salvation of the gospel.

Verse 29. I will not] This is the general reply of every sinner to the invitations of God; and, in it, the Most High is treated without ceremony or respect.

Verse 30. I go, sir] This is all respect, complaisance, and professed obedience; but he went not: he promised well, but did not perform.

Verse 31. The publicans and the harlots] In all their former conduct they had said no. Now they yield to the voice of truth when they hear it, and enter into the kingdom, embracing the salvation brought to them in the gospel.

Verse 32. John came unto you in the way of righteousness] Or, John came unto you who are in the way of righteousness. This seems rather to be the true meaning and construction of this passage. The Jews are here distinguished from the Gentiles.

It is very difficult to get a worldly minded and self-righteous man brought to Christ.

Verse 33. There was a certain householder] Let us endeavour to find out a general and practical meaning for this parable. A householder—the Supreme Being. The family—the Jewish nation. The vineyard—the City of Jerusalem. The fence—the divine protection. The wine-press—the law and sacrificial rites. The tower—the temple, in which the divine presence was manifested. The husbandmen—the priests and doctors of the law. Went from home—entrusted the cultivation of the vineyard to the priests, &c., with the utmost confidence; as a man would do who when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him.

33 Hear another parable: There was a certain housholder, * which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a wine-press in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country.

34 And when the time of the fruit drew near, he sent his servants to the husbandmen, * that they might receive the fruits of it.

35 * And the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another.

36 Again, he sent other servants more than the first; and they did unto them likewise.

37 But last of all he sent unto them his son, saying, They will reverence my son.

38 But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, * 'This is the heir; ' come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance.

39 * And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him.

40 When the lord therefore of the vineyard had the most trusty servants, and was obliged to absent himself from home for a certain time. Our Lord takes this parable from Isa. v. 1, &c.; but whether our blessed Redeemer quote from the law, the prophets, or the Rabbins, he reserves the liberty to himself to beautify the whole, and render it more pertinent.

Digged a wine-press] St. Mark has the pit under the press, into which the liquor ran, when squeezed out of the fruit by the press.

Verse 34. He sent his servants] Prophets, which, from time to time, he sent to the Jewish nation to call both priests and people back to the purity of his holy religion.

Receive the fruits of it] Alluding to the ancient custom of paying the rent of a farm in kind; that is, by a part of the produce of the farm.

Verse 35. Beat one] Took his skin off, flayed him: probably alluding to some who had been excessively scourged.

Killed another, &c.] Rid themselves of the true witnesses of God by a variety of persecutions.

Verse 36. Other servants] There is not a moment in which God does not shower down his gifts upon men, and require the fruit of them. Various instruments are used to bring sinners to God.

More than the first] Or more honourable, so I think the original should be translated; for as the fullness of the time approached, each prophet more clearly and fully pointed out the coming Christ.

Verse 37. Last of all he sent—his son] This requires no comment. Our Lord plainly means himself.

They will reverence] They will respect upon their conduct, and blush for shame because of it, when they see my son. So the Syriac and Persic.

Verse 38. Said among themselves] Alluding to the conspiracies which were then forming against the life of our blessed Lord, in the councils of the Jewish elders and chief priests.

Verse 39. Cast him out of the vineyard] Utterly rejected the counsel of God against themselves; and would neither acknowledge the authority of Christ, nor submit to his teaching.

Verse 41. He will miserably destroy those wicked men] So, according to this Evangelist, our Lord caused them to pass that sentence of destruction upon themselves which was literally executed about forty years after.

cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen?

41 * They say unto him, ' He will miserably destroy those wicked men, ' and will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him the fruits in their seasons.

42 Jesus saith unto them, * Did ye never read in the Scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes?

43 Therefore say I unto you, ' The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.

44 And whosoever * shall fall on this stone shall be broken: but on whomsoever it shall fall, * it will grind him to powder.

45 And when the chief priests and Pharisees had heard his parables, * they perceived that he spake of them.

46 But when they sought to lay hands on him, they feared the multitude, because * they took him for a prophet.

Verse 42. The stone] This seems to have been originally spoken of David, who was at first rejected by the Jewish rulers, but was afterwards chosen by the Lord to be the great ruler of his people Israel.

The builders] The chief priests and elders of the people, with the doctors of the law.

Rejected] An expression borrowed from masons, who find a stone, which being tried in a particular place, and appearing improper for it, is thrown aside, and another taken; however, at last, it may happen that the very stone which had been before rejected may be found the most suitable as the head stone of the corner.

Verse 43. Therefore say I] Thus showing them, that to them alone the parable belonged. The kingdom of God shall be taken from you,—the gospel shall be taken from you, and given to the Gentiles, who will receive it, and bring forth fruit to the glory of God.

Bringing forth the fruits] As in verse 34, an allusion is made to paying the landlord in kind, so here the Gentiles are represented as paying God thus. The returns which He expects for his grace are the fruits of grace; nothing can ever be acceptable in the sight of God that does not spring from himself.

Verse 44. Whosoever shall fall on this stone, shall be broken, &c.] This is an allusion to the punishment of stoning among the Jews. The place of stoning was twice as high as a man; while standing on this, one of the witnesses struck the culprit on the loins, so that he fell over this scaffold; if he died by the stroke and fall, well; if not, the other witness threw a stone upon his heart, and dispatched him. The stone thrown on the culprit was, in some cases, as much as two men could lift up.

Verse 45. The chief priests—perceived that he spake of them] The most wholesome advice passes for an affront with those who have shut their hearts against the truth.

Verse 46 They sought to lay hands on him, they feared the multitude] Restraining and preventing grace is an excellent blessing, particularly where it leads to repentance and salvation; but he who abstains from certain evils, only through fear of scandal or punishment has already committed them in his heart, and is guilty before God.

CHAPTER XXII

The parable of the marriage of a king's son, 1-14. The Pharisees and Herodians question him concerning the lawfulness of paying tribute to Caesar, 15-22. The Sadducees question him concerning the resurrection, 23-33. A lawyer questions him concerning the greatest commandment in the Law, 34-40. He asks them their opinion of the Christ, and confounds them, 41-46.

AND Jesus answered ^aand spake unto them again by parables, and said;

2 The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son,

3 And ^bsent forth his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding: and they would not come.

4 Again, he sent forth other servants, saying, ^cTell them which are bidden, Behold, I have prepared my dinner: ^dmy oxen and ^emy fatlings are killed, and all things are ready: come unto the marriage.

5 But they made light of it, ^fand went their ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandize:

6 And the remnant took his servants, ^gand entreated them spitefully, and slew them.

7 But when the king heard thereof, he was wroth: and he sent forth ^hhis armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city.

8 Then saith he to his servants, The wedding is Verse 2. The kingdom of heaven] It appears from Luke, chap. xiv. 15, &c., that it was at an entertainment that this parable was originally spoken. It was a constant practice of our Lord to take the subjects of his discourses from the persons present, or from the circumstances of times, persons, and places. A preacher that can do so can never be at a loss for text or sermon.

A marriage for his son] A marriage feast, so the word properly means.

From this parable it appears plain, 1. That the KING means the great God. 2. His SON, the Lord Jesus. 3. The MARRIAGE, his incarnation, or espousing human nature, by taking it into union with himself. 4. The MARRIAGE FEAST, the economy of the gospel. 5. By those who HAD BEEN bidden, or invited, ver. 8, are meant the Jews in general, who, by all the prophets, had been constantly invited to believe in and receive the promised Messiah. 6. By the SERVANTS, we are to understand the first preachers of the gospel, proclaiming salvation to the Jews. 7. By the OTHER SERVANTS, ver. 4, the apostles seem to be meant, who, though they were to preach the gospel to the whole world, yet were to begin at JERUSALEM (Luke xxiv. 47), with the first offers of mercy. 8. By their making light of it, &c., ver. 5, is pointed out their neglect of this salvation, and their preferring secular enjoyments, &c., to the kingdom of Christ. 9. By injuriously using some, and slaying others, of his servants, ver. 6, is pointed out the persecution raised against the apostles by the Jews, in which some of them were martyred. 10. By sending forth his troops, ver. 7, is meant the commission given to the Romans against Judea; and burning up their city, the total destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, the son of Vespasian, which happened about forty-one years after.

Verse 4. Fatlings] Properly fatted rams or wethers, 2 Sam. i. 18. 1 Chron. xv. 26.

Verse 8. Were not worthy.] Because they made light of it, and would not come; preferring earthly things to heavenly blessings. Refusal to come to a marriage feast, when invited, is considered a breach of the law of God among the Mahomedans; and it was probably considered in this light among all the oriental nations. This observation is necessary, in order to point out more forcibly the iniquity of the refusal mentioned in the text.

ready, but they which were bidden were not ^aworthy.

9 Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.

10 So those servants went out into the highways, and ^bgathered together all, as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests.

11 And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man ^cwhich had not on a wedding garment:

12 And he said unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither, not having a wedding garment? And he was speechless.

13 Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him ^dinto outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

14 ^eFor many are called, but few are chosen.

15 ^fThen went the Pharisees, and took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk.

Verse 9. Go ye therefore into the highways] Cross or by-paths; the places where two or more roads met in one, leading into the city, where people were coming together from various quarters of the country.

As many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.] God sends his salvation to every soul, that all may believe and be saved.

Verse 10. Gathered together all—both bad and good] By the preaching of the gospel, multitudes of souls are gathered into what is generally termed the visible church of Christ.

Verse 11. When the king came] When God shall come to judge the world.

Wedding garment] Among the Orientals, long white robes were worn at public festivals; and those who appeared on such occasions with any other garments were esteemed, not only highly culpable, but worthy of punishment. The person who invited the guests prepared such a garment for each, for the time being; and with this he was furnished on his application to the ruler of the feast.

This marriage feast or dinner (the communication of the graces of the gospel in this life) prepares for the marriage supper of the Lamb, Rev. xix. 7, 8, 9, the enjoyment of eternal blessedness in the kingdom of glory. Now, as without holiness, no man can see the Lord, we may at once perceive what our Lord means by the marriage garment—it is HOLINESS of heart and life. The text last quoted asserts that the fine, white, and clean linen (alluding to the marriage garment above mentioned) was an emblem of the RIGHTEOUSNESS of the SAINTS.

Verse 12. He saith unto him, Friend] Rather companion. How camest thou in hither] Why professest to be called by my name, while living without a preparation for my kingdom.

He was speechless.] He was muzzled, gagged. He had nothing to say in vindication of his neglect. There was a garment provided, but he neither put it on, nor applied for it. His conduct, therefore, was in the highest degree insulting and indecorous. As this man is the emblem, by general consent, of those who shall perish in the last day, may we not ask, without offence, where does the doctrine of absolute reprobation or preterition appear in this case? If Christ had never died for him, or if he had applied for the garment, and was refused, might he not well have alleged this in behalf of his soul?—and would not the just God have listened to it?

16 And they sent out unto him their disciples with the Herodians, saying, Master, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man: for thou regardest not the person of men:

17 Tell us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute ^a unto Cæsar, or not?

18 But Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?

Verse 14. Many are called, &c.] This is an allusion to the Roman custom of raising their militia; all were mustered, but only those were chosen to serve, who were found proper.

Verse 15. In his talk.] By discourse: intending to ask him subtle and ensnaring questions; his answers to which might involve him either with the Roman government, or with the great Sanhedrin.

Verse 19. They brought unto him a penny.] A denarius: probably the ordinary capitation tax, though the poll tax in the Law, Exod. xxx. 13, 14, was half a shekel, about twice as much as the denarius. The Roman denarius had the emperor's image with a proper legend stamped on one side of it.

Verse 20. Whose is this image and superscription?] He knew well enough whose they were; but he shewed the excellency of his wisdom, in making them answer to their own confusion. They came to ensnare our Lord in his discourse, and now they are ensnared in their own. He who digs a pit for his neighbour, ordinarily falls into it himself.

Verse 21. They say unto him, Cæsar's.] The image was the head of the emperor; the superscription, his titles. JULIUS CÆSAR was the first who caused his image to be struck on the Roman coin. Tiberius was emperor at this time.

Render therefore unto Cæsar] The conclusion is drawn from their own premises. You acknowledge this to be Cæsar's coin; this coin is current in your land; the currency of this coin shows the country to be under the Roman government; and your acknowledgment that it is Cæsar's proves you have submitted. Don't therefore be unjust; but render to Cæsar the things which you acknowledge to be his; at the same time, be not impious, but render unto God the things which belong to God.

This answer is full of consummate wisdom. It establishes the limits, regulates the rights, and distinguishes the jurisdiction of the two empires of heaven and earth. The image of princes stamped on their coin denotes that temporal things belong all to their government. The image of God stamped on the soul denotes that all its faculties and powers belong to the Most High, and should be employed in his service.

What does a man owe to Cæsar?—to the civil government under which he lives? Our Lord has answered the question—That which is Cæsar's. But what is it that is Cæsar's? 1. The civil government under which a man lives, and by which he is protected, demands his honour and reverence. 2. The laws which are made for the suppression of evil doers, and the maintenance of good order, which are calculated to promote the benefit of the whole, and the comfort of the indi-

25 ¹ Now there were with us seven brethren: and the first, when he had married a wife, deceased; and, having no issue, left his wife unto his brother: 26 Likewise the second also, and the third, unto the ² seventh:

27 And last of all, the woman died also.

28 Therefore, in the resurrection, whose wife shall she be of the seven? for they all had her.

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, Ye do err, ³ not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God.

30 For in the resurrection, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but ⁴ are as the angels of God in heaven.

31 But as touching the resurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying, 32 ⁵ I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living.

33 And when the multitude heard this, ⁶ they were astonished at his doctrine.

34 ⁷ But when the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence, they were gathered together.

vidual should be religiously obeyed. 3. The government that charges itself with the support and defence of the whole, should have its unavoidable expenses repaid by the people; therefore we should pay tribute. But remember, if Cæsar should intrude into the things of God, coin a new creed, or broach a new gospel, and affect to rule the conscience, while he rules the state, in these things Cæsar is not to be obeyed; he is taking the things of God, and he must not get them. Give not therefore God's things to Cæsar, and give not Cæsar's things to God.

Verse 22. When they had heard these words, they marvelled] And well they might—never man spake like this man. By this decision, CÆSAR is satisfied—he gets his own to the uttermost farthing. God is glorified—his honour is in every respect secured. And the people are edified—one of the most difficult questions that could possibly come before them, is answered in such a way as to relieve their consciences, and direct their conduct.

Verse 23. The same day] Malice is ever active; let it be defeated ever so often, it returns to the charge. Jesus and his gospel give no quarter to vice, the vicious will give no quarter to him or it.

Verse 24. Raise up seed unto his brother.] This law is mentioned, Deut. xxv. 5. The word seed should be always translated children or posterity.

Verse 25. Seven brethren] It is very likely that the Sadducees increased the number, merely to make the question the more difficult.

Verse 28. Whose wife shall she be of the seven?] The question put by these bad men is well suited to the mouth of a libertine. The stream cannot rise higher than the spring: these men, and their younger brethren, atheists, deists, and libertines of all sorts, can form no idea of heaven as a place of blessedness, unless they can hope to find in it the gratification of their sensual desires. On this very ground Mohammed built his paradise.

Verse 29. Ye do err] Or, Ye are deceived—by your impure passions: not knowing the scriptures, which assert the resurrection: nor the miraculous power of God by which it is to be effected.

Their deception appeared in their supposing, that if there were a resurrection, men and women were to marry and be given in marriage as in this life; which our Lord shows is not the case: for men and women there shall be like the angels of God, immortal, and free from all human passions, and from those propensities which were to continue with them only during this present state of existence.

Verse 31. Have ye not read] This quotation is taken from Exod. iii. 6, 16; and as the five books of Moses were the only 35 Then one of them, which was ^a a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying, 36 Master, which is the great commandment in the law?

37 Jesus said unto him, ^b Thou shalt love the LORD thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

38 This is the first and great commandment.

39 And the second is like unto it, ^c Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

40 ^d On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.

^a Luke x. 25.—^b Deut. vi. 5. x. 12. xxx. 6. Luke x. 27. 1 Sam. vii. 3. 2 Kings x. 31. Ps. cxix. 2. 1 Tim. i. 5. 1 John iv. 7, 8, 17, 18, 20, 21.—^c Lev. xix. 18. Ch. xix. 19. Mark xii. 31. Luke x. 27. Rom. xiii. 9. Gal. v. 14. James ii. 8.—^d Ch. vii. 12. 1 Tim.

part of scripture which the Sadducees acknowledged as divine, our Lord, by confuting them from those books, proved the second part of his assertion, "Ye are ignorant of those very scriptures which ye profess to hold sacred."

Verse 32. I am the God of Abraham] Let it be observed, that Abraham was dead upwards of 300 years before these words were spoken to Moses: yet still God calls himself the God of Abraham, &c. Now Christ properly observes that God is not the God of the dead (that word being equal, in the sense of the Sadducees, to an eternal annihilation), but of the living; it therefore follows that, if he be the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, these are not dead, but alive; alive with God, though they had ceased, for some hundreds of years, to exist among mortals.

Verse 33. The multitude—were astonished at his doctrine] God uses the infidelity of some for the edification of others. Had no false doctrine been broached in the world, we had not seen the full evidence of the true teaching. Truth always gains by being opposed.

Verse 34. They were gathered together] They came together upon one accord, or, for the same purpose.

Verse 35. A lawyer] A teacher of the law. These teachers of the law were the same as the scribes or Karaites, who are allowed to have kept more closely to the spiritual meaning of the law and prophets than the Pharisees did; and hence the question proposed by the lawyer or Karaites, was of a more spiritual or refined nature than any of the preceding.

Verse 37. Thou shalt love the Lord] This is a subject of the greatest importance, and should be well understood, as our Lord shows that the whole of true religion is comprised in thus loving God and our neighbour.

It may not be unnecessary to inquire into the literal meaning of the word rendered love. It is supposed to be compounded of two words signifying to act vehemently or intensely, because love is always active, and will act in every possible way; for he who loves is, with all his affection and desire, carried forward to the beloved object, in order to possess and enjoy it. It involves the idea of sovereign preference given to one above all others, present or absent; a concentration of all the thoughts and desires in a single object, which a man prefers to all others. Hence it appears that, by this love, which God requires of his creatures, the soul eagerly cleaves to, affectionately admires, and constantly rests in God, supremely pleased and satisfied with him as its portion; that it acts from him, as its author; for him, as its master; and to him, as its end. That, by it, all the powers and faculties of the mind are concentrated in the Lord of the universe. That, by it, the whole man is willingly surrendered to the Most High; and that through it, an identity or sameness of spirit with the Lord is acquired—the man being made a partaker of the divine nature, having the mind in him which was in Christ, and thus dwelling in God, and God in him.

But what is implied in loving God with all the heart, soul, mind, strength, &c., and when may a man be said to do this? 1. He loves God with all his heart, who loves nothing in comparison of him, and nothing but in reference to him: who is ready to give up, do, or suffer anything in order to please and glorify him.

2. He loves God with all his soul, or rather, with all his life, who is ready to give up life for his sake—who employs life, with all its comforts, and conveniences, to 41 While the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them, 42 Saying, What think ye of Christ? whose son is he? They say unto him, The son of David.

43 He saith unto them, How then doth David in spirit call him Lord, saying, 44 The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool?

45 If David then call him Lord, how is he his son?

46 And no man was able to answer him a word, neither durst any man from that day forth ask him any more questions.

glorify God in, by, and through all: to whom life and death are nothing but as they come from and lead to God.

3. He loves God with all his strength (Mark xii. 30. Luke x. 27) who exerts all the powers of his body and soul in the service of God; who, for the glory of his Maker, spares neither labour nor cost: who sacrifices his time, body, health, ease, for the honour of God his divine Master; who employs in his service all his goods, his talents, his power, credit, authority, and influence.

4. He loves God with all his mind (intellect) who applies himself only to know God and his holy will; who receives with submission, gratitude, and pleasure, the sacred truths which God has revealed to man; who studies no art nor science but so far as it is necessary for the service of God, and uses it at all times to promote his glory; who banishes from his understanding and memory every useless, foolish, and dangerous thought, together with every idea which has any tendency to defile his soul, or turn it for a moment from the centre of eternal repose.

Verse 38. This is the first and great commandment] It is so, 1. In its antiquity, dignity, excellence, justice, sufficiency, fruitfulness, virtue, and efficacy, extent, necessity, and duration.

Verse 39. Thou shalt love thy neighbour] The love of our neighbour springs from the love of God as its source; is found in the love of God as its principle, pattern, and end; and the love of God is found in the love of our neighbour, as its effect, representation, and infallible mark. This love of our neighbour is a love of equity, charity, succour, and benevolence. We owe to our neighbour what we have a right to expect from him.

This is the religion of Jesus! How happy would society be, were these two plain, rational precepts properly observed! Love ME, and love thy FELLOWS!

Verse 40. On these two—hang all the law and the prophets] They are like the first and last links of a chain, all the intermediate ones depend on them. True religion begins and ends in love to God and man.

Verse 41. While the Pharisees were gathered together] Jesus asks a question in his turn, utterly to confound them, and to show the people that the source of all the captious questions of his opponents was their ignorance of the prophecies relative to the Messiah.

Verse 42. What think ye of Christ?] Or, What are your thoughts concerning THE CHRIST—the Messiah; for to this title the emphatic article should always be added Whose son is he?] From what family is he to spring?

They say unto him, The son of David] This was a thing well known among the Jews, and universally acknowledged, see John vii. 42, and is a most powerful proof against them that the Messiah is come. The Evangelists, Matthew and Luke, were so fully convinced of the conclusiveness of this proof, that they had recourse to the public registers; and thus proved to the Jews, from their own records, that Jesus was born of the family mentioned by the prophets. Nor do we find that a scribe, Pharisee, or any other, ever attempted to invalidate this proof, though it would have essentially subverted their cause, could they have done it.

Verse 45. How is he his son?] As the Jews did not attempt to deny the conclusion of our Lord's question, which was, the Messiah is not only the son of David according to the flesh, but he is the Lord of David according to his divine nature, then it is evident they could not.

Verse 48. Neither durst any—ask him any more questions.] From this time, we do not find that our Lord was any more troubled with their captious questions: their whole stock, it appears, was expended, and now they coolly deliberate on the most effectual way to get him murdered. He that resists the truth of God is capable of effecting the worst purpose of Satan.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The character of the scribes and Pharisees, and directions to the people and the disciples to receive the Law from them, but not to follow their bad example, 1-7. The disciples exhorted to humility, 8-12. Different woes pronounced against the scribes and Pharisees for their intolerance, 13; rapacity, 14; false zeal, 15; superstition in oaths and tithes, 16-23; hypocrisy, 24-28. Their cruelty, 29-32. Their persecution of the Apostles, &c. Their destruction foretold, 33-36. Christ's lamentation over Jerusalem, 37-39.

THEN spake Jesus to the multitude, and to his disciples,

2 Saying, 'The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat:

3 All therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do; but do not ye after their works: for^b they say, and do not.

4 'For they bind heavy burdens and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers.

5 But^a all their works they do for to be seen of men: 'they make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments,

6 'And love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues,

7 And greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.

Verse 2. The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat] They sat there formerly by divine appointment; they sit there now by divine permission. What our Lord says here refers to their expounding the Scriptures, for it was the custom of the Jewish doctors to sit while they expounded the Law and Prophets (chap. v. 1, Luke iv. 20-22), and to stand up when they read them.

By the seat of Moses, we are to understand authority to teach the Law.

Verse 3. All therefore whatsoever] That is, all those things which they read out of the Law and Prophets, and all things which they teach consistently with them.

Verse 4. They bind heavy burdens] In a word, like all their successors in spirit, to the present day, they were severe to others, but very indulgent to themselves.

Verse 5. All their works they do for to be seen of men] In pointing out the corruptions of these men, our Lord gives us the distinguishing characteristics of all false teachers, whether Jewish or Christian.

Phylacteries] These were small slips of parchment or vellum, on which certain portions of the Law were written. The Jews tied these about their foreheads and arms, for three different purpose—1. To put them in mind of those precepts which they should constantly observe. 2. To procure them reverence and respect in the sight of the heathen. And 3. To act as amulets or charms to drive away evil spirits. See note on Ex. xiii. 9.

Verse 7. To be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.] My Teacher! my Teacher! There are three words used among the Jews as titles of dignity, which they apply to their doctors—Rabb, Rabbi, and Rabban.

8 'But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren.

9 And call no man your father upon the earth: 'for one is your Father, which is in heaven.

10 Neither be ye called masters: for one is your Master, even Christ.

11 But 'he that is greatest among you shall be your servant.

12 'And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted.

13 But 'woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in.

14 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! 'for ye devour widows' houses, and for a

They may be considered as three degrees of comparison: Rabb, great, Rabbi, greater, and Rabban, greatest.

Verse 8. But be not ye called Rabbi] None of the prophets had ever received this title, nor any of the Jewish doctors before the time of Hillel and Shammai, which was about the time of our Lord.

Ye are brethren.] No one amongst you is higher than another, or can possibly have from me any jurisdiction over the rest.

Verse 9. Call no man your father] Our Lord probably alludes to the Ab, or father of the Sanhedrin, who was the next after the Nasi, or president.

Verse 10. Neither be ye called masters] Leaders. God is in all these respects jealous of his honour. To him alone it belongs to guide and lead his church, as well as to govern and defend it. Jesus is the sole teacher of righteousness. It is he alone (who is the word, light, and eternal truth) that can illuminate every created mind; and who, as Saviour and Redeemer, speaks to every heart by his Spirit.

Verse 11. Your servant.] Deacon. See on chap. xx. 26.

Verse 12. Whosoever shall exalt himself, &c.] The way to arrive at the highest degree of dignity, in the sight of God, is by being willing to become the servant of all. Nothing is more hateful in his sight than pride; to bring it into everlasting contempt, God was manifest in the flesh.

Another lesson, which our blessed Lord teaches here, is, that no man is implicitly to receive the sayings, doctrines, and decisions of any man, or number of men, in the things which concern the interests of his immortal soul. Christ, his Spirit, and his word, are the only infallible teachers.

15 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves.

16 Woe unto you, ye blind guides, which say, Whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing; but whosoever shall swear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor!

17 Ye fools and blind: for whether is greater, the gold, or the temple that sanctifieth the gold?

18 And, whosoever shall swear by the altar, it is nothing; but whosoever sweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is guilty.

19 Ye fools and blind: for whether is greater, the gift, or the altar that sanctifieth the gift?

20 Whoso therefore shall swear by the altar, sweareth by it, and by all things thereon.

21 And whoso shall swear by the temple, sweareth by it, and by him that dwelleth therein.

22 And he that shall swear by heaven, sweareth by the throne of God, and by him that sitteth thereon.

23 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

24 Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.

25 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess.

26 Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also.

27 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness.

28 Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.

29 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! because ye build the tombs of the prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of the righteous, 30 And say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets.

31 Wherefore ye be witnesses unto yourselves, that ye are the children of them which killed the prophets.

32 Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers.

33 Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?

34 Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes: and some of them ye shall kill and crucify; and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city:

35 That upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel, unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar.

Every man who wishes to save his soul must search the Scriptures, by prayer and faith.

Verse 13. Ye shut up the kingdom. As a key by opening a lock gives entrance into a house, &c., so knowledge of the sacred testimonies, manifested in expounding them to the people, may be said to open the way into the kingdom of heaven. But where men, who are termed teachers, are destitute of this knowledge themselves, they may be said to shut this kingdom; because they occupy the place of those who should teach, and thus prevent the people from acquiring heavenly knowledge.

Verse 15. Compass sea and land. A proverbial expression, similar to ours, You leave no stone unturned; intimating that they did all in their power to gain converts, not to God, but to their sect.

Proselyte. A stranger, or foreigner; one who is come from his own people and country, to sojourn with another. See the different kinds of proselytes explained in the note on Exod. xii. 43.

The child of hell. A Hebraism for an excessively wicked person, such as might claim hell for his mother, and the devil for his father.

Verse 20. Whoso—shall swear by the altar. As an oath always supposes a person who witnesses it, and will punish perjury: therefore, whether they swore by the temple or the gold (ver. 16), or by the altar or the gift laid on it (ver. 18), the oath necessarily supposed the God of the temple, of the altar, and of the gifts, who witnessed the whole, and would, even in their exempt cases, punish the perjury.

Verse 21. By him that dwelleth therein. The common reading is dwelleth or inhabiteth, but dwelt or did inhabit, is the reading of many MSS. The importance of this reading may be perceived by the following considerations. In the first Jewish temple, God had graciously condescended to manifest himself. Now the Jews unanimously acknowledge that five things were wanting in the second temple, which were found in the first: viz., 1. the ark; 2. the holy spirit of prophecy; 3. the Urim and Thummim; 4. the sacred fire; and 5. the Shekinah. As the Lord had long before this time abandoned the Jewish temple, and had now made the human nature of Jesus the Shekinah, our Lord could not, with any propriety, say that the Supreme Being did now inhabit the temple; and therefore used a word that hinted to them that God had forsaken their temple, and consequently the whole of that service which was performed in it, and had now opened the new and living way to the holiest, by the Messiah.

Verse 23. Ye pay tithe of mint, &c. They were remarkably scrupulous in the performance of all the rites and ceremonies of religion, but totally neglected the soul, spirit, and practice of godliness.

Judgment. Acting according to justice and equity towards all mankind. Mercy—to the distressed and miserable. And faith in God, as the fountain of all righteousness, mercy, and truth.

These ought ye to have done, &c. Our Lord did not object to their paying tithe even of common pot-herbs—this did not affect the spirit of religion; but while they did this and such like, to the utter neglect of justice, mercy, and faith, they showed that they had no religion, and knew nothing of its nature.

Verse 24. Blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel. This clause should be thus translated, Ye strain out the gnat, but ye swallow down the camel.

Verse 25. Ye make clean the outside. A man may appear clean without, who is unclean within; but outward purity will not avail in the sight of God, where inward holiness is wanting.

Verse 27. For ye are like. Ye exactly resemble—the parallel is complete.

Whited sepulchres. White-washed tombs. As the law considered those unclean who had touched any thing belonging to the dead, the Jews took care to have their tombs white-washed each year, that, being easily discovered, they might be consequently avoided.

Verse 28. Even so ye also—appear righteous unto men] But what will this appearance avail a man, when God sits in judgment upon his soul? Will the fair reputation which he had acquired among men, while his heart was the seat of unrighteousness, screen him from the stroke of that justice which impartially sends all impurity and unholiness into the pit of destruction? No. In the sin that he hath sinned, and in which he hath died, and according to that, shall he be judged and punished; and his profession of holiness only tends to sink him deeper into the lake which burns with unquenchable fire.

Verse 29. Ye build the tombs of the prophets] It appears that, through respect to their memory, they often repaired, and sometimes beautified, the tombs of the prophets.

Verse 30. We would not have been partakers] They imagined themselves much better than their ancestors; but our Lord uncovers their hearts, and shows them that they are about to be more abundantly vile than all who had ever preceded them.

Verse 31. Ye be witnesses] Ye acknowledge that ye are the children of those murderers, and ye are about to give full proof that ye are not degenerated.

Verse 32. Fill ye up then] Notwithstanding the profession you make, ye will fill up the measure of your fathers—will continue to walk in their way, accomplish the fulness of every evil purpose by murdering me; and then, when the measure of your iniquity is full, vengeance shall come upon you to the uttermost, as it did on your rebellious ancestors.

Verse 33. Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers] What a terrible stroke!—Ye are serpents, and the offspring of serpents. This refers to ver. 31: they confessed that they were the children of those who murdered the prophets; and they are now going to murder Christ and his followers, to show that they had not degenerated—an accursed seed, of an accursed breed.

Verse 34. Wherefore] To show how my prediction shall be verified. By prophets, wise men, and scribes, our Lord intends the evangelists, apostles, deacons, &c., who should be employed in proclaiming his gospel: men who should equal the ancient prophets, their wise men, and scribes, in all the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit.

Verse 35. Upon the earth] Upon this land, meaning probably the land of Judea; for thus the word is often to be understood. It is likely that our Lord refers to the murder of Zachariah, mentioned 2 Chron. xxiv. 20.

But it is objected, that this Zachariah was called the son of Jehoiada, and our Lord calls this one the son of Barachiah. Let it be observed, 1. That double names were frequent among the Jews; and sometimes the person was called by one, sometimes by the other.

ren together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens ^a under her wings, and ye would not.

38 Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.

39 For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, * Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

^a Ps. xvii. 8. xci. 4.—^b Ps. cxviii. 26. Ch. xxi. 9.

2. That Jerome says that, in the gospel of the Nazarenes it was Jehoiada, instead of Barachiah.

3. That Jehoiada and Barachiah have the very same meaning, the praise or blessing of Jehovah. [As Zacharias the prophet was son of Barachiah (Zech. i. 1), some transcriber may have inserted the name of the latter by mistake.]

Some think that our Lord refers, in the spirit of prophecy, to the murder of Zacharias, son of Baruch, a rich Jew, who was judged, condemned, and massacred in the temple by Idumean zealots, because he was rich, a lover of liberty, and a hater of wickedness. But the former opinion is every way the most probable.

Between the temple and the altar.] That is, between the sanctuary and the altar of burnt-offerings.

Verse 36. Shall come upon this generation.] Upon this race of men, viz., the Jews.

Verse 37. O Jerusalem, Jerusalem! 1. It is evident that our blessed Lord seriously and earnestly wished the salvation of the Jews. 2. That he did every thing that could be done, consistently with his own perfections, and the liberty of his creatures, to effect this. 3. That his tears over the city, Luke xix. 41, sufficiently evince his sincerity. 4. That these persons nevertheless perished. And 5. That the reason was, they would not be gathered together under his protection; therefore wrath, i. e., punishment, came upon them to the uttermost. From this it is evident that there have been persons whom Christ wished to save, and bled to save, who notwithstanding perished, because they would not come unto him, John v. 40. The metaphor which our Lord uses here is a very beautiful one. When the hen sees a beast of prey coming, she makes a noise to assemble her chickens, that she may cover them with her wings from the danger. The hen's affection to her brood is so very strong as to become proverbial. How long had these thankless and unholy people been the objects of his tenderest cares! For more than 2000 years, they engrossed the most peculiar regards of the most beneficent Providence; and during the three years of our Lord's public ministry, his preaching and miracles had but one object and aim, the instruction and salvation of this thoughtless and disobedient people.

Verse 38. Behold, your house] The temple—this is certainly what is meant. It was once the Lord's temple, God's own house; but now he says, your temple or house—to intimate that God had abandoned it.

Verse 39. Ye shall not see me] I will remove my gospel from you, and withdraw my protection.

Till ye shall say, Blessed] Till after the fulness of the Gentiles is brought in, when the word of life shall again be sent unto you; then will ye rejoice, and bless, and praise him that cometh in the name of the Lord, with full and final salvation for the lost sheep of the house of Israel. See Rom. xi. 26, 27.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Christ foretells the destruction of the temple, 1, 2. His disciples inquire when and what shall be the signs of this destruction, 3. Our Lord answers, and enumerates them—false Christs, 5. Wars, famines, pestilences, and earthquakes, 6-8. Persecution of his followers, 9. Apostacy from the truth, 10-13. General spread of the Gospel, 14. He foretells the investment of the city by the Romans, 15-18. The calamities of those times, 19-22. Warns them against seduction by false prophets, 23-26. The suddenness of these calamities, 27, 28. Total destruction of the Jewish polity, 29-31. The whole illustrated by the parable of a fig-tree, 32, 33. The certainty of the event, though the time is concealed, 34-36. Careless state of the people, 37-41. The necessity of watchfulness and fidelity, illustrated by the parable of the two servants, one faithful, the other wicked, 42-51.

AND Jesus went out, and departed from the temple: and his disciples came to him for to shew him the buildings of the temple.

2 And Jesus said unto them, ^b See ye not all these things? Verily I say unto you, ^c There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

3 And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, the ^d disciples came unto him privately, saying, ^e Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?

4 And Jesus answered and said unto them, ^f Take heed that no man deceive you.

5 For ^g many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; ^h and shall deceive many.

Verse 1. And Jesus went out, and departed from the temple] Or, And Jesus going out of the temple, was going away. This is the arrangement of the words in several eminent manuscripts, versions, and fathers; and is much clearer than that in the common translation.

Verse 2. See ye not all these things?] The common text, and many manuscripts, have, Do ye not see or consider? But the negative particle is omitted by several excellent manuscripts and versions, and by some of the primitive fathers, who all read it thus, See, or consider all these things.

There shall not be left here one stone] These seem to have been the last words he spoke as he left the temple, into which he never afterwards entered; and, when he got to the mount of Olives, he renewed the discourse. From this mount, on which our Lord and his disciples now sat, the whole of the city, and particularly the temple, were clearly seen. This part of our Lord's prediction was fulfilled in the most literal manner.

Verse 3. Tell us when shall these things be?] Some maintain that these are but three parts of the same question, and that our Lord's answers only refer to the destruction of the Jewish state, and that nothing is spoken here concerning the LAST or judgment day.

End of the world?] Or of the age; viz., the Jewish economy, which is a frequent accommodated meaning of the word, the proper meaning of which is, as Aristotle (De Caelo) observes, ETERNAL.

Verse 4. Take heed that no man deceive you.] The world is full of deceivers, and it is only by taking heed to the counsel of Christ that even his followers can escape being ruined by them.

Verse 5. For many shall come in my name] 1. Josephus says that there were many who, under the pretence of divine inspiration, deceived the people, leading out numbers of them to the desert, pretending that God would there show them the signs of liberty, meaning redemption from the Roman power; and that an Egyptian false prophet led 80,000 men into the desert, who were almost all cut off by ^h Felix. See Acts xxi. 38.

2. Of the same stamp and character was also Dositheus, the Samaritan, who pretended that he was the Christ foretold by Moses.

3. About twelve years after the death of our Lord, when Cuspius Fadus was procurator of Judea, arose an impostor of the name of Theudas, who said he was a prophet, and persuaded a great multitude to follow him with their best effects to the river Jordan, which he promised to divide for their passage; and saying these things, says Josephus, he deceived many: almost the very words of our Lord.

4. A few years afterwards, under the reign of Nero, while Felix was procurator of Judea, impostors of this stamp were so frequent, that some were taken and killed almost every day.

Verse 7. Nation shall rise against nation] This portended the dissensions, insurrections, and mutual slaughter of the Jews, and those of other nations, who dwelt in the same cities together; as particularly at Cæsarea, where the Jews and Syrians contended about the right of the city, which ended there in the total expulsion of the Jews, above 20,000 of whom were slain. The whole Jewish nation being exas-

7 For ⁱ nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places.

8 All these are the beginning of sorrows.

9 ^j Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake.

10 And then shall many ^k be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another.

perated at this, flow to arms, and burnt and plundered the neighbouring cities and villages of the Syrians, making an immense slaughter of the people. The Syrians, in return, destroyed not a less number of the Jews. At Scythopolis they murdered upwards of 13,000. At Ascalon they killed 2,500. At Ptolemais they slew 2000, and made many prisoners. The Tyrians also put many Jews to death, and imprisoned more: the people of Gadara did likewise; and all the other cities of Syria in proportion, as they hated or feared the Jews. At Alexandria, the Jews and heathens fought, and 50,000 of the former were slain. The people of Damascus conspired against the Jews of that city, and, assaulting them unarmed, killed 10,000 of them.

Kingdom against kingdom] This portended the open wars of different tetrarchies and provinces against each other. 1st. That of the Jews and Galileans against the Samaritans for the murder of some Galileans going up to the feast of Jerusalem, while Cumanus was procurator. 2nd. That of the whole nation of the Jews against the Romans and Agrippa, and other allies of the Roman empire; which began when Gessius Florus was procurator. 3rd. That of the civil war in Italy, while Otho and Vitellius were contending for the empire.

There shall be famines, and pestilences] There was a famine foretold by Agabus (Acts xi. 28), which is mentioned by Suetonius, Tacitus, and Eusebius; which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cæsar, and was so severe at Jerusalem, that Josephus says (Ant. b. xx. c. 2) many died for lack of food. Pestilences are the usual attendants of famines: as the scarcity and badness of provisions generally produce epidemic disorders.

Earthquakes in divers places.] There were several in those times to which our Lord refers; particularly one at Crete in the reign of Claudius, one at Smyrna, Miletus, Chios, Samos. One at Rome, mentioned by Tacitus; and one at Laodicea, in the reign of Nero, in which the city was overthrown, as were likewise Hierapolis and Colosse. One at Campania, mentioned by Seneca; and one at Rome, in the reign of Galba, mentioned by Suetonius, in the life of that emperor. Add to all these, a dreadful one in Judea, mentioned by Josephus (War, b. iv. c. 4), accompanied by a dreadful tempest, violent winds, vehement showers, and continual lightnings and thunders; which led many to believe that these things portended some uncommon calamity.

To these St. Luke adds that there shall be fearful sights and great signs from heaven (chap. xxi. 11). Josephus, in his preface to the Jewish war, enumerates these. 1st. A star hung over the city like a sword; and a comet continued a whole year. 2nd. The people being assembled at the feast of unleavened bread, at the ninth hour of the night, a great light shone about the altar and the temple, and this continued for half an hour. 3rd. At the same feast, a cow led to sacrifice brought forth a lamb in the midst of the temple! 4th. The eastern gate of the temple, which was of solid brass, and very heavy, and could hardly be shut by twenty men, and was fastened by strong bars and bolts, was seen at the sixth hour of the night to open of its own accord! 5th. Before sun-setting there were seen, over all the country, chariots and armies, fighting in the clouds, and besieging 13 * But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

14 And this ^b gospel of the kingdom * shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.

15 * When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by * Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (* whoso readeth, let him understand :)

16 Then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains :

17 Let him which is on the house top not come down to take anything out of his house :

18 Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes.

cities. 6th. At the feast of Pentecost, when the priests were going into the inner temple by night, to attend their service, they heard first a motion and noise, and then a voice as of a multitude, saying, LET US DEPART HENCE ! 7th. What Josephus reckons one of the most terrible signs of all was, that one, Jesus, a country fellow, four years before the war began, and when the city was in peace and plenty, came to the feast of tabernacles, and ran crying up and down the streets, day and night : " A voice from the east ! a voice from the west ! a voice from the four winds ! a voice against Jerusalem and the temple ! a voice against the bridegrooms and the brides ! and a voice against all the people ! " Though the magistrates endeavoured by stripes and tortures to restrain him, yet he still cried, with a mournful voice, " Woe, woe to Jerusalem ! " And this he continued to do for several years together, going about the walls and crying with a loud voice : " Woe, woe to the city, and to the people, and to the temple ! " and as he added, " Woe, woe to myself ! " a stone from some sling or engine struck him dead on the spot ! Tacitus, a Roman historian, gives very nearly the same account with that of Josephus.

Verse 8. All these are the beginning of sorrows.] Travailing pains. The whole land of Judea is represented under the notion of a woman in grievous travail : but our Lord intimates, that all that had already been mentioned were only the first pangs and throes, and nothing in comparison of that hard and death-bringing labour, which should afterwards take place.

From the calamities of the nation in general, our Lord passes to those of the Christians.

Verse 9. Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted.] Rather, Then shall they deliver you up to affliction. By a bold figure of speech, affliction is here personified.

Ye shall be hated of all nations.] Both Jew and Gentile will unite in persecuting and tormenting you. Perhaps all the Gentiles, as in the parallel places in Mark xiii. 9-11, and in Luke xxi. 12-15, the Jewish persecution is mentioned distinctly. We need go no farther than the Acts of the Apostles for the completion of these particulars. But if we look beyond the book of the Acts of the Apostles, to the bloody persecutions under Nero, we shall find these predictions still more amply fulfilled : in these, numberless Christians fell, besides those two champions of the faith, Peter and Paul. And it was, as says Tertullian, a war against the very name of Christ ; for he who was called Christian, had committed crime enough, in bearing the name, to be put to death. So true were our Saviour's words, that they should be hated of all men for his NAME's sake, Verse 10. Then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another.] To illustrate this point, one sentence out of Tacitus (Annal. l. xv) will be sufficient, who, speaking of the persecution under Nero, says, At first, several were seized, who confessed, and then by THEIR DISCOVERY, a great multitude of others were convicted and executed.

Verse 11. False prophets] Also were to be raised up ; such as Simon Magus and his followers ; and the false

20 But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the sabbath-day :

22 And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved ; ^c but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened.

23 ^d Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there ; believe it not.

24 For ^e there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders ; inasmuch that, ^f if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect.

25 Behold, I have told you before.

26 Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert ; go not forth : behold, he is in the secret chambers ; believe it not.

apostles complained of by St. Paul, 2 Cor. xi. 13, who were deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. Such also were Hymeneus and Philetus, 2 Tim. ii. 17, 18.

Verse 12. The love of many shall wax cold.] Even at this early period there seems to have been a very considerable defection in several Christian churches ; see Gal. iii. 1-4. 2 Thess. iii. 1, &c. 2 Tim. i. 15.

Verse 13. But he that shall endure] It is very remarkable that not a single Christian perished in the destruction of Jerusalem, though there were many there when Cestius Gallus invested the city ; and, had he persevered in the siege, he would soon have rendered himself master of it ; but, when he unexpectedly and unaccountably raised the siege, the Christians took that opportunity to escape.

Verse 14. And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world.] But, notwithstanding these persecutions, there should be an universal publication of the glad tidings of the kingdom, for a testimony to all nations.

In all the world.] Perhaps no more is meant here than the Roman empire : for it is beyond controversy that the phrase in Luke ii. 1, means no more than the whole Roman empire, as a decree for taxation or enrolment from Augustus Caesar could have no influence but in the Roman dominions ; but see on Luke ii. 1. However, we are under no necessity to restrain the phrase to the Roman empire, as, previously to the destruction of Jerusalem, the gospel was not only preached in the lesser Asia, and Greece, and Italy, the greatest theatres of action then in the world ; but was likewise propagated as far north as SCYTHIA ; as far south as ETHIOPIA ; as far east as PARTHIA and INDIA ; and as far west as SPAIN and BRITAIN.

Then shall the end come.] When this general publication of the gospel shall have taken place, then a period shall be put to the whole Jewish economy, by the utter destruction of their city and temple.

Verse 15. The abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel.] This refers to the Roman army ; and this abomination, standing in the holy place, is the Roman army besieging Jerusalem : this, our Lord says, is what was spoken of by Daniel the prophet, in the ninth and eleventh chapters of his prophecy ; and in reference to this very event they are understood by the Rabbins. The Roman army is called an abomination, for its ensigns and images, which were so to the Jews.

Verse 16. Then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains.] This counsel was remembered and wisely followed by the Christians afterwards, who left Jerusalem and fled to Pella, and other places beyond the river Jordan ; and so escaped the general shipwreck of their country : not one of them perished.

Verse 17. Let him which is on the house top.] He who is walking on the house top, let him not come down to take any thing out of his house : but let him instantly pursue his course along the tops of the houses, and escape out at the city gate as fast as he can.

30 ^d And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: ^e and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn; ^f and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory.

Verse 18. Neither let him which is in the field return back] Because when once the army of the Romans sits down before the city, there shall be no more any possibility of escape, as they shall never remove till Jerusalem be destroyed.

Verse 19. And woe unto them (alas! for them) that are with child, &c.] For such persons are not in a condition to make their escape; neither can they bear the miseries of the siege. Josephus says the houses were full of women and children that perished by the famine; and that the mothers snatched the food even out of their own children's mouths.

Verse 20. But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter] For the hardness of the season, the badness of the roads, the shortness of the days, and the length of the nights, will all be great impediments to your flight.

Neither on the Sabbath-day] That you may not raise the indignation of the Jews by travelling on that day, and so suffer that death out of the city, which you had endeavoured to escape from within. Besides, on the Sabbath-days, the Jews not only kept within doors, but the gates of all the cities and towns in every place were kept shut and barred; so that, if their flight should be on a sabbath, they could not expect admission into any place of security in the land.

Verse 21. For then shall be great tribulation] No history can furnish us with a parallel to the calamities and miseries of the Jews:—rapine, murder, famine, and pestilence within: fire and sword, and all the horrors of war without. Our Lord wept at the foresight of these calamities; and it is almost impossible for any humane person to read the relation of them in Josephus without weeping also.

Verse 22. Except those days should be shortened] Josephus computes the number of those who perished in the siege at eleven hundred thousand, besides those who were slain in other places; and if the Romans had gone on destroying in this manner, the whole nation of the Jews would, in a short time, have been entirely extirpated; but, for the sake of the elect, the Jews, that they might not be utterly destroyed, and for the Christians particularly, the days were shortened.

Verse 23. Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo here is Christ] Many such impostors did arise about that time, promising deliverance from God; and the lower the Jews were reduced, the more disposed they were to listen to such deceivers. Among these Simon Magus, and Dositheus, mentioned before; and Barcoab, who, St. Jerome says, pretended to vomit flames. And it is certain these and some others were so dexterous in imitating miraculous works, that they deceived many; and such were their works, that if the elect, the chosen persons—the Christians, had not had the fullest evidence of the truth of Christ's mission and miracles, they must have been deceived too; but, having had these proofs, they could not possibly be deceived by these impostors. This is simply the meaning of this place; and it is truly astonishing that it should be brought as a proof for the doctrine (whether true or false is at present out of the question) of the necessary and eternal perseverance of the saints!

Verse 25. Behold, I have told you before.] That is, I have forewarned you.

Verse 26. If they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert] Our Lord not only foretold the appearance of these impostors, but also the manner and circumstances of their conduct. Some he mentions as appearing in the desert. Josephus says, that many impostors and cheats persuaded the people to follow them to the desert, promising to show them signs and wonders done by the providence of God. Others conducted their deluded followers to the secret chambers. Josephus mentions a false prophet, who declared to the people in the city, that God commanded them to go up into the temple, and there they should receive the signs of deliverance.

Verse 27. For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west] Our Lord, in the most particular manner, points out the very march of the Roman army: they entered into Judea on the east, and carried on their conquests westward, as if not only the extensiveness of the ruin, but the very route which the army would take, were intended in the comparison of the lightning issuing from the east, and shining to the west.

Verse 28. For wheresoever the carcase is] The dead carcase. The Jewish nation, which was morally and judiciously dead. There will the eagles] The Roman armies, called so partly from their strength and fierceness, and partly from the figure of these animals which was always wrought on their ensigns, or even in brass, placed on the tops of their ensign-staves. It is remarkable that the Roman fury pursued these wretched men wheresoever they were found.

Verse 29. Immediately after the tribulation, &c.] Commentators generally understand this, and what follows, of the end of the world, and Christ's coming to judgment: but the word immediately shows that our Lord is not speaking of any distant event, but of something immediately consequent on calamities already predicted: and that must be the destruction of Jerusalem.

In the prophetic language, great commotions upon earth are often represented under the notion of commotions and changes in the heavens. See Isa. xiii. 9, 10; Ezek. xxxii. 7, 8; Dan. viii. 10; Joel. ii. 30, 31.

Verse 30. Then shall appear the sign of the Son of man] The plain meaning of this is, that the destruction of Jerusalem will be such a remarkable instance of divine vengeance, such a signal manifestation of Christ's power and glory, that all the Jewish tribes shall mourn, and many will, in consequence of this manifestation of God, be led to acknowledge Christ and his religion. By the earth (or the land), in the text, is evidently meant, as in several other places, the land of Judea and its tribes, either its then inhabitants, or the Jewish people wheresoever found.

Verse 31. He shall send his angels] His messengers, the apostles, and their successors in the Christian ministry.

With a great sound of a trumpet] Or, a loud sounding trumpet—the earnest affectionate call of the gospel of peace, life, and salvation.

Shall gather together his elect] The Gentiles, who were now chosen or elected, in place of the rebellious, obstinate Jews, according to our Lord's prediction, Matt. viii. 11, 12, and Luke xiii. 28, 29. The Christian religion spread and prevailed mightily after this period: and nothing contributed more to the success of the gospel than the destruction of Jerusalem happening in the very time and manner, and with the very circumstances, so particularly foretold by our Lord. It was after this period that the kingdom of Christ began, no, not the angels of heaven, * but my Father only.

37 But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

38 ^b For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, 39 And knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

40 ^c Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

41 Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

42 ^d Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.

43 ^e But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up.

and his reign was established in almost every part of the world.

Verse 32. Learn a parable of the fig tree] That is, These signs which I have given you will be as infallible a proof of the approaching ruin of the Jewish state, as the budding of the trees is a proof of the coming summer.

Verse 34. This generation shall not pass] This race, i. e., the Jews shall not cease from being a distinct people, till all the counsels of God relative to them and the Gentiles be fulfilled. Some understand this generation as meaning the persons who were then living, that they should not die before these signs, &c., took place: but though this was true, as to the calamities that fell upon the Jews, and the destruction of their government, temple, &c., yet as our Lord mentions Jerusalem's continuing to be under the power of the Gentiles, till the fulness of the Gentiles should come in, i. e., till all the nations of the world should receive the gospel of Christ, after which the Jews themselves should be converted unto God, Rom. xi. 25, &c., I think it more proper not to restrain its meaning to the few years which preceded the destruction of Jerusalem: but to understand it of the care taken by divine providence to preserve them as a distinct people, and yet to keep them out of their own land, and from their temple service. But still it is literally true in reference to the destruction of Jerusalem.

Verse 36. But of that day and hour] The original here rendered day, is translated season by many eminent critics, and is used in this sense by both sacred and profane authors. As the day was not known, in which Jerusalem should be invested by the Romans, therefore our Lord advised his disciples to pray that it might not be on a sabbath; and as the season was not known, therefore they were to pray that it might not be in the winter: ver. 20.

Verses 37, 38. As the days of Noe—they were eating and drinking] That is, they spent their time in rapine, luxury, and riot.

Verse 39. And knew not] They considered not—did not lay Noah's warning to heart, till it was too late to profit by it: so shall it be—and so it was in this coming of the Son of man.

44 ^f Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh.

45 ^g Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season?

46 ^h Blessed is that servant, whom his lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing.

47 Verily I say unto you, That ⁱ he shall make him ruler over all his goods.

48 But, and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming;

49 And shall begin to smite his fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken;

50 The lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of,

51 And shall ^j cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: ^k there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Verses 40, 41. Then shall two men—two women—one shall be taken, and the other left.] So general should these calamities be, that no two persons, whosoever found, or about whatsoever employed, should be both able to effect their escape; and that captivity and the sword should have a complete triumph over this unhappy people.

Two women shall be grinding] Women alone are still employed in grinding the corn in the East; and it is only when dispatch is required, or the uppermost millstone is heavy, that a second woman is added.

Verse 42. Watch therefore] Be always on your guard, that you may not be taken unawares, and that you may be properly prepared to meet God in the way either of judgment or mercy, whosoever he may come.

Verse 45. Who then is a faithful and wise servant] All should live in the same expectation of the coming of Christ, which a servant has with respect to the return of his master, who, in departing for a season, left the management of his affairs to him; of which management he is to give an exact account on his master's return.

Verse 46. Blessed is that servant] His blessedness consists in his master's approbation.

Verse 47. He shall make him ruler over all his goods.] O heavenly privilege of a faithful minister of Christ! He shall receive from God a power to dispense all the blessings of the New Covenant; and his word shall ever be accompanied with the demonstration of the Holy Ghost to the hearts of all that hear it. Much of a preacher's usefulness may be lost by his unfaithfulness.

Verse 48. But, and if that evil servant] Here are three characters of a bad minister.

Verse 50. The lord of that servant] Here are three punishments which answer to the three characteristics of the bad minister.

Verse 51. Cut him asunder] This refers to an ancient mode of punishment used in several countries. Isaiah is reported to have been sawed asunder.

CHAPTER XXV.

The parable of the ten virgins, five of whom were wise, and five foolish, 1-12. The necessity of being constantly prepared to appear before God, 13. The parable of the talents, 14-30. The manner in which God shall deal with the righteous and the wicked in the judgment of the great day, 31-46.

THEN shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten ^a virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet ^b the bridegroom.

2 ^c And five of them were wise, and five were foolish.

3 They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them :

4 But the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps.

5 While the bridegroom tarried, ^d they all slumbered and slept.

6 And at midnight ^e there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh ; go ye out to meet him.

7 Then all those virgins arose, and ^f trimmed their lamps.

8 And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil ; for our lamps are ^g gone out.

9 But the wise answered, saying, Not so ; lest

Verse 1. Then shall the kingdom of heaven] The state of Jews and professing Christians—or the state of the visible church at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, and in the day of judgment : for the parable appears to relate to both those periods.

Virgins] Denoting the purity of the Christian doctrine and character. In this parable, the bridegroom is generally understood to mean Jesus Christ. The feast, that state of felicity to which he has promised to raise his genuine followers. The wise, or prudent, and foolish virgins, those who truly enjoy, and those who only profess the purity and holiness of his religion. The oil, the grace and salvation of God, or that faith which works by love. The vessel, the heart in which this oil is contained. The lamp, the profession of enjoying the burning and shining light of the gospel of Christ. Going forth, the whole of their sojourning upon earth.

Verse 2. Five of them were wise] Or, provident ; they took care to make a proper provision beforehand, and left nothing to be done in the last moment.

Five were foolish.] The original is generally rendered foolish ; but this does not agree well with provident or prudent, in the first clause, which is the proper meaning of the word.

Verse 4. Took oil in their vessels] They not only had a sufficiency of oil in their lamps, but they carried a vessel with oil to recruit their lamps, when it should be found expedient.

Verse 5. The bridegroom tarried] The coming of the bridegroom to an individual may imply his death : his coming to the world—the final judgment. The delay—the time from a man's birth till his death, in the first case ; in the second, the time from the beginning to the end of the world.

Slumbered and slept.] Or, they became drowsy and fell asleep. As sleep is frequently used in the Sacred Writings for death, so drowsiness, which precedes sleep, may be considered as pointing out the decays of the constitution, and the sicknesses which precede death. The other explanations which are given of this place must be unsatisfactory to every man who is not warped by some point in his creed, which must be supported at every expense.

Verse 6. At midnight there was a cry] The Jewish weddings were generally celebrated in the night ; yet they usually began at the rising of the evening star ; but in this case there was more than ordinary delay.

Behold, the bridegroom cometh] What an awful thing to be summoned to appear before the Judge of the quick and the dead !

Verse 7. Trimmed their lamps] Adorned them. It is probable that the nuptial lamps were highly decorated ; though the act mentioned here may mean no more than preparing the lamps for burning.

There are certain preparations which most persons believe they must make at the approach of death ; but, alas ! it is often too late. The lamp is defiled, the light almost there be not enough for us and you : ^a but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves.

10 And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came ; ^b and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage ; and ^c the door was shut.

11 Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, ^d Lord, Lord, open to us.

12 But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, ^e I know you not.

13 ^f Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

14 ^g For the kingdom of heaven is ^h as a man travelling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods.

15 And unto one he gave five ⁱ talents, to another two, and to another one ; ^j to every man according to his several ability ; and straightway took his journey.

16 Then he that had received the five talents out, and the oil expended ; and what adorning is a wretched sinner, struggling in the agonies of death, capable of preparing for his guilty soul !

Verse 8. Our lamps are gone out.] Or, are going out. So then it is evident that they were once lighted. They had once hearts illuminated and warmed by faith and love ; but they had backslidden from the salvation of God, and now they are excluded from heaven, because, through their carelessness, they have let the light that was in them become darkness, and have not applied in time for a fresh supply of the salvation of God.

Verse 9. Lest there be not enough for us and you] These had all been companions in the Christian course, and there was a time when they might have been helpful to each other ; but that time is now past for ever—none has a particle of grace to spare, not even to help the soul of the dearest relative ! The grace which every man receives is just enough to save his own soul ; he has no merits to bequeath to the church ; no work of supererogation which can be placed to the account of another.

Go ye rather to them that sell, and buy] By leaving out the particle but (on indisputable authority), and transposing a very little the members of the sentence, the sense is more advantageously represented, and the reading smoother : Rather go to them that sell, and buy yourselves, lest there be not enough for us and you.

Verse 10. While they went to buy, the bridegroom came] What a dismal thing it is, not to discover the emptiness of one's heart of all that is good, till it is too late to make any successful application for relief !

And they that were ready] They who were prepared—who had not only a burning lamp of an evangelical profession, but had oil in their vessel, the faith that works by love in their hearts, and their lives adorned with all the fruits of the Spirit.

The door was shut.] No hope remains. Nothing but death can shut this door ; but death may surprise us in our sins, and then despair is our only portion.

Verse 11. Afterward came also the other virgins, saying Lord, Lord] Earnest prayer, when used in time may do much good : but it appears, from this parable, that there may come a time when prayer even to Jesus may be too late!—viz., when the door is shut—when death has separated the body and the soul.

Verse 12. I know you not.] As if he had said, Ye are not of my company—ye were neither with the bride nor the bridegroom : ye slept while the others were in procession.

Verse 13. Watch therefore] If to watch be to employ ourselves chiefly about the business of our salvation, alas ! how few of those who are called Christians, are there who do watch !

Wherein the Son of man cometh.] These words are omitted by many excellent MSS., most of the Versions, and several of the Fathers.

went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents.

17 And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two.

18 But he that had received one, went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money.

19 After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them.

20 And so he that had received five talents came, and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents: behold, I have gained, beside them, five talents more.

21 His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

22 He also that had received two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents beside them.

23 His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

24 Then he which had received the one talent came and said, Lord, I knew thee that thou art a hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed:

25 And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast that is thine.

26 His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not strawed:

27 Thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury.

28 Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents:

29 For unto every one that hath, shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not, shall be taken away, even that which he hath.

30 And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

31 When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory:

32 And before him shall be gathered all nations:

Verse 14. Called his own servants] God never makes the children of men proprietors of his goods. They are formed by his power, and upheld by his bounty; and they hold their lives and their goods, as in many of our ancient tenures, at the will of their Lord.

Verse 15. Unto one he gave five talents—to every man according to his several ability] The duties men are called to perform are suited to their situations, and the talents they receive. God's graces and temporal mercies are suited to the power which a man has of improving them. The talent which each man has suits his own state best; and it is only pride and insanity which lead him to desire and envy the graces and talents of another. Five talents would be too much for some men: one talent would be too little. He who receives much, must make proportionate improvement; and, from him who has received little, the improvement only of that little will be required.

The man who improves the grace he has received, however small, will as surely get to the kingdom of God, as he who has received most from his master, and improved all.

Verse 27. With usury.] With its produce—not usury; for that is unlawful interest, more than the money can properly produce.

Verse 31. Weeping and gnashing of teeth.] See on chap. viii. 12, a note necessary for the illustration of this and the foregoing parable.

Verse 31. When the Son of man shall come] This must be understood of Christ's coming at the last day, to judge mankind: though all the preceding part of the chapter may be applied also to the destruction of Jerusalem.

Holy angels] It is supposed by some that our Lord will have other angels (messengers) with him in that day, besides the holy ones. The evil angels may be in attendance to take, as their prey, those who shall be found on his left hand.

The throne of his glory] That glorious throne on which his glorified human nature is seated, at the right hand of the Father.

Verse 32. All nations] Literally, all the nations—all the Gentile world: the Jews are necessarily included, but they were spoken of in a particular manner in the preceding chapter.

He shall separate them] Set each kind apart by themselves.

As a shepherd divideth, &c.] It does not appear that sheep and goats were ever penned or housed together, though they might feed in the same pasture.

Verse 33. He shall set the sheep, &c.] The right hand signifies, among the Rabbins, approbation and eminence: the left hand, rejection, and disapprobation.

Verse 34. Ye blessed of my Father] This is the king's address to his followers: and contains the reason why they were found in the practice of all righteousness, and were now brought to this state of glory—they were blessed—came as children, and received the benediction of the Father, and became, and continued to be, members of the heavenly family.

Inherit] The inheritance is only for the children of the family—if sons, then heirs, Gal. iv. 7, but not otherwise. The sons only shall enjoy the father's estate.

Prepared for you] That is, the kingdom of glory is designed for such as you—you who have received the blessings of the Father and were holy, harmless, undefiled, and separated from sinners.

From the foundation of the world] It was God's purpose and determination to admit none into his heaven but those who were made partakers of his holiness, Heb. xii. 14.

Verse 35. I was an-hungred, and ye gave me meat] Every thing which is done to a follower of Christ, whether it be good or evil, he considers as done to himself, see ver. 40. Acts ix. 4, 5; Heb. vi. 10. Of all the fruits of the Spirit, none are mentioned here but those that spring from love or mercy; because these give men the nearest conformity to God.

A stranger, and ye took me in] Ye entertained me: this is the meaning of the original. Literally, the original signifies to gather together. Strangers are sometimes so destitute as to be ready to perish for lack of food and raiment: a supply of these things keeps their souls and bodies together, which were about to be separated through lack of the necessities of life. The word may also allude to a provision made for a poor family, which were scattered abroad, perhaps begging their bread, and who by the ministry of benevolent people are collected, relieved, and put in a way of getting their bread. O blessed work! to be the instruments of preserving human life, and bringing comfort and peace into the habitations of the wretched!

Verse 36. I was sick, and ye visited me] Relieving the strangers, and visiting the sick, were in high estimation among the Jews. One of their sayings on this head is worthy of notice: "He who neglects to visit the sick is like him who has shed blood."

Verse 37. Lord, when saw we thee an-hungred, &c.] Whatever is done for Christ's sake, is done through Christ's grace; and he who does the work attributes to Jesus both the will and the power by which the work was done, and and ^a he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats :

33 And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left.

34 Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, ^b inherit the kingdom ^c prepared for you from the foundation of the world :

35 ^d For I was an-hungred, and ye gave me meat : I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink : ^e I was a stranger, and ye took me in :

36 ^f Naked, and ye clothed me : I was sick, and ye visited me : ^g I was in prison, and ye came unto me.

37 Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an-hungred, and fed thee ? or thirsty, and gave thee drink ?

38 When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in ? or naked, and clothed thee ?

39 Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee ?

seeks and expects the kingdom of heaven not as a reward, but as a gift of pure unmerited mercy.

Verse 40. Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren] What infinite condescension ! Those, whom many would scorn to set with the dogs of their flock, are brothers and sisters of the blessed Jesus, and shall soon be set among the princes of his people.

Verse 41. Depart from me, ye cursed] These words contain the reason why they are to be separated from blessedness : Ye are cursed, because ye have sinned, and would not come unto me that ye might have life. Depart ! This includes what some have termed the punishment of loss or privation.

Into everlasting fire] This is the punishment of sense. Ye shall not only be separated from me, but ye shall be tormented, awfully, everlastingly, tormented in that place of separation.

Prepared for the devil and his angels] The devil and his angels sinned before the creation of the world, and the place of torment was then prepared for them : it never was designed for human souls ; but as the wicked are partakers with the devil and his angels in their iniquities, in their rebellion against God, so it is right that they should be sharers with them in their punishment.

Verse 42. I was an-hungred, and ye gave me no meat] I put it in your power to do good, and ye would not.

Verse 43. I was a stranger] Christ assures us that a man who is hungry, thirsty, naked, &c., is his representative, 40 And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, ^b Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

41 Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, ^c Depart from me, ye cursed, ^d into everlasting fire, prepared for ^e the devil and his angels :

42 For I was an-hungred, and ye gave me no meat : I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink :

43 I was a stranger, and ye took me not in : naked, and ye clothed me not : sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not.

44 Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an-hungred, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee ?

45 Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, ^f Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me.

46 And ^g these shall go away into everlasting punishment : but the righteous into life eternal.

and that whatever we do to such an one he will consider as done to himself ; yet this testimony of Christ is not regarded ! Well, he will be just when he judges, and righteous when he punishes.

Verse 44. Lord, when saw we the an-hungred, &c.] The man who only sees with eyes of flesh is never likely to discover Christ in the person of a man destitute of the necessities of life.

Verse 46. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment] No appeal, no remedy, to all eternity ! No end to the punishment of those whose final impenitence manifests in them an eternal will and desire to sin.

But some are of opinion that this punishment shall have an end : this is as likely as that the glory of the righteous shall have an end : for the same word is used to express the duration of the punishment, as is used to express the duration of the state of glory. I have seen the best things that have been written in favour of the final redemption of damned spirits ; but I never saw an answer to the argument against that doctrine, drawn from this verse, but what sound learning and criticism should be ashamed to acknowledge. The original word is certainly to be taken here in its proper grammatical sense, continued being, NEVER ENDING. Some have gone a middle way, and think that the wicked shall be annihilated. This, I think, is contrary to the text ; if they go into punishment, they continue to exist ; for that which ceases to be, ceases to suffer.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Christ predicts his being betrayed and crucified, 1, 2. The chief priests, scribes, and elders consult about his death, 3-5. A woman anoints his head at Bethany, at which the disciples are offended, but Christ vindicates her conduct, 6-13. Judas, for thirty pieces of silver, engages with the chief priests to betray him, 14-16. He eats a passover with his disciples, and assures them of his approaching death, and that one of them would betray him, 17-21. On each asking Is it I ? Christ asserts that Judas is the traitor, 22-25. Having eaten his last supper he institutes the Eucharist, to be observed in his church as a memorial of his sacrificial death, 26-29. They sing a hymn, go to the Mount of Olives, and he again announces his approaching death and resurrection, 30-32. Peter asserts his resolution to be faithful to his master, and Christ foretells his denial and apostacy, 33-35. He goes to Gethsemane ; the transactions there, 36-46. Judas comes with the high priest's mob and betrays him with a kiss, 47-50. Peter cuts off the ear of the high priest's servant ; Christ discourses with the multitude, 51-55. The disciples flee, and he is led to Caiaphas, 56, 57. Peter follows at a distance, 58. They seek false witnesses, and question our Lord, who declares himself to be the Christ, 59-64. They accuse him of blasphemy, and abuse him, 65-68. Peter's denial and repentance, 69-75.

AND it came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings, he said unto his disciples,

2 * Ye know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of man is betrayed to be crucified.

3 ^b Then assembled together the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high priest, who was called Caiaphas,

4 And consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty, and kill him.

5 But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar among the people.

6 ^c Now when Jesus was in ^d Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, 7 There came unto him a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head as he sat at meat.

8 ^e But when his disciples saw it, they had indignation, saying, To what purpose is this waste?

9 For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor.

Verse 1. When Jesus had finished all these sayings] He began these sayings on Mount Olivet, chap. xxiv. 1, and continued them till he entered into Bethany, whither he was going.

Verse 2. The passover] See this largely explained in the notes on Exod. xii. 1-27. The feast began on the fourteenth day of the first moon, in the first month, Nisan, and it lasted only one day; but it was immediately followed by the days of unleavened bread, which were seven, so that the whole lasted eight days, and all the eight days are sometimes called the feast of the passover, and sometimes the feast or days of unleavened bread.

The Son of man is betrayed (rather delivered up) to be crucified.] With what amazing calmness and precision does our blessed Lord speak of this awful event! What a proof does he here give of his prescience in so correctly predicting it; and of his love in so cheerfully undergoing it!

Verse 3. Then assembled together the chief priests] That is, during the two days that preceded the passover.

The high priest, who was called Caiaphas] Caiaphas succeeded Simon, son of Canith, about A.D. 16, or, as Calmet thinks, 25. He married the daughter of Annas, who was joined with him in the priesthood. About two years after our Lord's crucifixion, Caiaphas and Pilate were both deposed by VITELLIVS, then governor of Syria, and afterwards emperor. Caiaphas, unable to bear this disgrace, and the stings of his conscience for the murder of Christ, killed himself about A.D. 35.

Verse 4. And consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty] The providence of God frustrated their artful machinations; and that event which they wished to conduct with the greatest privacy and silence was transacted with all possible celebrity amidst the thousands who resorted to Jerusalem, at this season, for the keeping of the passover. It was, doubtless, of the very first importance that the crucifixion of Christ, which was preparatory to the most essential achievement of Christianity, viz., his resurrection from the grave, should be exhibited before many witnesses, and in the most open manner, that infidelity might not attempt, in future, to invalidate the evidences of the Christian religion, by alleging that these things were done in a corner.

Verse 5. Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar] It was usual for the Jews to punish criminals at the public festivals; but in this case they were afraid of an insurrection, as our Lord had become very popular.

Verse 6. Simon the leper] This was probably no more than a surname, as Simon the CANAANITE, chap. x. 4, and Barsabas JUSTUS, Acts i. 23, and several others. Yet it might have been some person that Christ had healed of this disease. See chap. xi. 6.

Verse 7. There came unto him a woman] There is much contention among commentators about the transaction mentioned here, and in John xii. 14; some supposing them to 10 When Jesus understood it, he said unto them, Why trouble ye the woman? for she hath wrought a good work upon me.

11 ^f For ye have the poor always with you; but ^g me ye have not always.

12 For in that she hath poured this ointment on my body, she did it for my burial.

13 Verily I say unto you, Whosoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her.

14 ^h Then one of the twelve, called ⁱ Judas Iscariot, went unto the chief priests, 15 And said unto them, ^j What will ye give me, and I will deliver him unto you? And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver.

16 And from that time he sought opportunity to betray him.

17 ^k Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread, the disciples came to Jesus, saying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover?

18 And he said, ^l Go into the city to such a man, —^a Mark xiv. 10. Luke xxii. 3. John xiii. 2, 30.—^b Ch. x. 4.—^c Zeoh. xi. 12. Ch. xxvii. 3.—^d Exod. xii. 6, 18. Mark xiv. 12. Luke xxii. 7.—^e Luke xxi. 10-12. Job xiv. 14. Heb. xi. 28. 1 Cor. xi. 23.

be different, others to be the same. [The best critics agree in adopting the latter conclusion.]

Verse 8. His disciples] One of them, viz., Judas. This mode of speaking was common among the Hebrews. So, chap. xxvii. 44, the thieves also, i. e., one of them. So, chap. xxviii. 17, some doubted, i. e., one, Thomas. See also Gen. viii. 4; Judg. xii. 7; Neh. vi. 7, &c. It is, however, possible that Judas, who made the objection, was followed in the sentiment by the rest of the disciples.

Verse 9. And given to the poor.] How often does charity serve as a cloak for covetousness!

Verse 10. Why trouble ye the woman?] Or, Why do ye put the woman to pain? A generous mind is ever pained when it is denied the opportunity of doing good, or when its proffered kindness is refused.

Verse 11. Ye have the poor always with you] And, consequently, have the opportunity of doing them good at any time: but me ye have not always; my bodily presence is about to be removed from you for ever.

Verse 12. She did it for my burial.] Or, She hath done it to embalm me.

Verse 13. For a memorial of her.] As embalming preserves the body from corruption, and she has done this good work to embalm and preserve this body, so will I order every thing concerning this transaction to be carefully recorded, to preserve her memory to the latest ages.

Verse 15. Thirty pieces of silver.] Thirty staters, about £4 10s., the common price for the meanest slave! See Exod. xxi. 32.

Verse 16. He sought opportunity.] A convenient or fit opportunity. Men seldom leave a crime imperfect: when once sin is conceived, it meets, in general with few obstacles, till it brings forth death. How deceitful, how deeply damning, is the love of money! From John xii. 6, we learn that Judas, who was treasurer to our Lord and his disciples (for he carried the bag), was a thief, and frequently purloined a portion of what was given for the support of this holy family. Being disappointed of the prey he hoped to have from the sale of the precious ointment, ver. 9, he sold his Master to make up the sum. A thorough Jew! [It does not appear from the original that Judas "frequently purloined" the money entrusted to him.]

Verse 17. Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread] The Jews began to eat unleavened bread on the fourteenth, Exod. xii. 18, and this day was often termed the first of unleavened bread. The Evangelists use it in this sense, and call even the paschal day by this name.

Where wilt thou that we prepare] It is worthy of note that the inhabitants of Jerusalem did not let out their houses to those who came to the annual feasts; but afforded all accommodations of this kind gratis. A man might therefore go and request the use of any room, on such an occaand say unto him, The master saith, My time is at hand; I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples.

19 And the disciples did as Jesus had appointed them; and they made ready the passover.

20 * Now when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve.

21 And as they did eat, he said, Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me.

22 And they were exceeding sorrowful, and began every one of them to say unto him, Lord, is it I?

23 And he answered and said, ^b He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish, the same shall betray me.

24 The Son of man goeth, ^c as it is written of him: but ^d woe unto that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! it had been good for that man if he had not been born.

25 Then Judas, which betrayed him, answered and said, Master, is it I? He said unto him, Thou hast said.

26 * And as they were eating, ^e Jesus took bread, and ^f blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; ^g this is my body.

27 And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, ^h Drink ye all of it;

sion, which was as yet unoccupied. The earthen jug, and the skin of the sacrifice, were left with the host.

Verse 18. Go—to such a man] It is probable that this means some person with whom Christ was well acquainted, and who was known to the disciples. The circumstances are more particularly marked in Luke xxii. 8, &c.

My time is at hand] That is, the time of my crucifixion.

Verse 19. And the disciples did] The disciples that were sent on this errand were Peter and John.

They made ready the passover] That is, they provided the lamb, &c., which were appointed by the law for this solemnity.

Verse 20. Now when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve] It is a common opinion that our Lord ate the passover some hours before the Jews ate it; for the Jews, according to custom, ate theirs at the end of the fourteenth day, but Christ ate his the preceding even, which was the beginning of the same sixth day, or Friday; the Jews begin their day at sunset, we at midnight. Thus Christ ate the passover on the same day with the Jews, but not at the same hour. And in the same part of the same day in which the Jews had sacrificed their first paschal lamb, viz., between the two evenings, about the ninth hour, or 3 o'clock, Jesus Christ our passover was sacrificed for us.

Verse 21. One of you shall betray me] Or, will deliver me up. Judas had already betrayed him, ver. 15, and he was now about to deliver him into the hands of the chief priests, according to the agreement he had made with them.

Verse 22. They were exceeding sorrowful] That is, the eleven who were innocent; and the hypocritical traitor, Judas, endeavoured to put on the appearance of sorrow. Strange! Did he not know that Christ knew the secrets of his soul? Or had his love of money so far blinded him, as to render him incapable of discerning even this, with which he had been before so well acquainted?

Verse 23. He that dippeth his hand] As the Jews ate the passover a whole family together, it was not convenient for them all to dip their bread in the same dish; they therefore had several little dishes or plates, in which was the juice of the bitter herbs, mentioned Exod. xii. 8, on different parts of the table; and those who were nigh one of these, dipped their bread in it.

Verse 24. The Son of man goeth] Going, going away, de-34 Jesus said unto him, ^t Verily, I say unto thee, That this night, before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

35 Peter said unto him, Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. Likewise also said all the disciples.

It had been good for that man] Can the doctrine of the non-eternity of hell's torments stand in the presence of this saying? Or can the doctrine of the annihilation of the wicked consist with this declaration?

Verse 25. Judas—said, Master, is it I?] What excessive impudence! He knew, in his conscience, that he had already betrayed his master, and was waiting now for the servants of the chief priests, that he might deliver him into their hands; and yet he says, Master, is it I? It is worthy of remark, that each of the other disciples said, LORD, is it I? But Judas dares not, or will not, use this august title, but simply says, TEACHER, is it I?

Thou hast said] A common form of expression for Yes, it is so.

Verse 26. Jesus took bread] This is the first institution of what is termed the Lord's Supper.

Verse 28. As they were eating] Either an ordinary supper, or the paschal lamb, as some think.

Jesus took bread] Unleavened bread, certainly, because there was no other kind to be had in all Judea at this time; for this was the first day of unleavened bread when the Jews, according to the command of God (Exod. xii. 15-20, xxiii. 15, and xxxiv. 25), were to purge away all leaven from their houses; on pain of being cut off from the congregation of Israel.

To this divinely instituted custom, of removing all leaven previously to the paschal solemnity, St. Paul evidently alludes, 1 Cor. v. 6, 7, 8.

Now, if any respect should be paid to the primitive institution, in the celebration of this divine ordinance, then, unleavened, unyeasted bread should be used. Bread, simply considered in itself, may be an emblem apt enough of the body of our Lord Jesus, which was given for us; but the design of God was evidently that it should not only point out this, but also the disposition required in those who should celebrate both the antitype and the type; and this the apostle explains to be sincerity and truth, the reverse of malice and wickedness. Had the bread used on these occasions been of the common kind, it would have been perfectly unfit, or improper, to have communicated these uncommon significations; and, as it was seldom used, its rare 38 Then saith he unto them, * My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me.

39 And he went a little farther, and fell on his face, and ^b prayed, saying, * O my Father, if it be possible, ^a let this cup pass from me! nevertheless * not as I will, but as thou wilt.

40 And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What, could ye not watch with me one hour?

41 Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.

* John xii. 27.—^a Mark xiv. 36. Luke xxii. 42. Heb. v. 7.—

occurrence would make the emblematical representation more deeply impressive; and the sign, and the thing signified, have their due correspondence and influence.

These circumstances considered, will it not appear that the use of common bread in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper is highly improper? The Lutheran Church makes use of unleavened bread to the present day.

And blessed it] Both St. Matthew and St. Mark use the word, blessed, instead of, gave thanks, which is the word used by St. Luke and St. Paul. But instead of blessed, gave thanks, is the reading of many MSS. and Versions of the greatest respectability. The terms, in this case, are nearly of the same import, as both blessing and giving thanks were used on these occasions. But what was it that our Lord blessed? Not the bread, though many think the contrary, being deceived by the word it, which is improperly supplied in our version. In all the four places referred to above, whether the word blessed or gave thanks is used, it refers not to the bread, but to God, the dispenser of every good. Our Lord here conforms himself to that constant Jewish custom, viz., of acknowledging God as the author of every good and perfect gift, by giving thanks on taking the bread and taking the cup at their ordinary meals. From this custom we have derived the decent and laudable one of saying grace (gratias, thanks) before and after meat.

No blessing of the elements is here intended; they were already blessed, in being sent as a gift of mercy from the bountiful Lord; but God the sender is blessed, because of the liberal provision he has made for his worthless creatures. Blessing and touching the bread are merely Popish ceremonies, unauthorised either by Scripture, or the practice of the pure church of God; necessary of course to those who pretend to transmute, by a kind of spiritual incantation, the bread and wine into the real body and blood of Jesus Christ; a measure the grossest in folly and most stupid in nonsense, to which God in judgment ever abandoned the fallen spirit of man. [But St. Paul seems to give authority to the opinion that the elements were blessed. 1 Cor. x. 16.]

And brake it] We often read in the Scriptures of breaking bread, but never of cutting it.

The breaking of the bread I consider essential to the proper performance of this solemn and significant ceremony: because this act was designed by our Lord to shadow forth the wounding, piercing, and breaking of his body upon the cross; and, as all this was essentially necessary to the making a full atonement for the sin of the world, so it is of vast importance that this apparently little circumstance, the breaking of the bread, should be carefully attended to, that the godly communicant may have every necessary assistance to enable him to discern the Lord's body, while engaged in this most important and divine of all God's ordinances.

And gave it to the disciples] Not only the breaking, but also the DISTRIBUTION, of the bread are necessary parts of this rite.

This is my body.] Here it must be observed that Christ had nothing in his hands at this time, but part of that unleavened bread which he and his disciples had been eating at supper, and therefore he could mean no more than this, viz., that the bread which he was now breaking represented his body, which, in the course of a few hours, was to be crucified for them. Common sense, unobscured with superstition and erroneous creeds: and reason, unawed by the secular sword of sovereign authority, could not possibly 42 He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.

43 And he came and found them asleep again: for their eyes were heavy.

44 And he left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words.

45 Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

46 Rise, let us be going: behold, he is at hand that doth betray me.

47 And while he yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the take any other meaning than this plain, consistent, and rational one, out of these words.

Let it be observed, if any thing further is necessary on this point, that the Paschal Lamb is called the Passover, because it represented the destroying angel's passing over the children of Israel, while he slew the first-born of the Egyptians; and our Lord and his disciples call this lamb the Passover, several times in this chapter; by which it is demonstrably evident, that they could mean no more than that the lamb sacrificed on this occasion was a memorial of, and REPRESENTED, the means used for the preservation of the Israelites from the blast of the destroying angel.

In the Hebrew, Chaldee, and Chaldeo-Syriac languages, as used in the Bible, there is no term which expresses to mean, signify, denote, though both the Greek and Latin abound with them: hence the Hebrews, use a figure, and say, it is, for, it signifies. So Gen. xii. 26, 27. The seven kings ARE (i.e., represent) seven years. This is (represents) the bread of affliction which our fathers ate in the land of Egypt. Dan. vii. 24. The ten horns ARE (i.e., signify) ten kings. They drank of the spiritual Rock which followed them, and the Rock was (represented) Christ. 1 Cor. x. 4. And following this Hebrew idiom, though the work is written in Greek, we find in Rev. i. 20, The seven stars ARE (represent) the angels of the seven churches: and the seven candlesticks ARE (represent) the seven churches. The same form of speech is used in a variety of places in the New Testament, where this sense must necessarily be given to the word. Matt. xiii. 38, 39. The field is (represents,) the world: the good seed ARE (represent or signify) the children of the kingdom: the tares ARE (signify) the children of the wicked one.

Verse 27. And he took the cup.] In the parallel place, in Luke xxii., we find our Lord taking the cup, ver. 17, and again, ver. 19; by the former of which was probably meant the cup of blessing, which the master of a family took, and, after blessing God, gave to each of his guests by way of welcome; but this second taking the cup is to be understood as belonging to the very important rite which he was now instituting, and on which he lays a very remarkable stress. With respect to the bread, he had before simply said, Take eat, this is my body; but concerning the cup he says, Drink ye all of this: for as this pointed out the very essence of the institution, viz., the blood of atonement, it was necessary that each should have a particular application of it; therefore he says, Drink ye ALL of THIS. By this we are taught that the cup is essential to the sacrament of the Lord's supper; so that they who deny the cup to the people, sin against God's institution; and they who receive not the cup are not partakers of the body and blood of Christ. If either could, without mortal prejudice, be omitted, it might be the bread; but the cup, as pointing out the blood poured out, i.e., the life by which alone the great sacrificial act is performed, and remission of sins procured, is absolutely indispensable.

Verse 28. For this is my blood of the New Testament.] By New Testament, many understand nothing more than the book commonly known by this name; and they think that the cup of the New Testament means no more than merely that cup which the book called the New Testament enjoins in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The original, which we translate, The New Testament, and which is the general title of all the contents of the book already described, simply means, the new COVENANT.

not know his own strength. Had this resolution of his been formed in the strength of God, he would have been enabled to maintain it against earth and hell.

Verse 34. Jesus said] Our Lord's answer to Peter is very emphatic and impressive. Verily—I speak a solemn weighty truth, thou wilt not only be stumbled, fall off, and forsake thy Master, but thou wilt even deny that thou hast, or ever hadst any knowledge of or connexion with me; and this thou wilt do, not by little and little, through a long process of time, till the apostasy, daily gathering strength, shall be complete; but thou wilt do it this very night, and that not once only, but thrice; and this thou wilt do also in the earlier part of the night, before even a cock shall crow. Was not this warning enough to him not to trust in his own strength, but to depend on God?

Verse 35. Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee.] He trusts in the warm, sincere attachment to Christ which he now feels, not considering that this must speedily fail, unless supported by the power of God.

Verse 36. A place called Gethsemane] A garden at the foot of the Mount of Olives. The garden of the oil-press, or olive-press.

Verse 37. And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee] That is, James and John; the same persons who had beheld his transfiguration on the mount—that they might contemplate his agony in the light of that glory which they had there seen; and so be kept from being stumbled by a view of his present humiliation.

Began to be sorrowful] To dissolve—exquisite sorrow, such as dissolves the natural vigour, and threatens to separate soul and body.

And very heavy] Overwhelmed with anguish This word is used by the Greeks to denote the most extreme anguish which the soul can feel—excruciating anxiety and torture of spirit.

My soul is exceeding sorrowful (or, is surrounded with exceeding sorrow, even unto death.) This latter word explains the two former; my soul is so dissolved in sorrow, my spirit is filled with such agony and anguish, that, if speedy succour be not given to my body, death must be the speedy consequence.

The prospect of death could not cause him to suffer thus, when he knew that in less than three days he was to be restored to life, and be brought into an eternity of blessedness. His agony and distress can receive no consistent explication but on this ground—He suffered, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God. O glorious truth! O infinitely meritorious suffering! And O! above all, the eternal love, that caused him to undergo such sufferings for the sake of sinners!

Verse 39. Fell on his face] This was the ordinary posture of the supplicant when the favour was great which was asked, and deep humiliation required.

This cup] The word cup is frequently used in the Sacred Writings to point out sorrow, anguish, terror, death. It seems to be an allusion to a very ancient method of punishing criminals. A cup of poison was put into their hands, and they were obliged to drink it. To death, by the poisoned cup, there seems an allusion in Heb. ii. 9, Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man. The whole world are here represented as standing guilty and condemned before the tribunal of God; into every man's hand the deadly cup is put, and he is required to drink off the poison—Jesus enters, takes every man's cup out of his hand, and drinks off the poison, and thus tastes or suffers the death which every man otherwise must have undergone.

Pass from me] Perhaps there is an allusion here to several

In this place, our Lord terms his blood the blood of the new covenant; by which he means that grand plan of agreement, or reconciliation, which God was now establishing between himself and mankind, by the passion and death of his Son, through whom alone men could draw nigh to God; and this new covenant is mentioned in contradistinction from the old covenant, 2 Cor. iii. 14, by which appellative all the books of the Old Testament were distinguished, because they pointed out the way of reconciliation to God by the blood of the various victims slain under the law: but now, as the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world, was about to be offered up, a new and living way was thereby constituted, so that no one henceforth could come unto the Father but by HIM.

Which is shed (poured out) for many] To pour out, is often used in a sacrificial sense in the Septuagint, and signifies to pour out or sprinkle the blood of the sacrifices before the altar of the Lord, by way of atonement. See 2 Kings xvi. 15; Lev. viii. 15, ix. 9; Exod. xxix. 12; Lev. iv. 7, 14, 17, 30, 34; and in various other places. Our Lord, by this very remarkable mode of expression, teaches us that, as his body was to be broken or crucified, in our stead, so here the blood was to be poured out to make an atonement, as the words, remission of sins, sufficiently prove; for without shedding of blood there was no remission, Heb. ix. 22, nor any remission by shedding of blood, but in a sacrificial way. See the passages above, and on ver. 26.

The whole of this passage will receive additional light when collated with Isa. liii. 11, 12.

For the remission of sins.] For (or, in reference to) the taking away of sins. For, although the blood is shed, and the atonement made, no man's sins are taken away until, as a true penitent, he returns to God, and, feeling his utter incapacity to save himself, believes in Christ Jesus, who is the justifier of the ungodly.

Verse 29. I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine] These words seem to intimate no more than this: We shall not have another opportunity of eating this bread and drinking this wine together; as in a few hours my crucifixion shall take place.

Until that day when I drink it new with you] That is, I shall no more drink of the produce of the vine with you; but shall drink new wine—wine of a widely different nature from this—a wine which the kingdom of God alone can afford. The term new in Scripture is often taken in this sense.

Verse 30. And when they had sung a hymn] Means, probably, no more than a kind of recitative reading or chanting. As to the hymn itself, we know, from the universal consent of Jewish antiquity, that it was composed of Psalms 118, 114, 115, 116, 117, and 118, termed by the Jews halel, from halelu-yah, the first word in Psalm 118. These six Psalms were always sung at every paschal solemnity.

Verse 31. All ye shall be offended] Or rather, Ye will all be stumbled, ye will all forsake me, and lose, in a great measure, your confidence in me.

Verse 32. But after I am risen again] Though I shall appear for a time to be wholly left to wicked men, and be brought under the power of death, yet I will rise again, and triumph over all your enemies and mine.

I will go before you] Still alluding to the case of the shepherd and his sheep.

Verse 33. Peter said unto him, Though all men shall be offended—yet will I never! There is nothing we know so little of as ourselves—nothing we see less of than our own weakness and poverty. Peter, though vainly confident, was certainly sincere—he had never been put to a sore trial, and did

Are ye come out as against a thief with swords and staves for to take me? I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me.

56 But all this was done, that the ^ascriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled. Then ^ball the disciples forsook him, and fled.

57 ^cAnd they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to Caiaphas the high priest, where the scribes and the elders were assembled, 58 But Peter followed him, afar off, unto the high priest's palace, and went in, and sat with the servants, to see the end.

criminals standing in a row, who are all to drink of the same cup; but, the judge extending favour to a certain one, the cup passes by him to the next.

Verse 40. He—saith unto Peter] He addressed himself more particularly to this apostle, because of the profession he had made, ver. 33.

Verse 41. That ye enter not into temptation] Watch—that ye be not taken unawares: and pray—that when it comes ye may be enabled to bear it.

The spirit—is willing, but the flesh is weak] Your inclinations are good—ye are truly sincere; but your good purposes will be overpowered by your timidity.

Verse 42. O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me] In this address the humanity of Christ most evidently appears; for it was his humanity alone that could suffer; and if it did not appear that he had felt these sufferings, it would have been a presumption that he had not suffered, and consequently made no atonement. And had he not appeared to have been perfectly resigned in these sufferings, his sacrifice could not have been a free-will but a constrained offering, and therefore of no use to the salvation of mankind.

Verse 43. Their eyes were heavy] That is, they could not keep them open. Was there nothing preternatural in this? Was there no influence here from the powers of darkness?

Verse 44. Prayed the third time] This thrice repeating the same petition argues deep earnestness of soul. 2 Cor. xii. 8.

Verse 45. Sleep on now, and take your rest] Perhaps it might be better to read those words interrogatively, and paraphrase them thus: Do ye sleep on still? Will no warnings avail? Will no danger excite you to watchfulness and prayer? [This does not improve the sense.]

The Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners] Viz., the Gentiles or heathens, who were generally distinguished by this appellation from the Jews.

Verse 47. Judas, one of the twelve] More deeply to mark his base ingratitude and desperate wickedness—HE WAS ONE OF THE TWELVE—and he is a TRAITOR, and one of the vilest too that ever disgraced human nature.

A great multitude with swords and staves] They did not come as officers of justice, but as a desperate mob. Justice had nothing to do in this business.

Verse 48. Give them a sign] How coolly deliberate is this dire apostate! The man whom I shall kiss—how deeply hypocritical!

Verse 49. Hail, Master] A usual compliment among the Jews. Judas pretends to wish our Lord continued health while he is meditating his destruction! How many compliments of this kind are there in the world!

And kissed him] And tenderly kissed him—this is the proper meaning of the original word, he kissed him again and again—still pretending the most affectionate attachment to him, though our Lord had before unmasked him.

Verse 50. Jesus said—Friend] Rather, companion, (not FRIEND) wherefore, rather, against whom (the reading of all the best MSS.), art thou come? How must these words have cut his very soul, if he had any sensibility left! Surely, thou, who hast so long been my companion, art not come against me, thy Lord, Teacher, and Friend!

Laid hands on Jesus] But not before they had felt that proof of his sovereign power by which they had all been struck down to the earth, John xvii. 6. It is strange that, after this, they should dare to approach him: but the scriptures must be fulfilled.

59 Now the chief priests, and elders, and all the council, sought false witness against Jesus, to put him to death;

60 But found none: yea, though ^amany false witnesses came, yet found they none. At the last ^bcame two false witnesses, 61 And said, This fellow said, 'I am able to destroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days.

62 ^cAnd the high priest arose, and said unto him, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee?

Mark xiv. 55. So Acts vi. 13.—^d Deut. xix. 15.—^e Ch. xvii. 40. John ii. 19.—^f Mark xiv. 60.

Verse 51. One of them which were with Jesus] This was Peter—struck a servant of the high priest's, the servant's name was Malchus, John xviii. 10, and smote off his ear. In Luke xxii. 51, it is said, Jesus touched and healed it. Here was another miracle, and striking proof of the divinity of Christ.

Verse 52. Put up again thy sword into his place] Neither Christ nor his religion is to be defended by the secular arm. God is sufficiently able to support his ark: Uzzah need not stretch out his hand on the occasion.

Shall perish with the sword] The general meaning of this verse is, they who contend in battle are likely, on both sides, to become the sacrifices of their mutual animosities. But it is probably a prophetic declaration of the Jewish and Roman states. But how came Peter to have a sword? Judea was at this time so infested with robbers and cut-throats that it was not deemed safe for any person to go unarmed. He probably carried one for his mere personal safety.

Verse 53. More than twelve legions of angels] As if he had said, Instead of you twelve, one of whom is a traitor, my Father can give me more than twelve legions of angels to defend me. From this saying, taking the common rate of the Roman legion, may we not safely believe that the angels of God amount to more than 72,000?

Verse 54. But how then] Had I such a defence—shall the scriptures be fulfilled, which say, that thus it must be? That is, that I am to suffer and die for the sin of the world. Probably the scriptures to which our Lord principally refers are Ps. xxii. lxi., and especially Isa. liii. and Dan. ix. 24-27.

Verse 55. Are ye come out as against a thief] At this time Judea was much infested by robbers, so that armed men were obliged to be employed against them—to this our Lord seems to allude.

I sat daily with you] Why come in this hostile manner? Every day, for four days past, ye might have met with me in the temple, whither I went to teach you the way of salvation.

Verse 56. But all this was done] This is probably the observation of the Evangelist.

Then all the disciples forsook him and fled] Jesus is abandoned by all!—even zealous Peter and loving John are among the fugitives! Was ever master so served by his scholars? Was ever parent so treated by his children? Is there not as much zeal and love among them all as might make one martyr for God and truth? Alas! no.

Verse 57. They led him away to Caiaphas] John says, chap. xviii. 13, that they led him first to Annas; but this appears to have been done merely to do him honour as the father-in-law of Caiaphas, and his colleague in the high priesthood.

Verse 58. Peter followed him, afar off] Poor Peter! this is the beginning of his dreadful fall. His fear kept him from joining the company, and publicly acknowledging his Lord; and his affection obliged him to follow at a distance that he might see the end.

And sat with the servants, to see the end] When a man is weak in faith, and can as yet only follow Christ at a distance, he should avoid all dangerous places, and the company of those who are most likely to prove a snare to him. Had not Peter got to the high priest's palace, and sat down with the servants, he would not thus have denied his Lord and Master.

Verse 59. All the council sought false witness] What a prostitution of justice!—they first resolved to ruin him, and then seek the proper means of effecting it. It seems to have 63 But ^a Jesus held his peace. And the high priest answered and said unto him, ^b I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God.

64 Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said: nevertheless I say unto you, ^c Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man ^d sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

65 Then ^e the high priest rent his clothes, saying, He hath spoken blasphemy; what further need have we of witnesses: behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy.

66 What think ye? They answered and said, ^f He is guilty of death.

67 ^g Then did they spit in his face, and buffeted him; and ^h others smote him with ⁱ the palms of their hands, 68 Saying, ^j Prophecy unto us, thou Christ, Who is he that smote thee?

69 ^k Now Peter sat without in the palace: and a been a common custom of this vile court to employ false witness, on any occasion, to answer their own ends. Acts vi. 11-13.

Verse 60. Though many false witnesses came] It is the property of falsity to be ever inconsistent, and to contradict itself; therefore they could not find two consistent testimonies, without which the Jewish law did not permit any person to be put to death.

Verse 61. I am able to destroy the temple of God] 1st. These words were not fairly quoted. Jesus had said, John ii. 19, Destroy this temple, and I will build it again in three days. 2nd. The innuendo which they produce, applying these words to a pretended design to destroy the temple at Jerusalem, was utterly unfair; for these words he spoke of the temple of his body.

Verse 62. Answerest thou nothing?] Jesus knew that they were determined to put him to death, and that his hour was come; and that therefore remonstrance or defence would be of no use.

Verse 63. I adjure thee by the living God] I put thee to thy oath. However necessary our Lord saw it to be silent, when the accusations were frivolous, and the evidence contradictory, he felt no disposition to continue this silence, when questioned concerning a truth, for which he came into the world to shed his blood.

Verse 64. Thou hast said] That is, I am the Christ, the promised Messiah (see on ver. 25); and you and this whole nation shall shortly have the fullest proof of it: for hereafter, in a few years, ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, fully invested with absolute dominion, and coming in the clouds of heaven, to execute judgment upon this wicked race.

Verse 65. The high priest rent his clothes] This rending of the high priest's garments was expressly contrary to the law, Lev. x. 6, and xxi. 10. [But this probably applied only to mourning for the dead.] But it was a common method of expressing violent grief, Gen. xxxvii. 29, 34, Job i. 20, and horror at what was deemed blasphemous or impious. 2 Kings xviii. 37, xix. 1, Acts vi. 14.

Verse 66. He is guilty of death.] He is liable to death. All the forms of justice are here violated. The judge becomes a party and accuser, and proceeds to the verdict without examining whether all the prophecies concerning the Messiah, and the innumerable miracles which he wrought, did not justify him.

Verse 67. Then did they spit in his face] This was done as a mark of the most profound contempt. See Job xvi. 10, and xxx. 10, Isai. i. 6, Misah. v. 1. The Judges now delivered him into the hands of the mob.

damsel came unto him, saying, Thou also wast with Jesus of Galilee.

70 But he denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest.

71 And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said unto them that were there, This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth.

72 And again he denied with an oath, I do not know the man.

73 And after a while came unto him they that stood by, and said to Peter, Surely thou also art one of them; for thy ¹ speech bewrayeth thee.

74 Then ² began he to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the man. And immediately the cock crew.

75 And Peter remembered the word of Jesus, which said unto him, ³ Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. And he went out and wept bitterly.

And buffeted him] Smote him with their fists.

Smote him with the palms of their hands] Thus they offered him indignity in all its various and vexatious forms. [The word may mean to strike with a staff.]

Verse 68. Prophecy unto us, thou Christ] See Isai. i. 6. It appears that, before they buffeted him, they bound up his eyes, see Mark xiv. 65.

Verse 69. A damsel came unto him] A maid servant. Thou also wast with Jesus] What a noble opportunity had Peter now to show his zeal for the insulted cause of truth, and his attachment to his Master. But, alas! he is shorn of his strength. Had Peter been in better company, he would not have had so foul a fall.

Verse 70. But he denied before them all] So the evil principle gains ground. Before, he followed at a distance, now he denies; this is the second gradation in his fall.

Verse 72. And again he denied with an oath] This is a third gradation of his iniquity. He has told a lie, and he swears to support it.

Verse 73. Thy speech] Thy manner of speech, that dialect of thine—his accent being different from that of Jerusalem. The Galileans had a very corrupt pronunciation, frequently interchanging letters, and so blending or dividing words as to render them unintelligible, or cause them to convey a contrary sense.

Verse 74. Then began he to curse and to swear] Rather, Then he began positively to affirm. The common reading signifies to wish curses on himself. The former reading is supported by almost every MS. of value, and is, beyond dispute, the true reading, and has been received by Griesbach into the text. The business is bad enough, but the common reading makes it worse. In ver. 72, Peter is said to deny with an oath; here, he positively affirms and swears, probably by the name of God. This makes the fourth and final gradation in the climax of Peter's fall.

The cock crew.] When abandoned of God, the smallest thing may become the occasion of a fall; and, when in the hand of God, the smallest matter may become the instrument of our restoration. Let us ever remember that the great apostle Peter fell through fear of a servant maid, and rose through the crowing of a cock.

He went out] He left the place where he had sinned, and the company which had been the occasion of his transgression.

And wept bitterly.] Felt bitter anguish of soul, which evidenced itself by the tears of contrition which flowed plentifully from his eyes.

CHAPTER XXVII.

In the morning, Christ is bound and delivered to Pontius Pilate, 1, 2. Judas, seeing his Master condemned, repents, acknowledges his transgression to the chief priests, attests Christ's innocence, throws down the money, and goes and hangs himself, 3-6. They buy the potter's field with the money, 6-10. Christ, questioned by Pilate, refuses to answer, 11-14. Pilate, while inquiring of the Jews whether they would have Jesus or Barabbas released, receives a message from his wife to have nothing to do in this wicked business, 15-19. The multitude, influenced by the chief priests and elders, desire Barabbas to be released, and Jesus to be crucified, 20-23. Pilate attests his innocence, and the people make themselves and their posterity responsible for his blood, 24-25. Barabbas is released, and Christ is scourged, 26. The soldiers strip him, clothe him with a scarlet robe, crown him with thorns, mock, and variously insult him, 27-31. Simon compelled to bear his cross, 32. They bring him to Golgotha, give him vinegar mingled with gall to drink, crucify him, and cast lots for his raiment, 33-36. His accusation, 37. Two thieves are crucified with him, 38. He is mocked and insulted while hanging on the cross, 39-44. The awful darkness, 45. Jesus calls upon God, is offered vinegar to drink, expires, 46-50. Prodiges that accompanied and followed his death, 51-53. He is acknowledged by the centurion, 54. Several women behold the crucifixion, 55, 56. Joseph of Arimathea begs the body of Pilate, and deposits it in his own new tomb, 57-60. The women watch the sepulchre, 61. The Jews consult with Pilate how they may prevent the resurrection of Christ, 62-64. He grants them a guard for the sepulchre, and they seal the stone that stopped the mouth of the tomb where he was laid, 65, 66.

WHEN the morning was come, * all the chief priests and elders of the people took counsel against Jesus to put him to death :

2 And when they had bound him, they led him away, and ^b delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor.

3 ^c Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders,

* Ps. ii. 2. Mark xv. 1. Luke xxii. 65. xxiii. 1. John xviii. 28.

Verse 1. When the morning was come] As soon as it was light—took counsel against Jesus. They had begun this counsel the preceding evening, see chap. xxvi. 59. But as it was contrary to all forms of law to proceed against a person's life by night, they seem to have separated for a few hours, and then, at the break of day, came together again, pretending to conduct the business according to the forms of law.

To put him to death] They had already determined his death, and pronounced the sentence of death on him, Chap. xxvi. 66. And now they assemble under the pretence of reconsidering the evidence, and deliberating on it, to give the greater appearance of justice to their conduct.

Verse 2. They—delivered him to Pontius Pilate] The Sanhedrin had the power of life and death in their own hands in every thing that concerned religion: but as they had not evidence to put Christ to death because of false doctrine, they wished to give countenance to their conduct by bringing in the civil power, and therefore they delivered him up to Pilate as one who aspired to regal dignities, and whom he must put to death, if he professed to be Cæsar's friend.

Verse 3. Judas—when he saw that he was condemned, repented] Had our Lord been condemned to death on the evidence of one of his own disciples, it would have furnished infidels with a strong argument against Christ and the Christian religion. But the traitor, being stung with remorse, came and acknowledged his crime, and solemnly declared the innocence of his Master, threw back the money which they gave him to induce him to do this villainous act; and, to establish the evidence which he now gave against them and himself, in behalf of the innocence of Christ, hanged himself, or died through excessive grief and contrition. Let him who chooses, after this plenary evidence to the innocence of Christ, continue the objection, and cry out imposture! take heed that he go not and do LIKEWISE. Caiaphas, Pilate, and Judas have done so already, and I have known several, who have called Christ an impostor, who have cut their own throats, shot, drowned, or hanged themselves.

4 Saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, What is that to us? see thou to that.

5 And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, ^d and departed, and went and hanged himself.

6 And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood.

7 And they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field to bury strangers in.

^b Ch. xx. 19. Acts iii. 13.—^c Ch. xxvi. 14, 15.—^d 2 Sam. xvii. 23. Acts i. 18.

Verse 4. Innocent blood.] A hebraism, for an innocent man. Verse 5. In the temple] Signifies, properly, the temple itself, into which none but the priests were permitted to enter; therefore must signify, near the temple, by the temple door, where the boxes stood to receive the free-will offerings of the people, for the support and repairs of the sacred edifice.

Hanged himself.] Or was strangled. Some eminent critics believe that he was only suffocated by excessive grief, and thus they think the account here given will agree with that in Acts i. 18. I have my doubts—the old method of reconciling the two accounts appears to me quite plausible—he went and strangled himself, and the rope breaking, he fell down, and by the violence of the fall his body was bursted, and his bowels gushed out. I have thought proper, on a matter of such difficulty, to use the word strangled, as possessing a middle meaning between choking or suffocation by excessive grief, and hanging, as an act of suicide.

Verse 6. The treasury] The place whither the people brought their free-will offerings for the service of the temple.

Verse 7. To bury strangers in.] The strangers, probably meaning the Jewish strangers who might have come to Jerusalem, either to worship, or on some other business, and died there during their stay. See here, the very money for which the blessed Jesus was sold becomes subservient to the purpose of mercy and kindness!

Verse 8. The field of blood] What a standing proof must this have been of the innocence of Christ, and of their perjury!

Verse 9. Jeremy the prophet] The words quoted here are not found in the prophet Jeremiah, but in Zech. xi. 13.

It is very likely that in the original reading the name of no prophet was mentioned. This is the more likely, as Matthew often omits the name of the prophet in his quotations.

Verse 11. Art thou the King of the Jews?] The Jews had undoubtedly delivered him to Pilate as one who was rising up against the imperial authority, and assuming the regal office.

8 Wherefore that field was called 'The field of blood unto this day.

9 Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, 'And they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, 'whom they of the children of Israel did value;

10 And gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me.

11 And Jesus stood before the governor: 'and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Jesus said unto him, 'Thou sayest.

12 And when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, 'he answered nothing.

13 Then said Pilate unto him, 'Hearst thou not how many things they witness against thee?

14 And he answered him to never a word; inso-much that the governor marvelled greatly.

* Acts i. 19.—^b Zech. xi. 12, 13.—^c Or, whom they bought of the children of Israel.—^d Mark xv. 2. Luke xiii. 3. John xviii. 33.—^e John xviii. 37. 1 Tim. vi. 13.—^f Ch. xxvi. 63. John xix. 9.

Verse 12. He answered nothing.] An answer to such accusations was not necessary: they sufficiently confuted themselves.

Verse 14. Marvelled greatly.] Silence, under calumny, manifests the utmost magnanimity. This very silence was predicted. Isa. liii. 7.

Verse 15. The governor was wont to release] Whence this custom originated among the Jews is not known.

Verse 16. A notable prisoner—Barabbas.] This person had, a short time before, raised an insurrection in Jerusalem, in which it appears, from Mark xv. 7, some lives were lost.

Verse 18. For envy] Through malice. Then it was his business, as an upright judge, to have dispersed this mob, and immediately released Jesus.

Seeing malice is capable of putting even Christ himself to death, how careful should we be not to let the least spark of it harbour in our breast.

Verse 19. I have suffered many things—in a dream] There is no doubt that God had appeared unto this woman, testifying the innocence of Christ, and showing the evils which should pursue Pilate if this innocent blood should be shed by his authority.

Verse 21. They said Barabbas.] What a fickle crowd! A little before they all hailed him as the Son of David, and acknowledged him as a gift from God; now they prefer a murderer to him!

Verse 22. What shall I do then with Jesus?] Showing, hereby, that it was his wish to release him.

Verse 23. What evil hath he done?] Pilate plainly saw that there was nothing laid to his charge, for which, consistently with the Roman law, he could condemn him.

Verse 24. Pilate—took water, and washed his hands] It was a custom among the Hebrews, Greeks, and Latins, to wash the hands in token of innocence, and to show that they were pure from any imputed guilt. Deut. xxi. 1-10; Psalm xxvi. 6.

Verse 25. His blood be on us and on our children.] If this man be innocent, and we put him to death as a guilty person, may the punishment due to such a crime be visited upon us, and upon our children after us! What a dreadful imprecation! and how literally fulfilled!

Verse 26. Scourged Jesus] This is allowed to have been a very severe punishment of itself among the Romans, the flesh being generally cut by the whips used for this purpose; sometimes they were whipped to death.

It has been thought that Pilate might have spared this additional cruelty of whipping; but it appears that it was a common custom to scourge those criminals which were to be crucified, and lenity in Christ's case is not to be allowed; he must take all the misery in full tale.

Verse 27. The common hall] Or, prætorium. Called so from the prætor, a principal magistrate among the Romans, whose business it was to administer justice in the absence of the consul.

Verse 28. Stripped him] Took off his mantle, or upper garment.

15 'Now at that feast the governor was wont to release unto the people a prisoner, whom they would.

16 And they had then a notable prisoner, called Barabbas.

17 Therefore when they were gathered together, Pilate said unto them, Whom will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, or Jesus which is called Christ?

18 For he knew that for envy they had delivered him.

(19 When he was set down on the judgment seat, his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man: for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him.)

20 'But the chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they should ask Barabbas, and destroy Jesus.

21 The governor answered and said unto them,

—^f Ch. xxvi. 62. John xix. 10.—^h Mark xv. 6. Luke xiii. 17. John xviii. 39.—ⁱ Mark xv. 11. Luke xiii. 18. John xviii. 40. Acts iii. 14.

A scarlet robe] Or, according to Mark and John, a purple robe, such as emperors and kings wore.

Verse 29. A crown of thorns] It does not appear that this crown was intended to be an instrument of punishment or torture to his head, but rather to render him ridiculous; for which cause also they put a reed in his hand, by way of sceptre, and bowed their knees, pretending to do him homage. The crown was not probably of thorns, in our sense of the word: there are eminently learned men who think that the crown was formed of the herb acanthus; and Bishop Pearce and Michaelis are of this opinion.

Verse 32. A man of Cyrene—him they compelled to bear his cross.] In John, chap. xix. 16, 17, we are told Christ himself bore the cross, and this, it is likely, he did for a part of the way; but, being exhausted with the scourging and other cruel usage which he had received, he was found incapable of bearing it alone; therefore they obliged Simon, not, I think, to bear it entirely, but to assist Christ, by bearing a part of it. It was a constant practice among the Romans to oblige criminals to bear their cross to the place of execution.

Verse 33. A place called Golgotha] From the Hebrew golgoeth, a skull, probably so called from the many skulls of those who had suffered crucifixion and other capital punishments, scattered up and down in the place. It is the same as Calvary, the place of bare skulls. Some think the place was thus called, because it was in the form of a human skull. It is likely that it was the place of public execution.

Verse 34. They gave him vinegar—mingled with gall] Gall, signifies no more than bitters of any kind. It was a common custom to administer a stupefying potion, compounded of sour wine, which is the same as vinegar, from the French vinigre, frankincense, and myrrh, to condemned persons, to help to alleviate their sufferings, or so disturb their intellect that they might not be sensible of them. Some person, out of kindness, appears to have administered this to our blessed Lord; but he, as in all other cases, determining to endure the fulness of pain, refused to take what was thus offered to him, choosing to tread the winepress alone.

Verse 35. And they crucified him] Crucifixion properly means the act of nailing or tying to a cross. The cross was made of two beams, either crossing at the top, at right angles, like a T, or in the middle of their length, like an X. There was, besides, a piece on the centre of the transverse beam, to which the accusation or statement of the crime of the culprit was attached, and a piece of wood which projected from the middle, on which the person sat, as on a sort of saddle; and by which the whole body was supported. The cross on which our Lord suffered was of the former kind; being thus represented in all old monuments, coins, and crosses. This punishment was the most dreadful of all others, both for the shame and pain of it; and so scandalous, that it was inflicted as the last mark of detestation upon the vilest of people. It was the punishment of robbers and murderers, provided they were slaves; but if they were free, it was thought too infamous a punishment for such, let their crimes be what they might.

Whether of the twain will ye that I release unto you? They said, Barabbas.

22 Pilate saith unto them, What shall I do then with Jesus, which is called Christ? They all say unto him, Let him be crucified.

23 And the governor said, Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying, Let him be crucified.

24 When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it.

25 Then answered all the people, and said, His blood be on us, and on our children.

26 Then released he Barabbas unto them: and when he had scourged Jesus, he delivered him to be crucified.

27 Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the common hall, and gathered unto him the whole band of soldiers.

28 And they stripped him, and put on him a scarlet robe.

29 And when they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, saying, Hail, king of the Jews!

30 And they spit upon him, and took the reed, and smote him on the head.

31 And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, and led him away to crucify him.

32 And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross.

33 And when they were come unto a place called Golgotha, that is to say, a place of a skull, 34 They gave him vinegar to drink mingled with gall: and when he had tasted thereof, he would not drink.

35 And they crucified him, and parted his garments, casting lots: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots.

36 And sitting down they watched him there; and set up over his head his accusation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

37 Then were there two thieves crucified with him, one on the right hand, and another on the left.

38 And they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads, 39 And saying, Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross.

40 Likewise also the chief priests, mocking him, with the scribes and elders, said, 41 He saved others; himself he cannot save. If he be the King of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe him.

42 He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him: for he said, I am the Son of God.

43 The thieves also, which were crucified with him, cast the same in his teeth.

And parted his garments, casting lots] These were the Roman soldiers, who had crucified him: and it appears from this circumstance, that in those ancient times the spoils of the criminal were claimed by the executioners, as they are to the present day. It appears that they divided a part, and cast lots for the rest: viz. for his seamless coat, John xix. 23, 24. The words which follow are plainly an interpolation, borrowed from John xix. 24, in which place they will be properly noticed.

Verse 36. They watched him] To prevent his disciples or relatives from taking away the body or affording any relief to the sufferer.

Verse 37. His accusation] It was a common custom to affix a label to the cross, giving a statement of the crime for which the person suffered.

Verse 38. Two thieves] Robbers, or cut-throats: men who had committed robbery and murder; for it does not appear that persons were crucified for robbery only. Thus was our Lord numbered (his name enrolled, placed as it were in the death warrant) with transgressors, according to the prophetic declaration, Isa. liii. 12; and the Jews placed him between these two, perhaps to intimate that he was the worst felon of the three.

Verse 39. Wagging their heads] In token of contempt.

Verse 40. Thou that destroyest] Who didst pretend that thou couldst have destroyed the temple, and built it up again in three days. This malicious torturing of our Lord's words has been noticed before. Cruelly is obliged to take refuge in lies, in order to vindicate its infamous proceedings.

If thou be the Son of God] Or rather, a son of God, i. e., a peculiar favourite of the Most High; not the son of God. [The generally received sense is more correct.]

Verse 41. Chief priests—scribes and elders] It does not appear that the Pharisees joined in with the others in the condemnation of our Lord. All the infamy of this seems to fall upon the priests, scribes, and elders.

Verse 42. He saved others; himself he cannot save.] Or,

* Ps. lxxix. 21. See ver. 49.—Mark xv. 24. Luke xlii. 34. John xix. 24.—Ps. xxii. 18.—Ver. 51.—Mark xv. 26. Luke xlii. 39. John xix. 19.—Isa. liii. 12. Mark xv. 27. Luke xlii. 32, 33. Cannot he save himself? Several MSS. read this with the mark of interrogation as above; and this makes the sarcasm still more keen.

We will believe him] Instead of him many excellent MSS. have in him: this is a reading which Griesbach and other eminent critics have adopted.

Verse 43. If he will have him] Or, if he delight in him. See Ps. xxii. 9.

Verse 44. The thieves also—cast the same in his teeth.] That is, one of the robbers; for one, we find, was a penitent, Luke xlii. 39, 40.

Verse 45. There was darkness over all the land] I am of opinion that this does not mean all the world, but only the land of Judea. So the word is used, chap. xxiv. 30, Luke iv. 25, and in other places. Besides, it is evident that the Evangelists speak of things that happened in Judea, the place of their residence. It is plain enough there was a darkness in Jerusalem, and over all Judea; and probably over all the people among whom Christ had for more than three years preached the everlasting gospel; and that this darkness was supernatural, is evident from this, that it happened during the Passover, which was celebrated only at the full moon, a time in which it was impossible for the sun to be eclipsed. But many suppose the darkness was over the whole world, and think there is sufficient evidence of this in ancient authors.

Verse 46. My God! my God! why hast thou forsaken me?] These words are quoted by our Lord from Ps. xxii. 1: they are of very great importance, and should be carefully considered.

Some suppose "that the divinity had now departed from Christ, and that his human nature was left unsupported to bear the punishment due to men for their sins." But this is by no means to be admitted, as it would deprive his sacrifice of its infinite merit, and consequently leave the sin of the world without an atonement. Take deity away from any redeeming act of Christ, and redemption is ruined.

It is worthy of note, that a Hebrew MS. of the twelfth

45 * Now from the sixth hour, there was darkness over all the land, unto the ninth hour, 46 And about the ninth hour, ^b Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? that is to say, ^c My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

47 Some of them that stood there, when they heard that, said, This man calleth for Elias.

48 And straightway one of them ran and took a sponge, ^d and filled it with vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

49 The rest said, Let be, let us see whether Elias will come to save him.

50 * Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost.

51 And behold, ^e the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent;

52 And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept, arose, 53 And ^f came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many.

54 ^g Now when the centurion, and they that were with him, watching Jesus, saw the earthquake, and those things that were done, they feared greatly, saying, Truly this was the Son of God.

55 And many women were there beholding afar off, ^h which followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto him:

56 ⁱ Among which was Mary Magdalene, and century, instead of azabthani, forsaken me, reads shechach-thani, FORGOTTEN me. This word makes a very good sense, and comes nearer to the sabachthani of the Evangelists. It may be observed also, that the words, Why hast thou FORGOTTEN me? are often used by David and others, in times of oppression and distress. See Ps. xlii. 9.

Some think that the words, as they stand in the Hebrew and Syriac, are capable of a translation which destroys all objections, and obviates every difficulty: My God! my God! to what sort of persons hast thou left me? The words thus understood are rather to be referred to the wicked Jews than to our Lord, and are an exclamation indicative of the obstinate wickedness of his crucifiers, who stealed their hearts against every operation of the Spirit and power of God.

Through the whole of the Sacred Writings, God is represented as doing those things which, in the course of his providence, he only permits to be done; therefore, the words, to whom hast thou left or given me up, are only a form of expression for, "How astonishing is the wickedness of those persons into whose hands I am fallen!"

But whatever may be thought of the above mode of interpretation, one thing is certain, viz., That the words could not be used by our Lord in the sense in which they are generally understood. This is sufficiently evident; for he well knew why he was come unto that hour; nor could he be forsaken of God, in whom dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. The Deity, however, might restrain so much of his consolatory support as to leave the human nature fully sensible of all its sufferings, so that the consolations might not take off any part of the keen edge of his passion; and this was necessary to make his sufferings meritorious. And it is probable that this is all that is intended by our Lord's quotation from the twenty-second Psalm. Taken in this view, the words convey an unexceptionable sense, even in the common translation.

Verse 47. This man calleth for Elias.] Probably these were Hellenistic Jews, who did not fully understand the meaning of our Lord's words. Elijah was daily expected to appear as the forerunner of the Messiah, whose arrival, under the character of a mighty prince, was generally supposed to be at hand throughout the East.

Mary the mother of James and Joses, and the mother of Zebedee's children.

57 * When the even was come, there came a rich man of Arimathea, named Joseph, who also himself was Jesus' disciple:

58 He went to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus. Then Pilate commanded the body to be delivered.

59 And when Joseph had taken the body, he wrapped it in a clean linen cloth, 60 And ^j laid it in his own new tomb, which he had hewn out in the rock: and he rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulchre, and departed.

61 And there was Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, sitting over against the sepulchre.

62 Now the next day that followed the day of the preparation, the chief priests and Pharisees came together unto Pilate, 63 Saying, Sir, we remember that that deceiver said, while he was yet alive, ^k After three days I will rise again.

64 Command therefore that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day, lest his disciples come by night, and steal him away, and say unto the people, ^l He is risen from the dead; so the last error shall be worse than the first.

65 Pilate said unto them, Ye have a watch: go your way, make it as sure as ye can.

66 So they went and made the sepulchre sure, ^m sealing the stone, and setting a watch.

Verse 48. Took a sponge] This being the most convenient way to reach a liquid to his mouth; tied it on a reed, that they might be able to reach his lips with it. This reed, as we learn from St. John, was a stalk of hyssop, which, in that country, must have grown to a considerable magnitude. This appears also to have been done in mercy, to alleviate his sufferings.

Verse 50. Yielded up the ghost.] He dismissed the spirit. He himself willingly gave up that life which it was impossible for man to take away. It is not said that he hung on the cross till he died through pain and agony; nor is it said that his bones were broken, the sooner to put him out of pain, and to hasten his death; but that himself dismissed the soul, that he might thus become, not a forced sacrifice, but a free-will offering for sin.

Verse 51. The veil of the temple was rent] That is, the veil which separated the holy place, where the priests ministered, from the holy of holies, into which the high-priest only entered, and that once a year, to make a general expiation for the sins of the people. This rending of the veil was emblematical, and pointed out that the separation between Jews and Gentiles was now abolished, and that the privilege of the high-priest was now communicated to all mankind: ALL might henceforth have access to the throne of grace, through the one great atonement and mediator, the Lord Jesus. See this beautifully illustrated in Heb. x. 10, 20, 21, 22.

Verse 52. And the graves were opened] By the earthquake; and many bodies of saints which slept, i. e., were dead, sleep being a common expression for death in the Scriptures.

Verse 53. And came out of the graves after his resurrection] NOT BEFORE, as some have thought, for Christ was himself the FIRST FRUITS of them who slept, 1 Cor. xv. 20. The graves were opened at his death, by the earthquake, and the bodies came out at his resurrection.

And appeared unto many.] Thus establishing the truth of our Lord's resurrection in particular, and of the resurrection of the body in general, by many witnesses.

It is difficult to account for the transaction mentioned in verses 52 and 53. Some have thought that these two verses have been introduced into the text of Matthew from the gospel of the Nazarenes; others think that the simple meaning is this:—by the earthquake several bodies that had been buried were thrown up and exposed to view, and continued above ground till after Christ's resurrection, and were seen by many persons in the city. Why the graves should be opened on Friday, and the bodies not be raised to life till the following Sunday, is difficult to be conceived.

Verse 54. The centurion] The Roman officer who superintended the execution, called centurio, from centum, a hundred, because he had the command of one hundred men.

Truly this was the Son of God.] It is not likely that this centurion had any knowledge of the expectation of the Jews relative to the Messiah, and he did not use the words in this sense. A son of God, as the Romans used the term, would signify no more than a very eminent or divine person: a hero.

Verse 55. Many women] To their everlasting honour, these women evidenced more courage, and affectionate attachment to their Lord and Master, than the disciples did, who had promised to die with him rather than forsake him.

Verse 56. Mary Magdalene] She probably had her name from Magdala, a village or district in Lower Galilee.

Mary the mother of James] She was mother of him called James the lesser, or junior, who was son of Alphaeus or Cleopas, see chap. x. 8, Mark xv. 40; John xix. 25; and she was sister to the Itchy Virgin.

Verse 57. When the even] This must have been about three o'clock, or a little after; for our Lord having expired about three o'clock, ver. 46, and the Jewish passover beginning about four, it was necessary that Joseph, who would not fail to eat the passover at the usual time, should have obtained and buried the body of Christ sometime before four o'clock.

A rich man] He was of Arimathea or Rama, in the tribe of Benjamin, Matt. ii. 17, but lived ordinarily in Jerusalem, as being a member of the great council.

Verse 58. Begged the body] That he might bury it honourably; otherwise, by the Jewish customs, it would have either been burned, or buried in the common place appointed for executed criminals.

Verse 59. Wrapped it in a clean linen cloth] The Jews, as well as the Egyptians, added spices to keep the body from putrefaction, and the linen was wrapped about every part to keep the aromatics in contact with the flesh.

Verse 60. Laid it in his own new tomb] To all human appearance the body of Christ must have had the same burial-place with those of the two robbers, as he was numbered with the transgressors, and suffered with them; but, according to a prophecy delivered nearly seven hundred years before that time, he is to have the burying-place of a rich man. See Isa. liii. 9, 10. Had our Lord been buried in the common burial-ground of the malefactors, his resurrection could not have been so distinctly remarked, as the chief priests would never have thought of sealing the stone there, or setting a watch; but now that the body is got into the hands of a friend, they judge it necessary to make use of these precautions, in order, as they said, to prevent imposture; and from this very circumstance the resurrection of Christ had its fullest evidence, and was put beyond the power of successful contradiction. What a number of objections would not human prudence have made to Joseph's conduct, had he consulted it on this occasion! There is, sometimes in our whole life, but one opportunity in which God designs signally to employ us; and, through our general backwardness to every good work, we are for reserving ourselves to other opportunities, in which God neither requires nor will accept our services.

Rolled a great stone to the door] Some are of opinion that this tomb was cut down into the rock, perpendicularly from the surface; and that the great stone spoken of here covered over the entrance to it. The stone, no doubt, was intended to secure the place as much as possible.

Verse 61. Mary Magdalene and the other Mary] The mother of James and Joseph, ver. 56. The mother of our Lord had probably, by this time, been taken home to the house of John.

Sitting over against the sepulchre.] These holy women, filled with that love to their Lord which death cannot destroy, cleaved to him in life, and in death were not divided.

Verse 62. The next day] This was the seventh, or Saturday, and might be what we should term the evening of the siath or Friday, because the Jews always ended their day when the sun set, and then began the next.

That followed the day of preparation] That is, of the sabbath. The victuals, &c., which were to be used on the sabbath by the Jews, were always prepared the preceding evening before the sun set. It is of this preparation that the Evangelist speaks here; and it is the same which is mentioned by Mark, chap. xv. 42; by Luke, chap. xxiii. 54; and by John, xix. 81. But there was another preparation which happened in the same day: viz., The preparation of the passover; this began about twelve o'clock, and continued till four, the time in which they ate the paschal lamb. See John xix. 14.

Verse 63. Sir, we remember, &c.] While these wicked men are fulfilling their own vicious counsels, they are subserving the great cause of Christianity.

After three days I will rise again] This they probably took from his saying, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will build it up. If so, they destroyed, by their own words, the false accusation they brought against him to put him to death; then they perverted the meaning, now they declare it. Thus the wise are taken in their craftiness. Neither the devil nor his servants ever speak the truth, but when they expect to accomplish some bad purpose by it.

Verse 65. Ye have a watch] The Jews had a corps of Roman troops, consisting of several companies, as a guard for the temple, Acts iv. 1. These companies mounted guard by turns, see Luke xxii. 4. Some of these companies, which were not then on duty, Pilate gave them leave to employ to watch the tomb.

Verse 66. Made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch.] Or rather, made the tomb secure by the guard, and by sealing the stone. The guard was to take care that the disciples should not steal him away; and the seal, which was probably the seal of the governor, was to prevent the guards from being corrupted so as to permit the theft.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The resurrection of Christ declared by an angel to the two Marys at the sepulchre, 1-8. They are commissioned to announce this to the disciples, 7. They go, and are met by Christ himself, who promises to meet the disciples in Galilee, 8-10. The watch go into the city, and report to the chief priests what had taken place, 11. They give them money, to say that his disciples had stolen the body by night, while they slept, 12-15. Christ meets the eleven disciples in a mountain of Galilee, 16, 17. He gives them a commission to preach the gospel throughout the earth; to baptize in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; and promises to be with them to the end of the world, 18-20.

IN the 'end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, to see the sepulchre.

2 And, behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

3 His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow:

4 And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

5 And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

6 He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

7 And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you.

8 And they departed quickly from the sepulchre

Verse 1. In the end of the sabbath] After the end of the week: this is the translation given by several eminent critics; and in this way the word is used by the most eminent Greek writers. The transaction mentioned here evidently took place early on the morning of the third day after our Lord's crucifixion; what is called our Sunday morning, or first day of the next week.

Came—to see the sepulchre.] That is, they set out at this time in order to visit the tomb of our Lord, and also to weep there, John xi. 31, and to embalm the body of our Lord, Luke xxiv. 1.

Verse 2. A great earthquake] A shaking or commotion of any kind: probably the word means no more than the confusion caused among the guards by the angel's appearance. All this had taken place before the women reached the sepulchre.

The angel of the Lord descended from heaven] Matthew is very particular in this, to show that the word angel is not to be taken in the sense of an ordinary messenger, who might have come from Joseph of Arimathea, or from any other; but in the sense of an extraordinary messenger, who descended from God, out of heaven, for this very purpose.

Verse 3. His countenance] His appearance, or his face, for so the word is used in some of the best Greek writers.

Like lightning] Coruscations of glory continually flaming from his face.

His raiment white as snow] He was clothed in garments emblematical of the glad tidings which he came to announce.

Verse 4. The keepers—became as dead men.] God can, by one and the same means, comfort his servants, and terrify his enemies.

Verse 5. I know that ye seek Jesus] Speaking after the manner of men, these women deserve to be the first witnesses of the resurrection of Christ: during life they ministered to him, and in death they were not divided.

Verse 6. Come, see the place] The tomb in which our Lord was laid was no doubt like the rest of the Jewish burying places, a receptacle for the several dead of a whole family, divided into separate niches, where each had his place. Come and see the place—was tantamount to, Come and see the niche in which he was laid—it is now empty; nor was there any other body in the place, for the tomb was a new one, in which no man had ever been laid, John xix. 41; so there could be no deception in the case.

Verse 7. Go quickly, and tell his disciples] Thus these faithful women proclaim the gospel to those who were afterwards to be the teachers of the whole human race! Behold what honour God puts upon those who persevere in his truth and continue to acknowledge him before men!

Verse 8. They departed quickly from the sepulchre] At the desire of the angel they went into the tomb, to have the fullest certainty of the resurrection.

Fear and great joy] Fear, produced by the appearance with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word.

9 And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him.

10 Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go, tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

(11 Now when they were going, behold, some of the watch came into the city, and showed unto the chief priests all the things that were done.)

12 And when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers, 13 Saying, say ye, His disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept.

14 And if this come to the governor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure you.

15 So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.)

16 Then the eleven disciples went away into Gali-of this glorious messenger of God; and great joy occasioned by the glad tidings of the resurrection of their Lord and Master.

Verse 9. Jesus met them] Christ bestows his graces and consolations by degrees, first by his angels, and then by himself. He does not reveal himself to incredulous and disobedient souls; he appears not even to those women till he has tried their faith and obedience by his ministering angels.

Verse 10. Be not afraid] They were seized with fear at the sight of the angel; and this was now renewed by this unexpected appearance of Christ.

Go, tell my brethren] This is the first time our Lord called his disciples by this endearing name; in speaking thus, he gives them a full assurance, in the most tender terms, that all that was past was as buried for ever.

Verse 11. Some of the watch] Or, guards. Probably the rest still remained at the tomb, waiting for orders to depart, and had sent these to intimate to their employers the things that had taken place.

Verse 12. With the elders] That is, the senators of the great Sanhedrin or Jewish council of state, elsewhere called the elders of the people; they could now meet, as the sabbath was over.

Verse 13. His disciples came by night] This was as absurd as it was false. On one hand, the terror of the disciples, the smallness of their number (only eleven); and their almost total want of faith; on the other, the great danger of such a bold enterprise, the number of armed men who guarded the tomb, the authority of Pilate and of the Sanhedrin, must render such an imposture as this utterly devoid of credit.

Stole him away, while we slept.] Here is a whole heap of absurdities. 1st. Is it likely that so many men would all fall asleep, in the open air, at once? 2nd. Is it at all probable that a Roman guard should be found off their watch, much less asleep, when it was instant death, according to the Roman military laws, to be found in this state? 3rd. Could they be so sound asleep as not to awake with all the noise which must be necessarily made by removing the great stone, and taking away the body? 4th. Is it at all likely that these disciples could have had time sufficient to do all this, and to come and return, without being perceived by any person? And 5th. If they were asleep, how could they possibly know that it was the disciples that stole him, or indeed that any person or persons stole him?—for, being asleep, they could see no person. From their own testimony, therefore, the resurrection may be as fully proved as the theft.

Verse 14. If this come to the governor's ears] We will take care that you shall not suffer that punishment for this pretended breach of duty which otherwise you might expect.

Verse 15. Until this day.] That is to say, the time in which Matthew wrote his Gospel.

lee, into a mountain * where Jesus had appointed them.

17 And when they saw him, they worshipped him : but some doubted.

18 And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, ^b All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.

Verse 16. Then the eleven disciples went] When the women went and told them that they had seen the Lord, and that he had promised to meet them in Galilee.

Verse 17. But some doubted.] That is, Thomas only at first doubted. The expression simply intimates, that they did not all believe at that time.

Verse 18. All power is given unto me] Or, All authority in heaven and upon earth is given unto me. One fruit of the sufferings and resurrection of Christ is represented to be, his having authority or right in Heaven to send down the Holy Spirit—to raise up his followers thither—and to crown them in the kingdom of an endless glory; in Earth, to convert sinners; to sanctify, protect, and perfect his church; to subdue all nations to himself; and finally, to judge all mankind.

Verse 19. Go ye therefore] Make disciples of all nations, bring them to an acquaintance with God who bought them, and then baptize them in the name of the Father. It is natural to suppose that adults were the first subjects of baptism; for as the Gospel was, in a peculiar manner, sent to the Gentiles, they must hear and receive it, before they could be expected to renounce their old prejudices and idolatries, and come into the bonds of the Christian covenant. But, certainly, no argument can be drawn from this concession against the baptism of children. And as to the objection that the baptized were obliged to profess their faith, and that, therefore, only adults should be baptized, there is no weight at all in it; because what is spoken of such refers to those who, only at that period of life, heard the Gospel, and were not born of parents who had been Christians; therefore they could not have been baptized into the Christian faith, forasmuch as no such faith was at their infancy preached in the world.

In the name of the Father, &c.] Baptism, properly speaking, whether administered by dipping or sprinkling, signifies a full and eternal consecration of the person to the service and honour of that Being in whose name it is administered ;

19 * Go ye therefore, and * teach * all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost :

20 * Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you : * and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world, ^b Amen.

xvi. 15.—^d Isa. lli. 10. Luke xxiv. 47. Acts ii. 38, 39. Rom. x. 18. Col. i. 23.—^e Or, make disciples, or Christians of all nations.—^f John xiv. 14-18. Acts ii. 42. 1 Tim. vi. 14.—^g Ch. xiii. 39-49. xxiv. 8. 2 Tim. ii. 2.—^h 1 Cor. xiv. 16.

but this consecration can never be made to a creature; therefore the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit, are not creatures. Again, baptism is not made in the name of a quality or attribute of the Divine Nature; therefore the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit, are not qualities or attributes of the Divine Nature. The orthodox, as they are termed, have generally considered this text a decisive proof of the doctrine of the Holy Trinity; and what else can they draw from it? Is it possible for words to convey a plainer sense than these do? And do they not direct every reader to consider the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, as three distinct persons? "But this I can never believe." I cannot help that—you shall not be persecuted by me from differing from my opinion: I cannot go over to you; I must abide by what I believe to be the meaning of the scriptures.

Verse 20. Teaching them to observe all things] Persons who are entrusted with the public ministry of the word should take care that they teach not human creeds and confessions of faith, in place of the Sacred writings; but those things, and those only, which Jesus has commanded.

And, lo, I am with you alway] Literally, Behold, I am with you every day.

Unto the end of the world] Some translate, to the end of this age; meaning the Apostolic Age, or Jewish Dispensation; and then they refer the promise of Christ's presence, to the working of miracles, and explain this by Mark xvi. 17-19. But though the words are used in this sense in several places, see chap. xiii. 39, 40, 49, and xxiv. 3, yet it is certain they were repeatedly used among the primitive ecclesiastical writers to denote the consummation of all things; and it is likely that this is the sense in which they are used here. The promise takes in not only the primitive apostles, but also all their successors in the Christian ministry, as long as the earth shall endure.

Amen.] This word is omitted by some of the oldest and most authentic MSS., and by some Versions and Fathers.

MARK. This person, the second in the commonly received order of the four Evangelists, was named JOHN MARK, and was the son of a pious woman called Mary, who dwelt at Jerusalem: she was an early believer, and the disciples used to meet at her house. Peter, having been delivered out of prison by an angel, came to the house of Mary, mother of John, whose surname was Mark, where many were gathered together praying, Acts xii. 12. This very first mention of John Mark assures us of Peter's intimacy in that family: it is almost universally allowed that Mark, mentioned by Peter, 1 Epist. chap. v. 13. is this Evangelist, and that he is the same with him who is called sister's son to Barnabas, Col. iv. 10, and is supposed to have been converted by Peter to the Christian faith. He travelled from Jerusalem to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas, Acts xii. 25, and some short time after he accompanied them to other countries as their minister, Acts xiii. 5. When they returned to the Continent, and came on shore at Perga in Pamphylia, he departed from them and returned to Jerusalem, ver. 13. Afterwards he would have gone with Paul and Barnabas, but the former refused to take him, because of his having left them at Pamphylia; Paul and Barnabas then separated, and Mark accompanied his uncle Barnabas to Cyprus, Acts xv. 36—41. Afterwards Paul and he were fully reconciled, as evidently appears from 2 Tim. iv. 11: Take Mark, and bring him with thee; for he is profitable to me for the ministry. This appears also from Philemon, ver. 24, where Mark is styled Paul's fellow-labourer; and from Col. iv. 10, where we find the Apostle recommending him in a particular manner to the Church of God at that place. He is generally supposed to have been particularly intimate with St. Peter, to have written his Gospel at ROME, A. D. 64, and to have died at Alexandria in Egypt, in the eighth year of the reign of Nero.

How Mark composed his Gospel, is a question not yet decided among learned men. Many of the primitive fathers, such as Papias, Clemens Alexandrinus, Irenæus, Tertullian, Origen, Eusebius, &c., believed that he was only the amanuensis of St. Peter; that this Apostle, through modesty, would not put his name to the work, but dictated the whole account, and Mark wrote it down from his mouth. St. Augustine appears to have been the first who maintained that Mark abridged St. Matthew's Gospel; and that it is not to be considered as an original work. On this opinion several remarks will be made in the course of these notes. Others suppose that Mark compiled it, partly out of Matthew's Gospel, and partly out of the Gospel of Luke. But most of these are conjectures which appear to have very little foundation. Critics are also divided concerning the language in which it was written, and the people to whom it was sent. Some have contended for a Latin original, because of several Latin words found in it. But such words are better accounted for by supposing that his Gospel was written for the use of the Roman people; and that it is on this account that Mark wholly passes by the genealogy of our Lord, as being a point of no consequence to Gentile converts, though very necessary for the Jews, and especially the Jews of Palestina. That it was originally written in Greek, is a point now acknowledged by almost all learned men.

CHAPTER I

The mission, preaching, and success of John Baptist, 1-5. His manner of life, 6. Proclaims Christ, and baptizes him in Jordan, 7-11. The temptation of Christ, 12, 13. John being put in prison, Christ begins to preach, 14, 15. He calls Andrew and Simon, 16-18. James and John, 19, 20. Teaches in Capernaum, 21, 22. Casts out a demon, 23-28. Goes into the house of Simon, and heals his mother-in-law, 29-31. Heals many diseased persons, 32-34. Goes to the desert, and is followed by his disciples, 35-37. Preaches in different towns and synagogues of Galilee, and casts out devils, 38, 39. Cleanses a leper, who publishes abroad his miraculous cure, 40-45.

THE beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, ^athe Son of God;

2 As it is written in the prophets, ^bBehold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

3 ^cThe voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

4 ^dJohn did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance ^efor the remission of sins.

5 ^fAnd there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins.

6 And John was ^gclothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat ^hlocusts and wild honey;

7 And preached, saying, ⁱThere cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose.

Verse 1. The beginning of the gospel] It is with the utmost propriety that Mark begins the gospel dispensation by the preaching of John the Baptist, he being the forerunner of Jesus Christ, and the first proclaimer of the incarnate Messiah. Gospel—for the meaning of the word see the preface to Matthew.

Son of God] To point out this divine origin; and thus glancing at his miraculous conception. This was an essential character of the Messiah.

Verse 2. As it is written in the prophets] Rather, As it is written by Isaiah the prophet. I think this reading should be adopted, instead of that in the common text.

Verse 4. John] The original name is nearly lost in the Greek and in the Latin Johannes, and almost totally so in the English John. The original name is Yehochanan, the grace or mercy of Jehovah: a most proper and significant name for the forerunner of the God of ALL GRACE.

For the remission of sins.] Or, toward the remission. They were to repent, and be baptized in reference to the remission of sins. REPENTANCE prepared the soul for it, and BAPTISM was the type or pledge of it.

8 ^jI indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you ^kwith the Holy Ghost.

9 ^lAnd it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

10 ^mAnd straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens ⁿopened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him:

11 And there came a voice from heaven, saying, ^oThou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

12 ^pAnd immediately the Spirit driveth him into the wilderness.

13 And he was there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of Satan; and was with the wild beasts; ^qand the angels ministered unto him.

14 ^rNow after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, ^spreaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, Joel ii. 28. Acts ii. 4. x. 45. xi. 15, 16. 1 Cor. xii. 13.—^tMatt. iii. 13. Luke iii. 21.—^uMatt. iii. 16. John i. 32.—^vOr, cloven, or, rent.—^wPs. ii. 7. Matt. iii. 17. Ch. ix. 7.—^xMatt. iv. 1. Luke iv. 1.—^yMatt. iv. 11.—^zMatt. iv. 12.—^{aa}Matt. iv. 23.

Verse 5. Confessing their sins.] It was an invariable custom among the Jews to admit no proselyte to baptism, till he had, in the most solemn manner, declared that he for ever had renounced all idolatrous worship, all heathenish superstitions, and promised an entire and unreserved submission to the law of Moses. This was necessary for a proselyte adult—a child dedicated to God by baptism must be brought up in this faith.

Verse 7. The latchet of whose shoes] The shoe of the ancients was properly only a sole tied round the foot and ankle with strings or thongs.

Verse 8. I indeed have baptized you with water] It is he only who can communicate the Holy Spirit; and water baptism is nothing, but as it points out, and leads to, the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

Verse 12. The Spirit driveth him] Putteth him forth. St. Matthew says, chap. iv. 1, was brought up.

Verse 13. With the wild beasts] This is a curious circumstance, which is mentioned by none of the other Evangelists; and seems to intimate that he was in the most remote, unfrequented, and savage part of the desert; which, together

15 And saying, ' The time is fulfilled, and ^b the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel.

16 ^c Now as he walked by the Sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers.

17 And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men.

18 And straightway ^d they forsook their nets, and followed him.

19 ^e And when he had gone a little farther thence, he saw James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, also were in the ship mending their nets.

20 And straightway he called them; and they left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him.

21 ^f And they went into Capernaum; and straightway on the sabbath day he entered into the synagogue, and taught.

22 ^g And they were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

23 ^h And there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit; and he cried out, 24 Saying, Let us alone; ⁱ what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God.

25 And Jesus ^j rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him.

with the diabolic influence, tended to render the whole scene the more horrid.

Verse 15. The time is fulfilled] That is, the time appointed for sending the Messiah; and particularly the time specified by Daniel, chap. ix. 24-27.

Verse 16. Andrew his brother] Instead of the common reading, his brother, the best MSS. and versions have the brother of Simon, which should be received into the text. The most eminent critics approve of this reading.

Verse 21. He entered into the synagogue] Their synagogues, according to the Syriac, which has the word in the plural.

Verse 22. As one that had authority] From God to do what he was doing; and to teach a pure and beneficent system of truth.

And not as the scribes.] Who had no such authority, and whose teaching was not accompanied by the power of God to the souls of the people.

Verse 23. A man with an unclean spirit] This demoniac is only mentioned by Mark and Luke, chap. iv. 31. It seems the man had lucid intervals; else he could not have been admitted into the synagogue. Unclean or impure spirit—a common epithet for those fallen spirits: but here it may mean, one who filled the heart of him he possessed with LASCIVIOUS thoughts, images, desires, and propensities.

Verse 24. What have we to do with thee? Or, What is it to us and to thee? or, What business hast thou with us? See on Matt. viii. 29.

Verse 25. And Jesus rebuked him] All watchings, fastings, and mortifications, considered in themselves, will do little or no good. Uncleaness, of every description, will only yield to the rebuke of God.

Verse 26. And when the unclean spirit had torn him] Never was there a person possessed by an unclean spirit who did not suffer a convulsion, perhaps a total ruin of nature by it. Sins of uncleaness, as the Apostle intimates, are against the body; they sap the foundation of life, so that there are very few of this class, whether male or female, that live out half their days: they generally die martyrs to their lusts.

Verse 27. What thing is this?] Words of surprise and astonishment.

For with authority] They had never heard such a gracious doctrine, and never saw any teaching supported by miracles 26 And when the unclean spirit ^k had torn him, and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him.

27 And they were all amazed, inasmuch that they questioned among themselves saying, What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him.

28 And immediately his fame spread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee.

29 ^l And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John.

30 But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever, and anon they tell him of her.

31 And he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them.

32 ^m And at even, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils.

33 And all the city was gathered together at the door.

34 And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils: and ⁿ suffered not the devils ^o to speak, because they knew him.

35 And ^p in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed.

36 And Simon and they that were with him followed after him.

before. How much must this person be superior to men!—they are brought into subjection by unclean spirits; this person subjects unclean spirits to himself.

Verse 28. And immediately his fame spread abroad] The miracle which he had performed was—1. great; 2. evidenced much benevolence in the worker of it; and 3. was very public, being wrought in the synagogue.

The word immediately occurs more frequently in this Evangelist than in any other writer of the New Covenant. It seems to be used by St. Mark, as our ancient writers used forsooth, and such like words.

Verse 35. In the morning—a great while before day] By the morning is to be understood the whole space of three hours, which finished the fourth watch of the night.

And there prayed.] Not that he needed anything, for in him dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily; but that he might be a pattern to us. Every thing that our blessed Lord did, he performed either as our pattern, or as our sacrifice.

Verse 36. And Simon—followed after him.] Followed him eagerly. They had now begun to taste the good word of God, and thought they could never hear too much of it. Many possess this spirit when first converted to God.

Verse 37. All men seek for thee.] There are all sorts of followers in the train of Christ; but how few walk steadily, and persevere unto the end!

Verse 38. The next towns] This properly signifies such towns as resembled cities for magnitude and number of inhabitants, but which were not walled as were cities.

For therefore came I forth.] For this purpose am I come forth—to preach the gospel to every creature, that all might hear, and fear, and return unto the Lord. The towns and the villages will not come to the preacher—the preacher must go to them, if he desires their salvation.

Verse 39. And he preached] He continued preaching: this is the proper meaning of the words: he never slackened his pace—there was no time to be lost—immortal souls were perishing for lack of knowledge; and the grand adversary was prowling about, seeking whom he might devour.

Verse 40. There came a leper] See the notes on Matt. viii. 2, &c.

Verse 43. Straitly charged] See the reason for this, Matt. viii. 4.

Verse 45. Began to publish it much] Began to publish 37 And when they had found him, they said unto him, All men seek for thee.

38 And he said unto them, * Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also: for ^b therefore came I forth.

39 ^c And he preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee, and cast out devils.

40 ^d And there came a leper to him, beseeching him, and kneeling down to him, and saying unto him, If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

41 And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him, and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean.

many things; probably all that he had heard about our Lord's miraculous works.

And to blaze abroad the matter] That is, his own healing; thinking he could never speak too much, nor too well, of him who had thus mercifully and miraculously cleansed him.

Jesus could no more openly enter into the city] A city of Galilee, probably Chorazin or Bethsaida, in which he did not appear, for fear of exciting the jealousy of the secular govern-

42 And as soon as he had spoken, immediately the leprosy departed from him, and he was cleansed.

43 And he straightly charged him, and forthwith sent him away;

44 And saith unto him, See thou say nothing to any man: but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things ^a which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

45 But he went out, and began to publish it much, and to blaze abroad the matter, insomuch that Jesus could no more openly enter into the city, but was without in desert places; ^a and they came to him from every quarter.

ment, or the envy and malice of the Jewish rulers.

And they came to him from every quarter.] Without doubt, Christ had thousands that were brought to God by his ministry; though, in general, only those are mentioned who were constant attendants on his person. It would be strange, if, while God manifested in the flesh was preacher, there should be few brought to the knowledge of themselves, and of the truth!

CHAPTER II.

Christ preaches in Capernaum, 1, 2. A paralytic person is brought to him, whose sins are pronounced forgiven, 3-5. The scribes accuse him of blasphemy, 6, 7. He vindicates himself, and proves his power to forgive sins by healing the man's disease, 8-11. The people are astonished and edified, 12. He calls Levi from the receipt of custom, 13, 14. Eats in his house with publicans and sinners, at which the Pharisees murmur, 15, 16. He vindicates his conduct, 17. Vindicates his disciples, who were accused of not fasting, 18-22; and for plucking the ears of corn on the sabbath day, 23-26; and teaches the right use of the sabbath, 27-28.

AND again ^a he entered into Capernaum after some days; and it was noised that he was in the house.

2 And straightway ^b many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive them; no, not so much as about the door: and he preached the word unto them.

3 And they come unto him, bringing one sick of the palsy, which was borne of four.

4 And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the roof where he was;

* Matt. ix. 1. Luke v. 18.—^b Prov. viii. 34. Matt. xiii. 20.
Luke v. 17. xi. 28. Acts xvii. 11.

Verse 1. In the house.] The house of Peter, with whom Christ lodged when at Capernaum.

Verse 2. So much as about the door] Meaning the yard or court before the house.

Preached the word] The doctrine of the kingdom of God; for so this word is repeatedly used.

Borne of four.] Four men, one at each corner of the sofa or couch on which he lay.

Verse 4. They uncovered the roof] The houses in the East are generally made flat-roofed, that the inhabitants may have the benefit of taking the air on them; they are also furnished with battlements round about, Deut. xxii. 8. Judg. xvi. 27, and 2 Sam. xi. 2, to prevent persons from falling off; and have a trap door by which they descend into the house. This door, it appears, was too narrow to let down the sick man and his couch; so they uncovered the roof, removed a part of the tiles, and having broken it up, taken away the laths or timber, to which the tiles had been attached, they then had room to let down the afflicted man.

5 When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee.

6 But there were certain of the scribes sitting there, and reasoning in their hearts:

7 Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? ^a who can forgive sins but God only?

8 And immediately ^d when Jesus perceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he part of the tiles, and having broken it up, taken away the laths or timber, to which the tiles had been attached, they then had room to let down the afflicted man.

Verse 14. Levi] The same as Matthew; he appears to have been a Jew, though employed in the odious office of tax-gatherer. For an account of his call, see his Gospel, chap. ix. 9, &c.

Verse 16. Sinners] By sinners, the Gentiles or heathens are generally to be understood in the Gospels, for this was a term the Jews never applied to any of themselves.

Verse 18. Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast] See this largely explained on Matt. ix. 14, &c.

On the nature, times, and duration of fasting, see Matt. vi. 16, and ix. 15.

Verse 20. In those days.] Many of the best MSS. and Versions read, in that day; viz., the day in which Jesus said unto them, Why reason ye these things in your hearts ?

9 * Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee ; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk ?

10 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy,)

11 I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house.

12 And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all ; insomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion.

13 ^b And he went forth again by the sea side ; and all the multitude resorted unto him, and he taught them.

14 ^c And as he passed by, he saw Levi the son of Alphaeus sitting ^d at the receipt of custom, and said unto him, Follow me. And he arose and followed him.

15 ^e And it came to pass, that, as Jesus sat at meat in his house, many publicans and sinners sat also together with Jesus and his disciples : for there were many, and they followed him.

16 And when the scribes and Pharisees saw him eat with publicans and sinners, they said unto his disciples, How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners ?

17 When Jesus heard it, he saith unto them, 'They that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick : I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

18 ^f And the disciples of John, and of the Pharisees, used to fast : and they come and say unto him, Verse 26. The days of Abiathar the high priest] It appears from 1 Sam. xxi. 1, which is the place referred to here, that Abimelech was then high priest at Nob ; and from 1 Sam. xxii. 20 ; xxiii. 6, and 1 Chron. xviii. 16, it appears that Abiathar was the son of Abimelech. Probably they both officiated in the high priesthood ; and the name of the office was indifferently applied to either.

Verse 27. The sabbath was made for man] That he might have the seventh part of his whole time to devote to the purposes of bodily rest and spiritual exercises. And in these respects it is of infinite use to mankind. Where no sabbath is observed, there disease, poverty, and profligacy, generally prevail. Had we no sabbath, we should soon have no religion.

Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast, but thy disciples fast not ?

19 And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bride-chamber fast, while the bridegroom is with them ? as long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot fast.

20 But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

21 No man also seweth a piece of ^h new cloth on an old garment : else the new piece that filled it up taketh away from the old, and the rent is made worse.

22 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles, else the new wine doth burst the bottles, and the wine is spilled, and the bottles will be marred : but new wine must be put into new bottles.

23 ⁱ And it came to pass, that he went through the corn fields on the sabbath day ; and his disciples began, as they went, ^j to pluck the ears of corn.

24 And the Pharisees said unto him, Behold, why do they on the sabbath day, that which is not lawful ?

25 And he said unto them, Have ye never read ^k what David did when he had need, and was an-hungred, he, and they that were with him ?

26 How he went into the house of God, in the days of Abiathar the high priest, and did eat the shew-bread, ^l which is not lawful to eat but for the priests, and gave also to them which were with him.

27 And he said unto them, ^m The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath :

28 Therefore ⁿ the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

Verse 28. The Son of Man is Lord] See on Matt. xii. 7, 8. Some have understood this as applying to men in general, and not to Christ. The Son of man, any man, is Lord of the sabbath ; i. e. it was made for him, for his ease, comfort, and use, and to these purposes he is to apply it. But this is a very harsh, and at the same time a very lax, mode of interpretation ; for it seems to say that a man may make what use he pleases of the sabbath ; and, were this true, the moral obligation of the sabbath would soon be annihilated.

God ordained the sabbath not only to be a type of that rest which remains for the people of God, but to be also a means of promoting the welfare of men in general.

CHAPTER III.

The man with the withered hand healed, 1-5. The Pharisees plot our Lord's destruction, 6. Christ withdraws, and is followed by a great multitude, 7-9. He heals many, and goes to a mountain to pray, 10-13. He ordains twelve disciples, and gives them power to preach and work miracles, 14, 15. Their names, 16-19. The multitudes throng him, and the scribes attribute his miracles to Beelzebub, 20-22. He vindicates himself by a parable, 23-27. Of the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, 28-30. His mother and brethren send for him, 31, 32. And he takes occasion from this to show, that they who do the will of God are to him as his brother, sister, and mother, 33-35.

AND * he entered again into the synagogue; and there was a man there which had a withered hand.

2 And they watched him, whether he would heal him on the sabbath day; that they might accuse him.

3 And he saith unto the man which had the withered hand, ^b Stand forth:

4 And he saith unto them, Is it lawful to do good on the sabbath days, or to do evil? to save life, or to kill? But they held their peace.

5 And when he had looked round about on them with anger, being grieved for the ^c hardness of their hearts, he saith unto the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out: and his hand was restored whole as the other.

6 ^d And the Pharisees went forth, and straightway took counsel with ^e the Herodians against him, how they might destroy him.

7 But Jesus withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea: and a great multitude from Galilee followed him, ^f and from Judea,

8 And from Jerusalem, and from Idumea, and from beyond Jordan; and they about Tyre and Sidon, a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him.

9 And he spake to his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him, because of the multitude, lest they should throng him.

10 For he had healed many; insomuch that they ^g pressed upon him for to touch him, as many as had plagues.

11 ^h And unclean spirits, when they saw him, fell down before him, and cried, saying, 'Thou art the Son of God.

12 And ⁱ he straightly charged them, that they should not make him known.

13 ^k And he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth unto him whom he would: and they came unto him.

14 And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach,

15 And to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils:

16 And Simon ^l he surnamed Peter;

17 And James the son of Zebedee, and John the brother of James; and he surnamed them Boanerges, which is, the sons of thunder:

18 And Andrew, and Philip, and Bartholomew, and Matthew, and Thomas, and James the son of Alphaeus, and Thaddeus, and Simon the Canaanite, 19 And Judas Iscariot, which also betrayed him: and they went ^m into a house.

20 And the multitude cometh together again, ⁿ so that they could not so much as eat bread.

21 And when his ^o friends heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him: ^p for they said, He is beside himself.

22 And the scribes which came down from Jerusalem said, ^q He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils casteth he out devils.

23 ^r And he called them unto him, and said unto them in parables, How can Satan cast out Satan?

24 And if a kingdom be divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand.

25 And if a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand.

26 And if Satan rise up against himself, and be divided, he cannot stand, but hath an end.

27 ^s No man can enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he will first bind the strong man; and then he will spoil his house.

28 ^t Verily I say unto you, All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies, wherewith soever they shall blaspheme:

Verse 1. A man there which had a withered hand.] See this explained on Matt. xii. 10, &c., and on Luke vi. 6, 10.

Verse 2. They watched him.] They maliciously watched him.

Verse 4. To do good—or—evil? to save life, or kill?] It was a maxim with the Jews, as it should be with all men, that he who neglected to preserve life when it was in his power was to be reputed a murderer. Every principle of sound justice requires that he should be considered in this light. But, if this be the case, how many murderers are there against whom there is no law but the law of God!

Verse 5. With anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts.] By a long resistance to the grace and Spirit of God their hearts had become callous; they were past feeling.

With anger.] What was the anger which our Lord felt? That which proceeded from excessive grief, which was occasioned by their obstinate stupidity and blindness: therefore it was no uneasy passion, but an excess of generous grief.

Verse 8. When they had heard what great things he did, came unto him.] So, if Christ be persecuted and abandoned by the wicked, there are a multitude of pious souls who earnestly seek and follow him.

Verse 9. A small ship.] Doubtless something of the boat kind, which probably belonged to some of the disciples. The word ship is utterly improper in many places of our translation, and tends to mislead the people.

Verse 10. They pressed upon him.] Rushed upon him through eagerness to have their spiritual and bodily maladies immediately removed.

Plagues.] Rather disorders, properly such disorders as were inflicted by the Lord. The word plague also tends to mislead.

Verse 14. He ordained twelve.] He made twelve. Here is nothing of what we call ordaining. Christ simply appointed them to be with him; and that he might send them occasionally to preach, &c.

Verse 15. To have power to heal—and to cast out devils.] The business of a minister of Christ is, 1st. To preach the Gospel. 2nd. To be the physician of souls. And, 3rd. To wage war with the devil, and destroy his kingdom.

Verse 17. Sons of thunder.] A Hebraism for thunderers; probably so named because of their zeal and power in preaching the Gospel.

Some think that the reason why our Lord gave this appellative to the sons of Zebedee was, their desire to bring fire down from heaven, i. e., a storm of thunder and lightning, to overturn and consume a certain Samaritan village, the inhabitants of which would not receive their Master. See the account in Luke ix. 53, 54. It was a very useful thing among the Jews to give surnames, which signified some particular quality or excellence, to their Rabbins.

Verse 19. Into a house.] As Christ was now returned to Capernaum, this was probably the house of Peter, mentioned chap. ii. 1.

Verse 20. Eat bread.] Had no time to take any necessary refreshment.

Verse 21. He is beside himself.] It was the enemies of Christ that raised this report; and his relatives, probably thinking that it was true, went to confine him. Let a Christian but neglect the care of his body for a time, in striving to enter in at the strait gate; let a minister of Christ but impair his health by his pastoral labours; presently "he is distracted;" he has "not the least conduct nor discretion." But let a man forget his soul, let him destroy his health by debaucheries, let him expose his life through Verse 31. His brethren and his mother] Or, rather, his mother and his brethren.

Verse 33. Who is my mother] See on Matt. xii. 46-50.

CHAPTER IV.

The parable of the sower, 1-9. Its interpretation, 10-20. The use we should make of the instructions we receive, 21-25. The parable of the progressively growing seed, 26-29. Of the mustard seed, 30-34. Christ and his disciples are overtaken by a storm, 35-38. He rebukes the wind and the sea, and produces fair weather, 39-41.

AND *he began again to teach by the sea side : and there was gathered unto him a great multitude, so that he entered into a ship, and sat in the sea ; and the whole multitude was by the sea on the land.

2 And he taught them many things by parables, and said unto them in his doctrine,

3 Hearken : Behold, there went out a sower to sow :

4 And it came to pass, as he sowed, some fell by the way side, and the fowls of the air came and devoured it up.

5 And some fell on stony ground, where it had not much earth ; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth :

6 But when the sun was up, it was scorched ; and because it had no root it withered away.

7 And some fell among thorns, and the thorns grew up, and choked it, and it yielded no fruit.

8 And other fell on good ground, and did yield fruit that sprang up and increased ; and brought forth, some thirty, and some sixty, and some an hundred.

9 And he said unto them, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

10 * And when he was alone, they that were about him with the twelve, asked of him the parable.

11 And he said unto them, Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God : but unto * them that are without, all these things are done in parables :

12 * That seeing they may see, and not perceive ; and hearing they may hear, and not understand ; lest at any time they should be converted, and their sins should be forgiven them.

13 And he said unto them, Know ye not this Verse 2. He taught them many things by parables] See every part of this parable of the sower explained on Matt. xiii. 1, &c.

Verse 10. They that were about him] It appears there were several present ; who, though they were not styled disciples, yet seriously attended to his public and private instructions.

Verse 13. Know ye not this parable?] The scope and design of which is so very obvious.

How then will ye know all parables?] Of which mode of teaching ye should be perfect masters, in order that ye may be able successfully to teach others.

Verse 15. These are they] Probably our Lord here refers to the people to whom he had just now preached, and who, it is likely, did not profit by the word spoken.

Verse 21. Is a candle—put under a bushel?] The design of my preaching is to enlighten men, my parables not being designed to hide the truth, but to make it more manifest.

Verse 22. For there is nothing hid, &c.] Probably our Lord means, that all that had hitherto been secret, relative to the salvation of a lost world, or only obscurely pointed out by types and sacrifices, shall now be uncovered and made plain by the everlasting Gospel. See on Matt. v. 15, x. 26.

Verse 26. So is the kingdom of God] This parable is mentioned only by Mark, a proof that Mark did not abridge Matthew.

Verse 27. And should sleep and rise night and day] That is, he should sleep by night, and rise by day ; for so the words are obviously to be understood. I see no necessity of inquiring how Christ may be said to sleep and rise night and day ; Christ being like to this husbandman only in sowing and reaping the seed.

He knoweth not how.] How a plant grows is a mystery in nature, which the wisest philosopher in the universe cannot fully explain.

parable? and how then will ye know all parables?

14 ^a The sower soweth the word.

15 And these are they by the way side, where the word is sown; but when they have heard, Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts.

16 And these are they likewise which are sown on stony ground; who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladness;

17 And have no root in themselves, and so endure but for a time: afterward, when affliction or persecution ariseth for the word's sake, immediately they are offended.

18 And these are they which are sown among thorns; such as hear the word, 19 And the cares of this world, ^b and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful.

20 And these are they which are sown on good ground; such as hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, some thirty-fold, some sixty, and some an hundred.

21 ^c And he said unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick?

22 ^d For there is nothing hid, which shall not be manifested; neither was anything kept secret, but that it should come abroad.

23 ^e If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

24 And he saith unto them, Take heed what ye hear: ^f with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you: and unto you that hear shall more be given.

25 ^g For he that hath, to him shall be given: and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath.

26 And he said, ^h So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast seed into the ground;

27 And should sleep and rise night and day, and the seed should spring and grow up, he knoweth not how.

28 For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear.

29 But when the fruit is ⁱ brought forth, immediately ^k he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

30 And he said, ^l Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it?

31 ^m It is like a grain of mustard seed, which, when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in the earth:

32 But when it is sown, it groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches; so that the fowls of the air may lodge under the shadow of it.

33 ⁿ And with many such parables spake he the word unto them, as they were able to hear it.

34 But without a parable spake he not unto them: and when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples.

35 ^o And the same day, when the even was come, he saith unto them, Let us pass over unto the other side.

36 And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him even as he was in the ship. And there were also with him other little ships.

37 And there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full.

38 And he was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow: and they awake him, and say unto him, Master, carest thou not that we perish?

39 And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm.

40 And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?

41 And they feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?

in the soul by the word of life, under the influence of the Holy Spirit, is first very small; there is only a blade, but this is full of promise, for a good blade shows there is a good seed at bottom, and that the soil in which it is sown is good also. Then the ear—the strong stalk grows up, and the ear is formed at the top; the faith and love of the believing soul increase abundantly; it has the ear which is shortly to be filled with the ripe grain, the outlines of the whole image of God. Then the full corn. The soul is purified from all unrighteousness; and, having escaped the corruption that is in the world, it is made a partaker of the divine nature, and is filled with all the fulness of God.

Verse 29. He putteth in the sickle] It has been supposed that our Lord intimates here that, as soon as a soul is made completely holy, it is taken into the kingdom of God. But certainly the parable does not say so. When the corn is ripe, it is reaped for the benefit of him who sowed it; for it can be of little or no use till it be ripe: so when a soul is saved from all sin, it is then, and not till then, fully fitted for the Master's use. God saves men to the uttermost, that they may here perfectly love him, and worthily magnify his name. To take them away the moment they are capable of doing this, would be, so far, to deprive the world and the church of the manifestation of the glory of his grace. There may be millions of cases, where, though to die would be gain, yet to live may be far better for the church, and for an increase of the life of Christ to the soul.

Verse 30. Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God?]

How amiable is this carefulness of Jesus! How instructive to the preachers of his word! He is not solicitous to seek fine turns of eloquence to charm the minds of his auditors, nor to draw such descriptions and comparisons as may surprise them: but studies only to make himself understood; to instruct to advantage; to give true ideas of faith and holiness; and to find out such expressions as may render necessary truths easy and intelligible to the meanest capacities. The very wisdom of God seems to be at a loss to find out expressions low enough for the slow apprehensions of men. How dull and stupid is the creature! How wise and good the Creator! And how foolish the preacher who uses fine and hard words in his preaching, which, though admired by the shallow, convey no instruction to the multitude.

Verse 33. As they were able to hear] Or understand, suiting his teaching to the capacities of his hearers. I have always found that preacher most useful, who could adapt his phrase to that of the people to whom he preached. Studying different dialects and forms of speech among the common people, is a more difficult and a more useful work than the study of dead languages. The one a man should do, and the other he need not leave undone.

Verse 34. He expounded all things to his disciples.] That they might be capable of instructing others. Outside hearers, those who do not come into close fellowship with the true disciples of Christ, have seldom more than a superficial knowledge of divine things.

In the fellowship of the saints, where Jesus the teacher is always to be found, every thing is made plain—for the secret of the Lord is with them who fear him.

Verse 35. Let us pass over unto the other side.] Our Lord was now by the Sea of Galilee.

Verse 36. They took him even as he was in the ship.] That is, the disciples; he was now in the boat, i. e., his own boat which usually waited on him, and out of which it appears he was then teaching the people. There were several others there which he might have gone in, had this one not been in the place.

Verse 37. A great storm of wind] See on Matt. viii. 24.

Verse 38. On a pillow] Probably a little bed, or hammock, such as are common in small vessels.

Verse 39. Peace, be still.] Be silent! Be still! There is uncommon majesty and authority in these words. Who but God could act thus? Perhaps this salvation of his disciples in the boat might be designed to show forth that protection and deliverance which Christ will give to his followers, however violently they may be persecuted by earth or hell.

Verse 40. Why are ye so fearful?] Having me with you. How is it that ye have no faith?] Having already had such proofs of my unlimited power and goodness.

Verse 41. What manner of man is this?] They were astonished at such power proceeding from a person who appeared to be only like one of themselves.

CHAPTER V.

The man possessed with a legion of demons cured, 1-20. He raises Jairus's daughter to life, and cures the woman who had an issue of blood, 21-43.

AND *they came over unto the other side of the sea, into the country of the Gadarenes.

2 And when he was come out of the ship, immediately there met him out of the tombs a man with an unclean spirit,

3 Who had his dwelling among the tombs; and no man could bind him, no, not with chains:

4 Because that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked asunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces:

5 And always, night and day, he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and cutting himself with stones.

6 But when he saw Jesus afar off, he ran and worshipped him,

7 And cried with a loud voice, and said, ^bWhat have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not.

8 For he said unto him, Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit.

9 And he asked him, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, ^cMy name is Legion: for we are many.

10 And he besought him much that he would not send them away out of the country.

11 Now there was there nigh unto the mountains a great herd of swine feeding.

12 And all the devils besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them.

13 And forthwith Jesus gave them leave. And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine: and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the sea (they were about two thousand;) and were choked in the sea.

14 And they that fed the swine fled, and told it in the city, and in the country. And they went out to see what it was that was done.

15 And they come to Jesus, and see him that was possessed with the devil, and had the legion, sitting,

* Matt. viii. 28. Luke viii. 26.—^b Acts xvi. 17. Matt. viii. 29.

^c Luke viii. 30.

Verse 1. The Gadarenes.] Some of the MSS. have Gergasenes, and some of them Gerasenes. The Gadarenes were included within the limits of the Gergasenes. [This is a very doubtful solution of the difficulty; modern criticism is divided.]

Verse 2. A man with an unclean spirit] There are two mentioned by Matthew, who are termed demoniacs.

Verse 4. With fetters and chains] His strength, it appears, was supernatural, no kind of chains being strong enough to confine him. With several, this man would have passed for an outrageous madman, and diabolic influence be entirely left out of the question; but it is the prerogative of the inspired penman only, to enter into the nature and causes of things; and how strange is it, that because men cannot see as far as the spirit of God does, therefore they deny his testimony.

Verse 5. Crying, and cutting himself with stones.] In this person's case we see a specimen of what Satan could do in all the wicked, if God should permit him; but even the devil himself has his chain; and he who often binds others, is always bound himself.

Verse 6. Worshipped him] Did him homage; compelled thereto by the power of God.

Verse 7. What have I to do with thee] See on chap. i. 24, and Matt. viii. 29, where the idiom and meaning are explained.

Verse 9. Legion: for we are many.] Could a disease have spoken so?

Verse 10. Out of the country.] Strange, that these accursed spirits should find it any mitigation of their misery to be permitted to exercise their malevolence in a particular district! But as this is supposed to have been a heathen district, therefore the demons might consider themselves in their own territories; and probably they could act there with less restraint than they could do in a country where the worship of God was established.

Verse 11. A great herd of swine] See the notes on Matt. vii. 30.

Verse 19. Go home to thy friends, &c.] This was the cause why Jesus would not permit him to follow him now, because he would not have the happiness of his relatives deferred, who must exceedingly rejoice at seeing the wonders which the Lord had wrought.

Verse 23. My little daughter] That little daughter of mine. The words express much tenderness and concern. Luke observes, chap. viii. 42, that she was his only daughter, and was about twelve years of age.

and clothed, and in his right mind : and they were afraid.

16 And they that saw it told them how it befel to him that was possessed with the devil, and also concerning the swine.

17 And *they began to pray him to depart out of their coasts.

18 And when he was come into the ship, ^bhe that had been possessed with the devil prayed him that he might be with him.

19 Howbeit Jesus suffered him not, but saith unto him, Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee.

20 And he departed, and began to publish in Decapolis how great things Jesus had done for him : and all men did marvel.

21 * And when Jesus was passed over again by ship unto the other side, much people gathered unto him : and he was nigh unto the sea.

22 ^a And, behold, there cometh one of the rulers of the synagogue, Jairus by name ; and when he saw him, he fell at his feet, 23 And besought him greatly, saying, My little daughter lieth at the point of death : I pray thee, come and lay thy hands on her, that she may be healed : and she shall live.

24 And Jesus went with him ; and much people followed him, and thronged him.

25 And a certain woman, * which had an issue of blood twelve years,

26 And had suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse, 27 When she had heard of Jesus, came in the press behind, and touched his garment.

28 For she said, If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole.

29 And straightway the fountain of her blood was dried up ; and she felt in her body that she was healed of that plague.

30 And Jesus, immediately knowing in himself that 'virtue had gone out of him, turned him about in the press, and said, Who touched my clothes ?

31 And his disciples said unto him, Thou seest the multitude thronging thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me ?

32 And he looked round about, to see her that had done this thing.

33 But the woman fearing and trembling, knowing what was done in her, came and fell down before him, and told him all the truth.

34 And he said unto her. Daughter, *thy faith hath made thee whole ; go in peace, and be whole of thy plague.

35 ^b While he yet spake, there came from the ruler of the synagogue's house certain which said, Thy daughter is dead : why troublest thou the Master any further ?

36 As soon as Jesus heard the word that was spoken, he saith unto the ruler of the synagogue, Be not afraid, only believe.

37 And he suffered no man to follow him, save Peter, and James, and John the brother of James.

38 And he cometh to the house of the ruler of the synagogue, and seeth the tumult, and them that wept and wailed greatly.

39 And when he was come in, he saith unto them, Why make ye this ado, and weep ? the damsel is not dead, but 'sleepeth.

40 And they laughed him to scorn. ^c But when he had put them all out, he taketh the father and the mother of the damsel, and them that were with him, and entereth in where the damsel was lying.

41 And he took the damsel by the hand, and said unto her, Talitha cumi ; which is, being interpreted, Damsel, I say unto thee, arise.

42 And straightway the damsel arose, and walked ; for she was of the age of twelve years. And they were astonished with a great astonishment.

43 And ^d he charged them straitly that no man should know it ; and commanded that something should be given her to eat.

Verse 26. Had suffered many things of many physicians, —and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse] No person will wonder at this account, when he considers the therapeutics of the Jewish physicians in reference to hæmorrhages, especially of the kind with which this woman was afflicted.

Never could the power and goodness of God be shown in a more difficult and distressful case. And now Jesus comes, and she is healed.

Verse 27. Came in the press behind] She had formed her resolution in faith, she executes it, notwithstanding her weakness, &c., with courage ; and now she finds it crowned with success.

Verse 31. Thou seest the multitude thronging thee, &c.] Many touch Jesus who are not healed by him : the reason is, they do it not by faith, through a sense of their wants, and a conviction of his ability and willingness to save them. Faith conveys the virtue of Christ into the soul, and spiritual health is the immediate consequence of this received virtue.

Verse 34. Be whole of thy plague.] Rather, continue whole, not, be whole, for she was already healed : but this contains a promise, necessary to her encouragement, that her disorder should afflict her no more.

Verse 35. Why troublest thou the Master] These people seem to have had no other notion of our Lord than that of an eminent physician, who might be useful while there was life, but afterwards could do nothing.

Verse 36. Jesus—saith] These words were spoken by our Lord to the afflicted father, immediately on his hearing of the death of his child, to prevent that distress which he otherwise must have felt on finding that the case was now, humanly speaking, hopeless.

Verse 40. The father and the mother] Prudence required that they should be present, and be witnesses of the miracle. And them that were with him] That is, Peter, James, and John, verse 37. It is remarkable that our Lord gave a particular preference to these three disciples, beyond all the rest, on three very important occasions : 1. They were present at the transfiguration. 2. At the raising of Jairus's daughter. 3. At his agony in the Garden of Gethsemane.

Verse 41. Talitha cumi] This is mere Syriac, the proper translation of which the Evangelist has given.

Verse 43. Something should be given her to eat.] For though he had employed an extraordinary power to bring her to life, he wills that she should be continued in existence by the use of ordinary means.

CHAPTER VI.

Our Lord's countrymen are astonished at his wisdom and mighty works, and are offended at him, 1-4. He works few miracles there, because of their unbelief, 5, 6. He sends forth his disciples by two and two to preach, &c., 7-11. They depart, preach, and work miracles, 12, 13. Different opinions of Christ, 14-16. Account of the beheading of John Baptist, 17-29. The disciples return, and give an account of their mission, 30. He departs with them to a place of privacy, but the people follow him, 31-33. He has compassion on them, and miraculously feeds five thousand with five loaves and two fishes, 34-44. He sends the disciples by sea to Bethsaida, and himself goes into a mountain to pray, 45, 46. The disciples meet with a storm, and he comes to them, walking upon the water, and appeases the winds and the sea, 47-52. They come into the land of Gennesaret, and he works many miracles, 53-56.

AND ^ahe went out from thence, and came into his own country, and his disciples follow him.

2 And when the sabbath day was come, he began to teach in the synagogue: and many hearing him were astonished, saying, ^bFrom whence hath this man these things? and what wisdom is this which is given unto him, that even such mighty works are wrought by his hands?

3 Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, ^cthe brother of James, and of Joseph, and of Juda, and Simon? and are not his sisters here with us? And they ^dwere offended at him.

4 But Jesus said unto them, ^eA prophet is not without honour, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house.

5 ^fAnd he could there do no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them.

6 And ^ghe marvelled because of their unbelief. ^hAnd he went round about the villages, teaching.

7 ⁱAnd he called unto him the twelve, and began to send them forth by two and two; and gave them power over unclean spirits;

8 And commanded them that they should take nothing for their journey, save a staff only; no scrip, no bread, no ^jmoney in their purse:

9 But ^khe shod with sandals; and not put on two coats.

10 ^lAnd he said unto them, In what place soever ye enter into a house, there abide till ye depart from that place.

11 ^mAnd whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you, when ye depart thence, ⁿshake off the dust under your feet for a testimony against them.

Verse 1. And he went out from thence] That is, from Capernaum. See on Matt. xiii. 54.

Verse 3. Is not this the carpenter] Among the ancient Jews, every father was bound to do four things for his son. 1. To circumcise him. 2. To redeem him. 3. To teach him the law. 4. To teach him a trade. It is therefore likely that Joseph brought up our Lord to his own trade.

Verse 7. By two and two] That they might encourage and support each other; and to show that union among the ministers of the gospel is essential to the promotion of the cause of truth.

Verse 8. A staff only] It is likely he desired them to take only one with every two, merely for the purpose of carrying any part of their clothes on, when they should be obliged to strip them off by reason of the heat; for walking staves, or things of this kind, were forbidden, see Matt. x. 10. But, probably, no more is designed than simply to state that they must not wait to make any provision for the journey, but Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Sodom ^oand Gomorrha in the day of judgment, than for that city.

12 And they went out, and preached that men should repent.

13 And they cast out many devils, ^pand anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them.

14 ^qAnd king Herod heard of him; (for his name was spread abroad:) and he said, That John the Baptist was risen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him.

15 ^rOthers said, That it is Elias. And others said, That it is a prophet, or as one of the prophets.

16 ^sBut when Herod heard thereof, he said, It is John, whom I beheaded: he is risen from the dead.

17 For Herod himself had sent forth and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife: for he had married her.

18 For John had said unto Herod, ^tIt is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife.

19 Therefore Herodias had ^ua quarrel against him, and would have killed him; but she could not;

20 For Herod ^vfeared John, knowing that he was a just man and an holy, and ^wobserved him; and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly.

21 ^xAnd when a convenient day was come, that Herod ^yon his birth-day made a supper to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee;

22 And when the daughter of the said Herodias came in, and danced, and pleased Herod and them that sat with him, the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee.

go off just as they were, leaving the provision necessary in the present case to the care of Divine Providence. St. James is represented, in ancient paintings, as carrying a gourd bottle on a staff across his shoulder.

Verse 9. Shod with sandals] The sandal seems to have been similar to the Roman solea, which covered only the sole of the foot, and was fastened about the foot and ankle with straps. The sandal was originally a part of the woman's dress; ancient authors represent them as worn only by women.

Verse 18. Anointed with oil many that were sick] This is only spoken of here, and in James v. 14. This ceremony was in great use among the Jews; and in certain cases it might be profitable. But in the cases mentioned here, which were merely miraculous, it could avail no more of itself than the imposition of hands. It was used symbolically, as an emblem of that ease, comfort, and joy which they prayed God to impart to the sick.

23 And he sware unto her, "Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom.

24 And she went forth, and said unto her mother, What shall I ask? And she said, The head of John the Baptist.

25 And she came in straightway with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou give me by and by in a charger, the head of John the Baptist.

26 ^b And the king was exceeding sorry; yet for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him, he would not reject her.

27 And immediately the king sent "an executioner, and commanded his head to be brought: and he went and beheaded him in the prison, 28 And brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel: and the damsel gave it to her mother.

29 And when his disciples heard of it, they came and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb.

30 ^d And the apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught.

31 ^e And he said unto them, Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while: for ^f there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat.

32 ^g And they departed into a desert place by ship privately.

33 And the people saw them departing, and many knew him, and ran afoot thither out of all cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him.

34 ^h And Jesus, when he came out, saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd: and ⁱ he began to teach them many things.

35 ^j And when the day was now far spent, his disciples came unto him, and said, This is a desert place, and now the time ^k is far passed:

36 Send them away, that they may go into the country round about, and into the villages, and buy themselves bread: for they have nothing to eat.

37 He answered and said unto them, Give ye them to eat. And they say unto him, "Shall we go and buy two hundred ^l pennyworth of bread, and give them to eat?"

38 He saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? go and see. And when they knew, they say, ^m Five, and two fishes.

39 And he commanded them to make all sit down by companies upon the green grass.

40 And they sat down in ranks, by hundreds, and by fifties.

41 And when he had taken the five loaves and the two fishes, he looked up to heaven, ⁿ and blessed, and brake the loaves, and gave ^o them to his disciples to set before them; and the two fishes divided he among them all.

42 And they did all eat, and were filled.

43 And they took up twelve baskets full of the fragments, and of the fishes.

44 And they that did eat of the loaves were about five thousand men.

45 ^p And straightway he constrained his disciples to get into the ship, and to go to the other side before ^q unto Bethsaida, while he sent away the people.

46 And when he had sent them away, he departed into a mountain to pray.

47 ^r And when even was come, the ship was in the midst of the sea, and he alone on the land.

48 And he saw them toiling in rowing; for the wind was contrary unto them: and about the fourth watch of the night he cometh unto them, walking upon the sea, and ^s would have passed by them.

49 But when they saw him walking upon the sea, they supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out:

50 (For they all saw him, and were troubled.) And immediately he talked with them, and saith unto them, Be of good cheer; it is I: be not afraid.

51 And he went up unto them into the ship; and the wind ceased: and they were sore amazed in themselves beyond measure, and wondered.

52 For ^t they considered not ^u the miracle of the loaves: for their ^v heart was hardened.

53 ^w And when they had passed over, they came into the land of Gennesaret, and drew to the shore.

54 And when they were come out of the ship, straightway they knew him, 55 And ran through that whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds those that were sick, where they heard he was.

56 And whithersoever he entered, into villages, or cities, or country, they laid the sick in the streets, and besought him that ^x they might touch if it were but the border of his garment: and as many as touched ^y him were made whole.

Verse 31. Rest a while] Rest is necessary for those who labour; and a zealous preacher of the gospel will as often stand in need of it as a galley slave.

Verse 40. By hundreds, and by fifties.] "That is," says Mr. Wesley, "fifty in a rank, and an hundred in file. So, a hundred multiplied by fifty, made just five thousand." But if they sat fifty deep, how could the disciples conveniently serve them with the bread and fish?

Verse 41. And blessed] I think the word God should be inserted here, as in Matt. xiv. 19. The food we receive from God is already blessed, and does not stand in need of being blessed by man; but God, who gives it, deserves our warmest thanksgivings, as frequently as we are called to partake of his bounty.

Chief estates] Probably such as might be called nobles by title only, having no office civil or military; probably magistrates.

Verse 23. Unto the half of my kingdom.] A noble price for a dance! This extravagance in favour of female dancers has the fullest scope in the East even to the present day.

Verse 26. For their sakes which sat with him] Probably these persons joined in with the request, and were glad of this opportunity to get this Light of Israel extinguished; he being a public reprobator of all their vices.

Verse 30. The apostles gathered themselves together] For they went different ways before, by two and two, ver. 7; and now they return and meet Christ at Capernaum.

to some of the multitude, who might have brought some with them to carry provisions, or other things necessary for the sick, whom they brought to Christ to be healed.

Verse 44. Were about five thousand] This miracle is mentioned by all the four Evangelists. It is one of the most astonishing that Christ has wrought. It is a miracle which could not be counterfeited, and a full proof of the divinity of Christ.

Verse 45. To the other side before unto Bethsaida] John says, chap. vi. 17, to Capernaum. It is probable our Lord ordered them to steer to one or other of these two places, which were about four miles distant, and on the same side of the Sea of Galilee.

Verse 49. They supposed it had been a spirit] That is, by whom the storm had been raised.

Verse 53. The land of Gennesaret] This country lay on the coast of the sea of Galilee: it is described by Josephus as being exceedingly pleasant and fertile.

Verse 54. They knew him] They recollected him; for he had before preached and wrought miracles in different places of the same country.

CHAPTER VII

The Pharisees find fault with the disciples for eating with unwashed hands, 1-5. Christ exposes their hypocrisy, and shows that they had made the word of God of no effect by their traditions, 6-13. He shows what things defile men, 14-16; and teaches his disciples in private, that the sin of the heart alone, leading to vicious practices, defiles the man, 17-23. The account of the Syrophenician woman, 24-30. He heals a man who was dumb, and had an impediment in his speech, 31-37.

THEN ^acame together unto him the Pharisees, and certain of the scribes, which came from Jerusalem.

2 And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with ^bdefiled (that is to say, with unwashed) hands, they found fault.

(3 For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands ^coft, eat not, holding the tradition of the elders.)

4 And when they come from the market, except they wash, they eat not. And many other things there be, which they have received to hold, as the washing of cups, and ^dpots, brazen vessels, and of ^etables.)

5 ^fThen the Pharisees and scribes asked him, Why walk not thy disciples according to the tradition of the elders, but eat bread with unwashed hands?

6 He answered and said unto them, Well hath Esaias prophesied of you hypocrites, as it is written, ^gThis people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me.

7 Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

8 For, laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do.

9 And he said unto them, Full well ye ^hreject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition,

10 For Moses said, ⁱHonour thy father and thy mother; and, ^jWhoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death;

11 But ye say, If a man shall say to his father or mother, It is ^kCorban, that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me; he shall be free.

12 And ye suffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother;

13 Making the word of God of none effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered: and many such like things do ye.

14 ^lAnd when he had called all the people unto him, he said unto them, Hearer unto me every one of you, and understand:

15 There is nothing from without a man, that entering into him can defile him: but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man.

16 ^mIf any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

17 ⁿAnd when he was entered into the house from the people, his disciples asked him concerning the parable.

18 And he saith unto them, Are ye so without Verse 1. Came from Jerusalem.] Probably for the express purpose of disputing with Christ, that they might entangle him in his talk. Malice and envy are never idle—they incessantly hunt the person they intend to make their prey.

Verse 8. Except they wash their hands] Unless they wash the hand up to the wrist, eat not. Several translations are given of the original word. [Alford renders it "diligently."]

Verse 4. And when they come] This clause is added by our translators to fill up the sense; but it was probably a part of the original.

Of cups] Any kind of earthen vessels.

Pots] Of measures, equal to a pint and a half English.

Of brazen vessels] These, if polluted, were only to be washed, or passed through the fire; whereas the earthen vessels were to be broken.

And of tables.] It is likely it means no more than the forms or seats on which they sat to eat. A bed or a couch was defiled, if any unclean person sat or leaned on it—a man with an issue—a leper—a woman with child, &c.

Verse 8. Washing of pots and cups, &c.] This verse is not found in the parallel place of Matt. xv.

Verse 9. Full well] A strong irony. How noble is your conduct! From conscientious attachment to your own traditions ye have annihilated the commandments of God!

Verse 19. Purging all meats?] For what is separated from the aliments taken into the stomach, and thrown out of the body, is the innutritious parts of all the meats that are eaten; and thus they are purged, nothing being left behind but what is proper for the support of the body.

Verse 25. A certain woman] See this account of the Syrophenician woman explained at large, Matt. xv. 21-28.

understanding also? Do ye not perceive, that whatsoever thing from without entereth into the man, it cannot defile him;

19 Because it entereth not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging all meats?

20 And he said, That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man.

21 * For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders,

22 Thefts, ^b covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness:

23 All these evil things come from within, and defile the man.

Verse 26. The woman was a Greek] All heathens or idolaters were called Greeks by the Jews; whether they were Parthians, Medes, Arabs, Indians, or Ethiopians.

Verse 30 Laid upon the bed] The demon having tormented her, so that her bodily strength was exhausted, and she was now laid upon the couch to take a little rest.

Verse 32. They bring unto him one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech] It is likely that the person in question was dumb, because he was deaf; and it is generally found that he who is totally deaf is dumb also. Almost all the Versions understand the word thus: and the concluding words seem to confirm this—He maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak.

Verse 33 And he spit and touched his tongue] There is scarcely an action of our Lord's life but one can see an evident reason for, except this. Various interpretations are given of it—none of them satisfies my mind.

It is possible that what is attributed here to Christ belongs to the person who was cured. I will give my sense of the place in a short paraphrase.

And Jesus took him aside from the multitude; and [the deaf man] put his fingers into his ears, intimating thereby to Christ that they were so stopped that he could not hear; and having spat out, that there might be nothing remaining 28 And she answered and said unto him, Yes, Lord: yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs.

29 And he said unto her, For this saying go thy way; the devil is gone out of thy daughter.

30 And when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed.

31 * And again, departing from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, he came unto the sea of Galilee, through the midst of the coasts of Decapolis.

32 And ^f they bring unto him one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech; and they beseech him to put his hand upon him.

34 And ^h looking up to heaven, ⁱ he sighed, and saith unto him, Ephphatha, that is, Be opened.

35 ^j And straightway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed, and he spake plain.

36 And ^k he charged them that they should tell no man: but the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal, they published it; in his mouth to offend the sight when Christ should look at his tongue, he touched his tongue, showing to Christ that it was so bound that he could not speak: and he looked up to heaven, as if to implore assistance from above: and he groaned, being distressed because of his present affliction, and thus implored relief: for, not being able to speak, he could only groan and look up, expressing by these signs, as well as he could, his afflicted state, and the desire he had to be relieved. Then Jesus, having compassion upon him, said, Be opened: and immediately his ears were opened, so that he could hear distinctly; and the impediment to his speaking was removed, so that he spake properly. [This interpretation is curious, but incredible.]

37 And were beyond measure astonished, saying, He hath done all things well: he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak.

Verse 34. Ephphatha] Syriac. It is likely that it was in this language that our Lord spoke to this poor man: and because he had pronounced the word with peculiar and authoritative emphasis, the Evangelist thought proper to retain it.

Verse 36. Tell no man] This miracle is not mentioned by any other of the Evangelists. Another proof that Mark did not abridge Matthew.

Verse 37. He hath done all things well] This has been, and ever will be, true of every part of our Lord's conduct.

CHAPTER VIII.

Four thousand persons fed with seven loaves and a few small fishes, 1-8. Christ refuses to give any farther sign to the impertinent Pharisees, 10-12. Warns his disciples against the corrupt doctrine of the Pharisees and of Herod, 13-21. He restores sight to a blind man, 22-26. Asks his disciples what the public thought of him, 27-30. Acknowledges himself to be the Christ, and that he must suffer, 31-33. And shows that all his genuine disciples must take up their cross, suffer in his cause, and confess him before men, 34-38.

IN those days 'the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jesus called his disciples unto him, and saith unto them,

2 I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with me three days, and have nothing to eat :

3 And if I send them away fasting to their own houses, ^b they will faint by the way : (for divers of them came from far.)

4 And his disciples answered him, From whence can a man satisfy these men with bread here in the wilderness ?

5 ^c And he asked them, How many loaves have ye ? And they said, Seven.

6 And he commanded the people to sit down on the ground : and he took the seven loaves, and gave thanks, and brake, and gave to his disciples to set before them ; and they did set them before the people.

7 And they had a few small fishes : and ^d he blessed, and commanded to set them also before them.

8 So they did eat, and were filled : and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets.

9 And they that had eaten were about four thousand : and he sent them away.

10 And ^e straightway he entered into a ship with his disciples, and came into the parts of Dalmanutha.

11 'And the Pharisees came forth, and began to question with him, seeking of him a sign from heaven, tempting him.

12 And he sighed deeply in his spirit, and saith, Why doth this generation seek after a sign ? Verily I say unto you, There shall no sign be given unto this generation.

13 And he left them, and entering into the ship, again departed to the other side.

14 ^f Now the disciples had forgotten to take bread, neither had they in the ship with them more than one loaf.

15 ^g And he charged them, saying, Take heed, beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the leaven of Herod.

16 And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is ^h because we have no bread.

17 And when Jesus knew it, he saith unto them,

Having nothing to eat] If they had brought any provisions with them, they were now entirely expended ; and they stood in immediate need of a supply.

Verse 3. For divers of them came from far.] And they could not possibly reach their respective homes without perishing, unless they got food.

Verse 12. And he sighed deeply in his spirit] Or having deeply groaned—so the word properly means. He was exceedingly affected at their obstinacy and hardness of heart.

Verse 22. They bring a blind man unto him] Christ went about to do good, and wherever he came he found some good to be done ; and so should we, if we had a proper measure of the same zeal and love for the welfare of the bodies and souls of men.

Verse 23. And he took the blind man by the hand] Giving him a proof of his readiness to help him, and thus preparing him for the cure which he was about to work.

Led him out of the town] Thus showing the inhabitants that he considered them unworthy of having another miracle

Why reason ye, because ye have no bread ? ⁱ perceive ye not yet, neither understand ? have ye your heart yet hardened ?

18 Having eyes, see ye not ? and having ears, hear ye not ? and do ye not remember, 19 ^k When I brake the five loaves among five thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up ? They say unto him, Twelve.

20 And ^l when the seven among four thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up ? And they said, Seven.

21 And he said unto them, How is it that ^m ye do not understand ?

22 And he cometh to Bethsaida ; and they bring a blind man unto him, and besought him to touch him.

23 And he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town ; and when ⁿ he had spit on his eyes, and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw aught.

24 And he looked up, and said, I see men as trees, walking.

25 After that he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up : and he was restored, and saw every man clearly.

26 And he sent him away to his house, saying, Neither go into the town, ^o nor tell it to any in the town.

27 ^p And Jesus went out, and his disciples, into the towns of Cæsarea Philippi : and by the way he asked his disciples, saying unto them, Whom do men say that I am ?

28 And they answered, ^q John the Baptist : but some say Elias ; and others, One of the prophets.

29 And he saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am ? and Peter answereth and saith unto him, ^r Thou art the Christ.

30 ^s And he charged them that they should tell no man of him.

31 And ^t he began to teach them that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again.

32 And he spake that saying openly. And Peter took him, and began to rebuke him.

33 But when he had turned about and looked on wrought among them. When a people do not make a proper improvement of the light and grace which they receive from God, their candlestick is removed—even the visible church becomes there extinct ; and the candle is put out.

When he had spit on his eyes] It is likely this was done merely to separate the eyelids ; as, in certain cases of blindness, they are found always gummed together. It required a miracle to restore the sight, and this was done in consequence of Christ having laid his hands upon the blind man : it required no miracle to separate the eyelids, and, therefore, natural means only were employed—this was done by rubbing them with spittle ; but whether by Christ, or by the blind man, is not absolutely certain.

Verse 24. I see men as trees, walking.] His sight was so imperfect that he could not distinguish between men and trees, only by the motion of the former.

Verse 25. And saw every man clearly.] Our Lord could have restored this man to sight in a moment ; but he chose to do it in the way mentioned in the text, to show that he is sovereign of his own grace ; and to point out that, however insignificant means may appear in themselves, they are divinely efficacious when he chooses to work by them ; and that, however small the first manifestations of mercy may Verse 26. He sent him away to his house] So it appears that this person did not belong to Bethsaida, for, in going to his house, he was not to enter into the village.

Verse 29. Thou art the Christ] Three MSS. and some Versions add, the Son of the living God.

Verse 32. And he spake that saying] Concerning the certainty and necessity of his sufferings—openly ; with great plainness, confidence, or emphasis so that the disciples now began fully to understand him.

Verse 34. Whoever will come after me] It seems that Christ formed, on the proselytism of the Jews, the principal qualities which he required in the proselytes of his covenant.

The first condition of proselytism among the Jews was, that he that came to embrace their religion should come voluntarily, and that neither force nor influence should be employed in this business. This is also the first condition required by Jesus Christ, and which he considers as the foundation of all the rest : If a man be willing to come after me.

The second condition required in the Jewish proselyte was, that he should perfectly renounce all his prejudices, his errors, his idolatry, and every thing that concerned his false religion ; and that he should entirely separate himself from his most intimate friends and acquaintances. It was on this ground that the Jews called proselytism a new birth, and proselytes new born, and new men ; and our Lord requires men to be born again, not only of water, but by the Holy Ghost.

The third condition of proselytism was that the man should submit to the yoke of the Jewish law, and bear patiently the inconveniences and sufferings with which a profession of the 36 For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?

37 Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

38 * Whosoever therefore ^d shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels.

^d See Rom. i. 16. 2 Tim. i. 8. ii. 12.

Mosaic religion might be accompanied. Christ requires the same condition ; but, instead of the yoke of the law, he brings in his own doctrine, which he calls his yoke, Matt. xi. 29 : and his cross, the taking up of which not only implies a bold profession of Christ crucified, but also a cheerful submitting to all the sufferings and persecutions to which he might be exposed, and even to death itself.

The fourth condition was, that they should solemnly engage to continue in the Jewish religion, faithful even unto death. This condition Christ also requires ; and it is comprised in this word, Let him FOLLOW me.

Verse 38. Whosoever—shall be ashamed of me] Our Lord hints here at one of the principal reasons of the incredulity of the Jews—they saw nothing in the person of Jesus Christ which corresponded to the pompous notions which they had formed of the Messiah.

If Jesus Christ had come into the world as a mighty and opulent man, clothed with earthly glories and honours, he would have had a multitude of partisans, and most of them hypocrites.

And of my words] This was another subject of offence to the Jews : the doctrine of the cross must be believed ; a suffering Messiah must be acknowledged ; and poverty and affliction must be borne ; and death, perhaps, suffered in consequence of becoming his disciples.

Of him, and of his words, in this sense, the world is, to this day, ashamed.

Of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed] As he refused to acknowledge me before men, so will I refuse to acknowledge him before God and his angels. Terrible consequence of the rejection of Christ ! And who can help him whom the only Saviour eternally disowns ?

CHAPTER IX.

The transfiguration of Christ, and the discourse occasioned by it, 1-13. He casts out a dumb spirit which his disciples could not, 14-29. He foretels his death, 30-32. The disciples dispute about supremacy, and Christ corrects them, 33-37. Of the persons who cast out demons in Christ's name, but did not follow him, 38-40. Every kind office done to the disciples of Christ shall be rewarded by him, and all injuries done to them shall be punished, 41, 42. The necessity of mortification and self-denial, 43-48. Of the salt-ing of sacrifices, 49 ; and the necessity of having union among the disciples of Christ, 50.

Verse 2. And after six days Jesus taketh with him Peter, &c.] See on Matt. xvii. 1, &c.

5 And Peter answered and said to Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

6 For he wist not what to say; for they were sore afraid.

7 And there was a cloud that overshadowed them: and a voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him.

8 And suddenly, when they had looked round about, they saw no man any more, save Jesus only with themselves.

9 * And as they came down from the mountain, he charged them that they should tell no man what things they had seen, till the Son of man were risen from the dead.

10 And they kept that saying with themselves, questioning one with another, what the rising from the dead should mean.

11 And they asked him, saying, Why say the scribes ^b that Elias must first come?

12 And he answered and told them, Elias verily cometh first, and restoreth all things; and ^c how it is written of the Son of man, that he must suffer many things, and ^d be set at nought.

13 But I say unto you, That ^e Elias is indeed come, and they have done unto him whatsoever they listed, as it is written of him.

14 ^f And when he came to his disciples, he saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them.

15 And straightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed, and running to him saluted him.

16 And he asked the scribes, What question ye ^g with them?

Verse 12. And how it is written] Rather, as also it is written.

Verse 15. Were greatly amazed] Probably, because he came so unexpectedly; but the cause of this amazement is not self-evident.

Verse 17. A dumb spirit] That is, a demon who afflicted those in whom it dwelt with an incapacity of speaking. The spirit itself could not be either deaf or dumb. These are accidents that belong only to organized animate bodies.

Verse 18. Pineth away] By these continual torments; so he was not only deaf and dumb, but sorely tortured besides.

Verse 20. When he saw him—the spirit tare him; and he fell on the ground, &c.] When this demon saw Jesus, he had great rage, knowing that his time was short; and hence the extraordinary convulsions mentioned above.

Verse 28. If thou canst do any thing] I have already tried thy disciples, and find they can do nothing in this case, but if thou hast any power, in mercy use it in our behalf.

Verse 29. IF THOU CANST BELIEVE] This was an answer to the inquiry above. I can furnish a sufficiency of power, if thou canst but bring faith to receive it. Why are not our souls completely healed? Why is not every demon cast out? Alas! it is because we do not believe; Jesus is able: more, Jesus is willing; but we are not willing to give up our idols; we give not credence to his word; therefore hath sin a being in us, and dominion over us.

Verse 24. Lord, I believe] The word Lord is omitted in many MSS. The omission, I think, is proper, because it is evident the man did not know our Lord, and therefore could not be expected to accost him with a title expressive of that authority which he doubted whether he possessed, unless 18 And whosoever he taketh him, he ⁱteareth him: and he foameth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away: and I spake to thy disciples that they should cast him out; and they could not.

19 He answereth him, and saith, O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him unto me.

20 And they brought him unto him: and ^j when he saw him, straightway the spirit tare him; and he fell on the ground and wallowed, foaming.

21 And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, Of a child.

22 And oft-times it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him: but if thou canst do anything, have compassion on us, and help us.

23 Jesus said unto him, ^k If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.

24 And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief.

25 When Jesus saw that the people came running together, he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him.

26 And the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and came out of him: and he was as one dead: insomuch that many said, He is dead.

27 But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up; and he arose.

28 ^l And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out?

29 And he said unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting.

30 And they departed thence, and passed through Galilee; and he would not that any man should know it.

we grant that he used the word after the Roman custom, for Sir.

Help thou mine unbelief.] That is, assist me against it. Give me a power to believe.

Verse 25. I charge thee] If this had been only a natural disease, for instance the epilepsy, as some have argued, could our Lord have addressed it, with any propriety, as he has done here? If the doctrine of demoniacal influence is false, Jesus took the most direct method to perpetuate the belief of that falsity, by accommodating himself so completely to the deceived vulgar. But this was impossible; therefore the doctrine of demoniacal influence is a true doctrine, otherwise Christ would never have given it the least countenance or support.

Verse 29. Prayer and fasting.] This demon may be considered as an emblem of deeply rooted vices, and inveterate habits, over which the conquest is not generally obtained, but through extraordinary humiliations.

Verse 32. But they understood not] It does not appear likely, from Matthew's account, that three of the disciples, Peter, James, and John, could be ignorant of the reasons of Christ's death and resurrection, after the transfiguration; on the contrary, from the circumstances there related, it is very probable that from that time they must have had at least a general understanding of this important subject; but the other nine might have been ignorant of this matter, who were not present at the transfiguration; probably it is of these that the Evangelist speaks here.

Verse 33. And being in the house] That is, Peter's house, where he ordinarily lodged.

Verse 38. We saw one casting out devils in thy name] This was either one of John the Baptist's disciples, who, at them, The Son of man is delivered into the hands of men, and they shall kill him; and after that he is killed, he shall rise the third day.

32 But they understood not that saying, and were afraid to ask him.

33 * And he came to Capernaum: and being in the house, he asked them, What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way?

34 But they held their peace: for by the way they had disputed among themselves, who should be the greatest.

35 And he sat down, and called the twelve, and saith unto them, ^b If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all.

36 And ^c he took a child, and set him in the midst of them: and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them, 37 Whosoever shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me; and ^d whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me.

38 * And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbade him because he followeth not us.

39 But Jesus said, Forbid him not: ^e for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name that can lightly speak evil of me.

his master's command, had believed in Jesus, or one of the seventy, whom Christ had sent out, Luke x. 1-7, who, after he had fulfilled his commission, had retired from accompanying the other disciples; but as he still held fast his faith in Christ, and walked in good conscience, the influence of his Master still continued with him, so that he could cast out demons as well as the other disciples.

We forbade him] I do not see that we have any right to attribute any other motive to John than that which he himself owns—because he followed not us—because he did not attach himself constantly to thee, as we do, we thought he could not be in a proper spirit.

Verse 39. Forbid him not] If he were not of God, the demons would not be subject to him, and his work could not prosper. A spirit of bigotry has little countenance from these passages. There are some who are so outrageously wedded to their own creed, and religious system, that they would rather let sinners perish than suffer those who differ from them to become the instruments of their salvation. Even the good that is done they either deny or suspect, because the person does not follow them.

Verse 40. He that is not against us, is on our part.] Or rather, Whosoever is not against you, is for you. This reading is more consistent with the context—He followed not us—well, he is not against you; and he who is not against you, in such a work, may be fairly presumed to be on your side.

Verse 43. The fire that never shall be quenched.] That is, the inextinguishable fire. Some eminent critics suppose it to be a spurious reading; but the authorities which are for it, are by no means counterbalanced by those which are against it.

49 For every one shall be salted with fire, ^a and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt.

Verse 44. Where their worm dieth not] The bitter reflection, "I might have avoided sin, but I did not; I might have been saved, but I would not," must be equal to ten thousand tormentors. What intolerable anguish must this produce in a damned soul!

Their worm. It seems every one has his worm, his peculiar remorse for the evils he did, and for the grace he rejected; while the fire, the state of excruciating torment, is common to all.

The fire is not quenched.] The state of punishment is continual; there is no respite, alleviation, nor end!

Verse 49. For every one shall be salted with fire] It is generally supposed that our Lord means, that as salt preserves the flesh with which it is connected from corruption, so this everlasting fire, this inconsumable fire, will have the property, not only of assimilating all things cast into it to its own nature, but of making them inconsumable like itself.

Some take the whole in a good sense, as referring to the influence of the Spirit of God in the hearts of believers, which shall answer the same end to the soul, in preserving it from the contagion that is in the world, as salt did in the sacrifices offered to God to preserve them from putrefaction. Perhaps the whole is an allusion to the purification of vessels, and especially such metallic vessels as were employed in the service of the sanctuary.

Verse 50. Have salt in yourselves] See that ye have at all times the preserving principle of divine grace in your hearts, and give that proof of it which will satisfy your own minds, and convince or silence the world.

CHAPTER X.

The Pharisees question our Lord concerning divorce, 1-12. Little children are brought to him, 13-16. The person who inquired how he might inherit eternal life, 17-22. How difficult it is for a rich man to be saved, 23-27. What they shall receive who have left all for Christ and his gospel, 28-31. He foretells his death, 32-34. James and John desire places of pre-eminence in Christ's kingdom, 35-41. Christ shows them the necessity of humility, 42-45. Blind Bartimeus healed, 46-52.

AND ^a he arose from thence, and cometh into the coasts of Judea by the farther side of Jordan: and the people resort unto him again; and, as he was wont, he taught them again.

^b And the Pharisees came to him, and asked him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? tempting him.

^c And he answered and said unto them, What did Moses command you?

^d And they said, ^e Moses suffered to write a bill of divorcement, and to put her away.

^f And Jesus answered and said unto them, For the hardness of your heart he wrote you this precept.

^g But from the beginning of the creation ^h God made them male and female.

ⁱ For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife;

^j And they twain shall be one flesh: so then they are no more twain, but one flesh.

^k What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

^l And in the house his disciples asked him again of the same matter.

^m And he saith unto them, ⁿ Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her.

^o And if a woman shall put away her husband, and be married to another, she committeth adultery.

^p And they brought young children to him, that he should touch them: and his disciples rebuked those that brought them.

^q But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for ^r of such is the kingdom of God.

^s Verily I say unto you, ^t Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein.

^u And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.

^v And when he was gone forth into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to him, and asked him, Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?

^w And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God.

^x Thou knowest the commandments, ^y Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honour thy father and mother.

^z And he answered and said unto him, Master, all these have I observed from my youth.

^{aa} Then Jesus beholding him loved him, and said unto him, One thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have ^{ab} treasure in heaven: and come, take up the cross, and follow me.

^{ac} And he was sad at that saying, and went away grieved: for he had great possessions.

^{ad} And Jesus looked round about, and saith unto his disciples, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God.

^{ae} And the disciples were astonished at his words. But Jesus answereth again, and saith unto them, Children, how hard is it for them ^{af} that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God!

^{ag} It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

^{ah} And they were astonished out of measure, saying among themselves, Who then can be saved?

^{ai} And Jesus looking upon them saith, With men it is impossible, but not with God: for ^{aj} with God all things are possible.

^{ak} Then Peter began to say unto him, Lo, we have left all, and have followed thee.

^{al} And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say

And blessed them. Then, though little children, they were capable of receiving Christ's blessing. If Christ embraced them, why should not his church embrace them? Why not dedicate them to God by baptism?—whether that be performed by sprinkling, washing, or immersion; for we need not dispute about the mode: on this point let every one be fully persuaded in his own mind.

Verse 1. He arose Many transactions took place between those mentioned in the preceding chapter, and these that follow, which are omitted by Matthew and Mark; but they are related both by Luke and John.

Verse 2. Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? See on Matt. xix. 3-12.

Verse 12. And if a woman shall put away her husband Among the Jews there are several instances of the women having taken other men, even during the life of their own husbands. Nor do we find any law by which they were punished. Divorce never should be permitted but on this ground—"The parties are miserable together, and they are both perfectly willing to be separated." Then, if everything else be proper, let them go different ways, that they may not ruin both themselves and their hapless offspring.

Verse 16. And he took them up in his arms Jesus Christ loves little children; and they are objects of his most peculiar care. Who can account for their continual preservation and unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's;

30 * But he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life.

31 ^b But many that are first shall be last; and the last first.

32 * And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem; and Jesus went before them: and they were amazed; and as they followed, they were afraid. * And he took again the twelve, and began to tell them what things should happen unto him,

33 Saying, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem: and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests, and unto the scribes; and they shall condemn him to death, and shall deliver him to the Gentiles:

34 And they shall mock him, and shall scourge him, and shall spit upon him, and shall kill him: and the third day he shall rise again.

35 * And James and John, the sons of Zebedee, come unto him, saying, Master, we would that thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall desire.

36 And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you?

37 They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory.

38 But Jesus said unto them, Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?

39 And they say unto him, We can. And Jesus said unto them, Ye shall indeed drink of the cup that I drink off; and with the baptism that I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized:

40 To sit on my right hand and on my left hand, is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared.

41 * And when the ten heard it, they began to be much displeased with James and John.

42 But Jesus called them to him, and saith unto them, * Ye know that they which ^aare accounted to rule over the Gentiles, exercise lordship over them; and their great ones exercise authority upon them.

43 ¹ But so shall it not be among you: but whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister:

44 And whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all.

45 For even ¹ the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and ^a to give his life a ransom for many.

46 ¹ And they came to Jericho: and as he went out of Jericho with his disciples and a great number of people, blind Bartimeus, the son of Timeus, sat by the highway side begging.

47 And when he heard that it was Jesus of Nazareth, he began to cry out, and say, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me!

48 And many charged him that he should hold his peace: but he cried the more a great deal, Thou son of David, have mercy on me!

49 And Jesus stood still, and commanded him to be called. And they call the blind man, saying unto him, Be of good comfort, rise; he calleth thee.

50 And he, casting away his garment, rose, and came to Jesus.

51 And Jesus answered and said unto him, * What wilt thou that I should do unto thee? The blind man said unto him, Lord, that I might receive my sight.

52 And Jesus said unto him, Go thy way; ^a thy faith hath ^a made thee whole. And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in the way.

he been poor! From this, and a multitude of other cases, we may learn that it is oftentimes a misfortune to be rich: but who is aware of this?—and who believes it?

Verse 30. In this time]. In this very time. Though Jews and Gentiles have conspired together to destroy both me and you, my providence shall so work that nothing shall be lacking while any thing is necessary.

Some have been greatly embarrassed to find out the literal truth of these promises; and, some in flat opposition to the text, have said they are all to be understood spiritually. But thus far is plain, that those who have left all for the sake of Christ do find, among genuine Christians, spiritual relatives, which are as dear to them as fathers, mothers &c.; yet they have the promise of receiving a hundred fold often literally fulfilled: for, wherever a Christian travels among Christians, the shelter of their houses, and the product of their lands, are at his service as far as they are requisite. Besides, these words were spoken primarily to the disciples, and pointed out their itinerant manner of life; and how, travelling about from house to house, preaching the gospel of the grace of God, they should, among the followers of Christ, be provided with every thing necessary in all places, as if the whole were their own.

With persecutions]. For while you meet with nothing but kindness from true Christians, you shall be despised, and often afflicted, by those who are enemies to God and goodness.

Verse 32. And he took again the twelve]. Or thus: For having again taken the twelve, &c. This gives the reason of the wonder and fear of the disciples, for he began to tell them on the way, what was to befall him.

Verse 35. And James and John—come unto him]. The request here mentioned, Matthew says, chap. xx. 20, was made by Salome their mother; the two places may be easily reconciled thus: The mother introduced them, and made the request as if from herself; Jesus, knowing whence it had come, immediately addressed himself to James and John, who were standing by; and the mother is no farther concerned in the business.

Verse 46. Blind Bartimeus]. Bar in Syriac signifies son. It appears that he was thus named because Timeus, Talmeus or Talmat, was the name of his father, and thus the son would be called Dar-talmeus, or Bartholomew.

Verse 50. And he, casting away his garment]. His outward covering, a blanket, or loose piece of cloth, the usual upper garment of an Asiatic mendicant. If every penitent were as ready to throw aside his self-righteousness and sinful incumbrances, as this blind man was to throw aside his garment, we should have fewer delays in conversions than we now have; and all that have been convinced of sin would have been brought to the knowledge of the truth.

Verse 52. Followed Jesus in the way]. This very remarkable cure gives us another proof, not only of the sovereign power, but of the benevolence, of Christ: nor do we ever see that sovereign power used, but in the way of benevolence. How slow is God to punish!—how prone to spare! To his infinite benevolence, can it be any gratification to destroy any of the children of men? No! We must take great heed not to attribute to his sovereignty, acts which are inconsistent with his benevolence and mercy. I am afraid this is a prevailing error; and that it is not confined to any religious party exclusively.

CHAPTER XI.

Christ rides triumphantly into Jerusalem, 1-11. The barren fig-tree cursed, 12-14. He cleanses the temple, 15-17. The scribes and chief-priests are enraged, 18. Reflections on the withered fig-tree, 19-23. Directions concerning prayer and forgiveness, 24-26. The chief-priests, &c., question him by what authority he did his works, 27, 28. He answers, and confounds them, 29-33.

AND *when they came nigh to Jerusalem, unto Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount of Olives, he sendeth forth two of his disciples,

2 And saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him, and bring him.

3 And if any man say unto you, ^b Why do ye this? say ye that the Lord hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither.

4 And ^c they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met; and they loose him.

5 And certain of them that stood there said unto them, ^d What do ye, loosing the colt?

6 And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded: and they let them go.

7 And they brought the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him.

8 ^e And many spread their garments in the way; and others cut down branches off the trees, and strawed them in the way.

9 And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, 'Hosanna! Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord:

10 Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: ^f Hosanna in the highest!

11 ^g And Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple: and when he had looked round about upon all things, and now the eventide was come, he went out unto Bethany with the twelve.

12 ^h And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry:

13 ⁱ And seeing a fig-tree afar off having leaves, he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves; for the time of figs was not yet.

Verse 2. Whereon never man sat] No animal was allowed to be employed in sacred uses, even among the heathen, that had previously been used for any domestic or agricultural purpose; and those which had never been yoked were considered as sacred.

Verse 3. And straightway he will send him hither.] From the text, I think it is exceedingly plain, that our Lord did not beg, but borrow, the colt; therefore the latter clause of this verse should be understood as the promise of returning him. Is not the proper translation the following? And if any one say to you, Why do ye this? Say, The Lord hath need of him, and will speedily send him back hither. [This rendering is doubtful.]

Verse 6. And they let them go.] Having a full assurance that the beast should be safely and speedily restored.

Verse 11. When he had looked round about upon all things] He examined every thing—to see if the matters pertaining to the divine worship were properly conducted; to see that nothing was wanting—nothing superfluous.

14 And Jesus answered and said unto it, No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it.

15 ^k And they come to Jerusalem: and Jesus went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money changers, and the seats of them that sold doves;

16 And would not suffer that any man should carry ^l any vessel through the temple.

17 And he taught, saying unto them, Is it not written, ^m My house shall be called ⁿ of all nations, the house of prayer? but ^o ye have made it a den of thieves.

18 And ^p the scribes and chief priests heard it, and sought how they might destroy him: for they feared him, because ^q all the people was astonished at his doctrine.

19 And when even was come, he went out of the city.

20 ^r And in the morning, as they passed by, they saw the fig-tree dried up from the roots.

21 And Peter calling to remembrance, saith unto him, Master, behold, the fig-tree which thou cursedst is withered away.

22 And Jesus answering saith unto them, ^s Have faith in God.

23 For ^t verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith.

24 Therefore I say unto you, ^u What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them.

25 And when ye stand praying, ^v forgive, if ye have aught against any: that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses.

And now the eventide was come] The time in which he usually left Jerusalem, to go to Bethany.

Verse 13. For the time of figs was not yet.] Rather, For it was not the season of gathering figs yet.

When our Lord saw this fig-tree by the way-side, apparently flourishing, he went to it to gather some of the figs; being on the way-side, it was not private, but public property; and any traveller had an equal right to its fruit. As it was not as yet the time for gathering in the fruits, and yet about the time when they were ready to be gathered, our Lord with propriety expected to find some. But as this happened about five days before the passover on which Christ suffered, and the passover that year fell on the beginning of April, it has been asked, "How could our Lord expect to find ripe figs in the end of March?" Answer—Because figs were ripe in Judea as early as the passover. Besides, the fig-tree puts forth its fruit first, and afterwards its leaves. Indeed, this tree, in the climate which is proper for it, has fruit on it all the year round, as I have often seen.

Our Lord's conduct towards this tree is to be considered

26 But *if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses.

27 And they come again to Jerusalem: ^b and as he was walking in the temple, there come to him the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders, 28 And say unto him, By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority to do these things?

29 And Jesus answered and said unto them, I will also ask of you one ^c question, and answer me, and I will tell you by what authority I do these things.

as emblematical of the treatment and final perdition which was to come upon the Jewish people. For 1. The tree is properly the Jewish nation. 2. Christ's curse, the sentence of destruction which had now gone out against it; and, 3. Its withering away, the final and total ruin of the Jewish state by the Romans. His cursing the fig-tree was not occasioned by any resentment at being disappointed at not finding fruit on it, but to point out unto his disciples the wrath which was coming upon a people who had now nearly filled up the measure of their iniquity.

A fruitless soul, that has had much cultivation bestowed on it, may expect to be dealt with as God did with this unrighteous nation.

Verse 15. And they come] This was the next day after our Lord's triumphant entry into Jerusalem; for on the evening of that day he went to Bethany and lodged there, ver. 11, and Matt. xxi. 17. and returned the next morning to Jerusalem.

Verse 16. Should carry any vessel] Among the Jews the word keli, vessel, had a vast latitude of meaning; it signified 30 The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men? answer me.

31 And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, Why then did ye not believe him?

32 But if we shall say, Of men; they feared the people: for ^a all men counted John, that he was a prophet indeed.

arms, Jer. xxi. 4, Ezek. ix. 1, clothes, Deut. xxii. 5, and instruments of music, Ps. lxxi. 22. It is likely that the Evangelist uses the Greek word in the same sense, and by it points out any of the things which were bought and sold in the temple.

Verse 19. He went out of the city.] To go to Bethany.

Verse 22. Have faith in God.] A mere Hebraism: have the faith of God, i. e., have strong faith, or the strongest faith, for thus the Hebrews expressed the superlative degree; so the mountains of God mean exceeding great mountains—the hail of God, exceeding great hail, &c. [Rather “have faith towards God,” the latter word being the genitive of the object.]

Verse 25. When ye stand praying] This expression may mean no more than, When ye are disposed, or have a mind, to pray, i. e., whenever ye perform that duty. But the Pharisees loved to pray standing, that they might be seen of men. [Standing was the usual attitude of prayer.]

Verse 32. They feared the people] Or rather, We fear, &c.

CHAPTER XII.

The parable of the vineyard let out to wicked husbandmen, 1-12. The Pharisees and Herodians question him about paying tribute to Cæsar, 13-17. The Sadducees question him about the resurrection, 18-27. A scribe questions him concerning the chief commandment of the law, 28-34. Christ asks the scribes why the Messiah is called David's son, 35-37. He warns his disciples against the scribes, 38-40. Of the widow that casts two mites into the treasury, 41-44.

AND ^a he began to speak unto them by parables. A certain man planted a vineyard, and set a hedge about it, and digged a place for the wine-vat, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country.

2 And at the season, he sent to the husbandmen a servant, that he might receive from the husbandmen of the fruit of the vineyard.

3 And they caught him, and beat him, and sent him away empty.

4 And again he sent unto them another servant; and at him they cast stones, and wounded him in the head, and sent him away shamefully handled.

5 And again he sent another; and him they

* Matt. xxi. 33. Luke xx. 9.

Verse 4. At him they cast stones, and wounded him in the head] Or rather, as most learned men agree, they made short work of it. These people were determined to hear no reason, to do no justice, and to keep the possession and the killed, and many others; beating some, and killing some.

6 Having yet therefore one son, his well-beloved, he sent him also last unto them, saying, They will reverence my son.

7 But those husbandmen said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be our's.

8 And they took him, and killed him, and cast him out of the vineyard.

9 What shall therefore the lord of the vineyard do? he will come and destroy the husbandmen, and will give the vineyard unto others.

12 * And they sought to lay hold on him, but feared the people : for they knew that he had spoken the parable against them : and they left him, and went their way.

13 ^b And they send unto him certain of the Pharisees and of the Herodians, to catch him in his words.

14 And when they were come, they say unto him, Master, we know that thou art true, and carest for no man : for thou regardest not the person of men, but teachest the way of God in truth : Is it lawful to give tribute to Cæsar, or not ?

15 Shall we give, or shall we not give ? But he, knowing their hypocrisy, said unto them, Why tempt ye me ? bring me a * penny, that I may see it.

16 And they brought it. And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription ? And they said unto him, Cæsar's.

17 And Jesus answering said unto them, Render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's ; and to God the things that are God's. And they marvelled at him.

18 ^d Then come unto him the Sadducees, * which say there is no resurrection : and they asked him, saying, 19 Master, ' Moses wrote unto us, If a man's brother die, and leave his wife behind him, and leave no children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

20 Now there were seven brethren : and the first took a wife, and dying left no seed.

21 And the second took her, and died, neither left he any seed ; and the third likewise.

22 And the seven had her, and left no seed : last of all the woman died also.

23 In the resurrection therefore, when they shall rise, whose wife shall she be of them ? for the seven had her to wife.

24 And Jesus answering said unto them, Do ye not therefore err, because ye know not the scriptures, neither the power of God ?

25 For when they shall rise from the dead, they neither marry nor are given in marriage ; but * are as the angels which are in heaven.

26 And as touching the dead, that they rise : have ye not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spake unto him, saying, ^b I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob ?

27 He is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living : ye therefore do greatly err.

Verse 7. This is the heir] So they appear to have acknowledged in their consciences that this was the Messiah, the heir of all things.

The inheritance shall be our's.] By slaying him we shall maintain our authority, and keep possession of our revenues.

Verse 9. And will give the vineyard unto others.] The vineyard must not perish with the husbandmen ; it is still capable of producing much fruit, if it be properly cultivated.

28 ¹ And one of the scribes came, and having heard them reasoning together, and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked him, Which is the first commandment of all ?

29 And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, ¹ Hear, O Israel ; The Lord our God is one Lord :

30 And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength : this is the first commandment.

31 And the second is like, namely this, * Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these.

32 And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth : for there is one God ; ¹ and there is none other but he :

33 And to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbour as himself, ² is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices.

34 And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God. ³ And no man after that durst ask him any question.

35 ⁴ And Jesus answered and said, while he taught in the temple, How say the scribes that Christ is the Son of David ?

36 For David himself said * by the Holy Ghost, ⁵ The Lord said to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool.

37 David therefore himself calleth him Lord ; and whence is he then his son ? And the common people heard him gladly.

38 And ⁶ he said unto them in his doctrine, * Beware of the scribes, which love to go in long clothing, and ⁷ love salutations in the market-places,

39 And the chief seats in the synagogues, and the uppermost rooms at feasts :

40 * Which devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayers : these shall receive greater damnation.

41 ⁸ And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast * money * into the treasury : and many that were rich cast in much.

42 And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two * mites, which make a farthing.

43 And he called unto him his disciples, and saith unto them, Verily I say unto you, That * this poor widow hath cast more in, than all they which have cast into the treasury :

44 For all they did cast in of their abundance ; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, ⁹ even all her living.

Verse 30. Thou shalt love the Lord] On the nature and properties of the love of God and man, and the way in which this commandment is fulfilled, see the notes on Matt. xxii. 37, &c.

Verse 34. Thou art not far from the kingdom of God.] This scribe appears to have been a prudent, sensible, and pious man ; almost a Christian—so near the kingdom of God that he might have easily stepped in. It is very probable that he did at last believe in and confess Jesus. Verse 37. The common people heard him gladly.] And were doubtless many of them brought to believe and receive the truth. By the comparatively poor the gospel is still best received

Verse 41. Cast money into the treasury] It is worthy of observation, that the money put into the treasury, even by the rich, is termed by the Evangelist brass money, probably that species of small brass coin which was called prutah among the Jews, two of which make a farthing, and twenty-four an Italian assarius, which assarius is the twenty-fourth part of a silver penny. We call this, mite, from the French, mieste, which signifies a crumb, or very small morsel. The prutah was the smallest coin in use among the Jews: and there is a canon among the Rabbins that no person shall put less than two prutahs into the treasury. This poor widow would not give less, and her poverty prevented her from giving more. And whereas it is said that many rich persons cast in MUCH (many), this may only refer to the number of the prutahs which they threw in, and not to the value. What opinion should we form of a rich man, who, in a collection for a public charity, only threw in a handful of half-pence?

CHAPTER XIII.

Jesus predicts the destruction of the temple, 1, 2. His disciples inquire when this shall be, and what previous sign there shall be of this calamity, 3, 4; which questions he answers very solemnly and minutely, 5-27; illustrates the whole by a parable, 28, 29; asserts the absolute certainty of the events, 30, 31; shows that the precise time cannot be known by man, 32; and inculcates the necessity of watchfulness and prayer, 33-37.

AND ^aas he went out of the temple, one of his disciples saith unto him, Master, see what manner of stones and what buildings are here!

2 And Jesus answering said unto him, Seest thou these great buildings? ^bthere shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

3 And as he sat upon the mount of Olives over against the temple, Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew asked him privately, 4 ^cTell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign when all these things shall be fulfilled?

5 And Jesus answering them began to say, ^dTake heed lest any man deceive you:

6 For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.

7 And when ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars, be ye not troubled: for such things must needs be; but the end shall not be yet.

8 For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be earthquakes in divers places, and there shall be famines and troubles: ^ethese are the beginnings of sorrows.

9 But ^ftake heed to yourselves: for they shall deliver you up to councils; and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten: and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them.

10 And ^gthe gospel must first be published among all nations.

11 ^hBut when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought beforehand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate: but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye: for it is not ye that speak, ⁱbut the Holy Ghost.

12 Now ^jthe brother shall betray the brother to death, and the father the son; and children shall rise up against their parents, and shall cause them to be put to death.

13 ^kAnd ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: but ^lhe that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

14 ^mBut when ye shall see the abomination of desolation, ⁿspoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing where it ought not, (let him that readeth understand,) then ^olet them that be in Judea flee to the mountains:

15 And let him that is on the house-top not go down into the house, neither enter therein, to take any thing out of his house:

16 And let him that is in the field not turn back again for to take up his garment.

17 ^pBut woe to them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days!

18 And pray ye that your flight be not in the winter.

19 ^qFor in those days shall be affliction, such as

Verse 1. See what manner of stones] Josephus says, ANT. b. xv. chap. xi. "That these stones were white and strong, FIFTY feet long, TWENTY-FOUR broad, and SIXTEEN in thickness." If this account can be relied on, well might the disciples be struck with wonder at such a superb edifice, and formed by such immense stones!

21 *And then if any man shall say to you, Lo, here is Christ; or, lo, he is there; believe him not:

22 For false Christs and false prophets shall rise, and shall shew signs and wonders, to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect.

23 But ^btake ye heed: behold, I have foretold you all things.

Verse 30. This generation] This very race of men. It is certain that this word has two meanings in the scriptures; that given in the text, and that above. Generation signifies a period of a certain number of years, sometimes more, sometimes less. In Deut. i. 85, and ii. 14, Moses uses the word to point out a term of thirty-eight years, which was precisely the number in the present case; for Jerusalem was destroyed about thirty-eight years after our Lord delivered this prediction. But as there are other events in this chapter, which certainly look beyond the destruction of Jerusalem, and which were to take place before the Jews should cease to be a distinct people, I should therefore prefer the translation given above.

Verse 32. Neither the Son] To me it is utterly unaccountable, how Jesus, who knew so correctly all the particulars which he here lays down, and which were to a jot and tittle verified by the event, should be ignorant of the day and hour when this should be done, though Daniel, chap. ix. 24, &c., could fix the very year, not less than five hundred years before it happened: how he in whom the fullness of the godhead dwelt bodily, and all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, should not know this small matter, I cannot comprehend, but on this ground, that the Deity, which dwelt in the Man Christ Jesus, might, at one time, communicate less of the knowledge of futurity to him than at another. However, I strongly suspect that the clause was not originally 28 *Now learn a parable of the fig-tree: When her branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is near:

29 So ye in like manner, when ye shall see these things come to pass, know that it is nigh, even at the doors.

30 Verily I say unto you, that this generation shall not pass, till all these things be done.

31 Heaven and earth shall pass away: but 'my words shall not pass away.

32 But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father.

33 *Take ye heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is.

34 ^bFor the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch.

35 ^cWatch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning.

36 Lest coming suddenly, he find you sleeping.

37 And what I say unto you I say unto all, ^dWatch.

—^aIsa. xl. 8.—^bMatt. xxiv. 42. xxv. 13. Luke xii. 40. xiv. 34. Rom. xiii. 11. 1 Thess. v. 6.—^cMatt. xxiv. 45. xxv. 14.—^dMatt. xxiv. 42, 44.—^eMatt. xxv. 13. 1 Cor. xvi. 13.

in this gospel. But Dr. Macknight, and others, solve this difficulty in the following manner:—They suppose the verb to have the force of the Hebrew conjugation Hiphil, in which verbs are taken in a causative, declarative, or permissive sense; and that it means here, make known, or promulge, as it is to be understood in 1 Cor. ii. 2. This intimates that this secret was not to be made known, either by men or angels, no, not even by the Son of man himself; but it should be made known by the Father only, in the execution of the purposes of his justice. I am afraid this only cuts the knot, but does not untie it.

Verse 34. Left his house] The watchfulness consists in suffering no stranger nor enemy to enter in by the senses, which are the gates of the soul; in permitting nothing which belongs to the master to go out without his consent; and in carefully observing all commerce and correspondence which the heart may have abroad in the world, to the prejudice of the master's service.

Verse 35. Watch ye therefore] The more the master is expected, the more diligent ought the servants to be in working, watching, and keeping themselves in readiness.

Verse 36. He find you sleeping.] A porter asleep exposes the house to be robbed, and well deserves punishment. No wonder that the man is constantly suffering loss who is frequently off his guard.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Jews conspire against Christ, 1, 2. He is anointed in the house of Simon the leper, 3-9. Judas Iscariot sells him to the chief priests for thirty pieces of money, 10, 11. He orders his disciples to prepare the passover, 12-16. Predicts his approaching death, 17-21. Institutes the holy Eucharist, 22-26. Foretells the unfaithfulness of his disciples in general, 27, 28, and Peter's denial, 29-31. His agony in the garden, 32-36. The disciples overcome by sleep, 37-42. Judas comes with a mob from the chief priests, and betrays him with a kiss; they seize him, 43-49. The disciples flee, 50. A young man following, and about to be apprehended, makes his escape, 51, 52. Jesus is brought before the chief priests, and Peter follows at a distance, 53, 54. He is examined, insulted and abused, and condemned on false evidence, 55-65. Peter thrice denies him, reflects on his wickedness, and repents of his sin, 66-72.

AFTER ^atwo days was the feast of the pass-over, and of unleavened bread : and the chief priests and the scribes sought how they might take him by craft, and put him to death.

2 But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar of the people.

3 ^b And being in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of ^cspikenard very precious; and she brake the box, and poured it on his head.

4 And there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made?

5 For it might have been sold for more than three hundred ^d pence, and have been given to the poor. And they murmured against her.

6 And Jesus said, Let her alone; why trouble ye her? she hath wrought a good work on me.

7 For ^e ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good; but me ye have not always.

8 She hath done what she could: she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying.

9 Verily I say unto you, Whosoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, ^f this also that she hath done shall be spoken of, for a memorial of her.

10 ^g And Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve, went unto the chief priests, to betray him unto them.

11 And when they heard ^h it, they were glad, and promised to give him money. And he sought how he might conveniently betray him.

12 ⁱ And the first day of unleavened bread, when they ^j killed the passover, his disciples said unto him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare that thou mayest eat the passover?

13 And he sendeth forth two of his disciples, and saith unto them, Go ye into the city, and there shall meet you a man bearing a pitcher of water: follow him.

14 And whosoever he shall go in, say ye to the good man of the house, The master saith, Where is the guest-chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?

Spikenard] Or, nard. An Indian plant whose root is very small and slender. It puts forth a long and small stalk, and has several ears or spikes even with the ground, which has given it the name of spikenard; the taste is bitter, acrid, and aromatic, and the smell agreeable.

Very precious] Or rather unadulterated.

She brake the box] Rather, she broke the seal. This is the best translation I can give of the place; and I give it for these reasons; 1. That it is not likely that a box exceedingly precious in itself should be broken to get out its contents. 2. That the broken pieces would be very inconvenient if not injurious to the head of our Lord, and to the hands of the woman. 3. That it would not be easy effectually to separate the oil from the broken pieces. And 4. That it was a custom in the eastern countries to seal the bottles with wax that held the perfumes; so that to come at their contents no more was necessary than to break the seal, which this woman 16 And his disciples went forth, and came into the city, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover.

17 ^k And in the evening he cometh with the twelve.

18 And as they sat and did eat, Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, One of you which eateth with me shall betray me.

19 And they began to be sorrowful, and to say unto him, one by one, Is it I? and another said, Is it I?

20 And he answered and said unto them, It is one of the twelve, that dipperth with me in the dish.

21 ^l The Son of man indeed goeth, as it is written of him; but woe to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! good were it for that man if he had never been born.

22 ^m And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take, eat: this is my body.

23 And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them; and they all drank of it.

24 And he said unto them, This is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many.

25 Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God.

26 ⁿ And when they had sung an ^o hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.

27 ^p And Jesus saith unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, ^q I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered.

28 But ^r after that I am risen, I will go before you into Galilee.

29 ^s But Peter said unto him, Although all shall be offended, yet will not I.

30 And Jesus saith unto him, Verily I say unto thee, That this day, even in this night, before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice.

31 But he spake the more vehemently, If I should die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wise. Likewise also said they all.

Verse 8. To anoint my body to the burying.] Against, or in reference to, its embalment, thus pointing out my death and the embalment of my body; for the bodies of persons of distinction were wrapped up in aromatics to preserve them from putrefaction.

Verse 11. They were glad] The joy that arises from the opportunity of murdering an innocent person must be completely infernal.

Verse 13. Bearing a pitcher of water] How correct is the foreknowledge of Jesus Christ! Even the minutest circumstances are comprehended by it! An honest employment, howsoever mean, is worthy the attention of God; and even a man bearing a pitcher of water is marked in all his steps, and is an object of the merciful regards of the Most High.

33 And he taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and began to be sore amazed, and to be very heavy;

34 And saith unto them, 'My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death: tarry ye here, and watch.

35 And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him.

36 And he said, 'Abba, Father, 'all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless, not what I will, but what thou wilt.

37 And he cometh, and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter, Simon, sleepest thou? couldst thou not watch one hour?

38 Watch ye and pray, lest ye enter into temptation. 'The spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak.

39 And again he went away, and prayed, and spake the same words.

40 And when he returned, he found them asleep again: for their eyes were heavy: neither wist they what to answer him.

41 And he cometh the third time, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: it is enough, 'the hour is come; behold the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

42 'Rise up, let us go: lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

43 'And immediately, while he yet spake, cometh Judas, one of the twelve, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders.

44 And he that betrayed him had given them a token, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he; take him, and lead him away safely.

45 And as soon as he was come, he goeth straightway to him, and saith, Master, master; and kissed him.

46 And they laid their hands on him, and took him.

47 And one of them that stood by drew a sword, and smote a servant of the high priest, and cut off his ear.

48 'And Jesus answered and said unto them, Are ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and with staves to take me?

49 I was daily with you in the temple teaching, and ye took me not: but 'the scriptures must be fulfilled.

50 'And they all forsook him, and fled.

51 And there followed him a certain young man, having a linen cloth cast about his naked body; and the young men laid hold on him:

52 And he left the linen cloth, and fled from them naked.

is often used. But it may also signify the couches on which the guests reclined when eating. It does not appear that the Jews ate the passover now, as their fathers did formerly, standing, with their shoes on, and their staves in their hands.

Verse 20. That dippeth with me in the dish. In the East, persons never eat together from one dish, except when a strong attachment subsists between two or more persons of the same caste; in such a case one invites another to come and sit by him and eat from the same dish. This cus-

53 'And they led Jesus away to the high priest: and with him were assembled all the chief priests, and the elders, and the scribes.

54 And Peter followed him afar off, even into the palace of the high priest: and he sat with the servants, and warmed himself at the fire.

55 'And the chief priests and all the council sought for witness against Jesus, to put him to death; and found none.

56 For many bare false witness against him, but their witness agreed not together.

57 And there arose certain, and bare false witness against him, saying,

58 We heard him say, 'I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another made without hands.

59 But neither so did their witness agree together.

60 'And the high priest stood up in the midst, and asked Jesus, saying, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee?

61 But 'he held his peace, and answered nothing.

'Again the high priest asked him, and said unto him, Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed?

62 And Jesus said, I am: 'and ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

63 Then the high priest rent his clothes, and saith, What need we any further witnesses?

64 Ye have heard the blasphemy: what think ye? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death.

65 And some began to spit on him, and to cover his face, and to buffet him, and to say unto him, Prophecy: and the servants did strike him with the palms of their hands.

66 'And as Peter was beneath in the palace, there cometh one of the maids of the high priest:

67 And when she saw Peter warming himself, she looked upon him, and said, And thou also wast with Jesus of Nazareth.

68 But he denied, saying, I know not, neither understand I what thou sayest. And he went out into the porch; and the cock crew.

69 'And a maid saw him again, and began to say to them that stood by, This is one of them.

70 And he denied it again. 'And a little after, they that stood by said again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them: 'for thou art a Galilean, and thy speech agreeth thereto.

71 But he began to curse and to swear, saying, I know not this man of whom ye speak.

72 'And the second time the cock crew. And Peter called to mind the word that Jesus said unto him, Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice. And 'when he thought thereon, he wept.

tom seems to have existed among the Jews; and the sacred historian mentions this notice of our Lord's to mark more strongly the perfidy of the character of Judas.

Verse 36. Abba, Father] This Syriac word, which intimates filial affection and respect, and parental tenderness, seems to have been used by our blessed Lord, merely considered as man, to show his complete submission to his Father's will, and the tender affection which he was conscious his father had for him.

Verse 51. A certain young man] Probably raised from his sleep by the noise which the rabble made who came to apprehend Jesus, and having wrapped the sheet or some of the bed-clothing about him, became thereby the more conspicuous: on his appearing, he was seized; but as they had no way of holding him, but only by the cloth which was wrapped round him, he disengaged himself from that, and so escaped out of their hands.

Verse 54. At the fire.] At the light, i.e., a fire that cast considerable light, in consequence of which, the maid servant was the better able to distinguish him, see ver. 67.

Verse 72. And when he thought thereon he wept.] Or, he fell a weeping. Others think it means the wrapping of his head in the skirts of his garment, through shame and anguish. Others think that the word rather refers to the violence, or hurry, with which he left the place, being impelled thereto by the terrors and remorse of his guilty conscience.

CHAPTER XV.

Jesus is brought before Pilate, examined, and accused, but makes no answer, 1-5. The multitude clamour for the release of Barabbas, and the crucifixion of Christ, 6-14. Pilate consents, and he is led away, mocked, insulted, and nailed to the cross, 15-26. Two thieves are crucified with him, 27, 28. While hanging on the cross, he is mocked and insulted, 29-32. The miraculous darkness, and our Lord's death, 33-37. The rending of the veil, and the confession of the centurion, 38, 39. Several women attend, and behold his death, 40, 41. Joseph of Arimathea begs the body from Pilate, and buries it, 42-46. Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Jesus, note the place of his burial, 47.

AND straightway in the morning, the chief priests held a consultation with the elders and scribes and the whole council, and bound Jesus, and carried him away, and delivered him to Pilate.

2^a And Pilate asked him, Art thou the king of the Jews? And he answering said unto him, Thou sayest it.

3 And the chief priests accused him of many things: but he answered nothing.

4^a And Pilate asked him again, saying, Answerest thou nothing? behold how many things they witness against thee.

5^a But Jesus yet answered nothing; so that Pilate marvelled.

6 Now^a at that feast he released unto them one prisoner, whomsoever they desired.

7 And there was one named Barabbas, which lay bound, with them that had made insurrection with him, who had committed murder in the insurrection.

8 And the multitude crying aloud, began to desire him to do as he had ever done unto them.

9 But Pilate answered them, saying, Will ye that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

10 For he knew that the chief priests had delivered him for envy.

11 But^a the chief priests moved the people, that he should rather release Barabbas unto them.

12 And Pilate answered and said again unto them, What will ye then that I shall do unto him whom ye call the King of the Jews?

13 And they cried out again, Crucify him.

14 Then Pilate said unto them, Why, what evil hath he done? And they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him.

15^a And so Pilate, willing to content the people, released Barabbas unto them, and delivered Jesus, when he had scourged him, to be crucified.

16^a And the soldiers led him away unto the hall, called Prætorium; and they call together the whole band.

17 And they clothed him with purple, and platted a crown of thorns, and put it about his head, 18 And began to salute him, Hail, King of the Jews!

19 And they smote him on the head with a reed, and did spit upon him, and bowing their knees, worshipped him.

20 And when they had mocked him, they took off the purple from him, and put his own clothes on him, and led him out to crucify him.

21^a And they compel one Simon, a Cyrenian, who passed by, coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to bear his cross.

22^a And they bring him unto the place Golgotha, which is, being interpreted, The place of a skull.

Verse 21. A Cyrenian] One of Cyrene, a celebrated city in the Pentapolis of Libya.

The father of Alexander and Rufus] It appears that these two persons were well known among the first disciples of our Lord.

Verse 25. The third hour] It has been before observed, that the Jews divided their night into four watches, of three hours each. They also divided the day into four general parts. The first began at sunrise. The second three hours after. The third at mid-day. The fourth three hours after,

Verse 8. The multitude crying aloud] The word itself strongly marks the vociferations, or, to come nearer the original word, the bellowing of the multitude. It signifies, properly, a loud and long cry, such as Christ emitted on the cross.

Verse 17. And platted a crown of thorns] In the note on Matt. xxvii. 29, I have ventured to express a doubt whether our Lord was crowned with thorns, in our sense of the word; this crown being designed as an instrument of torture. I am still of the same opinion, having considered the subject more closely since writing that note.

23 * And they gave him to drink wine mingled with myrrh : but he received it not.

24 And when they had crucified him, * they parted his garments, casting lots upon them, what every man should take.

25 And * it was the third hour, and they crucified him.

26 And * the superscription of his accusation was written over, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

27 And * with him they crucify two thieves ; the one on his right hand, and the other on his left.

28 And the scripture was fulfilled, which saith, * And he was numbered with the transgressors.

29 And * they that passed by railed on him, wagging their heads, and saying, Ah, * thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, 30 Save thyself, and come down from the cross.

31 Likewise also the chief priests mocking, said among themselves with the scribes, He saved others ; himself he cannot save.

32 Let Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe. And * they that were crucified with him, reviled him.

33 And * when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole land until the ninth hour.

34 And at the ninth hour, Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, * Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani ? which is, being interpreted, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me ?

35 And some of them that stood by, when they heard it, said, Behold, he calleth Elias.

36 And * one ran and filled a sponge full of vinegar, and put it on a reed, and * gave him to drink, saying, Let alone ; let us see whether Elias will come to take him down.

37 * And Jesus cried with a loud voice, and gave up the ghost.

38 And * the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom.

39 And * when the centurion, which stood over against him, saw that he so cried out, and gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God.

40 * There were also women looking on * afar off : among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the less and of Joses, and Salome ;

41. (Who also, when he was in Galilee, * followed him, and ministered unto him ;) and many other women which came up with him unto Jerusalem.

42 * And now when the even was come, because it was the preparation, that is the day before the sabbath, 43 Joseph of Arimathea, an honourable counsellor, which also * waited for the kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus.

44 And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead ; and calling unto him the centurion, he asked him whether he had been any while dead.

45 And when he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph.

46 * And he bought fine linen, and took him down, and wrapped him in the linen, and laid him in a sepulchre which was hewn out of a rock, and rolled a stone unto the door of the sepulchre.

47 And Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Joses, beheld where he was laid.

and continued till sunset. Christ having been nailed to the cross a little after mid-day, John xix. 14-16, 17, and having expired about three o'clock, Mark xv. 33, the whole business of the crucifixion was finished within the space of this third division of the day, which Mark calls here the third hour. Commentators have found it very difficult to reconcile this third hour of Mark with the sixth hour of John, chap. xix. 14

Verse 37. Gave up the ghost.] This was about the time that the paschal lamb was usually sacrificed. The darkness mentioned here must have endured about two hours and a half.

Verse 42. The day before the sabbath] What we would call Friday evening. As the law of Moses had ordered that no criminal should continue hanging on a tree or gibbet till the setting of the sun, Joseph, fearing that the body of our Lord might be taken down, and thrown into the common grave with the two robbers, came and earnestly entreated Pilate to deliver it to him, that he might bury it in his own new tomb.

Verse 43. Went in boldly unto Pilate] He who was a coward before, now acts a more open, fearless part, than any of the disciples of our Lord ! This the Holy Spirit has thought worthy of especial notice. It needed no small measure of courage to declare now for Jesus, who had been a few hours ago condemned as a blasphemer by the Jews, and as a sedition person by the Romans ; and this was the more remarkable in Joseph, because hitherto, for fear of the Jews, he had been only a secret disciple of our Lord ; see John xix. 38.

The Apostle says, We have BOLDNESS to enter into the holiest through his blood. Strange as it may appear, the death of Jesus is the grand cause of confidence and courage to a believing soul.

Verse 47. Beheld where he was laid.] The strength of the Lord is perfected in weakness : for here, a timid man, and a few weak women, acknowledge Jesus in death, when the strong and the mighty utterly forsook him. Human strength and human weakness are only names in religion. The mightiest MAN, in the hour of trial, can do nothing without the strength of God ; and the weakest WOMAN can do all things, if Christ strengthen her. And all this is recorded, equally to prevent both presumption and despair.

CHAPTER XVI.

Early in the morning after the sabbath, the three Marys come to the sepulchre, bringing sweet spices to embalm the body, 1-4. They see an angel, who announces the resurrection of our Lord, 5-8. Jesus appears to Mary Magdalene, who goes and tells the disciples, 9-11. He appears also to the two disciples who were going into the country, who also tell it to the rest, 12, 13. Afterwards he appears unto the eleven, and commissions them to preach the gospel to all mankind, 14-16. And promises to endue them with power to work miracles, 17, 18. He is received up into heaven, 19. And they go forth to preach and work miracles, 20.

AND 'when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, 'had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him.

2 'And very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun.

3 And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?

4 And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great.

5 'And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted.

6 'And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted. Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him.

7 But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him, 'as he said unto you.

8 And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled and were amazed: 'neither said they any thing to any man: for they were afraid.

9 Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, 'he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, 'out of whom he had cast seven devils.

Verse 1. And anoint him.] Rather, to embalm him. This is a proof that they had not properly understood what Christ had so frequently spoken, viz., that he would rise again the third day. And this inattention or unbelief of theirs is a proof of the truth of the resurrection.

Verse 2. Very early in the morning.] This was the time they left their own houses, and by the rising of the sun they got to the tomb. As the preceding day was the sabbath, they could not, consistently with the observances of that day, approach the tomb.

Verse 4. For it was very great.] They knew that the stone was too heavy for them to roll away; and, unless they got access to the body, they could not apply the aromatics which they had brought to finish the embalming.

Verse 6. Jesus of Nazareth.] The Jews had given this name to Christ by way of reproach, Matt. ii. 23; but as it was under this name that he was crucified, John xix. 19, the angel here, and the apostles after, have given him the same name, Acts iv. 10, &c.

Verse 7. Tell his disciples and Peter.] Why is not Peter included among the disciples? For this plain reason—he had forfeited his discipleship, and all right to the honour and privileges of an apostle, by denying his Lord and Master. However, he is now a penitent.—tell him that Jesus is risen from the dead, and is ready to heal his backsliding, and love him freely; so that, after being converted, he may strengthen his brethren.

Verse 9. Mary Magdalene.] It seems likely that, after this woman had carried the news of Christ's resurrection to the disciples, she returned alone to the tomb; and that it was then that Christ appeared to her, John xx. 1-11, 12; and a little after he appeared to all the women together, Matt. xxviii. 9, Luke xxiv. 10.

Verse 10. Them that had been with him.] Not only the eleven disciples, but several others who had been the occasional companions of Christ and the apostles.

Mourned and wept.] Because they had lost their Lord and Master, and had basely abandoned him in his extremity.

Verse 12. He appeared—unto two of them.] These were the two who were going to Emmaus. The whole account is given by Luke, chap. xxiv. 13-34, where see the notes.

10 'And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept.

11 'And they, when they had heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not.

12 After that he appeared in another form 'unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country.

13 And they went and told it unto the residue: neither believed they them.

14 'Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they 'sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen.

15 'And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, 'and preach the gospel to every creature.

16 'He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved: 'but he that believeth not shall be damned.

17 And these signs shall follow them that believe: 'In my name shall they cast out devils; 'they shall speak with new tongues;

18 'They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; 'they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

19 So then, 'after the LORD had spoken unto them, he was 'received up into heaven, and 'sat on the right hand of God.

20 And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, 'and confirming the word with signs following. Amen.

Verse 14. And upbraided them with their unbelief.] Never were there a people so difficult to be persuaded of the truth of spiritual things as the disciples. It may be justly asserted that people of so sceptical a turn of mind would never credit any thing; till they had the fullest evidence of its truth. The unbelief of the disciples is a strong proof of the truth of the gospel of God.

Verse 15. And preach the gospel to every creature.] Proclaim the glad tidings—of Christ crucified, and raised from the dead—to all the creation—to the Gentile world—because HE, through the grace of God, hath tasted death for EVERY man. And on the rejection of the gospel by the Jews, it was sent to the whole Gentile world.

Verse 16. He that believeth.] He that credits this gospel as a revelation from God: and is baptized—takes upon him the profession of it, obliging himself to walk according to its precepts: *he shall be saved—redeemed from sin here, and brought at last to the enjoyment of my eternal glory. But he that believeth not, shall be damned—*because he rejects the only provision that could be effectual to his soul's salvation.

Verse 17. These signs shall follow.] Or rather, accompany; this is the proper import of the original word.

Them that believe.] The believers, as we express it; i. e., the apostles, and all those who in those primitive times were endued with miraculous powers, for the confirmation of the doctrines they preached.

In my name.] That is, by the authority and influence of the almighty Jesus.

Cast out devils.] Whose kingdom Jesus Christ was manifested to destroy.

Speak with new tongues.] This was most literally fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, Acts ii. 4-12.

Verse 18. Take up serpents.] This also was literally fulfilled in the case of Paul, Acts xxviii. 5.

If they drink any deadly thing.] If they should, through mistake, or accident, drink any poisonous matter, their constant preserver will take care that it shall not injure them. See a similar promise, Isa. xliii. 2.

They shall lay hands on the sick.] And I will convey a healing power by their hands, so that the sick shall recover, and men shall see that these are sent and acknowledged by the Most High.

Verse 19. After the Lord had spoken] These things, and conversed with them for forty days, he was taken up into heaven, there to appear in the presence of God for us.

Verse 20. The Lord working with them] This co-operation was twofold, internal and external. Internal, illuminating their minds, convincing them of the truth, and establishing them in it. External, conveying their word to the souls that heard it, by the demonstration of the Holy Ghost; convincing them of sin, righteousness, and judgment; justifying them by his blood, and sanctifying them by his Spirit. Though miraculous powers are not now requisite, because the truth of the gospel has been sufficiently confirmed, yet this co-operation of God is indispensably necessary, without which no man can be a successful preacher; and without which no soul can be saved.

PREFACE TO THE GOSPEL

ACCORDING TO

S T. L U K E.

THERE is little certain known of this Evangelist: from what is spoken in the scriptures, and by the best informed of the Primitive Fathers, the following probable account is collected:—

Luke was, according to Dr. Lardner, a Jew by birth, and an early convert to Christianity; but Michaelis thinks he was a Gentile, and brings Colos. iv. 10, 11, 14, in proof, where St. Paul distinguished Aristarchus, Marcus, and Jesus, who was called Justus, from Epaphras, Lucas, and Demas, who were of the circumcision, i. e., Jews. Some think he was one of our Lord's seventy disciples. It is worthy of remark that he is the only Evangelist who mentions the commission given by Christ to the seventy, chap. x. 1-20. It is likely he is the Lucius mentioned Rom. xvi. 21, and if so, he was related to the Apostle Paul, and that it is the same Lucius of Cyrene who is mentioned Acts xiii. 1, and in general with others, Acts xi. 20. Some of the ancients, and some of the most learned and judicious among the moderns, think he was one of the two whom our Lord met on the way to Emmaus on the day of his resurrection, as related, Luke xxiv. 13-35; one of these was called Cleopas, ver. 18, the other is not mentioned, the Evangelist himself being the person and the relator.

St. Paul styles him his fellow-labourer, Philem. ver. 24. It is barely probable that he is the person mentioned, Col. iv. 14, Luke, the beloved Physician. All the ancients of repute, such as Eusebius, Gregory Nyssen, Jerome, Paulinus, Euthalius, Euthymius, and others, agree that he was a physician, but where he was born, and where he exercised the duties of his profession, are not known. Many moderns have attributed to him the most profound skill in the science of painting, and that he made some pictures of the Virgin Mary. This is justly esteemed fabulous; nor is this science attributed to him by any writer previously to Nicephorus Callisti, in the fourteenth century, an author who scarcely deserves any credit, especially in relations not confirmed by others.

He accompanied St. Paul when he first went into Macedonia, Acts xvi. 8-40, xx., xxvii., and xxviii. Whether he went with him constantly afterwards is not certain; but it is evident he accompanied him from Greece through Macedonia and Asia to Jerusalem, where he is supposed to have collected many particulars of the evangelic history: from Jerusalem he went with Paul to Rome, where he staid with him the two years of his imprisonment in that city. This alone makes out the space of five years and upwards. It is probable that he left St. Paul when he was set at liberty, and that he then went into Greece, where he finished and published this Gospel, and the book of the Acts, which he dedicated to Theophilus, an honourable Christian friend of his in that country. It is supposed that he died in peace about the eightieth or eighty-fourth year of his age. Some suppose he published this Gospel fifteen, others twenty-two years, after the ascension of Christ.

FORASMUCH as many have taken in hand to set forth in order ^aa declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us,

2 ^bEven as they delivered them unto us, which ^cfrom the beginning were eye-witnesses, and ministers of the word;

3 ^dIt seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee ^ein order, ^fmost excellent Theophilus,

4 ^gThat thou mightest know the certainty of

Verse 1. Most surely believed among us] Facts confirmed by the fullest evidence. Everything that had been done or said by Jesus Christ was so public, so plain, and so accredited by thousands of witnesses, who could have had no interest in supporting an imposture, as to carry the fullest conviction to the hearts of those who heard and saw him, of the divinity of his doctrine, and the truth of his miracles.

Verse 2. Even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eye-witnesses] Probably this alludes to the Gospels of Matthew and Mark, which it is likely were written before St. Luke wrote his, and on the models of which he professes to write his own; and from the beginning must mean from the time that Christ first began to proclaim the glad tidings of the kingdom; and eye-witnesses must necessarily signify those who had been with him from the beginning, and consequently had the best opportunities of knowing the truth of every fact.

Ministers of the word] Some suppose that our blessed Lord is meant by this phrase; as the Word or Logos, is his essential character in John i. 1, &c.; but it does not appear that any of the inspired penmen ever use the word in this sense except John himself; for here it certainly means the doctrine of Christ; and in this sense it is frequently used both by the Evangelists and Apostles.

Verse 3. Having had perfect understanding] Having accurately traced up—entered into the very spirit of the work, and examined everything to the bottom. The nature of inspiration, in the case of St. Luke, we at once discover: he set himself, by impartial inquiry and diligent investigation, to find the whole truth, and to relate nothing but the truth; and the Spirit of God presided over and directed his inquiries, so that he discovered the whole truth, and was preserved from every particle of error.

From the very first] Some think this should be translated those things, wherein thou hast been instructed.

5 THERE was ^hin the days of Herod, the king of Judea, a certain priest named Zacharias, ⁱof the course of Abia: and his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elisabeth.

6 And they were both ^jrighteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless.

7 And they had no child, because that Elisabeth was barren: and they both were now well stricken in years.

8 And it came to pass, that while he executed the from above; and that it refers to the inspiration by which St. Luke wrote. I prefer our translation.

Theophilus] As the literal import of this word is friend of God, some have supposed that under this name Luke comprised all the followers of Christ, to whom, as friends of God, he dedicated this faithful history of the life, doctrine, death, and resurrection of our Lord. But if all the followers of Christ are addressed, why is the singular number used? and what good end could there be accomplished by using a feigned name? Besides most excellent evidently designates a particular person, and one probably distinguished by his situation in life; though this does not necessarily follow from the title, which was often given in the way of friendship. Theophilus appears to have been some very reputable Greek or Roman, who was one of Luke's disciples. [The title "most excellent" may have been official.]

Verse 4. Wherein thou hast been instructed.] In which thou hast been catechised. It appears that Theophilus had already received the first elements of the Christian doctrine, but had not as yet been completely grounded in them.

Verse 5. In the days of Herod the king] This was Herod, surnamed the Great, the son of Antipater, an Idumean by birth, who had professed himself a proselyte to the Jewish religion, but regarded no religion, farther than it promoted his secular interests and ambition. Thus, for the first time, the throne of Judah was filled by a person not of Jewish extraction, who had been forced upon the people by the Roman government. Gen. xlix. 10, was now fulfilled; for the sceptre had departed from Judah: and now was the time, according to another prophecy, to look for the governor from Bethlehem, who should rule and feed the people of Israel: Mic. v. 1, 2.

The course of Abiah] Abiah was the eighth of the sacerdotal families, in the order in which they had been origin-priest's office before God, 'in the order of his course, 9 According to the custom of the priest's office, his lot was ^b to burn incense when he went into the temple of the Lord.

10 'And the whole multitude of the people were praying without at the time of incense.

11 And there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord, standing on the right side of ^a the altar of incense.

12 And when Zacharias saw him, 'he was troubled, and fear fell upon him.

13 But the angel said unto him, Fear not, Zacharias: for thy prayer is heard; and thy wife Elisabeth shall bear thee a son, and 'thou shalt call his name John.

14 And thou shalt have joy and gladness; and ^a many shall rejoice at his birth.

15 For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, ally established: 1 Chron. xxiv. 10. These dates and persons are particularly mentioned as a full confirmation of the truth of the facts themselves; because any person, at the time this Gospel was written, might have satisfied himself by applying to the family of John the Baptist, the family of our Lord, or the surrounding neighbours. What a full proof of the Gospel history!

[Of the daughters of Aaron] That is, she was one of the sacerdotal families.

Verse 6. They were both righteous] Upright and holy in all their outward conduct in civil life.

Before God] Possessing the spirit of the religion they professed; exercising themselves constantly in the presence of their Maker, whose eye, they knew, was upon all their conduct, and who examined all their motives.

Walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless.] What a sacred pair! they made their duty to God, to their neighbour, and to themselves, walk constantly hand in hand.

Verse 7. Both were now well stricken in years.] By the order of God, sterility and old age both met in the person of Elizabeth, to render the birth of a son (humanly speaking) impossible. This was an exact parallel to the case of Sarah and Abraham, Gen. xi. 30, xvii. 17. Christ must (by the miraculous power of God) be born of a virgin: whatever was connected with, or referred to, his incarnation must be miraculous and impressive. John the Baptist was to be the forerunner of Christ; his birth, like that of Isaac, must be miraculous, because, like the other, it was to be a representation of the birth of Christ; therefore his parents were both far advanced in years, and, besides, Elizabeth was naturally barren. The birth of these three extraordinary persons was announced nearly in the same way. God himself foretells the birth of Isaac, Gen. xvii. 16. The angel of the Lord announces the birth of John the Baptist, Luke i. 13; and six months after, the angel Gabriel, the same angel, proclaims to Mary the birth of Christ!

Verse 10. The whole multitude—were praying] The incense was itself an emblem of the prayers and praises of the people of God: see Ps. cxli. 2. Rev. viii. 1. While, therefore, the rite is being performed by the priest, the people are employed in the thing signified. Happy the people who attend to the spirit as well as the letter of every divine institution! Incense was burnt twice a day in the temple, in the morning and in the evening, Exodus xxx. 7, 8; but the Evangelist does not specify the time of the day in which this transaction took place. It was probably in the morning.

Verse 11. There appeared—an angel of the Lord] Every circumstance here is worthy of remark: 1. That an angel should now appear, as such a favour had not been granted for 400 years. 2. The person to whom this angel was sent—one of the priests. The sacerdotal office itself pointed out the Son of God till he came: by him it was to be completed and in him it was to be eternally established. The place in which the angel appeared—Jerusalem; out of which the word of the Lord should go forth, Isai. ii. 3, and not at Hebron, and 'shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, 'even from his mother's womb.

16 'And many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God.

17 'And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias, 'to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient ^m to the wisdom of the just; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord.

18 And Zacharias said unto the angel, 'Whereby shall I know this? for I am an old man, and my wife well stricken in years.

19 And the angel answering said unto him, I am 'Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God; and am sent to speak unto thee, and to shew thee these glad tidings.

20 And, behold, 'thou shalt be dumb, and not ron, in the hill country of Judea, where Zacharias lived, ver. 39, which was the ordinary residence of the priests, Josh. xxi. 11, where there could have been few witnesses of this interposition of God, and the effects produced by it. 4. The place where he was when the angel appeared to him—in the temple, which was the place where God was to be sought; the place of his residence and a type of the human nature of the blessed Jesus, John ii. 21. 5. The time in which this was done—the solemn hour of public prayer. God has promised always to be present with those who call upon him. When the people and the priest go hand in hand, and heart with heart, to the house of God, the angel of his presence shall surely accompany them, and God shall appear among them. 6. The employment of Zacharias when the angel appeared—he was burning incense, one of the most sacred and mysterious functions of the Levitical priesthood, and which typified the intercession of Christ: compare Heb. vii. 35, with chap. ix. 24. 7. The long continued and publicly known dumbness of the priest, who doubted the word thus miraculously sent to him from the Lord: a solemn intimation of what God would do to all those who would not believe in the Lord Jesus.

Verse 12. Zacharias—was troubled] Or, confounded at his sudden and unexpected appearance; and fear fell upon him, lest this heavenly messenger were come to denounce the judgments of God against a faithless and disobedient people, who had too long and too well merited them.

Verse 13. Thy prayer is heard] This probably refers 1st, to the frequent prayers which he had offered to God for a son; and 2nd, to those which he had offered for the deliverance and consolation of Israel. If fervent, faithful prayers be not immediately answered, they should not be considered as lost; all such are heard by the Lord, are registered in heaven, and shall be answered in the most effectual way, and in the best time. Answers to prayer are to be received by faith; but faith should not only accompany prayer while offered on earth, but follow it all its way to the throne of grace, and stay with it before the throne till dismissal with its answer to the waiting soul.

Verse 14. Thou shalt have joy, &c.] He will be joy and gladness to thee. A child of prayer and faith is likely to be a source of comfort to his parents. Were proper attention paid to this point, there would be fewer disobedient children in the world; and the number of broken-hearted parents would be lessened. But what can be expected from the majority of matrimonial connexions, connexions begun without the fear of God, and carried on without his love.

Many shall rejoice at his birth.] He shall be the minister of God for good to multitudes, who shall, through his preaching, be turned from the error of their ways, and converted to God their Saviour.

Verse 15. He shall be great in the sight of the Lord] That is, before Jesus Christ, whose fore-runner he shall be; or he shall be a truly great person, for so this form of speech may imply.

able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed, because thou believest not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their season.

21 And the people waited for Zacharias, and marvelled that he tarried so long in the temple.

22 And when he came out, he could not speak unto them: and they perceived that he had seen a vision in the temple: for he beckoned unto them, and remained speechless.

23 And it came to pass, that, as soon as the days of his ministration were accomplished, he departed to his own house.

24 And after those days, his wife Elisabeth conceived, and hid herself five months, saying, 25 Thus hath the Lord dealt with me in the days wherein he looked on me, to take away my reproach among men.

26 And in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth,

27 To a virgin espoused to a man whose name

Neither wine nor strong drink] All fermented liquors which have the property of intoxicating, or producing drunkenness. The original word sikera, comes from the Hebrew shakar, to inebriate.

Shall be filled with the Holy Ghost] Shall be divinely designated to this particular office, and qualified for it, from his mother's womb—from the instant of his birth.

Verse 17. He shall go before him] Jesus Christ, in the spirit and power of Elijah; he shall resemble Elijah in his retired and austere manner of life, and in his zeal for the truth, repressing even princes for their crimes; compare 1 Kings xxi. 17-24, with Matt. xiv. 4. It was on these accounts that the prophet Malachi, chap. iv. 6, had likened John to this prophet.

To turn the hearts of the fathers] Gross ignorance had taken place in the hearts of the Jewish people; they needed a divine instructor: John is announced as such; by his preaching and manner of life, all classes among the people should be taught the nature of their several places, and the duties respectively incumbent upon them.

The disobedient] Or unbelieving, the persons who would no longer credit the predictions of the prophets, relative to the manifestation of the Messiah. Unbelief and disobedience are so intimately connected, that the same word in the sacred writings often serves for both.

Verse 18. Whereby shall I know this?] All things are possible to God: no natural impediment can have any power when God has declared he will accomplish his purpose. He has a right to be believed on his own word alone; and it is impious, when we are convinced that it is his word, to demand a sign or pledge for its fulfilment.

Verse 19. I am Gabriel] This angel is mentioned, Dan. viii. 16, ix. 21. The original is exceedingly expressive: it is compounded of geburah, and el, the might of the strong God.

That stand in the presence of God] This is an allusion to the case of the prime minister of an eastern monarch, who alone has access to his master at all times; and is therefore said, in the eastern phrase, to see the presence or to be in the presence.

Verse 20. Thou shalt be dumb] Dumbness ordinarily proceeds from a natural imperfection or debility of the organs of speech; in this case there was no natural weakness or unfitness in those organs; but, for his rash and unbelieving speech, silence is imposed upon him by the Lord, and he shall not be able to break it, till the power that has silenced him gives him again the permission to speak! Let those who are intemperate in the use of their tongues behold here the severity and mercy of the Lord: nine months' silence for one intemperate speech! Many, by giving way to the language of unbelief, have lost the language of praise and thanksgiving for months, if not years!

Verse 21. The people waited] The time spent in burning the incense was probably about half an hour, during which was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary.

28 And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favoured, the Lord is with thee; blessed art thou among women.

29 And when she saw him, she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be.

30 And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found favour with God.

31 And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS.

32 He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David:

33 And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

34 Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man?

35 And the angel answered and said unto her,

* 2 Sam. vii. 11, 12. Isa. ix. 6, 7. xvi. 5. Jer. xxiii. 5. Ps. cxxxiii. 11. Rev. iii. 7.—^a Dan. ii. 44. vii. 14, 27. Obad. 21. Mic. iv. 7. John xii. 34. Heb. i. 8.

there was a profound silence, as the people stood without engaged in mental prayer.

Verse 22. They perceived that he had seen a vision] They understood this from Zacharias himself, who made signs, or nodded unto them to that purpose.

Verse 23. As soon as the days of his ministration were accomplished] Each family of the priesthood officiated one whole week, 2 Kings xi. 17.

There is something very instructive in the conduct of this priest; had he not loved the service he was engaged in, he might have made the loss of his speech a pretext for immediately quitting it. But as he was not thereby disabled from fulfilling the sacerdotal function, so he saw he was bound to continue till his ministry was ended; or till God had given him a positive dismission. Preachers who give up their labour in the vineyard because of some trifling bodily disorder by which they are afflicted, or through some inconvenience in outward circumstances, which the follower of a cross-bearing, crucified Lord should not mention, show that they either never had a proper concern for the honour of their Master or for the salvation of men, or else that they have lost the spirit of their Master, and the spirit of their work.

Verse 24. Hid herself five months] That she might have the fullest proof of the accomplishment of God's promise before she appeared in public, or spoke of her mercies.

Verse 25. To take away my reproach] As fruitfulness was a part of the promise of God to his people, Gen. xvii. 6, and children, on this account, were considered as a particular blessing from heaven, Exod. xxiii. 26. Lev. xxvi. 9. Ps. cxviii. 3, so barrenness was considered, among the Jews, as a reproach, and a token of the disapprobation of the Lord, 1 Sam. i. 6.

Verse 26. A city of Galilee] As Joseph and Mary were both of the family of David, the patrimonial estate of which lay in Bethlehem, it seems as if the family residence should have been in that city, and not in Nazareth; for we find that, even after the return from the captivity, the several families went to reside in those cities to which they originally belonged. See Neh. xi. 3. But it is probable that the holy family removed to Galilee for fear of exciting the jealousy of Herod, who had usurped that throne to which they had an indisputable right. See on chap. ii. 39. Thus, by keeping out of the way, they avoided the effects of his jealousy.

Verse 28. And the angel came in unto her] Some think that all this business was transacted in a vision; and that there was no personal appearance of the angel. When divine visions were given, they are announced as such, in the sacred writings; nor can we with safety attribute any thing to a vision, where a divine communication is made, unless it be specified as such in the text.

Hail] Analogous to, Peace be to thee—May thou enjoy all possible blessings!

*The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called ^b the Son of God.

36 And, behold, thy cousin Elisabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age; and this is the sixth month with her, who was called barren.

87 For ^c with God nothing shall be impossible.

38 And Mary said, Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word. And the angel departed from her.

39 And Mary arose in those days, and went into the hill country with haste, ^d into a city of Juda;

40 And entered into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elisabeth.

41 And it came to pass, that, when Elisabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the babe leaped in her womb; and Elisabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost;

42 And she spake out with a loud voice, and said, * Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.

43 And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?

44 For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy.

45 And blessed is she ^e that believed; for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord.

46 And Mary said, * My soul doth magnify the Lord,

47 And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour.

48 For ^f he hath regarded the low estate of his hand-maiden: for, behold, from henceforth ^g all generations shall call me blessed.

49 For he that is mighty ^h hath done to me great things; and ⁱ holy is his name.

50 And ^j his mercy is on them that fear him, from generation to generation.

51 ^k He hath shewed strength with his arm; ^l he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts.

52 ^m He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree.

53 ⁿ He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he hath sent empty away.

54 He hath holpen his servant Israel, ^o in remembrance of his mercy;

55 ^p As he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever.

56 And Mary abode with her about three months, and returned to her own house.

57 Now Elisabeth's full time came that she should be delivered; and she brought forth a son.

58 And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had shewed great mercy upon her; and ^q they rejoiced with her.

59 And it came to pass, that ^r on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child; and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father.

60 And his mother answered and said, ^s Not so; but he shall be called John.

61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.

62 And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called.

63 And he asked for a writing table, and wrote, saying, ^t His name is John. And they marvelled all.

64 ^u And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God.

65 And fear came on all that dwelt round about them: and all these ^v sayings were noised abroad throughout all ^w the hill country of Judea.

66 And all they that heard them ^x laid them up in their hearts, saying, What manner of child shall this be! And ^y the hand of the Lord was with him.

67 And his father Zacharias ^z was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying,

68 ^{aa} Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for ^{ab} he hath visited and redeemed his people,

69 ^{ac} And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us, in the house of his servant David;

Verse 29. She was troubled at his saying] The glorious appearance of the heavenly messenger filled her with amazement; and she was puzzled to find out the purport of his speech.

Verse 32. He shall be great] 1st. Because that human nature that should be born of the virgin was to be united with the divine nature. 2nd. In consequence of this, that human nature should be called in a peculiar sense the Son of the most high God; because God would produce it in her womb without the intervention of man. 3rd. He shall be the everlasting Head and Sovereign of his church. 4th. His government and kingdom shall be eternal. Revolutions may destroy the kingdoms of the earth, but the powers and gates of hell and death shall never be able to destroy or injure the kingdom of Christ. His is the only dominion that shall never have an end.

Verse 33. The house of Jacob] All who belong to the twelve tribes, the whole Israelitish people.

Verse 34. Seeing I know not a man] Or, husband. As she was only contracted to Joseph, and not as yet married, she knew that this conception could not have yet taken place; and she modestly inquires by what means the promise of the angel is to be fulfilled in order to regulate her conduct accordingly.

Verse 35. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee] This conception shall take place suddenly, and the Holy Spirit himself shall be the grand operator. The power, the miracle-working power, of the Most High shall overshadow thee, to accomplish this purpose, and to protect thee from danger. As there is a plain allusion to the Spirit of God brooding over the face of the waters, to render them prolific, Gen. i. 2, I am the more firmly established in the opinion advanced on Matt. i. 20, that the rudiments of the human nature of Christ was a real creation in the womb of the Virgin, by the energy of the Spirit of God.

Therefore also that holy thing (or person)—shall be called the Son of God.] The angel does not give the appellation of Son of God to the divine nature of Christ; but to that holy person or thing, which was to be born of the Virgin, by the energy of the Holy Spirit. The divine nature could not be born of the Virgin; the human nature was born of her. The divine nature had no beginning; it was God manifested in the flesh, 1 Tim. iii. 16; it was that Word which being in the beginning (from eternity) with God, John i. 2, was afterwards made flesh (became manifest in human nature), and tabernacled among us, John i. 14. Of this divine nature the angel does not particularly speak here, but of the tabernacle or shrine which God was now preparing for it, viz., the holy thing that was to be born of the Virgin. Two natures must ever be distinguished in Christ: the human nature, in reference to which he is the Son of God, and inferior to him, Mark xiii. 32; John v. 19, xiv. 28; and the divine nature which was from eternity, and equal to God, John i. 1, x. 38; Rom. ix. 5; Col. i. 16-18. It is true, that to Jesus the Christ, as he appeared among men, every characteristic of the divine nature is sometimes attributed, without appearing to make any distinction between the divine and human natures; but is there any part of the scriptures in which it is plainly said that the divine nature of Jesus was the Son of God? Here, I trust, I may be permitted to say, with all due respect for those who differ from me, that the doctrine of the eternal Sonship of Christ is, in my opinion, anti-scriptural, and highly dangerous. This doctrine I reject for the following reasons:

1st. I have not been able to find any express declaration in the scriptures concerning it.

2nd. If Christ be the Son of God as to his divine nature, then he cannot be eternal; for son implies a father; and father implies, in reference to son, precedency in time, if not in nature too. Father and son imply the idea of generation; and generation implies a time in which it was effected, and time also antecedent to such generation.

3rd. If Christ be the Son of God, as to his divine nature, then the Father is of necessity prior, consequently superior, to him.

4th. Again, if this divine nature were begotten of the Father, then it must be in time; i. e., there was a period in which it did not exist, and a period when it began to exist. This destroys the eternity of our blessed Lord, and robs him at once of his Godhead.

5th. To say that he was begotten from all eternity, is, in my opinion, absurd; and the phrase eternal Son is a positive self-contradiction. ETERNITY is that which has had no beginning, nor stands in any reference to TIME. SON supposes time, generation, and father; and time also antecedent to such generation. Therefore the conjunction of these two terms Son and eternity is absolutely impossible, as they imply essentially different and opposite ideas.

The enemies of Christ's divinity have, in all ages, availed themselves of this incautious method of treating this subject, and, on this ground, have ever had the advantage of the defenders of the godhead of Christ. This doctrine of the eternal Sonship destroys the deity of Christ; now, if this deity be taken away, the whole gospel scheme of redemption is ruined. On this ground, the atonement of Christ cannot have been of infinite merit, and consequently could not purchase pardon for the offences of mankind, nor give any right to, or possession of, an eternal glory. The very use of this phrase is both absurd and dangerous; therefore let all those who value Jesus and their salvation abide by the Scriptures. This doctrine of the eternal Sonship, as it has been lately explained in many a pamphlet, and many a paper in magazines, I must and do consider as an awful heresy, and mere sheer Arianism; which, in many cases, has terminated in Socinianism, and that in Deism. From such heterodoxies, and their abettors, may God save his Church! Amen. [The reader need scarcely be reminded that the commentator's views as to the doctrine of the Eternal Sonship of Christ are opposed to those of the Church to which he belonged, as well as to those of orthodox churches generally. See, however, on Hebrews i.]

Verse 36. Thy cousin Elisabeth] Thy kinswoman. As

* Rom. vi. 18, 22. Heb. ix. 14. — Jer. xxxii. 39, 40. Eph. iv. 24. 2 Thess. ii. 13. 2 Tim. i. 9. Tit. ii. 12. 1 Pet. i. 15. 2 Pet. i. 4.

Elisabeth was of the tribe of Levi, ver. 5, and Mary of the tribe of Judah, they could not be relatives but by the mother's side.

She hath also conceived] Thus God has given thee a proof and pledge, in what he has done for Elisabeth, of what he will do for thyself; therefore, have faith in God.

Who was called barren.] It is probable that Elisabeth got this appellation by way of reproach; or to distinguish her from some other Elisabeth also well known, who had been blessed with children.

Verse 37. For with God nothing shall be impossible.] See Gen. xviii. 14, Is any thing too hard for the Lord? As there can be no doubt that Mary perceived this allusion to the promise and birth of Isaac, so she must have had her faith considerably strengthened by reflecting on the intervention of God in that case.

Verse 38. Behold the handmaid of the Lord] It appears that at the instant of this act of faith, and purposed obedience, the conception of the immaculate humanity of Jesus took place; and it was DONE unto her according to his word. See ver. 35.

Verse 39. In those days] As soon as she could conveniently fit herself out for the journey.

Hill country] Hebron, the city of the priests, Josh. xxi. 11, which was situated in the tribe of Judah, about forty miles south of Jerusalem, and upwards of seventy from Nazareth.

With haste] This probably refers to nothing else than the earnestness of her mind to visit her relative Elisabeth, and to see what the Lord had wrought for her.

Verse 41. Elisabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost] This seems to have been the accomplishment of the promise made by the angel, ver. 15, He shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb. The mother is filled with the Holy Spirit, and the child in her womb became sensible of the divine influence.

Verse 43. The mother of my Lord] The prophetic spirit, which appears to have overshadowed Elisabeth, gave her a clear understanding in the mystery of the birth of the promised Messiah.

Verse 45. Blessed is she that believed; for there shall be, &c.] Or, Blessed is she who hath believed that there shall be, &c. This I believe to be the proper arrangement of the passage, and it is thus noticed in the marginal reading. Faith is here represented as the foundation of true happiness, because it receives the fulfilment of God's promises. Whatever God has promised, he intends to perform. [The common rendering is the better of the two.]

Verse 46. And Mary said] This is allowed by many to be the first piece of poetry in the New Testament; but the address of the angel to Zacharias, ver. 13-17, is delivered in the same way; so is that to the Virgin, ver. 30-38, and so also is Elisabeth's answer to Mary, ver. 42-45.

My soul doth magnify the Lord] The verb signifies to celebrate with words, to extol with praises. This is the only way in which God can be magnified, or made great; for, strictly speaking, nothing can be added to God, for he is infinite and eternal; therefore the way to magnify him is to show forth and celebrate those acts in which he has manifested his greatness.

Verse 47. My spirit hath rejoiced] Exulted. These words are uncommonly emphatical—they show that Mary's whole soul was filled with the divine influence, and wrapt up in God.

Verse 48. He hath regarded] Looked favourably. In the most tender and compassionate manner he has visited me in my humiliation, drawing the reasons of his conduct, not from any excellence in me, but from his own eternal kindness and love.

All generations shall call me blessed.] This was the character by which alone she wished to be known, viz., The blessed or happy virgin. What dishonour do those do to this holy woman, who give her names and characters the Highest: for 'thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways;

77 To give knowledge of salvation unto his people by ' the remission of their sins,

78 Through the 'tender mercy of our God; whereby the 'day-spring from on high hath visited us, which her pure soul would abhor; and which properly belong to GOD her Saviour!

Verse 49. He that is mighty hath done to me great things] Or, miracles. As God fills her with his goodness, she empties herself to him in praises; and, sinking into her own nothingness, she ever confesses that God alone is all in all.

Holy is his name] Probably the word which Mary used was chesed, which, though we sometimes translate holy, see Psa. lxxxvi. 3, xlv. 17, yet the proper meaning is abundant goodness, exuberant kindness; and this well agrees with the following clause.

Verse 50. His mercy is on them that fear him] His exuberant kindness manifests itself in acts of mercy to all those who fear or reverence his name: and this is continued from generation to generation, because he is abundant in goodness, and because he delighteth in mercy.

Verse 51. He hath showed strength] Or, He hath gained the victory.

With his arm] Grotius has well observed, that God's efficacy is represented by his finger, his great power by his hand, and his omnipotence by his arm. The plague of lice was the finger of God. See Exod. vii. 18, iii. 20, and xv. 16.

He hath scattered] As a whirlwind scatters dust and chaff. The proud] The haughty who wish to be noticed in preference to all others, and feel sovereign contempt for all but themselves.

Verse 52. He hath put down the mighty from their seats] This probably alludes to the removal of Saul from the throne of Israel, and the establishment of the kingdom in the person and family of David. And as Mary spoke prophetically, this saying may also allude to the destruction of the kingdom of Satan and his allies, and the final prevalence of the kingdom of Christ.

Verse 53. Filled the hungry—the rich he hath sent empty away] God is here represented under the notion of a person of unbounded benevolence, who is daily feeding multitudes at his gates. There is an allusion here, as in several other parts of this song, to the case of Hannah and Peninnah, as related, 1 Sam. i. 2, &c., ii. 1-10.

Verse 54. He hath holpen his servant Israel] Israel is here represented as falling, and the Lord comes speedily in and props him up.

In remembrance of his mercy] By mercy, the covenant which God made with Abraham, Gen. xv. 18, is intended; which covenant preceded from God's eternal mercy, as in it salvation was promised to all the nations of the earth.

Verse 57. Now Elisabeth's full time came, &c.] The one difficulty is to ascertain whether Mary went immediately to Hebron after her salutation, or whether she tarried nearly three months before she took the journey.

Verse 58. And her neighbours and her cousins—rejoiced with her] Because sterility was a reproach; they rejoiced with their relative, from whom that reproach was now rolled away.

Verse 59. On the eighth day they came to circumcise] Had circumcision been essential to an infant's salvation, God would not have ordered it to be delayed to the eighth day, because, in all countries, multitudes die before they arrive at that age. Baptism, which is generally allowed to have been substituted for circumcision, is no more necessary to the salvation of an infant than circumcision was. Both are signs of the covenant. Confer 1 Pet. iii. 21, with Tit. iii. 5.

They called him Zacharias] The name of the father was ordinarily given to the first-born son.

Verse 60. Not so; but he shall be called John] The name which the angel desired should be given him.

Verse 61. None of thy kindred] The very names of the ancestors were continued among their descendants, partly through reverence, and partly to avoid confusion in the genealogical tables.

79 'To give light to them that sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death; to guide our feet into the way of peace.

80 And 'the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and 'was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel.

Verse 62. They made signs to his father] Who, it appears from this, was deaf as well as dumb.

Verse 63. A writing table] A tablet. A thin board, made out of the pine tree, smeared over with wax, was used among the ancients; and the Anglo-saxon version translates a wax board or cloth.

Verse 64. Every person must see the propriety of putting this clause, And they marvelled all, to the beginning of the 64th verse, instead of leaving it at the end of the 63rd, as in the common version. [The proposed change is arbitrary. The cause of wonder was that he adopted the suggestion of his wife, which, as being deaf, he could not have heard.]

And he spake, and praised God] In his nine months' silence, he had learnt the proper use of his tongue; and God, whose power was discredited by it, is now magnified. Happy they who, in religious matters, only break silence in order to speak of the loving-kindness of the Lord!

Verse 65. And fear came] This word certainly means in several places, religious fear or reverence; and in this sense it is used Acts ix. 31; Rom. iii. 18, xiii. 7; 1 Pet. i. 17, ii. 18, iii. 2.

Verse 66. What manner of child shall this be?] These things they laid up in their heart, patiently waiting to see what God would work.

The hand of the Lord was with him] God defended and prospered him in all things, and the prophetic spirit began to rest upon him.

Verse 67. Zacharias—prophesied] The word prophecy is to be taken here in its proper acceptation, for the predicting or foretelling future events. Zacharias speaks, not only of what God had already done, but also of what he was about to do, in order to save a lost world.

Verse 68. He hath—redeemed] He hath made a ransom—laid down the ransom price. The word signifies particularly to ransom a captive from the enemy, by paying a price. See Josephus, Ant. b. xiv. c. 14, sect. 1. Sinners are fallen into the hands of their enemies, and are captives to sin and death. Jesus ransoms them by his own blood, and restores them to life, liberty, and happiness.

Verse 69. And hath raised up a horn of salvation] That is, a mighty and glorious Saviour: a quotation from Ps. xviii. 2. Horns are the well known emblems of strength, glory, and power, both in the sacred and profane writers, because the strength and beauty of horned animals consist in their horns. Horns have also been considered as emblems of light; therefore the heathen god Apollo is represented with horns, to point out the power, glory, and excellence of the solar light; but it is likely that the allusion is here made to the horns of the altar; and as the altar was a place of refuge and safety, and those who laid hold on its horns were considered to be under the protection of the Lord, so, according to the expression of Zacharias, Jesus Christ is a new altar, to which whosoever flees shall find refuge.

In the house of his servant David] Or, in the family: so the word is often used in the Sacred Writings.

Verse 71. That we should be saved (literally, a salvation) from our enemies] Satan, death, and sin are the enemies from whom Jesus came to deliver us. Sin is the most dangerous of all, and is properly the only enemy we have to fear. Satan is without us, and can have no power over us, but what he gets through sin. Death is only in our flesh, and shall be finally destroyed (as it affects us) on the morning of the resurrection. Jesus redeems from sin; this is the grand, the glorious, the important victory. Let us get sin cast out, and then we need fear neither death nor the devil.

Verse 72. His holy covenant] See the note on ver. 54.

Verse 74, 75. Being delivered, &c.] The salvation brought by Jesus Christ, consists in the following things:

1. We are to be delivered out of the hand of our enemies, and from all that hate us; so that sin shall neither have dominion over us, nor existence in us.

2. We are to worship God, to render him that service and adoration which the letter and spirit of his religion require.

8. We are to live in holiness, a strict inward conformity to the mind of Christ—and righteousness, a full outward conformity to the precepts of the gospel.

4. This is to be done before God, under the continual influence and support of his grace, and with a constant evidence of his presence and approbation.

5. This state is a state of true happiness—it is without fear. Sin is all cast out, holiness is brought in; God's power upholds, and his approbation cheers and comforts, the believing heart. Thus misery is precluded, and happiness established.

6. This blessedness is to continue as long as we exist—all the days of our life, in all ages, in all situations, and in all circumstances. What a pity to have lived so long without God in the world, when so much happiness and glory are to be enjoyed in union with him!

Verse 76. And thou, child, &c.] Zacharias proclaims the dignity, employment, doctrine, and success of his son; and the ruin and recovery of the Jews and the Gentiles.

CHAPTER II.

The decree of Augustus to enrol all the Roman empire, 1, 2. Joseph and Mary go to their own city to be enrolled, 3-5. Christ is born, 6, 7. His birth is announced to the shepherds, 8-14. They go to Bethlehem, and find Joseph, Mary, and Christ, 15-20. Christ is circumcised, 21. His parents go to present him in the temple, 22-24. Simeon receives him: his song, 25-35. Anna the prophetess, 36-38. The holy family return to Nazareth, 39, 40. They go to Jerusalem at the feast of the passover, and leave Jesus behind in Jerusalem, 41-44. They return seeking him, and find him in the midst of the doctors, 45-47. His mother chides him, 48. His defence of his conduct, 49, 50. They all return to Nazareth, 51, 52.

AND it came to pass in those days, that there went our a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be * taxed.

2 (b And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.)

3 And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

4 And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto c the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (d because he was of the house and lineage of David:)

5 To be taxed with Mary e his espoused wife, being great with child.

* Or, enrolled.—b Acts v. 37.—c 1 Sam. xvi. 1, 4. John vii. 42.

d Matt. i. 16. Ch. i. 27.

Verse 1. Cæsar Augustus] This was Caius Cæsar Octavianus Augustus, who was proclaimed Emperor of Rome in the 29th year before our Lord, and died A.D. 14.

That all the world should be taxed.] This cannot mean the whole world; for the Romans had not the dominion of the whole earth, and therefore could have no right to raise levies or taxes in those places to which their dominion did not extend. The meaning can be no more than that a general census of the inhabitants and their effects had been made in the reign of Augustus, through all the Roman dominions.

But as there is no general census mentioned in any historian as having taken place at this time, the meaning of the term must be farther restrained, and applied solely to the land of Judea. This signification it certainly has in this same Evangelist, chap. xxi. ver. 26. The word had been long used as a term by which the land of Judea was commonly expressed.

It is probable that the reason why this enrolment, or census, is said to have been throughout the whole Jewish nation, was to distinguish it from that partial one, made ten years after, mentioned Acts v. 37, which does not appear to have extended beyond the estates of Archelaus, and which gave birth to the insurrection excited by Judas of Galilee.

Verse 2. This taxing was first made when Cyrenius, &c.] It is easily proved, and has been proved often, that Caius Sulpicius Quirinus, the person mentioned in the text, was not governor of Syria till ten or twelve years after the birth of our Lord.

6 And so it was, that while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

7 f And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

8 And there were in the same country, shepherds abiding in the field, keeping g watch over their flock by night.

9 And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: h and they were sore afraid.

* Matt. i. 23. Ch. i. 27.—f Matt. i. 25.—g Or, the night watches.—h Ch. i. 12.

Several learned men have produced solutions of this difficulty; one or other of the two following appears to me to be the true meaning of the text.

1. Dr. Lardner translates the word, This was the first assessment of Cyrenius, governor of Syria. The passage, thus translated, does not say that this assessment was made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria, which would not have been the truth; but that this was the first assessment which Cyrenius, who was (i. e., afterwards) governor of Syria, made; for after he became governor he made a second.

2 The second way of solving this difficulty is by translating the words thus: This enrolment was BEFORE Cyrenius was governor of Syria; or, before that of Cyrenius. This sense the word appears to have, John i. 30: for he was BEFORE me. xv. 18: The world hated me BEFORE it hated you. This second solution appears to me to be the best. [It is better to assume some corruption in the text, or some incorrectness of dates.]

Verse 3. And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.] A Roman census appears to have consisted of: 1. The account which the people were obliged to give in of their persons, quality, employments, wives, children, servants, and estates; and 2. The value set upon the estates by the assessors, and the proportion in which they adjudged them to contribute to the defence and support of the state, either in men or money, or both.

Verse 5. With Mary his espoused wife] There was no necessity for Mary to have gone to Bethlehem, as Joseph's presence could have answered the end proposed in the census as well without Mary as with her; but God so ordered it,

10 And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings, of great joy, ^a which shall be to all people.

11 ^bFor unto you is born this day in the city of David ^ca Saviour, ^dwhich is Christ the Lord.

12 And this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

13 ^eAnd suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, 14 ^fGlory to God in the highest, and on earth, ^gpeace, ^hgood will toward men.

15 And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, ⁱthe shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

that the prophecy of Micah should be thus fulfilled, and that Jesus should be born in the city of David. Mic. v. 2.

Verse 7. Laid him in a manger] Or, in a stable.

Many have thought that this was a full proof of the meanness and poverty of the holy family, but such people overlook the reason given by the inspired penman, because there was no room for them in the inn. An honest man who had worked diligently at his business, under the peculiar blessing of God, could not have been so destitute of money as not to be able to procure a comfortable lodging for a night; and, had he been so ill fitted for the journey as some unwarrantably imagine, we may take it for granted he would not have brought his wife with him, who was in such a state as not to be exposed to any inconveniences of this kind without imminent danger.

Verse 8. There were—shepherds abiding in the field] There is no intimation here that these shepherds were exposed to the open air. [The classical usage of the word invariably conveys the idea of open air watching.]

Keeping watch—by night.] Or, as in the margin, keeping the watches of the night, i. e., each one keeping a watch (which ordinarily consisted of three hours) in his turn. The reason why they watched them in the field appears to have been, either to preserve the sheep from densts of prey, such as wolves, foxes, &c., or from freebooting banditti, with which all the land of Judea was at that time much infested.

Verse 9. The angel of the Lord came upon them] Or, stood over them. It is likely that the angel appeared in the air at some little distance above them, and that from him the rays of the glory of the Lord shone round about them, as the rays of light are projected from the sun.

They were sore afraid.] Probably fearing that he was a messenger of justice, coming to denounce divine judgments, or punish them immediately, for sins with which their consciences would not fail, on such an occasion, to reproach them.

Verse 10. Behold, I bring you good tidings] I am not come to declare the judgments of the Lord, but his merciful loving-kindness, the subject being a matter of great joy. He then declares his message. Unto you—to the Jews first, and then to the human race.

Verse 11. Which is Christ] The anointed, the same as Messiah. This name points out the Saviour of the world in his prophetic, regal, and sacerdotal offices: as in ancient times, prophets, kings, and priests were anointed with oil, when installed into their respective offices. Anointing was the same with them as consecration is with us. Oil is still used in the consecration of kings.

The Lord.] Yehovah. The Greek word is a proper translation of Yehovah. Jesus is Lord, to rule over and rule in the souls of the children of men: in a word, he is Jesus the Saviour, to deliver from the power, guilt, and pollution of sin; to enlarge and vivify, by the influence of his Spirit; to preserve in the possession of the salvation which he has communicated; to seal those who believe, heirs of glory; and at last to receive them into the fullness of beatitude in his eternal joy.

16 And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

17 And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

18 And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

19 ⁱBut Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

20 And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

21 ^jAnd when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called ^kJESUS, which was so named of the angel, before he was conceived in the womb.

22 And when ^lthe days of her purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they Verse 12. This shall be a sign (or token) unto you] It is by humility that Christ comes to reign; and this is the only way into his kingdom! Pride is the character of all the children of Adam: humility the mark of the Son of God, and of all his followers. Christ came in the way of humility to destroy that pride which is the root of evil in the souls of men.

Verse 13. Suddenly there was with the angel, &c.] This multitude of the heavenly host had just now descended from on high, to honour the new-born Prince of Peace, to give his parents the fullest conviction of his glory and excellence, and to teach the shepherds, who were about to be the first proclaimers of the gospel, what to think and what to speak of him, who, while he appeared as a helpless infant, was the object of worship to the angels of God.

Verse 14. Glory to God in the highest] The angels declare that this incarnation shall manifest and promote the glory of God, not only in the highest heavens, among the highest orders of beings, but in the highest and most exalted degrees. For in this astonishing display of God's mercy, attributes of the divine nature which had not been, and could not be known in any other way, should be now exhibited in the fulness of their glory, that even the angels should have fresh objects to contemplate, and new glories to exult in. These things the angels desire to look into, 1 Pet. i. 12, and they desire it because they feel they are thus interested in it. The incarnation of Jesus Christ is an infinite and eternal benefit. Heaven and earth both partake of the fruits of it, and through it angels and men become one family, Ephes. iii. 15.

Peace, good will toward men.] When men become reconciled to God, through the death of his Son, they love one another. They have peace with God; peace in their own consciences; and peace with their neighbours: good will dwells among them, speaks in them, and works by them.

Verse 15. Let us now go even unto Bethlehem] All delays are dangerous: but he who delays to seek Jesus, when the angels, the messengers of God, bring him glad tidings of salvation, risks his present safety and his eternal happiness.

Verse 17. They made known abroad the saying] These shepherds were the first preachers of the gospel of Christ: and what was their text? Why, Glory to God in the highest heavens, and on earth, peace, and good will among men. This, and this only, is the message which all Christ's true pastors or shepherds bring to men. How can religious contentions, civil broils, or open wars, look that gospel in the face which publishes nothing but glory to God, and peace and good will among men? Crusades for the recovery of a holy land so called (by the way, latterly, the most unholy in the map of the world), and wars for the support of religion, are an insult to the gospel, and blasphemy against God!

Verse 19. And pondered them in her heart.] Weighing is an English translation of our word pondering, from the Latin.

Verse 21. When eight days were accomplished] See Gen. xvii. 12; our blessed Lord received circumcision in token of his subjection to the law, Gal. iv. 4, v. 8.

brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord;

23 (As it is written in the law of the Lord, 'Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord;)

24 And to offer a sacrifice, according to ^b that which is said in the law of the Lord, A pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons.

25 And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon; and the same man was just and devout, ^c waiting for the consolation of Israel: and the Holy Ghost was upon him.

26 And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not ^d see death, before he had seen the Lord's Christ.

27 And he came ^e by the Spirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law, Verse 23. Days of her purification] That is, thirty-three days—after what was termed the seven days of her uncleanness—forty days in all: for that was the time appointed by the law after the birth of a male child. See Lev. xii. 2, 6.

Verse 24. And to offer a sacrifice] Neither mother nor child was considered as in the Lord's covenant, or under the divine protection, till these ceremonies, prescribed by the law, had been performed.

A pair of turtle doves, &c.] One was for a burnt-offering, and the other for a sin-offering: see Lev. xii. 8. The rich were required to bring a lamb; but the poor and middling classes were required to bring either two turtle doves, or two pigeons. This is a proof that the holy family were not in affluence. Jesus sanctified the state of poverty, which is the general state of man, by passing through it.

Though neither Mary nor her son needed any of these purifications, for she was immaculate, and He was the Holy One, yet, had she not gone through the days of purification according to the law, she could not have appeared in the public worship of the Most High, and would have been considered as an apostate from the faith of the Israel of God; and had not He been circumcised and publicly presented in the temple, he could not have been permitted to enter either synagogue or temple, and no Jew would have heard him preach, or had any intercourse or connexion with him.

Verse 25. And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem] This man is distinguished because of his singular piety. Such persevering exemplary piety was very rare, and therefore the inspired penman ushers in the account with behold! Several learned men are of the opinion that he was son to the famous Hillel, one of the most celebrated doctors and philosophers which had ever appeared in the Jewish nation since the time of Moses. Simeon is supposed also to have been the Ab or president of the grand Sanhedrin.

The same man was just] He steadily regulated all his conduct by the law of his God: and devout—he had fully consecrated himself to God, so that he added a pious heart to a righteous conduct. The original word signifies also a person of good report—one well received among the people, or one cautious and circumspect in matters of religion.

Waiting for the consolation of Israel] That is, the Messiah, who was known among the pious Jews by this character: he was to be the consolation of Israel, because he was to be its redemption.

The Holy Ghost was upon him.] He was a man divinely inspired, overshadowed, and protected by the power and influence of the Most High.

Verse 26. It was revealed unto him] The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him. The soul of a righteous and devout man is a proper habitation for the Holy Spirit.

He should not see death] They that seek shall find: it is impossible that a man who is earnestly seeking the salvation of God, should be permitted to die without finding it.

The Lord's Christ.] Rather the Lord's anointed:—that prophet, priest, and king, who was typified by so many anointed persons under the Old Covenant; and who was 28 Then took he him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said,

29 Lord, 'now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word:

30 For mine eyes ^a have seen thy salvation,

31 Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people;

32 ^b A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.

33 And Joseph and his mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of him.

34 And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the ^c fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for ^d a sign which shall be spoken against;

35 (Yea, ^e a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also) that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed.

appointed to come in the fulness of time, to accomplish all that was written in the Law, in the Prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning him.

Verse 27. He came by the Spirit into the temple] Probably he had in view the prophecy of Malachi, chap. iii. 1. Now the prophecy was just going to be fulfilled; and the Holy Spirit, who dwelt in the soul of this righteous man, directed him to go and see its accomplishment. Those who come, under the influence of God's Spirit, to places of public worship, will undoubtedly meet with him who is the comfort and salvation of Israel.

After the custom of the law] To present him to the Lord, and then redeem him by paying five shekels, Numb. xviii. 15, 16, and to offer those sacrifices appointed by the law.

Verse 28. Then took he him up in his arms] What must the holy soul of this man have felt in this moment! O inestimable privilege! And yet ours need not be inferior. Indeed even Christ in the arms could not avail a man, if he were not formed in his heart.

Verse 29. Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace] Now thou dismisses, looses him from life; having lived long enough to have the grand end of life accomplished.

Though Simeon means his death, yet the thing itself is not mentioned; for death has not only lost its sting, but its name also, to those who have, even by faith, seen the Lord's anointed.

Verse 30. Thy salvation] Christ is called our salvation, as he is called our life, our peace, our hope; i. e., he is the author of all these, to them who believe.

Verse 31. Which thou hast prepared] Here salvation is represented under the notion of a feast, which God himself has provided for the whole world; and to partake of which he has invited all the nations of the earth. See Isa. xxv. 6, &c.

Verse 32. A light to lighten the Gentiles] A light of the Gentiles, for revelation. By Moses and the prophets, a light of revelation was given to the Jews, in the blessedness of which the Gentiles did not partake. By Christ and his apostles, a luminous revelation is about to be given unto the Gentiles, from the blessedness of which the Jews in general, by their obstinacy and unbelief, shall be long excluded. But to all true Israelites it shall be a glory, an evident fulfilment of all the predictions of the prophets, relative to the salvation of a lost world: and the first offers of it shall be made to the Jewish people, who may see in it the truth of their own scriptures indisputably evinced.

Verse 33. Joseph and his mother marvelled] For they did not as yet fully know the counsels of God.

Verse 34. This child is set for the fall] This seems an allusion to Isa. viii. 14, 15. As Christ did not come as a temporal deliverer, in which character alone the Jews expected him, the consequence should be, they would reject him, and so fall by the Romans. See Rom. xi. 11, 12, and Matt. xxiv. But in the fulness of time there shall be a rising again of many in Israel. See Rom. xi. 26.

And for a sign. A mark or butt to shoot at—a metaphor taken from archers. Or perhaps Simeon refers to Isa. xi.

36 And there was one Anna, a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Asher: she was of a great age, and had lived with a husband seven years from her virginity;

37 And she was a widow of about fourscore and four years, which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers ^a night and day.

38 And she coming in that instant, gave thanks likewise ^a unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that ^b looked for redemption in ^c Jerusalem.

39 And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city Nazareth.

40 ^d And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon him.

41 Now his parents went to Jerusalem ^e every year at the feast of the Passover.

42 And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem after the custom of the feast.

43 And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; and Joseph and his mother knew not of it.

44 But they, supposing him to have been in the company, went a day's journey; and they sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance.

45 And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him.

46 And it came to pass, that after three days they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions.

47 And ^f all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers.

48 And when they saw him, they were amazed: and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing.

49 And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about ^g my Father's business?

50 And ^h they understood not the saying which he spake unto them.

51 And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother ⁱ kept all these sayings in her heart.

52 And Jesus ^j increased in wisdom and ^k stature, and in favour with God and man.

10-12, intimating that the Jews would reject it while the Gentiles should flock to it as their ensign of honour, under which they were to enjoy a glorious rest.

That the thoughts (or reasonings) of many hearts may be revealed.] I have transposed this clause to the place to which I believe it belongs.

Verse 35. Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also] This is a metaphor used by the most respectable Greek writers, to express the most pungent sorrow, and it may here refer to the anguish Mary must have felt when standing beside the cross of her tortured son: John xix. 25.

Verse 36. Anna, a prophetess] It does not appear that this person was one who could foretell future events; but rather a holy woman, who, from her extensive knowledge and deep experience in divine things, was capable of instructing others; according to the use of the word in 1 Cor. xiv. 8.

The tribe of Asher] Though her family might have been a distinguished one in Jerusalem, yet we find that it was her very exemplary piety that entitled her to be thus honourably mentioned in the sacred history. It is an honourable thing indeed to have one's name written in the sacred records; but to be written in the book of life is of infinitely greater moment.

Seven years] At such an age, it might be supposed she was reasonably exempted from performing the severer duties of religion; but her spirit of piety continued still to burn with a steady and undiminished flame.

Verse 37. Departed not from the temple] Attended constantly at the hours of prayer, which were nine in the morning and three in the afternoon.

With fastings] She accompanied her devotion with frequent fastings, probably not oftener than twice in the week; for this was the custom of the most rigid Pharisees: see chap. xviii. 12.

Verse 38. Coming in that instant] While Simeon held the blessed Redeemer in his arms, and was singing his departing and triumphal song.

Spake of him] Of the nature and design of his mission; and the glory that should take place in the land.

To all them that looked for redemption] As Daniel's seventy weeks were known to be now completed, the more pious Jews were in constant expectation of the promised Messiah.

In Jerusalem.] It is probable she went about from house to house, testifying the grace of God.

Verse 39. They returned into Galilee] It is very likely, that as soon as the presentation in the temple, and the ceremonies relative to it, had been accomplished, the holy family returned to Galilee, as St. Luke here states, and that they continued there till Herod's bloody purpose was dis-vii. 15, 48.—¹ John ii. 16.—² Ch. ix. 45. xviii. 34.—³ Ver. 19. Dan. vii. 28.—⁴ 1 Sam. ii. 26. Ver. 40.—⁵ Or, age.

covered to them by the Lord; which probably took some time to bring it to its murderous crisis, after the departure of the Magi. After which, they fled into Egypt, where they continued till the death of Herod; and it is probable that it is of a second return to Nazareth that St. Matthew speaks, chap. ii. 23.

Verse 40. The child grew] As to his body—being in perfect health.

Waxed strong in spirit] His rational soul became strong and vigorous.

Filled with wisdom] The divinity continuing to communicate itself more and more, in proportion to the increase of the rational principle. Jesus was perfect man, as well as God.

And the grace of God was upon him.] The word not only means grace in the common acceptation of the word (some blessing granted by God's mercy to those who are sinners, or have no merit), but it means also favour or approbation: and this sense I think most proper for it here, when applied to the human nature of our blessed Lord; and thus our translators render the same word, ver. 52. Even Christ himself, who knew no sin, grew in the favour of God; and, as to his human nature, increased in the graces of the Holy Spirit. From this we learn that, if a man were as pure and as perfect as the man Jesus Christ himself was, yet he might nevertheless increase in the image, and consequently in the favour of God. God loves every thing and person, in proportion to the nearness of the approaches made to his own perfections.

Verse 41. His parents went—every year] This was their constant custom, because positively enjoined by the law, Exod. xxiii. 17. Probably twelve was the age at which the male children were obliged to appear before the Lord at the three public festivals—the feast of unleavened bread, of weeks, and of tabernacles.

Verse 42. Had fulfilled the days] Eight days in the whole: one was the passover, and the other seven, the days of unleavened bread.

Verse 44. Supposing him to have been in the company] Some have supposed that the men and women marched in separate companies on these occasions, which is very likely; and that sometimes the children kept company with the men, sometimes with the women.

Went a day's journey] Knowing what a treasure they possessed, how could they be so long without looking on it? And they sought him] They earnestly sought him. They are now duly affected both with a sense of their great loss and great negligence.

Kinsfolk and acquaintance.] Those of the same family and neighbourhood went up to Jerusalem together on such occasions.

Verse 46. Sitting in the midst of the doctors] The Rabbins, who were explaining the law and the ceremonies of the Jewish religion to their disciples.

Asking them questions.] Not as a scholar asks his teacher, to be informed; but as a teacher, who proposes questions to his scholars in order to take an occasion to instruct them.

Verse 47. Answers.] The word here seems not to mean answers only, but what Jesus said by way of question to the doctors, ver. 46. So in Rev. vii. 18, one of the elders is said to have answered saying—when he only asked a question.

Verse 48. Why hast thou thus dealt with us?] It certainly was not his fault, but theirs.

Verse 49. How is it that ye sought me?] Is not this intended as a gentle reproof? Why had ye me to seek? Ye should not have left my company when ye knew I am constantly employed in performing the will of the Most High.

My father's business?] Some think that these words should be translated, In my Father's house; which was a reason that they should have sought him in the temple only. [Such a rendering narrows the full meaning of the expression.]

Verse 51. Was subject unto them] Behaved towards them with all dutiful submission. Probably his working with his hands at his reputed father's business is here also implied: see on ver. 41. No child among the Jews was ever brought up in idleness. Is not this the carpenter? was a saying of those Jews who appear to have had a proper knowledge of his employment while in Joseph's house.

CHAPTER III.

The time in which John the Baptist began to preach, 1-3. The prophecies which were fulfilled in him, 4-6. The matter and success of his preaching, 7-9; among the people, 10, 11; among the publicans, 12, 13; among the soldiers, 14. His testimony concerning Christ, 15-18. The reason why Herod put him afterwards in prison, 19, 20. He baptizes Christ, on whom the Spirit of God descends, 21, 22. Our Lord's genealogy, 23-38.

NOW in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cæsar, * Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea, and ^b Herod being tetrarch of Galilee, and his brother Philip tetrarch of Iturea and of the region of Trachonitis, and Lysanias the tetrarch of Abilene,

2 * Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests, the word of God came unto John, the son of Zacharias, in the wilderness.

3 ^d And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance * for the remission of sins:

4 As it is written in the book of the words of Esaias the prophet, saying, 'The voice of one crying

Verse 1. Fifteenth year] This was the fifteenth of his principality and thirteenth of his monarchy: for he was two years joint-emperor, previously to the death of Augustus.

Tiberius Cæsar] This Emperor succeeded Augustus, in whose reign Christ was born. He began his reign, August 19, A.D. 14, reigned twenty-three years, and died, March 16, A.D. 37, aged seventy-eight years. He was a most infamous character.

Herod] This was Herod Antipas, the son of Herod the Great who murdered the innocents. It was the same Herod who beheaded John Baptist, and to whom our Lord was sent by Pilate. See the notes on Matt. ii. 1.

Iturea and Trachonitis] Two provinces of Syria, on the confines of Judea.

Abilene] Another province of Syria, which had its name from Abila its chief city.

Verse 2. Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests] Caiaphas was the son-in-law of Annas or Ananias, and it is supposed that they exercised the high priest's office by turns. It is likely that Annas only was considered as high priest; and that Caiaphas was what the Hebrews termed cohen mishneh, or sagan cohanim, the high priest's deputy, or ruler of the temple. [Annas had been deposed by Vitellius, but yet bore the name, and perhaps exercised some of the functions of High Priest, owing probably to his personal character, and his relation to Caiaphas.]

The word of God came unto John] That is, the Holy Spirit in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

5 Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth;

6 And * all flesh shall see the salvation of God.

7 Then said he to the multitude that came forth to be baptized of him, ^b O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?

8 Bring forth therefore fruits ¹ worthy of repentance, and begin not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that revealed to him this doctrine of salvation. This came upon him in the desert, where he was living in such a state of austerity as gave him full right to preach all the rigours of penitence to others. Thus we find that the first preachers, historians, and followers of the doctrines of the gospel, were men eminent for the austerity of their lives, the simplicity of their manners, and the sanctity of their conduct; they were authorized by God, and filled with the most precious gifts of his Spirit.

Verse 3. The baptism of repentance] See on Matt. iii. 4-6, and Mark i. 1, &c.

Verse 4. Prepare ye the way] It was customary for the Hindoo kings, when on journeys, to send a certain class of the people two or three days before them, to command the inhabitants to clear the ways.

Verse 5. Every valley shall be filled] All hindrances shall be taken out of the way: a quotation from the Greek version of Isa. xl. 4, containing an allusion to the preparations made in rough countries to facilitate the march of mighty kings and conquerors.

Verse 7-9. On this account of the Baptist's mode of preaching, see the notes on Matt. iii. 7-11.

Verse 10. What shall we do then?] The preaching of the Baptist had been accompanied with an uncommon effusion of that Spirit which convinces of sin, righteousness, and judgment.

Verse 11. He that hath two coats, &c.] He first teaches

That God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.

9 And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: ^a every tree therefore which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

10 And the people asked him, saying, ^b What shall we do then?

11 He answereth and saith unto them, ^c He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat let him do likewise.

12 Then ^d came also publicans to be baptized, and said unto him, Master, what shall we do?

13 And he said unto them, ^e Exact no more than that which is appointed you.

14 And the soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying, And what shall we do? And he said unto them, ^f Do violence to no man, ^g neither accuse any falsely; and be content with your ^h wages.

15 And as the people were ⁱ in expectation, and all men, mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ, or not;

16 John answered, saying unto them all, ^k I indeed baptize you with water; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire:

17 Whose fan ^l is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and ^m will gather the wheat into his garner; but the chaff he will burn with fire unquenchable.

18 And many other things in his exhortation, preached he unto the people.

19 ⁿ But Herod the tetrarch, being reproved by him for Herodias his brother Philip's wife, and for all the evils which Herod had done, 20 Added yet this above all, that he shut up John in prison.

21 Now when all the people were baptized, ^o it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened,

22 And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.

23 And Jesus himself began to be ^p about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) ^q the son of Joseph, which was the son of Heli,

Be content with your wages. The word signifies not only the money which was allotted to a Roman soldier, which was two oboli, about three halfpence per day, but also the necessary supply of wheat, barley, &c.

Much learned labour has been used to reconcile this genealogy with that in St. Matthew, chap. i., and there are several ways of doing it: the following which appears to me to be the best, is also the most simple and easy.

MATTHEW, in descending from Abraham to Joseph, the spouse of the blessed Virgin, speaks of sons properly such, by way of natural generation: Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob, &c. But LUKE, in ascending from the Saviour of the world to God himself, speaks of sons either properly or improperly such: on this account he uses an in-the great mass of the people their duty to each other. They were uncharitable and oppressive, and he taught them not to expect any mercy from the hand of God, while they acted towards others in opposition to its dictates.

Verse 12. Then came also publicans He next instructs the tax-gatherers in the proper discharge of their duty; though it was an office detested by the Jews at large, yet the Baptist does not condemn it. It is only the abuse of it that he speaks against. If taxes be necessary for the support of a state, there must be collectors of them; and the collector, if he properly discharge his duty, is not only a useful, but also a respectable officer. But it seems the Jewish tax-gatherers exacted much more from the people than government authorized them to do, ver. 13, and the surplus they pocketed.

It is worthy of being remarked that St. Matthew, who wrote principally for the Jews, extends his genealogy to Abraham, through whom the promise of the Messiah was given to the Jews; but St. Luke, who wrote his history for the instruction of the Gentiles, extends his genealogy to Adam, to whom the promise of the Redeemer was given in behalf of himself and of all his posterity.

CHAPTER IV.

Christ's temptation, 1-13. Teaches in the synagogues of Galilee, 14, 15. He preaches in a synagogue at Nazareth, 16-28. They attempt to kill him, 29, 30. He preaches in Capernaum, 31, 32, and casts out a demon, 33-37. Heals Peter's mother-in-law, and various others, 38-41. He goes to the desert, and preaches afterwards in the synagogues of Galilee, 42-44.

AND ^a Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost returned from Jordan, and ^b was led by the Spirit into the wilderness,

2 Being forty days tempted of the devil. And ^c in those days he did eat nothing: and when they were ended, he afterward hungered.

3 And the devil said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread.

4 And Jesus answered him, saying, ^d It is written, That man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God.

5 And the devil, taking him up into a high mountain, shewed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time.

6 And the devil said unto him, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them: for ^e that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it.

7 If thou therefore wilt ^f worship me, all shall be thine.

Verse 1. Was led by the Spirit] Or, And was carried about.

It may be useful to remark here, that, during the forty days and forty nights in which he is said to have been tempted by the devil, he is carried about, continually sustained and supported, by the Holy Ghost. Let those who are tempted by Satan look for, and, in virtue of the power and intercession of Christ, claim, the same support; and it matters little how many days they may be assaulted by the Devil, while they are carried about by the Spirit of God. [The original word seems rather to imply an irresistible force.]

Verse 7. If thou—wilt worship me] This temptation is the last in order, as related by Matthew; and it is not reasonable to suppose that any other succeeded to it. Luke has here told the particulars, but not in the order in which they took place.

Verse 14. Returned in the power of the Spirit] Having now conquered the grand adversary, he comes in the miracle-working energy of the Spirit to show forth his power, god-head, and love to the people, that they might believe and be 8 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Get thee behind me, Satan: for ⁱ it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

9 ^h And he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence:

10 For ⁱ it is written, He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee:

11 And in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

12 And Jesus answering said unto him, ^j It is said, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

13 And when the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him ^k for a season.

14 ^l And Jesus returned ^m in the power of the Spirit into ⁿ Galilee: and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about.

saved. He who, through the grace of God, resists and overcomes temptation, is always bettered by it. Those very things which are designed for our utter ruin he makes the instruments of our greatest good. Thus Satan is ever duped by his own proceedings, and caught in his own craft.

Verse 15. And he taught in their synagogues] We do not find that even the persecuting Jews ever hindered Christ or his disciples from preaching in their synagogues. Is it the same in every place where even the Christian religion is established by law?

Glorified of all.] The scandal of the cross had not yet taken place.

Verse 16. To Nazareth, where he had been brought up] It is likely that our Lord lived principally in this city till the 30th year of his age; but after he entered on his public ministry, his usual place of residence was at the house of Peter, in Capernaum.

As his custom was] Our Lord regularly attended the public worship of God in the synagogues; for there the Scriptures were read: other parts of the worship were very corrupt; but it was the best at that time to be found in the 16 And he came to ^a Nazareth, where he had been brought up: and, as his custom was, ^b he went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and stood up for to read.

17 And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Esaias. And when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written,

18 ^c The Spirit of the Lord ^d is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor: he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, 19 To preach the acceptable year of the Lord.

20 And he closed the book, and he gave ^e it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him.

21 And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears.

22 And all bare him witness, and ^f wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said, ^g Is not this Joseph's son?

23 And he said unto them, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician, heal thyself: whatsoever we have heard done in ^h Capernaum, do also here in ⁱ thy country.

24 And he said, Verily I say unto you, No ^j prophet is accepted in his own country.

25 But I tell you of a truth, ^k many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when the heaven was shut up three years and six months, when great famine was throughout all the land;

26 But unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta, a city of Sidon, unto a woman ^l that was a widow.

land. To worship God publicly is the duty of every man, and no man can be guiltless who neglects it. If a person cannot get such public worship as he likes, let him frequent such as he can get. Better to attend the most indifferent than to stay at home, especially on the Lord's day.

Stood up for to read.] The Jews, in general, sat while they taught or commented on the Sacred Writings, or the traditions of the elders; but when they read either the law or the prophets, they invariably stood up: it was not lawful for them even to lean against anything while employed in reading.

Verse 17. And when he had opened the book] When he had unrolled it. The Sacred Writings used to this day, in all the Jewish synagogues, are written on skins of basil, parchment, or vellum, sewed end to end, and rolled on two rollers, beginning at each end; so that, in reading from right to left, they roll off with the left, while they roll on with the right. Probably the place in the prophet Isaiah, here referred to, was the lesson for that day; and Jesus unrolled the manuscript till he came to the place: then, after having read, he rolled it up again, and returned it to the officer, ver. 20, the ruler of the synagogue, or his servant, whose business it was to take care of it. The place that he opened was probably the Section for the day.

Verse 18. The Spirit of the Lord] This is found in Isa. xli. 1; but our Lord immediately adds to it ver. 7 of chap. xlii. The proclaiming of liberty to the captives, and the acceptable year (or year of acceptance) of the Lord, is a manifest allusion to the proclaiming of the year of jubilee by sound of trumpet, see Lev. xxv. 9, &c., and the notes there. Our Saviour, by applying this text to himself, a text so manifestly relating to the institution above mentioned, plainly declares the typical design of that institution.

He hath anointed me] I have been designed and set apart for this very purpose: my sole business among men is to proclaim glad tidings to the poor, &c. To those who feel 27 ^m And many lepers were in Israel in the time of Eliseus the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian.

28 And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath, 29 And rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the ⁿ brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong.

30 But he ^o passing through the midst of them went his way, 31 And ^p came down to Capernaum, a city of Galilee, and taught them on the sabbath days.

32 And they were astonished at his doctrine: ^q for his word was with power.

33 ^r And in the synagogue there was a man which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice, 34 Saying, ^s Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? ^t I know thee who thou art, ^u the Holy One of God.

35 And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had thrown him in the midst, he came out of him, and hurt him not.

36 And they were all amazed, and spake among themselves, saying, What a word is this! for with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits, and they come out.

37 And the fame of him went out into every place of the country round about.

38 ^v And he arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house. And Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever; and they besought him for her.

their spiritual poverty, whose hearts are broken through a sense of their sins, who see themselves tied and bound with the chains of many evil habits, who sit in the darkness of guilt and misery, without a friendly hand to lead them in the way in which they should go—to these, the gospel of the grace of Christ is a pleasing sound, because a present and full salvation is proclaimed by it; and the present is shown to be the acceptable year of the Lord; the year, the time in which he saves to the uttermost all who come unto him in the name of his son Jesus.

Verse 20. Were fastened on him.] Were attentively fixed on him.

Verse 22. At the gracious words] It is very strange that none of the Evangelists give us any account of this sermon! Had it been necessary for our salvation, it would have been recorded. It was a demonstration to those Jews, that Jesus, who preached to them, was the person of whom the prophet there spoke: it was not designed for general edification.

Verse 23. Physician, heal thyself] That is, heal the broken-hearted in thy own country, as the latter clause of the verse explains it; but they were far from being in a proper spirit to receive the salvation which he was ready to communicate; and therefore they were not healed.

Verse 25. In the days of Elias] See this history, 1 Kings xvii. 1-9, compared with chap. xviii. 1-45. This was evidently a miraculous interference, as no rain fell for three years and six months, even in the rainy seasons.

Verse 26. Unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta] Sarepta was a Pagan city in the country of Sidon, in the vicinity of Galilee.

Verse 27. None of them was cleansed] The meaning of these verses is, God dispenses his benefits when, where, and to whom he pleases. No person can complain of his conduct in these respects because no person deserves any good from his hand. God never punishes any but those who deserve it; but he blesses incessantly those who deserve it not. The reason is evident: justice depends on certain rules; but beneficence is free.

Verse 28. Were filled with wrath] They seem to have drawn the following conclusion from what our Lord spoke: "The Gentiles are more precious in the sight of God than the Jews; and to them his miracles of mercy and kindness shall be principally confined." This was pretty near the truth, as the event proved.

Verse 29. The brow of the hill] Still called "the Mountain of the Precipitation, and half a league southward of Nazareth."

Verse 30. Passing through the midst of them] Either he shut their eyes so that they could not see him; or he so overawed them by his power as to leave them no strength to perform their murderous purpose. The man Christ Jesus was immortal till his time came: and all his messengers are immortal till their work is done.

Verse 31. Came down to Capernaum] Which it is likely he made his ordinary place of residence from this time.

Verse 32. His word was with power.] With authority. He assumed the tone and manner of a new Lawgiver; and uttered all his doctrines, not in the way of exhortation or advice, but in the form of precepts and commands, the unction of the Holy Spirit accompanying all he said.

Verse 33. A spirit of an unclean devil] As demon was used both in a good and bad sense before and after the time of the Evangelists, the word unclean may have been added here by St. Luke, merely to express the quality of this spirit. But it is worthy of remark, that the inspired writers never use the word demon in a good sense.

Verse 35. And hurt him not.] Though he convulsed him, Mark i. 26, and threw him down in the midst of them, probably with the design to take away his life, yet our Lord

And ^a he rebuking them suffered them not ^a to speak: for they knew that he was Christ.

42 * And when it was day, he departed and went into a desert place: and the people sought him, and came unto him, and stayed him, that he should not depart from them.

^a Or, to say that they knew him to be Christ.—* Mark i. 35.—

permitted it not; and this appears to be the meaning of the place. The spirit was not permitted essentially to injure him at that time.

Verse 37. The fame] The sound. This is a very elegant metaphor. The people are represented as struck with astonishment; and the sound goes out through all the coasts; in allusion to the propagation of sound, by a smart stroke on any substance, by which the air is suddenly agitated, and conveys the report made by the stroke to distant places.

Verse 38. Simon's wife's mother] As soon as Peter began to follow Christ, his family began to benefit by it. It is always profitable to contract an acquaintance with good men. One person full of faith and prayer may be the means of drawing down innumerable blessings on his family and acquaintance.

Verse 40. When the sun was setting] And consequently the sabbath ended, for before this it would have been unlawful to have brought their sick to be healed.

Verse 42. And the people sought him] They had tasted the good word of God, and now they cleave to Christ with their whole heart. Hearing the words of Christ, and feeling the influence of his Spirit upon the soul, will attract and influence the heart; and indeed nothing else can do it.

And stayed him] Strove to detain him; they caught hold of him.

Verse 43. I must preach the kingdom of GOD to other cities] To proclaim the kingdom of God was the Messiah's great work: healing the diseases of the people was only an emblematical and secondary work, a work that was to be the proof of his goodness, and the demonstration of his authority to preach the gospel, and open the kingdom of heaven to all believers.

CHAPTER V.

The miraculous draught of fishes at the lake of Gennesaret, 1-11. Christ heals a leper, 12-14. His fame being published abroad, he withdraws to the desert, 15, 16. He heals a paralytic person, at which the Scribes and Pharisees murmur, but the people glorify God, 17-26. He calls the publican Levi, who makes a feast for Christ, to which he invites a great number of publicans and others, at which the Scribes and Pharisees murmur, and our Lord vindicates his conduct, 27-32. The question about fasting answered, 33-35. The parable of the new piece of cloth put on the old garment, and the new wine in old bottles, 36-39.

AND ^a it came to pass, that, as the people pressed upon him to hear the word of God, he stood by the lake of Gennesaret,
2 And saw two ships standing by the lake:

* Matt. iv. 18.

Verse 1. The people pressed upon him] There was a glorious prospect of a plentiful harvest, but how few of these blades came to full corn in the ear!

but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets.

3 And he entered into one of the ships, which was Simon's, and prayed him that he would thrust out

4 Now when he had left speaking, he said unto Simon, 'Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

5 And Simon answering said unto him, Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing: nevertheless at thy word I will let down the net.

6 And when they had this done, they inclosed ^a a great multitude of fishes: and their net brake.

7 And they beckoned unto their ^c partners, which were in the other ship, that they should come and help them. And they came, and filled both the ships, so that they began to sink.

8 When Simon Peter saw it, he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, 'Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord.

9 For he was astonished, and all that were with him, at the draught of the fishes which they had taken:

10 And so was also James, and John, the sons of Zebedee, which were partners with Simon. And Jesus said unto Simon, Fear not; ^{*} from henceforth thou shalt catch men.

11 And when they had brought their ships to land, ^{*} they forsook all, and followed him.

12 ^{*} And it came to pass, when he was in a certain city; behold a man full of leprosy: who seeing Jesus fell on his face, and besought him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

13 And he put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will: be thou clean. And immediately the leprosy departed from him.

14 ^{} And he charged him to tell no man: but go and shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing, ^{} according as Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

15 But so much the more went there a fame abroad of him: ^{*} and great multitudes came together to hear, and to be healed by him of their infirmities.

16 ^{*} And he withdrew himself into the wilderness, and prayed.

17 And it came to pass on a certain day, as he was teaching, that there were Pharisees and doctors of the law sitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem: and the power of the Lord was present to heal them.

18 ^{*} And, behold, men brought in a bed, a man which was taken with a palsy: and they sought means to bring him in, and to lay him before him.

tained the multitudes who attended our Lord's ministry; and therefore he was obliged to preach in the open air. But this also some of the most eminent Rabbins were in the habit of doing; though among some of their brethren it was not deemed reputable.

Verse 2. Two ships] Two vessels. It is highly improper to term these ships. They appear to have been only such small boats as are used to manage nets on flat smooth beaches.

Verse 3. And taught—out of the ship.] They pressed so much upon him on the land, through their eagerness to hear the doctrine of life, that he could not conveniently speak to them, and so was obliged to get into one of the boats.

Verse 5. Simon—said—Master] This is the first place where this word occurs; it is used by none of the inspired penmen but Luke, and he applies it only to our blessed Lord. It properly signifies a prefect, or one who is set over certain affairs or persons: it is used also for an instructor, or teacher. Peter considered Christ, from what he had heard, as teacher of a divine doctrine, and as having authority to command, &c. No man ever took Jesus profitably, for his teacher, who did not at the same time receive him as his Lord.

We have toiled all the night] All labour must be fruitless where the blessing of God is not; but especially that of the ministry. It is the presence and influence of Christ in a congregation, that cause souls to be gathered unto himself: without these, whatever the preacher's eloquence or abilities may be, all will be night, and fruitless labour.

At thy word I will let down the net.] He who assumes the character of a fisher of men, under any authority that does not proceed from Christ, is sure to catch nothing: but he who labours by the order and under the direction of the great Shepherd and Bishop of souls, cannot labour in vain.

Verse 6. Their net brake.] Or, began to break, or, was likely to be broken. Had it broke, as our version states, they could have caught no fish.

Verse 7. They beckoned unto their partners] Had not these been called in to assist, the net must have been broken, and all the fish lost. What a pity there should be such envious separation among the different sects that profess to believe in Christ Jesus! Did they help each other in the spirit of Christian fellowship, more souls would be brought to the knowledge of the truth. Some will rather leave souls to perish than admit of partners in the sacred work. It is an intolerable pride to think nothing well done but what we do ourselves; and a diabolical envy to be afraid lest others should be more successful than we are.

They—filled both the ships] Both the boats had as many as they could carry, and were so heavily laden that they were ready to sink.

^h Matt. viii. 4. — ⁱ Lev. xiv. 4, 10, 21, 22. — ^j Matt. iv. 25. — ^k Mark iii. 7. — ^l John vi. 2. — ^m Matt. xiv. 23. — ⁿ Mark vi. 46. — ^o Matt. ix. 2. — ^p Mark ii. 3.

Did the faithful fishers in both the vessels in these lands (the Established Church, and the various branches of the Dissenting interest) join heartily together, the nations might be converted to God; but, while the ridiculous disputes for and against particular forms last, there can be no unity. The wall of separation is continually strengthened, each party fortifying it on his own side.

Verse 8. Depart from me; for I am a sinful man] Peter was fully convinced that this draught of fish was a miraculous one; and that God himself had particularly interfered in this matter, whose presence and power he revered in the person of Jesus. But as he felt himself a sinner, he was afraid the divine purity of Christ could not possibly endure him; therefore he wished for a separation from that power, which he was afraid might break forth and consume him. It seems to have been a received maxim among the Jews, that whoever had seen a particular manifestation of God should speedily die, Exod. xxiv. 10, 11. This supposition seems to have been founded on the authority of God himself, Exod. xxxiii. 20. So Moses, Deut. v. 26. See also Judges vi. 21-23; and Judges xiii. 22: We shall surely die, for we have SEEN GOD.

Verse 10. Thou shalt catch men.] Thou shalt catch men alive; this is the proper signification of the word. Fear not: these discoveries of God tend to life, not to death; and ye shall become the instruments of life, and salvation to a lost world. These fish are taken to be killed and fed on: but those who are converted under your ministry shall be preserved unto eternal life.

Verse 11. They forsook all, and followed him.] God expects this from every person, and especially from those in whose hearts, or in whose behalf, he has wrought a miracle of grace or of providence.

Verse 12. A certain city] This was some city of Galilee; probably Chorazin or Bethsaida.

A man full of leprosy] See the notes on Lev. xiii. and xiv.

Verse 14. And offer for thy cleansing] All nations agree in these gratitude-offerings for benefits received from the object of their worship.

Verse 16. And he withdrew himself into the wilderness] Or rather, He frequently withdrew into the desert. Ministers of the gospel are to receive fresh supplies of light and power from God by prayer, that they may be the more successful in their work; and they ought to seek frequent opportunities of being in private with God and their books. A man can give nothing unless he first receives it; and no man can be successful in the ministry who does not constantly depend upon God, for the excellence of the power is all from him. Why is there so much preaching, and so little good done?

they might bring him in because of the multitude, they went upon the housetop, and let him down through the tiling with his couch, into the midst before Jesus.

20 And when he saw their faith, he said unto him, Man, thy sins are forgiven thee.

21 ^a And the scribes and the Pharisees began to reason, saying, Who is this which speaketh blasphemies? ^b Who can forgive sins, but God alone?

22 But when Jesus perceived their thoughts, he answering said unto them, What reason ye in your hearts?

23 Whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk?

24 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power upon earth to forgive sins, (he said unto the sick of the palsy) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy couch, and go unto thine house.

25 And immediately he rose up before them, and took up that whereon he lay, and departed to his own house, glorifying God.

26 And they were all amazed, and they glorified God, and were filled with fear, saying, We have seen strange things to-day.

27 ^c And after these things he went forth, and saw a publican, named Levi, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he said unto him, Follow me.

28 And he left all, rose up, and followed him.

29 ^d And Levi made him a great feast in his own house: and ^e there was a great company of publicans and of others that sat down with them.

Is it not because the preachers mix too much with the world, keep too long in the crowd, and are so seldom in private with God?

Verse 17. On a certain day] This was when he was at Capernaum.

The power of the Lord] The mighty or miraculous power of the Lord, i. e., of Jesus, was there to heal them—as many as were diseased either in body or soul. Where the teaching of Christ is there also is the power of Christ to redeem and save.

Verse 18. A man—taken with a palsy] See this case described on Matt. ix. 1, &c.

Verse 21. Who can forgive sins, but God alone?] That these scribes and Pharisees might have the fullest proof of his Godhead, he works in their presence three miracles, which from their nature could only be effected by an omniscient and omnipotent Being: 1. The remission of the poor man's sins. 2. The discernment of the secret thoughts of the scribes. 3. The restoration of the paralytic in an instant to perfect soundness.

Verse 26. Strange things] Paradoxes. A paradox is 30 But their scribes and Pharisees murmured against his disciples, saying, Why do ye eat and drink with publicans and sinners?

31 And Jesus answering said unto them, They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick.

32 ^f I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance.

33 And they said unto him, ^g Why do the disciples of John fast often, and make prayers, and likewise the disciples of the Pharisees; but thine eat and drink?

34 And he said unto them, Can ye make the children of the bridechamber fast, while the bridegroom is with them?

35 But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

36 ^h And he spake also a parable unto them: No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old; if otherwise, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old.

37 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles, and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish.

38 But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved.

39 No man also having drunk old wine, straight-way desireth new: for he saith, The old is better.

something that appears false and absurd, but is not really so: or, something contrary to the commonly received opinion.

Verse 28. And he left all] Completely abandoning his office, and everything connected with it. He who wishes to preach the gospel, like the disciples of Christ, must have no earthly entanglement. If he have, his whole labour will be marred by it.

Verse 29. A great feast] A splendid entertainment. The word refers more properly to the number of the guests, and the manner in which they were received, than to the quality or quantity of the fare.

Verse 37. The new wine will burst the bottles] These old bottles which were made of skins, would not be able to stand the fermentation of the new wine, as the old sewing would be apt to give way.

Verse 39. The old is better.] Is more agreeable to the taste or palate. The old wine, among the Rabbins, was the wine of three leaves: that is, wine three years old; because, from the time that the vine had produced that wine, it had put forth its leaves three times.

CHAPTER VI.

The disciples pluck and eat the ears of corn on the sabbath day, and the Pharisees find fault, 1, 2. Our Lord shows the true use of the sabbath, 3-5. He heals the man with the withered hand, 6-11. He goes into a mountain to pray, and calls twelve disciples, 12-16. Multitudes are instructed and healed, 17-19. Pronounces four blessings, 20-23, and four woes, 24-26. Gives various instructions about loving our enemies, being patient, gentle, kind, grateful, and merciful, 27-36. Harsh judgments censured, and charity recommended, 37, 38. The parable of the blind leading the blind, 39. Of a mote in a brother's eye, 40-42. Of the good and corrupt tree, 43, 44. The good and evil treasure of the heart, 45. The parable of the two houses, one builded on the rock, and the other on the sand, 46-49.

AND 'it came to pass on the second sabbath after the first, that he went through the corn fields; and his disciples 'plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands.

2 And certain of the Pharisees said unto them, Why do ye that 'which is not lawful to do on the sabbath days?

3 And Jesus answering them said, Have ye not read so much as this, 'what David did, when himself was an-hungred, and they which were with him;

4 How he went into the house of God, and did take and eat the shew bread, and gave also to them that were with him; ' which it is not lawful to eat, but for the priests alone?

5 And he said unto them, That the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

6 'And it came to pass also on another sabbath, that he entered into the synagogue and taught; and there was a man whose right hand was withered.

7 And the Scribes and Pharisees watched him, whether he would heal on the sabbath day; that they might find an accusation against him.

8 But he knew their thoughts, and said to the man which had the withered hand, Rise up, and stand forth in the midst. And he arose and stood forth.

9 Then said Jesus unto them, I will ask you one thing: Is it lawful on the sabbath days to do good, or to do evil? to save life, or to destroy it?

10 And looking round about upon them all, he said unto the man, Stretch forth thy hand. And he did so: and his hand was restored whole as the other.

11 And they were filled with madness; and communed one with another, what they might do to Jesus.

Verse 1. On the second sabbath after the first] In the first sabbath after the second. What does this mean? In answering this question, commentators are greatly divided. [The most recent critics adopt the opinion of Wieseler, that this was the first sabbath after the beginning of the second year of the septennary cycle.]

Verse 7. Watched him] They maliciously watched him. This is the import of the word, chap. xiv. 1, xx. 20, and in the parallel place, Mark iii. 2.

Verse 11. They were filled with madness] Pride, obstinacy, and interest, combined together, are capable of anything. When men have once framed their conscience according to their passions, madness passes for zeal, the blackest conspiracies for pious designs, and the most horrid attempts for heroic actions.

Verse 12. In prayer to God.] Or, in the prayer of God: or, in the oratory of God. So this passage is translated by many critics.

Verse 13. He chose twelve] He chose twelve out of them. Our Lord at this time had several disciples, persons who were converted to God under his ministry; and, out of these converts, he chose twelve, whom he appointed to the work of the ministry; and called them apostles, i. e., persons sent or commissioned by himself to preach the gospel to others, by which they had themselves been saved. These were favoured with extraordinary success: 1. Because they were brought to the knowledge of God themselves. 2. Because they received their commission from the great Head of the Church. And 3. Because, as he had sent them, he continued to accompany their preaching with the power of his Spirit. These three things always unite in the character of a genuine apostle.

Verse 15. Called Zelotes] It is very probable that this 12 'And it came to pass in those days, that he went out into a mountain to pray; and continued all night in prayer to God.

13 And when it was day, he called unto him his disciples; 'and of them he chose twelve, whom also he named apostles:

14 Simon ('whom he also named Peter), and Andrew his brother, James and John, Philip and Bartholomew, 15 Matthew and Thomas, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon called Zelotes, 16 And Judas 'the brother of James, and Judas Iscariot, which also was the traitor.

17 And he came down with them, and stood in the plain, and the company of his disciples, 'and a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea coast of Tyre and Sidon, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases;

18 And they that were vexed with unclean spirits; and they were healed.

19 And the whole multitude 'sought to touch him; for 'there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

20 And he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, 'Blessed be ye poor; for your's is the kingdom of God.

21 'Blessed are ye that hunger now; for ye shall be filled. 'Blessed are ye that weep now; for ye shall laugh.

22 'Blessed are ye when men shall hate you, and when they 'shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake.

23 'Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy: for, behold, your reward is great in heaven: for 'in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets.

name was first given to certain persons who were more zealous for the cause of pure and undefiled religion than the rest of their neighbours; but, like many other sects and parties who have begun well, they transferred their zeal for the essentials of religion to nonessential things, and from these to inquisitorial cruelty and murder.

Verse 17. And stood in the plain] In Matt. v. 1, which is supposed to be the parallel place, our Lord is represented as delivering this sermon on the mountain; and this has induced some to think that the sermon mentioned here by Luke, though the same in substance with that in Matthew, was delivered in a different place, and at another time; but, as Dr. Priestley justly observes, Matthew's saying that Jesus was sat down after he had gone up to the mountain, and Luke's saying that he stood on the plain when he healed the sick, before the discourse, are no inconsistencies.

Verse 22. They shall separate you] Meaning, They will excommunicate you, or separate you from their communion. Luke, having spoken of their separating or excommunicating them, continues the same idea, in saying that they would cast out their name likewise, as a thing evil in itself. By your name is meant their name as his disciples. As such, they were sometimes called Nazarenes, and sometimes Christians; and both these names were matter of reproach in the mouths of their enemies.

Verse 23. Did—unto the prophets.] See 1 Kings xviii. 4, xix. 20; 2 Chron. xxiv. 21, xxvi. 16; Neh. ix. 28.

Verses 24, 25, 26. But woe unto you that are rich] These three vers. seem to be spoken chiefly to the scribes and Pharisees, who, in order to be pleasing to all, spoke to every one what he liked best; and by flattery, flattery, and lies, found out the method of gaining and keeping the good opinion of the multitude.

24 *But woe unto you ^bthat are rich! for ^cye have received your consolation.

25 ^dWoe unto you that are full! for ye shall hunger. *Woe unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep.

26 ^eWoe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets.

27 ^fBut I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you.

28 Bless them that curse you, and ^gpray for them which despitefully use you.

29 ^hAnd unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other; ⁱand him that taketh away thy cloke forbid not to take thy coat also.

30 ^jGive to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again.

31 ^kAnd as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.

32 ^lFor if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them.

33 And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same.

34 ^mAnd if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? for sinners also lend to sinners to receive as much again.

35 But ⁿlove ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, and ^oye shall be the children of the Highest: for he is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil.

Verse 29. Thy cloak—thy coat] In Matt. v. 40, I have said that COAT signifies under garment, or strait coat; and CLOAK means upper garment, or great coat.

Verse 30. Ask them not again.] Or, Do not beg them off. This probably refers to the way in which the tax-gatherers and Roman soldiers used to spoil the people.

Or it may relate to requiring a thing speedily that had been lent, while the reason for borrowing it still continues. In Eccles. xxi. 15, it is a part of the character of a very bad man, that to-day he lendeth, and to-morrow will he ask it again.

Verse 32. For sinners also love those that love them.] I believe the word is used by St. Luke in the same sense in which tax-gatherers is used by St. Matthew, chap. v. 46, 47, and signifies heathens; not only men who have no religion, but men who acknowledge none. The religion of Christ not only corrects the errors and reforms the disorders of the fallen nature of man, but raises it even above itself: it brings it near to God; and, by universal love, leads it to frame its conduct according to that of the Sovereign Being.

Verse 34. Of whom ye hope to receive] Or, whom ye expect to return it.

Verse 35. Love ye your enemies] This is the most sublime precept ever delivered to man: a false religion durst not give a precept of this nature, because, without supernatural influence, it must be for ever impracticable. In these words of our blessed Lord we see the tenderness, sincerity, extent, disinterestedness, pattern, and issue of the love of God dwelling in man: a religion which has for its foundation the union of God and man in the same person, and the death of this august being for his enemies; which consists on earth in a reconciliation of the Creator with his creatures, and which is to subsist in heaven only in the union of the members with the head: could such a religion as this ever tolerate hatred in the soul of man, even to his most inveterate foe?

Lend, hoping for nothing again.] The Rabbins say, He who lends without usury, God shall consider him as having observed every precept.

36 ^aBe ye therefore merciful, as you Father also is merciful.

37 ^bJudge not, and ye shall not be judged: condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned: forgive, and ye shall be forgiven:

38 ^cGive, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your ^dbosom. For ^ewith the same measure that ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again.

Thou hypocrite, ^j*cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye?

43 ^k*For a good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit; neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

44 For ^l*every tree is known by his own fruit. For of thorns men do not gather figs, nor of a bramble bush gather they ^m*grapes.

Verse 36. Be ye therefore merciful] Or, compassionate. A merciful or compassionate man easily forgets injuries; pardons them without being solicited; and does not permit repeated returns of ingratitude to deter him from doing good, even to the unthankful and the unholly.

Forgive] The mercy and compassion which God recommends, extend to the forgiving of all the injuries we have received, or can receive. To imitate in this the mercy of God is not a mere counsel; since it is proposed as a necessary mean, in order to receive mercy. What man has to forgive in man is almost nothing: man's debt to God is infinite. And who acts in this matter as if he wished to receive mercy at the hand of God! The spirit of revenge is equally destitute of faith and reason.

Verse 38. Give, and it shall be given] Men live in such a state of social union as renders mutual help necessary; and, as self-interest, pride, and other corrupt passions mingle themselves ordinarily in their commerce, they cannot fail of offending one another. In civil society, men must, in order to taste a little tranquillity, resolve to bear something from their neighbours; they must suffer, pardon, and give up many things; without doing which, they must live in such a state of continual agitation as will render life itself insupportable. Without this giving and forgiving spirit, there will be nothing in civil society, and even in Christian congregations, but divisions, evil surmisings, injurious discourses, outrages, anger, vengeance, and, in a word, a total dissolution of the mystical body of Christ. Thus our interest in both worlds calls loudly upon us to GIVE and to FORGIVE.

Bosom] Or, lap. Almost all ancient nations wore long, wide, and loose garments; and when about to carry anything which their hands could not contain, they used a fold of their robe in nearly the same way as women here use their aprons.

The same measure that ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again.] The same words we find in the Jerusalem Targum on Gen. xxxiii. 26.

Verse 39. Can the blind lead the blind?] This appears evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil: for ^a of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh.

46 ^b And why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?

to have been a general proverb, and to signify that a man cannot teach what he does not understand. This is strictly true in spiritual matters. A man who is not illuminated from above, is utterly incapable of judging concerning spiritual things, and wholly unfit to be a guide to others.

Verse 40. Every one that is perfect] Or, thoroughly instructed. The noun is used by the Greek medical writers to signify the reducing a luxated or disjointed limb. It sometimes signifies to repair or mend, and in this sense it is applied to broken nets, Matt. iv. 21; Mark i. 19; but in this place, and in Heb. xiii. 21; 2 Tim. iii. 17, it means complete instruction and information.

Verse 43. Corrupt fruit] Literally, rotten fruit: but here it means such fruit as is unfit for use.

Verse 46. Lord, Lord] God judges of the heart, not by words, but by works. The tongue is fitly compared by one to a pump, which empties the heart, but nether fills nor cleanses it.

Verse 47. I will shew you] I will show you plainly. I will enable you fully to comprehend my meaning on this subject by the following parable.

CHAPTER VII.

Christ heals the servant of a centurion, who is commended for his faith, 1-10. Raises a widow's son to life at Nain; 11-17. John Baptist hears of his fame, and sends two of his disciples to inquire whether he was the Christ, 18-23. Christ's character of John, 24-30. The obstinate blindness and capriciousness of the Jews, 31-35. A Pharisee invites him to his house, where a woman anoints his head with oil, and washes his feet with her tears, 36-38. The Pharisee is offended, 39. Our Lord reproves him by a parable, and vindicates the women, 40-46; and pronounces her sins forgiven, 47-50.

NOW when he had ended all his sayings in the audience of the people, ^a he entered into Capernaum.

2 And ^b a certain centurion's servant, who was dear unto him, was sick, and ready to die.

3 And when he heard of Jesus, he sent unto him the elders of the Jews, beseeching him ^c that he would come and heal his servant.

4 And when they came to Jesus, they besought him instantly, saying, ^d That he was worthy for whom he should do this:

5 For he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue.

6 Then Jesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent friends to him, saying unto him, Lord, trouble not thyself: for I am not worthy that thou shouldst enter under my roof:

Verse 2. A certain centurion's servant] See this miracle explained on Matt. viii. 5-13.

Verse 3. Elders of the Jews] These were either magistrates in the place, or the elders of the synagogue which the centurion had built, ver. 5. In the parallel place in Matthew, he is represented as coming to Christ himself; but it is a usual form of speech in all nations, to attribute the act to a person which is done not by himself, but by his authority.

Verse 5. He loveth our nation] He is a warm friend to the Jews; and has given a full proof of his affection to them

Verse 10. Found the servant whole] The cure was the 7 Wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee: but say in a word, and my servant shall be healed.

8 For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers, and I say unto ^a one, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

9 When Jesus heard these things, he marvelled at him, and turned him about, and said unto the people that followed him, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

10 And they that were sent, returning to the house, found the servant whole that had been sick.

11 And it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain; and many of his disciples went with him, and much people.

12 Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the effect of the faith, prayer, and humility of the centurion, through which the almighty energy of Jesus Christ was conveyed to the sick man. But these very graces in the centurion were the products of grace. It is God himself who, by the gifts of his mercy, disposes the soul to receive its cure; and nothing can contribute to the reception of his grace but what is the fruit of grace itself.

Verse 11. Nain] A small city of Galilee, in the tribe of Issachar.

Verse 12. Carried out] The Jews always buried their dead without the city, except those of the family of David. No burying-places should be tolerated within cities or towns; only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her.

13 And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not.

14 And he came and touched the ^a bier: and they that bare him stood still. And he said, Young man, I say unto thee, ^b Arise.

15 And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother.

16 ^a And there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, saying, ^a That a great prophet is risen up among us; and, ^a That God hath visited his people.

17 And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the region round about.

18 ^a And the disciples of John shewed him of all these things.

19 And John, calling unto him two of his disciples, sent them to Jesus, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

20 When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

21 And in the same hour he cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits; and unto many that were blind he gave sight.

22 ^a Then Jesus answering said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; ^b how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, ^c to the poor the gospel is preached.

23 And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.

24 ^a And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak unto the people concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderness for to see? A reed shaken with the wind?

25 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they which are gorgeously apparelled, and live delicately, are in kings' courts.

26 But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet.

27 This is he, of whom it is written, ^b Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

28 For I say unto you, Among those that are born of women, there is not a greater prophet than John the baptist: but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he.

29 And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, ^a being baptized with the baptism of John.

30 But the Pharisees and lawyers ^a rejected ^a the counsel of God ^a against themselves, being not baptized of him.

31 And the Lord said, ^a Whereunto then shall I liken the men of this generation? and to what are they like?

32 They are like unto children sitting in the market-place, and calling one to another, and saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned to you, and ye have not wept.

33 For ^a John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine; and ye say, He hath a devil.

34 The Son of man is come eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners!

35 ^a But wisdom is justified of all her children.

36 ^a And one of the Pharisees desired him that he would eat with him. And he went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat.

37 And behold, a woman in the city, which was a sinner, when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an alabaster box of ointment, 38 And stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.

39 Now when the Pharisee which had bidden him saw it, he spake within himself, saying, ^a This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him: for she is a sinner.

40 And Jesus answering said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, Master, say on.

41 There was a certain creditor which had two much less in or about churches and chapels. God, decency, and health, forbid this shocking abomination.

Verse 16. God hath visited his people.] Several MSS. and Versions add, for good. Sometimes God visited his people in the way of judgment, to consume them in their transgressions; but it was now plain that he had visited them in the most tender compassion and mercy.

Verse 18. The disciples of John shewed him, &c.] It is very likely that John's disciples attended the ministry of our Lord at particular times; and this, we may suppose, was a common case among the disciples of different Jewish teachers.

Verse 19. Art thou he that should come?] Art thou the promised Messiah?

Verse 21. Unto many that were blind he gave sight.] Rather, he kindly gave sight—or, he graciously gave sight. This is the proper meaning of the original words. In all his miracles, Jesus showed the tenderest mercy and kindness: not only the cure but the manner in which he performed it, endeared him to those who were objects of his compassionate regards.

Verse 29. Justified God] Or, declared God to be just. The sense is this: John preached that the divine wrath was coming upon the Jews, from which they might flee by repentance, chap. iii. 7. The Jews, therefore, who were baptized by him, with the baptism of repentance, did thereby acknowledge that it is but justice in God to punish them for their wickedness unless they repented, and were baptized in token of it.

Verse 30. Rejected the counsel of God] Or, frustrated the will of God. The will of God was that all the inhabitants of Judea should repent at the preaching of John, be baptized and believe in Christ Jesus. Now as they did not repent, &c., at John's preaching, so they did not believe his testimony concerning Christ: thus the will, gracious counsel, or design of God, relative to their salvation, was annulled or frustrated.

Verse 31. And the Lord said] Almost every MS. of authority and importance, with most of the Versions, omit these words.

Verse 32. They are like unto children] It is probable that our Lord alludes here to some play or game among the Jewish children, no account of which is now on record.

Verse 35. Wisdom is justified, &c.] Probably the children of wisdom is a mere Hebraism here for the products or fruits of wisdom; hence the Vatican MS., one other, and some debtors: the one owed five hundred ^apence, and the other fifty.

42 And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me, therefore, which of them will love him most?

43 Simon answered and said, I suppose that he to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.

44 And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for my feet: but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head.

45 Thou gavest me no kiss: but this woman,

^a See Matt. xviii. 28.—^b Ps. xxiii. 5.—^c 1 Tim. i. 14.—

Versions, have works, instead of sons, in the parallel place, Matt. xi. 19. True wisdom shows itself by its works; folly is never found in the wise man's way, any more than wisdom is in the path of a fool. Theophylact's note on this place should not be overlooked: Wisdom is JUSTIFIED, that is, IS HONOURED, by all her children.

Verse 38. One of the Pharisees] Called Simon, ver. 40. This account is considered by many critics and commentators to be the same with that in Matt. xxvi. 6, &c.; Mark xiv. 8; and John xii. 8.

Verse 37. A woman—which was a sinner] Many suppose that this woman had been a notorious public prostitute. My own opinion is that she had been a mere heathen who dwelt in this city (probably Capernaum), who, through the ministry of Christ, had been before this converted to God, and came now to give this public testimony of her gratitude to her gracious deliverer from the darkness and guilt of sin. Many suppose this person to be the same as Mary Magdalene, but of this there is no solid proof.

Verse 38. Stood at his feet behind him] In taking their meals, the Eastern people reclined on one side; the loins and knees being bent to make the more room, the feet of each person were turned outwards behind him.

Began to wash his feet with tears] She began to water his feet—to let a shower of tears fall on them. As the Jews wore nothing like our shoes (their's being a mere sole, bound about the foot and ankle with thongs), their feet being so much exposed had frequent need of washing, and this they ordinarily did before taking their meals.

Kissed his feet] With affectionate tenderness, or kissed them again and again.

The kiss was used in ancient times as the emblem of love, religious reverence, subjection, and supplication. It has the meaning of supplication in the way of adoration, accompanied with subjection, in 1 Kings xix. 18; in Job xxxi. 27; and in Ps. ii. 12. Kissing the feet was practised also among the heathens, to express subjection of spirit and earnest supplication. It was no part of a Jew's practice; a proof that this person had been educated as a heathen.

Verse 41. A certain creditor, &c.] It is plain that in this parable our Lord means, by the creditor, God, and, by the two debtors, Simon and the woman who was present. Simon, who had the light of the law, might be considered as since the time I came in, hath not ceased to kiss my feet.

46 ^b My head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.

47 ^c Wherefore, I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.

48 And he said unto her, ^d Thy sins are forgiven.

49 And they that sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, ^e Who is this that forgiveth sins also?

50 And he said to the woman, 'Thy faith hath saved thee: go in peace.'

^f Matt. ix. 22. Mark v. 34. x. 52. Ch. viii. 48. xviii. 42.

the debtor who owed only fifty pence or denarii. The woman, not having these advantages, having no rule to regulate her actions, may be considered as the debtor who owed five hundred pence, or denarii. Notwithstanding this great disparity both were insolvent. Simon, the religious Pharisee, could no more pay his fifty to God than this poor heathen her five hundred: and if both be not freely forgiven by the divine mercy, both must finally perish.

Verse 42. Which of them will love him most?] Which is under the greater obligation and should love him most?

Verse 43. He to whom he forgave most.] By this acknowledgment he was, unknowingly to himself, prepared to receive our Lord's reproof.

Verse 44. Thou gavest me no water] In this respect Simon was sadly deficient in civil respect, whether this proceeded from forgetfulness or contempt. The custom of giving water to wash a guest's feet was very ancient. See Gen. xviii. 4, xxiv. 32; Judg. xix. 21; 1 Sam. xxv. 41.

Verse 45. Since the time I came in] Rather, Since the time SHE came in, for it is clear from verse 37, that the woman came in after Christ, having heard that he was sitting at meat in the Pharisee's house.

Verse 46. My head with oil thou didst not anoint] Anointing the head with oil was as common among the Jews as washing the face with water is among us. See Ruth iii. 3; 2 Sam. xii. 20, xiv. 2; 2 Kings iv. 2; and Ps. xxiii. 5.

Verse 47. For she loved much.] Or, THEREFORE she loved much. In the common translation her forgiveness is represented to be the consequence of her loving much, which is causing the tree to produce the root, and not the root the tree. The original seems to have the sense of therefore in Matt. xiii. 18; John viii. 44; 1 Cor. x. 17; and in the Septuagint, in Deut., xxxiii. 52; Isa. xlix. 19; Hos. ix. 15; and Eccles. v. 6.

Loved much—loveth little.] A man's love to God will be in proportion to the obligations he feels himself under to the bounty of his Maker.

Verse 48. Thy sins are forgiven.] While the Pharisee murmured, the poor penitent rejoiced.

Verse 50. Thy faith hath saved thee] Thy faith hath been the instrument of receiving the salvation which is promised to those who repent.

CHAPTER VIII.

Jesus preaches through every city and village, 1. Women minister to him, 2, 3. Instructs the multitudes by the parable of the sower, 4-8. Explains it at large to his disciples, 9-15. Directions how to improve by hearing the gospel, 16-18. His mother and brethren seek him, 19-21. He and his disciples go upon the lake, and are taken in a storm, 22-25. They arrive among the Gadarenes, 26, where he cures a demoniac, 27-39. He returns from the Gadarenes, and is requested by Jairus to heal his daughter, 40-42. On the way he cures a diseased woman, 43-48. Receives information that the daughter of Jairus is dead, 49. Exhorts the father to believe; arrives at the house, and raises the dead child to life, 50-56.

AND it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: and the twelve were with him,

2 And ^acertain women which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene, ^bout of whom went seven devils,

3 And Joanna the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which ministered unto him of their substance.

4 ^cAnd when much people were gathered together, and were come to him out of every city, he spake by a parable:

5 A sower went out to sow his seed: and as he sowed, some fell by the way side; and it was trodden down, and the fowls of the air devoured it.

6 And some fell upon a rock; and as soon as it was sprung up, it withered away, because it lacked moisture.

7 And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprung up with it, and choked it.

8 And other fell on good ground, and sprang up, and bare fruit an hundred fold. And when he had said these things, he cried, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

9 ^dAnd his disciples asked him, saying, What might this parable be?

10 And he said, Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God: but to others in parables; ^ethat seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand.

11 Now the parable is this: The seed is the word of God.

12 Those by the way side are they that hear; then cometh the devil, and taketh away the word out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved.

13 They on the rock are they, which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away.

Verse 1. Throughout every city and village] That is, of Galilee.

Verse 2. Out of whom went seven devils] Who had been possessed in a most extraordinary manner; probably a case of inveterate lunacy, brought on by the influence of evil spirits. The number seven may here express the superlative degree.

Mary Magdalene is commonly thought to have been a prostitute before she came to the knowledge of Christ, and then to have been a remarkable penitent. So historians and painters represent her: but neither from this passage, nor from any other of the New Testament, can such a supposition be legitimately drawn.

There is indeed the strongest presumptive proof against it, for, if she ever had been such, it would have been contrary to every rule of prudence, and every dictate of wisdom, for Christ and his apostles to have permitted such a person to associate with them, however fully she might have been converted to God, and however exemplary her life, at that time, might have been. I conclude that the common opinion is a vile slander on the character of one of the best women mentioned in the gospel of God; it is highly probable that she was a person of great respectability in that place; and a person on whose conduct or character the calumniating Jews could cast no aspersions.

Verse 3. Herod's steward] Though the original word signifies sometimes the inspector or overseer of a province, and sometimes a tutor of children, yet here it seems to signify the overseer of Herod's domestic affairs: the steward of his household.

14 And that which fell among thorns are they which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection.

15 But that on the good ground are they which, in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience.

16 ^aNo man, when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth it under a bed; but setteth it on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light.

17 ^bFor nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest; neither any thing hid, that shall not be known and come abroad.

18 Take heed therefore how ye hear; ^cfor whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have.

19 Then came to him his mother and his brethren, and could not come at him for the press.

20 And it was told him by certain which said, The mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to see thee.

21 And he answered and said unto them, My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God, and do it.

22 Now it came to pass on a certain day, that he went into a ship with his disciples: and he said unto them, Let us go over unto the other side of the lake. And they launched forth.

23 But as they sailed he fell asleep; and there came down a storm of wind on the lake; and they were filled with water, and were in jeopardy.

24 And they came to him, and awoke him, saying, Master, master, we perish. Then he arose, and rebuked the wind and the raging of the water: and they ceased, and there was a calm.

25 And he said unto them, Where is your faith? And they being afraid wondered, saying one to another, What manner of man is this! for he commandeth even the winds and water, and they obey him.

Unto him.] Instead of to him, meaning Christ, many of the best MSS. and Versions have to them, meaning both our Lord and the twelve apostles, see ver. 1. This is unquestionably the true meaning.

Verse 5. A sower went out to sow] See Matt. xiii. 1-23.

Verse 15. With patience.] Rather, with perseverance. The good ground, because it is good, strong, and vigorous, continues to bear: bad or poor ground cannot produce a good crop, and besides, it is very soon exhausted. From this we may learn that the perseverance of the saints, as it is termed, necessarily implies that they continue to bring forth fruit to the glory of God. Those who are not fruitful are not in a state of perseverance.

Verse 17. For nothing is secret, &c.] Whatever I teach you in private, ye shall teach publicly.

Verse 18. Even that which he seemeth to have.] Or rather, even what ye have. The common version seems to me to contradict itself. To seem to have a thing, is only to have it in appearance, and not in reality: but what is possessed in appearance only, can only be taken away in appearance; therefore on the one side there is no gain, and on the other side no loss. It is evident that what he seemeth to have, here is equivalent to what he hath, in the parallel places, Mark iv. 25; Matt. xiii. 12, xxv. 29; and in Luke xix. 26. It is evident, also, that these persons had something which might be taken away from them. For the divine seed was planted in their hearts, and had already produced some good effects. The original word is often used as an emphatic: and it often strengthens the sense, and is thus used by the 26 * And they arrived at the country of the Gadarenes, which is over against Galilee.

27 And when he went forth to land, there met him out of the city a certain man, which had devils long time, and ware no clothes, neither abode in any house, but in the tombs.

28 When he saw Jesus, he cried out, and fell down before him, and with a loud voice said, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God most high? I beseech thee, torment me not.

29 (For he had commanded the unclean spirit to come out of the man. For oftentimes it had caught him; and he was kept bound with chains and in fetters; and he brake the bands, and was driven of the devil into the wilderness.)

30 And Jesus asked him, saying, What is thy name? And he said, Legion: because many devils were entered into him.

31 And they besought him that he would not command them to go out ^b into the deep.

32 And there was there a herd of many swine feeding on the mountain: and they besought him that he would suffer them to enter into them. And he suffered them.

33 Then went the devils out of the man, and entered into the swine: and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake, and were choked.

34 When they that fed them saw what was done, they fled, and went and told it in the city and in the country.

35 Then they went out to see what was done; and came to Jesus, and found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid.

36 They also which saw it, told them by what means he that was possessed of the devils was healed.

37 * Then the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about, ^d besought him to depart from them; for they were taken with great fear; and he went up into the ship, and returned back again.

38 Now * the man out of whom the devils were departed, besought him that he might be with him; but Jesus sent him away, saying, 39 Return to thine own house, and shew how great things God hath done unto thee. And he went his way, and published throughout the whole city, how great things Jesus had done unto him.

very best Greek writers. [The so-called possession was merely the fruits of the imagination. Lange.]

Verse 23. There came down a storm of wind—and they—were in jeopardy. This a parallel passage to that in Jon. i. 4.

Verse 25. Where is your faith? Ye have a power to believe, and yet do not exercise it! Depend on God. Many are looking for more faith without using that which they have. It is as possible to hide this talent as any other.

Verse 27. A certain man See the parallel places, Matt. viii. 28-34; Mark v. 1-20.

Verse 28. Jesus, thou Son of God most High The words Jesus and God are both omitted here by several MSS. I think it is very likely that the demons did not pronounce names which were of such dreadful import to themselves. [The words appear in the best MSS.]

Verse 31. And they besought him that he would not command them to go into the deep. In the Chaldaic philosophy, mention is made of certain material demons, who are permitted to wander about on the earth, and are horribly 40 And it came to pass, that, when Jesus was returned, the people gladly received him; for they were all waiting for him.

41 * And, behold, there came a man named Jairus, and he was a ruler of the synagogue; and he fell down at Jesus' feet, and besought him that he would come into his house:

43 * And a woman, having an issue of blood twelve years, which had spent all her living upon physicians, neither could be healed of any,

44 Came behind him, and touched the border of his garment; and immediately her issue of blood stancheth.

45 And Jesus said, Who touched me? When all denied, Peter and they that were with him said, Master, the multitude throng thee and press thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me?

46 And Jesus said, Somebody hath touched me; for I perceive ^b that virtue is gone out of me.

47 And when the woman saw that she was not hid, she came trembling, and falling down before him, she declared unto him before all the people for what cause she had touched him, and how she was healed immediately.

48 And he said unto her, Daughter, be of good comfort: thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace.

49 * While he yet spake, there cometh one from the ruler of the synagogue's house, saying to him, Thy daughter is dead; trouble not the Master.

50 But when Jesus heard it, he answered him, saying, Fear not; believe only, and she shall be made whole.

51 And when he came into the house, he suffered no man to go in, save Peter, and James, and John, and the father and the mother of the maiden.

52 And all wept, and bewailed her: but he said, Weep not; she is not dead, ^c but sleepeth.

53 And they laughed him to scorn, knowing that she was dead.

54 And he put them all out, and took her by the hand, and called, saying, Maid, ^d arise.

55 And her spirit came again, and she arose straightway: and he commanded to give her meat.

56 And her parents were astonished; but ^e he charged them that they should tell no man what was done.

afraid of being sent into abysses and subterranean places.

Verse 33. Then went the devils out of the man, and entered into the swine Some critics and commentators would have us to understand all this of the man himself, who they say, was a most outrageous maniac, and that, being permitted by our Lord, he ran after the swine, and drove them all down a precipice into the sea! This is solemn trifling indeed; or, at least, trifling with solemn things.

Verse 34. They fled, and went and told it They went, is omitted by every MS. of repute, and by the best of the ancient Versions.

Verse 40. Gladly received him Our translators needed not to have put gladly in Italics; it is expressed in the text.

Verse 41. A man named Jairus See on Matt. ix. 18-26, and Mark v. 22-43.

Verse 42. The people thronged him. Almost suffocated him—so great was the throng about him.

Verse 46. I perceive that virtue This divine emanation did not proceed always from Christ, as necessarily as odours do from plants, for then all who touched him must have been equally partakers of it. Of the many that touched him, this Woman and none else received this divine virtue ; and why ? Because she came in faith. Faith alone attracts and receives the energetic influence of God at all times. There would be more miracles, at least of spiritual healing, were there more faith among those who are called believers.

Verse 54. He put them all out] That is, the pipers and those who made a noise, weeping and lamenting. Pompous funeral ceremonies are ridiculous in themselves, and entirely opposed to the spirit and simplicity of the religion of Christ.

Verse 55. And he commanded to give her meat.] Though she was raised to life by a miracle, she was not to be preserved by a miracle. Nature is God's great instrument, and he delights to work by it ; nor will he do anything by his sovereign power, in the way of miracle, that can be effected by his ordinary providence. Again, God will have us be workers together with him : he provides food for us, but he does not eat for us ; we eat for ourselves, and are thus nourished on the bounty that God has provided. So, God provides salvation for a lost world, and bestows it on every penitent believing soul ; but he neither repents nor believes for any man.

CHAPTER IX.

Christ sends his apostles to preach and work miracles, 1-6. Herod, hearing of the fame of Jesus, is perplexed ; some suppose that John Baptist is risen from the dead ; others, that Elijah or one of the old prophets was come to life, 7-9. The apostles return and relate the success of their mission. He goes to a retired place, and the people follow him, 10, 11. He feeds five thousand men with five loaves and two fishes, 12-17. He asks his disciples what the public think of him, 18-21. Foretels his passion, 22. Shows the necessity of self-denial, and the importance of salvation, 23-25. Threatens those who deny him before men, 26. The transfiguration, 27-36. Cures a demoniac, 37-43. Again foretels his passion, 44, 45. The disciples contend who shall be greatest, 46-48. Of the person who cast out devils in Christ's name, but did not associate with the disciples, 49, 50. Of the Samaritans who would not receive him, 51-56. Of the man who wished to follow Jesus, 57, 58. He calls another disciple, who asks permission first to bury his father, 59. Our Lord's answer, 60-62.

THEN ¹he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases.

2 And ²he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick.

3 And he said unto them, Take nothing for your journey, neither staves, nor scrip, neither bread, neither money ; neither have two coats apiece.

4 And whatsoever house ye enter into, there abide, and thence depart.

5 And whosoever will not receive you, when ye go out of that city, ⁵shake off the very dust from your feet for a testimony against them.

6 And they departed, and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing every where.

7 Now Herod the tetrarch heard of all that was done by him : and he was perplexed, because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead :

8 And of some, that Elias had appeared ; and of others, that one of the old prophets was risen again.

9 And Herod said, John have I beheaded : but Verse 1. Power and authority] The power to work miracles ; and that authority by which the whole demoniac system was to be subjected to them. Luke mentions both demons and diseases ; therefore he was either mistaken, or demons and diseases are not the same. The treatment of these two was not the same : the demons were to be cast out, the diseases to be healed.

Verse 3. Neither have two coats] Show that in all things ye are ambassadors for God ; and go on his charges.

Verse 4. There abide, and thence depart.] That is, remain in that lodging till ye depart from that city.

who is this, of whom I hear such things ? ¹And he desired to see him.

10 And the apostles, when they were returned, told him all that they had done. And he took them, and went aside privately into a desert place belonging to the city called Bethsaida ;

11 And the people, when they knew it, followed him : and he received them, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing.

12 And when the day began to wear away, then came the twelve, and said unto him, Send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge, and get victuals : for we are here in a desert place.

13 But he said unto them, Give ye them to eat. And they said, We have no more but five loaves and two fishes ; except we should go and buy meat for all this people.

14 For they were about five thousand men. And he said to his disciples, Make them sit down by fifties in a company.

15 And they did so, and made them all sit down.

It is a metaphor taken from a traveller, who, in his journey, meets with several paths, one only of which leads to the place whither he would go ; and, not knowing which to take, he is distressed with perplexity and doubt.

Verse 11. The people—followed him] Observe here five grand effects of divine grace. 1. The people are drawn to follow him. 2. He kindly receives them. 3. He instructs them in the things of God. 4. He heals all their diseases. 5. He feeds their bodies and their souls.

Verse 12. Send the multitude away] See the parallel places, Matt. xiv. 15-21 ; Mark vi. 36-44.

Verse 16. Then he took the five loaves] A minister of the 16 Then he took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, he blessed them, and brake, and gave to the disciples to set before the multitude.

17 And they did eat, and were all filled: and there was taken up of fragments that remained to them, twelve baskets.

18 * And it came to pass, as he was alone praying, his disciples were with him: and he asked them, saying, Whom say the people that I am?

19 They answering said, ^b John the Baptist; but some say, Elias; and others say, that one of the old prophets is risen again.

20 He said unto them, But whom say ye that I am? * Peter answering said, The Christ of God.

21 * And he straitly charged them, and commanded them to tell no man that thing;

22 Saying, * The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be slain, and be raised the third day.

23 * And he said to them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me.

24 For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it.

25 * For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world, and lose himself, or be cast away?

26 ^b For whosoever shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels.

27 * But I tell you of a truth, there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God.

28 * And it came to pass about an eight days after these * sayings, he took Peter, and John, and James, and went up into a mountain to pray.

29 And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistening.

30 And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias:

31 Who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem.

32 But Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep: and when they were awake, they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him.

33 And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: not knowing what he said.

34 While he thus spake, there came a cloud, and overshadowed them: and they feared as they entered into the cloud:

35 And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, * This is my beloved Son: * hear him.

36 And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone. * And they kept it close, and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen.

37 * And it came to pass, that on the next day, when they were come down from the hill, much people met him.

38 And, behold, a man of the company cried out, saying, Master, I beseech thee, look upon my son: for he is mine only child.

39 And, lo, a spirit taketh him, and he suddenly crieth out; and it teareth him that he foameth again, and bruising him, hardly departeth from him.

40 And I besought thy disciples to cast him out: and they could not.

41 And Jesus answering said, O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you, and suffer you? Bring thy son hither.

42 And as he was yet a coming, the devil threw him down, and tare him. And Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, and healed the child, and delivered him again to his father.

43 And they were all amazed at the mighty power of God. But while they wondered every one at all things which Jesus did, he said unto his disciples, 44 * Let these sayings sink down into your ears: for the Son of man shall be delivered into the hands of men.

45 * But they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not: and they feared to ask him of that saying.

46 * Then there arose a reasoning among them, which of them should be greatest.

47 And Jesus, perceiving the thought of their heart, took a child, and set him by him,

48 And said unto them, * Whosoever shall receive

Or be cast away?] Or receive spiritual damage. I have added the word spiritual here, which I conceive to be necessarily implied. Because, if a man receive only temporal damage in some respect or other, yet gaining the whole world must amply compensate him. But if he should receive spiritual damage—hurt to his soul in the smallest degree, the possession of the universe could not indemnify him.

Verse 39. A spirit taketh him, and he suddenly crieth out] This very phrase is used by heathen writers, when they speak of supernatural influence.

Verse 43. The mighty power] They plainly saw that it was a case in which any power inferior to that of God could be of no avail; and they were deeply struck with the majesty of God manifested in the conduct of the blessed Jesus.

Verse 44. Let these sayings sink down into your ears] Or, put these words into your ears. To other words, you may lend occasional attention—but to what concerns my sufferings and death you must ever listen.

Verse 46. There arose a reasoning] A dialogue took place—one inquired, and another answered, and so on.

Verse 49. We forbade him] See Mark ix. 38, &c.

Verse 51. He steadfastly set his face] That is, after proper and mature deliberation, he chose now to go up to Jerusalem, and firmly determined to accomplish his design.

this child in my name receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me receiveth him that sent me: *for he that is least among you all, the same shall be great.

49 ^b And John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us.

50 And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not: for *he that is not against us is for us.

51 And it came to pass, when the time was come that ^a he should be received up, he stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, 52 And sent messengers before his face; and they went, and entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him.

53 And *they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem.

54 And when his disciples James and John saw this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as ^c Elias did?

55 But he turned, and rebuked them, and said,

Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of.

56 For *the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village.

57 ^b And it came to pass, that, as they went in the way, a certain man said unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

58 And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

59 ^c And he said unto another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

60 Jesus said unto him, Let the dead bury their dead: but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.

61 And another also said, Lord, ^d I will follow thee; but let me first go bid them farewell, which are at home at my house.

62 And Jesus said unto him, No man having put his hand to the plough, ^e and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

Verse 52. Sent messengers] Probably James and John.

Verse 53. His face was] They saw he was going up to Jerusalem to keep the feast (it was the feast of tabernacles, John vii. 2); and, knowing him thereby to be a Jew, they would afford nothing for his entertainment; for, in religious matters, the Samaritans and Jews had no dealings, see John iv. 9. The Samaritans were a kind of mongrel heathens; they feared Jehovah, and served other gods, 2 Kings xvii. 34. They apostatized from the true religion, and persecuted those who were attached to it, see Matt. xvi. 1. Those only who have deserted the truth of God, or who are uninfluenced by it, hate them who embrace and act by it. When a man has once decidedly taken the road to heaven, he can have but little credit any longer in the world, 1 John iii. 1.

Verse 54. That we command fire] Vengeance belongs to the Lord. What we suffer for his sake, should be left to himself to reprove or punish. The insult is offered to him, not to us.

Verse 55. Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of.] Ye do not consider that the present is a dispensation of infinite mercy and love; and that the design of God is not to destroy sinners, but to give them space to repent, that he may save them unto eternal life. And ye do not consider that the seal which you feel springs from an evil principle, being more concerned for your own honour than for the honour of God.

Verse 56. And they went to another village.] Which probably did entertain them: being, perhaps, without the Samaritan borders.

Verse 57. A certain man] He was a scribe. See on Matt. viii. 19-22. It is probable that this took place when Christ was at Capernaum, as Matthew represents it, and not on the way to Jerusalem through Samaria.

Verse 61. Another also said] This circumstance is not mentioned by any of the other Evangelists; and Matthew alone mentions the former case, ver. 57, 58.

Let me first go bid them farewell, which are at home] Permit me to set in order my affairs at home. Those who understand the Greek text will see, at once, that it will bear this translation well; and that this is the most natural.

Verse 62. Put his hand to the plough] Can any person properly discharge the work of the ministry who is engaged in secular employments? A farmer and a minister of the gospel are incompatible characters. As a person who holds the plough cannot keep on a straight furrow if he look behind him; so he who is employed in the work of the ministry cannot do the work of an Evangelist, if he turn his desires to worldly profits.

CHAPTER X.

Christ appoints seventy disciples to go before him, two by two, to preach, heal, &c., 1-12. Pronounces woes on Chorazin and Capernaum, 13-16. The seventy return, and give account of their mission, 17-20. Christ rejoices that the things which were hidden from the wise and prudent had been revealed unto babes, and shows the great privileges of the gospel, 21-24. A lawyer inquires how he shall inherit eternal life, and is answered, 25-29. The story of the good Samaritan, 30-37. The account of Martha and Mary, 38-42.

AFTER these things, the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face, into every city and place, whither he himself would come.

2 Therefore said he unto them, ^b The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few: ^c pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest.

3 Go your ways: ^d behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves.

4 ^e Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes: and ^f salute no man by the way.

5 ^g And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house.

6 And if the son of peace be there, your peace shall rest upon it: if not, it shall turn to you again.

7 ^h And in the same house remain, ⁱ eating and drinking such things as they give: for ^j the labourer is worthy of his hire. Go not from house to house.

8 And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you:

9 ^k And heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, ^l The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

10 But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, 11 ^m Even the very dust of your City, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding, be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

Verse 1. The Lord appointed other seventy] Rather, seventy others, not other seventy as our translation has it, which seems to intimate that he had appointed seventy before this time, though, probably, the word other has a reference to the twelve chosen first: he not only chose twelve disciples to be constantly with him; but he chose seventy others to go before him. Our blessed Lord formed everything in his church on the model of the Jewish church, and why? Because it was the pattern shown by God himself, the divine form, which pointed out the heavenly substance which now began to be established in its place. As he before had chosen twelve apostles, in reference to the twelve patriarchs, he now publicly appointed seventy others, as Moses did the seventy elders, whom he associated with himself to assist him in the government of the people. Exod. xviii. 19, xxiv. 1-9. These Christ sent by two and two: 1. To teach them the necessity of concord among the ministers of righteousness. 2. That in the mouths of two witnesses everything might be established. And 3. That they might comfort and support each other in their difficult labour.

Verse 2. That he would send forth] There seems to be an allusion here to the case of reapers, who, though the harvest was perfectly ripe, yet were in no hurry to cut it down.

Verse 4. Salute no man by the way] According to a canon of the Jews, a man who was about any sacred work was exempted from all civil obligations for the time; forasmuch as obedience to God was of infinitely greater consequence than the cultivation of private friendships, or the returning of civil compliments.

Verse 6. The Son of peace] In the Jewish style, a man who has any good or bad quality is called the son of it.

Son of peace in the text not only means a peaceable, quiet man, but one also of good report for his uprightness and benevolence.

Verse 9. The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you] Is just upon you. This was the general text on which they were to preach all their sermons.

Verse 15. To hell] To Hades.

12 But I say unto you, that ^a it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city.

13 ^b Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! ^c for if the mighty works had been done in Tyre and Sidon, which have been done in you, they had a great while ago repented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes.

14 But it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the judgment, than for you.

15 ^d And thou, Capernaum, which art ^e exalted to heaven, ^f shalt be thrust down to hell.

16 ^g He that heareth thee, heareth me; and ^h he that despiseth thee, despiseth me; ⁱ and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me.

17 And ^j the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name.

18 And he said unto them, ^k I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven.

19 Behold, ^l I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy; and nothing shall by any means hurt you.

20 Notwithstanding, in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice, because ^m your names are written in heaven.

21 ⁿ In that hour Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes: even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.

Verse 18. I beheld Satan] Or, Satan himself—the very Satan, the supreme adversary—falling as lightning with the utmost suddenness, as a flash of lightning falls from the clouds, and at the same time in the most observable manner. The fall was both very sudden and very apparent. Thus should the fall of the corrupt Jewish state be, and thus was the fall of idolatry in the Gentile world.

Verse 19. To tread on serpents, &c.] It is possible that by serpents and scorpions our Lord means the scribes and Pharisees, whom he calls serpents, and a brood of vipers, Matt. xxiii. 33. Because, through the subtlety and venom of the old serpent, the devil, they opposed him and his doctrine; and, by trampling on these, it is likely that he means, they should get a complete victory over such: as it was an ancient custom to trample on the kings and generals who had been taken in battle, to signify the complete conquest which had been gained over them.

Verse 20. Because your names are written in heaven] This form of speech is taken from the ancient custom of writing the names of all the citizens in a public register, that the several families might be known, and the inheritances properly preserved. It appears also probable, that when any person died, or behaved improperly, his name was sought out and erased from the book. To this custom of blotting the names out of the public registers, there appear to be allusions, Exod. xxxii. 32; Rev. iii. 5; Deut. ix. 14, xxv. 19, xxix. 20; 2 Kings xiv. 27; Ps. lxi. 28, cix. 13, and in other places.

Verse 21. Rejoiced in spirit] Was truly and heartily joyous: felt an inward triumph.

I thank thee] The thanks are meant to be given to God for revealing them to babes, not for hiding them from the others.

Thou hast hid] That is, thou hast not revealed them to the Scribes and Pharisees, who idolised their own wisdom; but thou hast revealed them to the simple and humble of heart.

Verse 29. Willing to justify himself] He imagined that as he had never been deficient in his conduct to any person 22 * All ^b things are delivered to me of my Father: and ^c no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father; and who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him.

23 And he turned him unto his disciples, and said privately, ^a Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see:

24 For I tell you, ^a that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

25 And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, ^a Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

26 He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou?

27 And he answering, said, ^a Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and ^b thy neighbour as thyself.

28 And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and ^a thou shalt live.

29 But he, willing to ^a justify himself, said unto Jesus, and who is my neighbour?

30 And Jesus answering said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead.

31 And by chance there came down a certain priest that way: and when he saw him, ^a he passed by on the other side.

32 And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side.

33 But a certain ^a Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him, 34 And went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him.

35 And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two ^a pence, and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him: whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee.

36 Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?

37 And he said, He that shewed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise.

38 Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village: and a certain woman named ^a Martha received him into her house.

39 And she had a sister, called Mary, ^a which also ^a sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word.

40 But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him, and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me.

41 And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, ^a thou art careful and troubled about many things.

42 But ^a one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

of his own nation, he had amply fulfilled the law. This is the sense in which the Jews understood the word neighbour, as may be seen from Lev. xxix. 15, 16, 17, and 18. But our Lord shows here, that the acts of kindness which a man is bound to perform to his neighbour when in distress, he should perform to any person, of whatever nation, religion, or kindred, whom he finds in necessity.

Verse 30. And Jesus answering] Rather, Then Jesus took him up. This I believe to be the meaning; he threw out a challenge, and our Lord took him up on his own ground.

A certain man went down from Jerusalem] This was the most public road in all Judea, as it was the grand thoroughfare between these two cities for the courses of priests, twelve thousand of whom are said to have resided at Jericho.

Fell among thieves] At this time the whole land of Judea was much infested with hordes of banditti.

Verse 31. And by chance] The phrase properly means the coincidence of time and circumstance.

Verses 31 and 32. Priest and Levite are mentioned here, partly because they were the most frequent travellers on this road, and partly to show that these were the persons who, from the nature of their office, were most obliged to perform works of mercy; and from whom a person in distress had a right to expect immediate succour and comfort. Deut. xxi. 1-4.

Verse 33. Samaritan is mentioned merely to show that he was a person from whom a Jew had no right to expect any help or relief, because of the enmity which subsisted between the two nations.

Verse 34. Pouring in oil and wine] These, beaten together, appear to have been used formerly as a common medicine for fresh wounds.

Verse 35. Two pence] Two denarii, about fifteen pence English; and which, probably, were at that time of ten times more value there than so much is with us now.

Verse 36. Which—was neighbour] Which fulfilled the duty which one neighbour owes to another?

Verse 37. He that shewed mercy] Or, so much mercy. His prejudices would not permit him to name the Samaritan,

* Ps. xxxviii. 11.—^a John iv. 9.—^a See Matt. xx. 2.—^a John xi. 1. xii. 2. 3.—^a 1 Cor. vii. 39, &c.—^a Ch. viii. 35. Acts xxii. 3.—^a Matt. vii. 21. Ps. xxvii. 1.—^a Matt. vi. 19, 21. xvi. 26. 2 Cor. v. 16.

yet his conscience obliged him to acknowledge that he was the only righteous person of the three.

Go, and do thou likewise.] Be even to thy enemy in distress as kind, humane, and merciful, as this Samaritan was.

Verse 38. A certain village] If this village was Bethany, where Martha and Mary lived, at less than two miles' distance from Jerusalem, see John xi. 1, 18; xii. 2, then this must have happened later than Luke places it; because, in chap. xix. 29, he represents Jesus as having arrived after this at Bethany; and what is said in chap. xiii. 23, and xvii. 11, seems to confirm that this visit of Jesus to Martha and Mary ought to be placed later.

Received him] Kindly received, she received him in a friendly manner, under her roof; and entertained him hospitably. So the word is used in the best Greek writers. Martha is supposed by some to have been a widow, with whom her brother Lazarus and sister Mary lodged.

Verse 39. Sat at Jesus' feet] This was the posture of the Jewish scholars, while listening to the instructions of the Rabbins.

Verse 40. Martha was cumbered] She was harassed with different cares and employments at the same time; one drawing one way, and another, another: a proper description of a worldly mind. But in Martha's favour it may be justly said, that all her anxiety was to provide suitable and timely entertainment for our Lord and his disciples; for this is the sense in which the word serving should be taken. And we should not, on the merest supposition, attribute earthly-mindedness to a woman whose character stands unimpeachable in the gospel; and who, by entertaining Christ and his disciples, and providing liberally for them, gave the highest proof that she was influenced by liberality and benevolence, and not by parsimony or covetousness.

Help me.] The idea is taken from two pillars meeting together at the top, exactly over the centre of the distance between their bases, and thus mutually supporting each other.

Verse 41. Thou art careful and troubled] Thou art distracted, thy mind is divided (see on Matt. xiii. 22), in consequence of which, thou art disturbed, thy spirit is thrown into a tumult.

About many things.] Getting a variety of things ready for this entertainment, much more than are necessary on such an occasion.

Verse 42. One thing is needful] One single dish, the simplest and plainest possible, is such as best suits me and my disciples, whose meat and drink it is to do the will of our heavenly Father.

Mary hath chosen that good part] That is, of hearing my word, of which she shall not be deprived; it being at present of infinitely greater importance to attend to my teaching than to attend to any domestic concerns. Our Lord both preached and practised the doctrine of self-denial; he and his disciples were contented with a little, and sumptuous entertainments are condemned by the spirit and design of his gospel.

I believe the above to be the true meaning of these verses; but others have taken a somewhat different sense from them: especially when they suppose that by one thing needful, our Lord means the salvation of the soul. To attend to this is undoubtedly the most necessary of all things, and should be the first, the grand concern of every human spirit; but in my opinion it is not the meaning of the words in the text. It is only prejudice from the common use of the words in this way that could make such an interpretation tolerable. [But scholarship as well as prejudice, leads to the conclusion that the "one thing" cannot be anything else than what the Lord himself calls the "good part."]

Martha has been blamed, by incautious people, as possessing a carnal, worldly spirit; and as Mary Magdalene has been made the chief of all prostitutes, so has Martha of all the worldly-minded. Through her affectionate respect for our Lord and his disciples, and through that alone she erred. There is not the slightest intimation that she was either worldly-minded or careless about her soul; nor was she at this time improperly employed, only so far as the abundance of her affection led her to make a greater provision than was necessary on the occasion. Nor are our Lord's words to be understood as a reproof; they are a kind and tender expostulation, tending to vindicate the conduct of Mary. The utmost that can be said on the subject is, Martha was well employed, but Mary, on this occasion, better.

CHAPTER XI.

Christ teaches his disciples to pray, 1-4. Shows the necessity of importunity in prayer, 5-13. Casts out a dumb demon, 14. The Jews ascribe this to the power of Beelzebub; our Lord vindicates his conduct, 15-23. Miserable state of the Jews, 24-26. Who they are that are truly blessed, 27, 28. He preaches to the people, 29-36. A Pharisee invites him to dine with him, who takes offence because he washed not his hands, 37, 38. Our Lord exposes their hypocrisy, 39-44. He denounces woes against the lawyers, 45-52. The Scribes and Pharisees are greatly offended, and strive to entangle him in his words, 53, 54.

AND it came to pass, that, as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples.

2 And he said unto them, When ye pray, say, * Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth.

3 Give us ^b day by day our daily bread.

4 And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil.

5 And he said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves:

6 For a friend of mine ^c in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him?

7 And he from within shall answer and say,

Trouble me not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed; I cannot rise and give thee.

8 I say unto you, ^d Though he will not rise and give him, because he is his friend, yet because of his importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth.

9 * And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

10 For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

11 ^e If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent?

12 Or if he shall ask an egg, will he ^f offer him a scorpion?

* Matt. vi. 9.—^b Or, for the day.—^c Or, Ch. xviii. 1. &c.

* Matt. vii. 7. xxi. 32. Mark xi. 24. John xv. 7. James i. 6. 1 John iii. 22.—^d Matt. vii. 9.—^e Gr. give.

Verse 1-5. Teach us to pray] The prayer related here by Luke is not precisely the same as that mentioned by Matthew; and indeed it is not likely that it was given at the same time.

Verse 4. Lead us not into temptation, &c.] Deliver us from evil is a very inadequate rendering of the original, literally, Deliver us from the wicked one.

Verse 6. In his journey is come] Or, perhaps more literally, A friend of mine is come to me out of his way, which renders the case more urgent. This was a strong reason why he should have prompt relief.

Verse 7. My children are with me in bed] Or, I and my children are in bed; this seems translation.

Verse 9. And (or, therefore) I say unto you, Ask] Be importunate with God, not so much to prevail on him to save you, as to get yourselves brought into a proper disposition to receive that mercy which he is ever disposed to give.

Verse 12. Offer him a scorpion] Perhaps the word scorpion here may be used for any kind of serpent that proceeds from an egg, or the word egg may be understood: the common snake is oviparous; it brings forth a number of eggs, out of which the young ones are hatched. If he ask an egg, will he, for one that might nourish him, gave him that of a serpent.

Verse 13. The Holy Spirit] Or, as several MSS. have it, the good spirit.

13. If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?

14. And he was casting out a devil, and it was dumb. And it came to pass, when the devil was gone out, the dumb spake; and the people wondered.

15. But some of them said, ^b He casteth out devils through ^c Beelzebub the chief of the devils.

16. And others, tempting him, ^d sought of him a sign from heaven.

17. But ^e he, knowing their thoughts, said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and a house divided against a house falleth.

18. If Satan also be divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand? because ye say that I cast out devils through Beelzebub.

19. And if I ^f by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your sons cast them out? therefore shall they be your judges.

20. But if I ^g with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you.

21. ^h When a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace:

22. But ⁱ when a stronger than he shall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and divideth his spoils.

23. ^j He that is not with me is against me: and he that gathereth not with me scattereth.

24. ^k When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest; and finding none, he saith, I will return unto my house whence I came out.

25. And when he cometh, he findeth it swept and garnished.

26. Then goeth he, and taketh to him seven other spirits more wicked than himself; and they enter in, and dwell there: and ^l the last state of that man is worse than the first.

Verse 27. A certain woman—lifted up her voice, and said] It was very natural for a woman, who was probably a mother, to exclaim thus. True happiness is found in hearing the glad tidings of salvation by Christ Jesus, and keeping them in a holy heart, and practising them in an unblameable life.

Verse 29. This is an evil generation] Or, This is a wicked race of men.

Verse 33. No man, when he hath lighted, &c.] See on Matt. v. 15. Our Lord intimates that if he worked a miracle among such an obstinate people, who were determined to disbelieve every evidence of the Messiahship, he should act as a man who lighted a candle and then covered it with a bushel, which must prevent the accomplishment of the end for which it was lighted.

Verse 34. The light of the body is the eye] Or, the eye is the lamp of the body.

Verse 36. The whole shall be full of light] Or, altogether enlightened; i. e., when the eye is perfect, it enlightens the whole body.

When the light of Christ dwells fully in the heart, it extends its influence to every thought, word, and action; and directs its possessor how he is to act in all places and circumstances. The doctrine that is contrary to the gospel may say, Ignorance is the mother of devotion; but Christ shows that there can be no devotion without heavenly light. Ignorance is the mother of superstition; but with this the heavenly light has nothing to do.

Verse 37. To dine] The word signifies the first eating of 27. And it came to pass, as he spake these things, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto him, ^a Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked.

28. But he said, Yea, ^b rather, blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it.

29. ^c And when the people were gathered thick together, he began to say, This is an evil generation: they seek a sign; and there shall no sign be given it, but the sign of Jonas the prophet.

30. For as ^d Jonas was a sign unto the Ninevites, so shall also the Son of man be to this generation.

31. ^e The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the utmost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here.

32. The men of Nineveh shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for ^f they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

33. ^g No man, when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a secret place, neither under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light.

34. ^h The light of the body is the eye: therefore, when thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light; but when thine eye is evil, thy body also is full of darkness.

35. Take heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not darkness.

36. If thy whole body therefore be full of light, having no part dark, the whole shall be full of light, as when ⁱ the bright shining of a candle doth give thee light.

37. And as he spake, a certain Pharisee besought him to dine with him: and he went in, and sat down to meat.

the day. The Jews made but two meals in the day. Their chief meal was their supper, after the heat of the day was over; and the same was the principal meal among the Greeks and Romans.

Verse 40. Did not he that made that which is without] God has made you such, both as to your bodies and souls, as he intended should show forth his praise; but can you think that the purpose of God can be accomplished by you, while you only attend to external legal purifications, your hearts being full of rapine and wickedness? How unthinking are you to imagine that God can be pleased with this outward purification, when all within is unholy!

Verse 41. Give alms of such things as ye have] Meaning either what was within the dishes spoken of before; or what was within their houses, or power: or what they had at hand, for so the phrase is used by the purest Greek writers.

Verse 43. Ye love the uppermost seats] Every one of them affected to be a ruler in the synagogues.

Verse 44. Ye are as graves which appear not] Like hidden tombs, graves which were not distinguished by any outward decorations, and were not elevated above the ground, so that those who walked over them did not consider what corruption was within; so they, under the veil of hypocrisy, covered their iniquities, so that those who had any intercourse or connexion with them did not perceive what accomplished knaves they had to do with.

Verse 45. Thou reproachest us] He alone who searches the heart could unmask these hypocrites; and he did it so effect-the platter; but * your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness.

40 Ye fools, did not he that made that which is without make that which is within also?

41 ^b But rather give alms ^c of such things as ye have; and, behold, all things are clean unto you.

42 ^d But woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

43 ^e Woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye love the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets.

44 ^f Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! ^g for ye are as graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them.

45 Then answered one of the lawyers, and said unto him, Master, thus saying thou reproachest us also.

46 And he said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! ^h for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers.

ually that their own consciences acknowledged the guilt, and re-echoed their own reproach.

Verse 46. Ye lade men with burdens] By insisting on the observance of the traditions of the elders, to which it appears, by the way, they paid no great attention themselves.

Verse 47. Ye build the sepulchres] That is, ye rebuild and beautify them.

Verse 48. Truly ye bear witness] Ye acknowledge that those of old who killed the prophets were your fathers, and ye are about to show, by your conduct towards me and my apostles, that ye are not degenerated, that ye are as capable of murdering a prophet now as they were of old.

Verse 49. The wisdom of God] These seem to be Luke's words, and to mean that Jesus, the wisdom of God (as he is called, 1 Cor. i. 24), added the words which follow here, on that occasion; and this interpretation of the words is agreeable to that of Matthew, who makes Jesus speak in his own person: Wherefore, behold, I send you prophets, &c., Matt. xxiii. 34. [Alford refers the word to 2 Chron. xxiv. 18-22. This is doubtful, but Dr Clarke's note is not less so.]

Verse 50. That the blood] The particle may be translated so that, pointing out the event only, not the design or intention.

Verse 51. From the blood of Abel] See on Matt. xxiii. 34.

of the prophets, and your fathers killed them.

48 Truly ye bear witness that ye allow the deeds of your fathers: for they indeed killed them, and ye build their sepulchres.

49 Therefore also said the wisdom of God, ^j I will send them prophets and apostles, and some of them they shall slay and persecute:

50 That the blood of all the prophets which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation;

51 ^k From the blood of Abel unto ^l the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple: verily I say unto you, It shall be required of this generation.

52 ^m Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye enter not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye ⁿ hindered.

53 And as he said these things unto them, the scribes and the Pharisees began to urge him vehemently, and to provoke him to speak of many things:

54 Laying wait for him, and ^o seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

Required] They are here represented as having this blood among them; and it is intimated that God will come by and by to require it, and to inquire how it was shed, and to punish those who shed it.

Verse 52. Ye have taken away the key of knowledge] By your traditions ye have taken away the true method of interpreting the prophecies.

Verse 53. Began to urge him vehemently] They began to be furious. They found themselves completely unmasked in the presence of a vast concourse of people. They therefore question him on a variety of points, and hope, by the multitude and impertinence of their questions, to puzzle or irritate him, so as to induce him to speak rashly (for this is the import of the word), that they might find some subject of accusation against him.

A minister of the gospel of God should, above all men, be continent of his tongue; his enemies, in certain cases, will crowd question upon question, in order so to puzzle and confound him that he may speak unadvisedly with his lips, and thus prejudice the truth he was labouring to promote and defend. The following advice of one of the ancients is good: "Stand thou firm as a beaten anvil; for it is the part of a good soldier to be flayed alive, and yet conquer."

CHAPTER XII

Christ preaches to his disciples against hypocrisy, and against timidity in publishing the gospel, 1-5. Exhorts them to have confidence in Divine Providence, 6, 7. Warns them against denying him, or betraying his cause, 8, 9. Of the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, 10. Promises direction and support in persecution, 11, 12. Warns the people against covetousness, 13-15. Parable of the rich man who pulled down his granaries to build greater, 16-21. Cautions against caring cares and anxieties, 22-32. The necessity of living to God, and in reference to eternity, 33-40. At the request of Peter, he further explains the preceding discourse, 41-48. The effects that should be produced by the preaching of the gospel, 49-53. The signs of the times, 54-57. The necessity of being prepared to appear before the judgment seat of God, 58, 59.

IN *the mean time, when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, inasmuch that they trode one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all, *Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy.

2 *For there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed; neither hid that shall not be known.

3 Therefore whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets, shall be proclaimed upon the housetops.

4 *And I say unto you, *my friends, Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do:

5 But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear him, which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him.

6 Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God?

7 But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows.

8 *Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God:

9 But he that denieth me before men, shall be denied before the angels of God.

10 And *whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven.

11 *And when they bring you into the synagogues, and unto magistrates, and powers, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say:

*Matt. xvi. 6. Mark viii. 15.—^aMatt. xvi. 12.—^bMatt. x. 28. Mark iv. 22. Ch. viii. 17.—^cMatt. x. 28. Isa. li. 7, 8, 12, 13. Jer. i. 8.—^dJohn xv. 14, 15.—^eSee Matt. x. 29.—^fMatt. x. 32. Verse 1. An innumerable multitude of people] Myriads of people. A myriad is ten thousand, and myriads must, at the very lowest, mean twenty thousand. But the word is often used to signify a crowd or multitude which cannot be readily numbered.

Which is hypocrisy.] These words are supposed by some to be an addition to the text, because it does not appear that it is their hypocrisy which Christ alludes to, but their false doctrines. They had, however, a large proportion of both.

Verse 5. Fear him] Even the friends of God are commanded to fear God, as a being who has authority to send both body and soul into hell. Therefore it is proper even for the most holy persons to maintain a fear of God, as the punisher of all unrighteousness.

Verse 6. Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings?] See this explained on Matt. x. 29.

Verse 7. Fear not therefore] Want of faith in the providence and goodness of God is the source of all human inquietudes and fears. He has undertaken to save and defend those to the uttermost who trust in him. His wisdom cannot be surprised, his power cannot be forced, his love cannot forget itself. Man distrusts God, and fears that he is forgotten by him, because he judges of God by himself; and he knows that he is apt to forget his Maker, and be unfaithful to him.

Verse 10. Him that blasphemeth] See the sin against the Holy Ghost explained, Matt. xii. 32.

Verse 13. Speak to my brother, that he divide] Among the Jews, the children had the inheritance of their fathers divided among them: the eldest had a double portion, but all the rest had equal parts.

Verse 14. A judge] A minister of Christ ought not to concern himself with secular affairs, any farther than charity and the order of discipline require it. Our Lord could have decided this difference in a moment; but the example of a 12 For the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say.

13 And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me.

14 And he said unto him, *Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?

15 And he said unto them, *Take heed, and beware of covetousness; for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

16 And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully;

17 And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?

18 And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods.

19 And I will say to my soul, *Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

20 But God said unto him, *Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: *then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?

21 So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, *and is not rich toward God.

22 And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you, *Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on.

23 The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment.

24 Consider the ravens, for they neither sow nor reap; which neither have storehouse nor barn; and perfect disengagement from worldly things was more necessary for the ministers of his church than that of a charity applying itself to temporal concerns.

Verse 15. Beware of covetousness] Or rather, Beware of all inordinate desires.

Consisteth not in the abundance] That is, dependeth not on the abundance. It is not superfluities that support man's life, but necessities. What is necessary, God gives liberally; what is superfluous, he has not promised. Nor can a man's life be preserved by the abundance of his possessions: to prove this, he spoke the following parable:

Verse 16. The ground of a certain rich man, &c.] He had generally what is called good luck in his farm, and this was a remarkably plentiful year.

Verse 17. He thought within himself] Riches, though ever so well acquired, produce nothing but veration and embarrassment.

Verse 18. I will pull down, &c.] The rich are full of designs concerning this life, but in general take no thought about eternity till the time that their goods and their lives are both taken away.

Verse 19. Soul, thou hast much goods] Moderate poverty is a great talent in order to salvation; but it is one which nobody desires.

Take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.] This was exactly the creed of the ancient Atheists and Epicureans. What a wretched portion for an immortal spirit! and yet those who know not God have no other, and many of them not even this.

Verse 20. Thou fool] To imagine that a man's comfort and peace can depend upon temporal things; or to suppose that these can satisfy the wishes of an immortal spirit.

This night] How awful was this saying! In the very night in which he had finally settled all his plans, his soul was called into the eternal world! What a dreadful awaken-

* God feedeth them: how much more are ye better than the fowls?

27 Consider the lilies how they grow: they toil not, they spin not; and yet I say unto you, that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

28 If then God so clothe the grass, which is to-day in the field, and to-morrow is cast into the oven; how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith!

29 And seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, neither be ye of doubtful mind.

30 For all these things do the nations of the world seek after: and your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things.

31 * But rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you.

32 Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.

ing of a soul, long asleep in sin! He is now hurried into the presence of his Maker; none of his worldly goods can accompany him, and he has not a particle of heavenly treasure!

Verse 21. So is he] That is, thus will it be. This is not an individual case; all who make this life their portion, and who are destitute of the peace and salvation of God, shall sooner or later be surprised in the same way.

Layeth up treasure for himself] This is the essential characteristic of a covetous man: he desires riches; he gets them; he lays them up, not for the necessary uses to which they might be devoted, but for himself; to please himself, and to gratify his avaricious soul. Such a person is commonly called a miser, i. e., literally, a wretched, miserable man.

Verse 22. Take no thought] Be not anxiously careful.

Verse 23. Neither be ye of doubtful mind.] Or, in anxious suspense.

Verse 30. The nations of the world seek after] Or, earnestly seek. It is the essence of Heathenism to live only for this life; and it is the property of Christianity to lead men to live here in reference to another and better world.

Verse 32. Fear not, little flock] Or, very little flock. A double diminutive. Though this refers solely to the apostles and first believers, of whom it was literally true, yet we may say that the number of genuine believers has been, and is still, small, in comparison of Heathens and false Christians.

It is your Father's good pleasure] It hath pleased, &c., though this tense, joined with an infinitive, has often the force of the present. Our Lord intimates, God has already given you that kingdom which consists in righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost; therefore, fear not; omnipotence itself has undertaken your cause.

Verse 33. Sell that ye have] Turn the fruits of your fields (which are beyond what you need for your own support) into money, and give it in alms; and the treasure thus laid out, shall be as laid up for yourselves and families in heaven. This purse shall not grow old, and this treasure shall not decay.

Verse 34. Where your treasure is] Let God be the treasure of your soul, and let your heart go frequently to the place where his honour dwelleth.

that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately.

37 * Blessed are those servants, whom the lord, when he cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them.

38 And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants.

39 * And this know, that if the goodman of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken through.

40 * Be ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye thinketh not.

41 Then Peter said unto him, Lord, speakest thou this parable unto us, or even to all?

42 And the Lord said, Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season?

43 Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing.

44 * Of a truth I say unto you, that he will make him ruler over all that he hath.

45 * But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the men-servants and maidens, and to eat and drink, and to be drunken;

Verse 35. Let your loins] Be active, diligent, determined, ready; let all hindrances be removed out of the way; and let the candle of the Lord be always found burning brightly in your hand.

The wedding] How the Jewish weddings were celebrated, see on Matt. viii. 12, xxii. 13.

Verse 37. He shall gird himself] Alluding to the long garments which were worn in the eastern countries; and which, in travelling and serving, were tucked up in their belts. From this verse we may gather likewise, that it was the custom of those days, as it was, not long since, among us, for the bridegroom, at the wedding supper, to wait as a servant upon the company.

Verse 40. Be ye therefore ready also] It is pretty evident that what is related here, from verse 35 to 40, was spoken by our Lord at another time.

Verse 42. Faithful and wise steward] See on Matt. xxiv. 45; where the several parts of the steward's office are mentioned and explained.

Verse 46. With the unbelievers.] Or, rather, the unfaithful. Persons who had the light and knowledge of God's word, but made an improper use of the privileges they received.

Verse 47. Shall be beaten with many stripes.] Criminals among the Jews could not be beaten with more than forty stripes; and as this was the sum of the severity to which a whipping could extend, it may be all that our Lord here means.

Verse 48. Shall be beaten with few] For petty offences the Jews in many cases inflicted so few as four, five, and six stripes.

From this and the preceding verse we find that it is a crime to be ignorant of God's will; because to every one God has given less or more of the means of instruction. Those who have had much light, and have not improved it, shall have punishment proportioned to the light they have abused. Those who have had little light, and few means of improvement, shall be punished only for the abuse of the knowledge they possessed.

Verse 49. I am come to send fire] See the subject largely explained on Matt. x. 84, &c.

will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers.

47 And ^athat servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes.

48 ^bBut he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more.

49 ^cI am come to send fire on the earth; and what will I, if it be already kindled?

Verse 50. But I have a baptism] The fire, though already kindled, cannot burn up till after the Jews have put me to death: then the Roman sword shall come, and the Spirit of judgment, burning, and purification shall be poured out.

Verse 56. This time?] Can ye not discover from the writings of the prophets, and from the events which now take place, that this is the time of the Messiah, and that I am the very person foretold by them?

Verse 57. And why—judge ye] Even without the express declarations of the prophets, ye might, from what ye see and hear yourselves, discern that God has now visited his people in such a manner as he never did before.

the mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law.

54 And he said also to the people, ¹When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower; and so it is.

55 And when ye see the south wind blow, ye say, There will be heat; and it cometh to pass.

56 Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth; but how is it that ye do not discern this time?

57 Yea, and why even of yourselves judge ye not what is right?

Verse 58. When thou goest with thine adversary] This and the next verse are a part of our Lord's sermon upon the mount.

Give diligence] Give labour, do everything in thy power to get free before a suit commences.

The officers] Such an officer as was appointed to levy the fines imposed by the law for a violation of any of its precepts.

Verse 59. Till thou hast paid the very last mite.] And when can this be, if we understand the text spiritually? Can weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth, pay to divine justice the debt a sinner has contracted?

CHAPTER XIII.

Christ preaches the necessity of repentance, from the punishment of the Galileans massacred by Pilate, 1-3. And by the death of those on whom the tower in Siloam fell, 4, 5. The parable of the barren fig-tree, 6-9. Christ cures a woman who had been afflicted eighteen years, 10-13. The ruler of the synagogue is incensed, and is reproved by our Lord, 14-17. The parable of the mustard seed, 18, 19; of the leaven, 20, 21. He journeys towards Jerusalem, and preaches, 22. The question, Are there few saved? and our Lord's answer, with the discourse thereon, 23-30. He is informed that Herod purposes to kill him, 31, 32. Predicts his own death at Jerusalem, and denounces judgments on that impenitent city, 33-35.

THERE were present at that season some that told him of the ^aGalileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices.

2 And Jesus answering said unto them, Suppose ^aActs v. 37. Ch. xxiii. 6, 12.—^bJohn ix. 2. Acts xxviii. 4.

Verse 1. At that season] At what time this happened is not easy to determine.

Whose blood Pilate had mingled] This piece of history is not recorded by Josephus: however, he states that the Galileans were the most seditious people in the land: they belonged properly to Herod's jurisdiction; but, as they kept the great feasts at Jerusalem, they probably, by their tumultuous behaviour at some one of them, gave Pilate, who was a mortal enemy to Herod, a pretext to fall upon and slay many of them; and thus, perhaps, sacrifice the people to the resentment he had against the prince.

3 I tell you, ^cNay: but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

4 Or those eighteen, upon whom the tower in tions behaviour at some one of them, gave Pilate, who was a mortal enemy to Herod, a pretext to fall upon and slay many of them; and thus, perhaps, sacrifice the people to the resentment he had against the prince.

Verse 4. The tower in Siloam] This tower was probably built over one of the porticoes near the pool, which is mentioned, John ix. 7. See also Neh. iii. 15.

Siloam fell, and slew them, think ye that they were sinners above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem?

5 I tell you, Nay: but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

6 He spake also this parable; ^b A certain man had a fig tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none.

7 Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, Behold, these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig tree, and find none: cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground?

8 And he answering said unto him, Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and dung it:

9 And if it bear fruit, well: and if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.

10 And he was teaching in one of the synagogues on the sabbath.

11 And, behold, there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself.

12 And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity.

13 ^c And he laid his hands on her: and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God.

14 And the ruler of the synagogue answered with indignation, because that Jesus had healed on the sabbath day, and said unto the people, ^d There are six days in which men ought to work: in them therefore come and be healed, and ^e not on the sabbath day.

15 The Lord then answered him, and said, Thou hypocrite, doth not each one of you on the sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering?

16 And ought not this woman, ^f being a daughter

Debtors, according to the original, a Jewish phrase for sinners. Persons professing to be under the law are bound by the law to be obedient to all its precepts; those who obey not are reckoned debtors to the law, or rather to that divine justice from which the law came. A different word is used when speaking of the Galileans: one which is often used to signify heathens, see the notes on chap. vii. 87; it is probably used here in nearly a similar sense.

Verse 5. Ye shall all likewise perish.] In a like way, in the same manner. This prediction of our Lord was literally fulfilled. When the city was taken by the Romans, multitudes of the priests, &c., who were going on with their sacrifices, were slain, and their blood mingled with the blood of their victims; and multitudes were buried under the ruins of the walls, houses, and temple.

Verse 6. A certain man] The sense which our Lord designed to convey by it appears to be the following:

1. A person, God Almighty. 2. Had a fig-tree, the Jewish church. 3. Planted in his vineyard—established in the land of Judea. 4. He came seeking fruit—he required that the Jewish people should walk in righteousness, in proportion to the spiritual culture he bestowed on them. 5. The vine-dresser—the Lord Jesus, for God hath committed all judgment to the Son, John v. 22. 6. Cut it down—let the Roman sword be unsheathed against it. 7. Let it alone—Christ is represented as intercessor for sinners, for whose sake the day of their probation is often lengthened; during which time he is constantly employed in doing everything that has a tendency to promote their salvation. 8. Thou shalt cut it down—a time will come that those who have not turned at God's invitations and reproofs shall be cut off, and numbered with the transgressors.

Verse 7. Behold these three years] From this circumstance in the parable, it may reasonably be concluded that of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the sabbathday?

17 And when he had said these things, all his adversaries were ashamed: and all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

18 ^b Then said he, Unto what is the kingdom of God like? and whereunto shall I resemble it?

19 It is like a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and cast into his garden; and it grew, and waxed a great tree; and the fowls of the air lodged in the branches of it.

20 And again he said, Whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God?

21 It is like leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

22 ^c And he went through the cities and villages, teaching, and journeying toward Jerusalem.

23 Then said one unto him, Lord, ^d are there few that be saved? And he said unto them, 24 ^e Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able.

25 ^f When once the master of the house is risen up, and ^g hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are:

26 Then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets.

27 ^h But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are; ⁱ depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity.

28 ^j There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth,

Jesus had been, at the time of saying this, exercising his ministry for three years past; and, from what is said in ver. 8, of letting it alone this year also, it may be concluded likewise that this parable was spoken about a year before Christ's crucifixion; and, if both these conclusions are reasonable, we may thence infer that this parable was not spoken at the time which appears to be assigned to it, and that the whole time of Christ's public ministry was about four years.

Why cumbereth it the ground?] Or, Why should the ground be also useless? The tree itself brings forth no fruit; let it be cut down, that a more profitable one may be planted in its place. [Better still: "Why does it impoverish the soil?"]

Verse 22. Journeying toward Jerusalem.] Luke represents all that is said, from chap. ix. 51, as having been done and spoken while Christ was on his last journey to Jerusalem.

Verse 23. Are there few that be saved?] A question either of impertinence or curiosity, the answer to which can profit no man. The grand question is, Can I be saved? Yes. How? Strive earnestly to enter in through the strait gate—agonise—exert every power of body and soul—let your salvation be the grand business of your whole life.

Verse 24. Many—will seek] They seek—wish and desire; but they do not strive: therefore, because they will not agonise—will not be in earnest, they shall not get in.

Verse 29. They shall come] That is, the Gentiles in every part of the world, shall receive the gospel of the grace of God, when the Jews shall have rejected it.

Verse 31. Depart hence, &c.] It is probable that the place from which Christ was desired to depart was Galilee or Perea; for beyond this Herod had no jurisdiction. It can scarcely mean Jerusalem, though it appears from chap. xiii. 7, that Herod Antipas was there at the time of our Lord's crucifixion.

* when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out.

29 And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God.

30^b And, behold, there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last.

31 The same day there came certain of the Pharisees, saying unto him, Get thee out, and depart hence : for Herod will kill thee.

32 And he said unto them, Go ye, and tell that fox, Behold, I cast out devils, and I do cures to-day,

^a Matt. viii. 11.—^b Matt. xix. 30. xx. 16. Mark x. 31.—^c Heb. ii. 10.—^d Matt. xxiii. 37.—^e Lev. xxvi. 31, 32. Ps. lxxix. 25. Isa.

Verse 32. Tell that fox] Herod was a very vicious prince, and lived in public incest with his sister-in-law, Mark vi. 17. If our Lord meant him here, it is hard to say why the character of fox, which implies cunning, design, and artifice, to hide evil intentions, should be attributed to him, who never seemed studious to conceal his vices. But we may suppose that Christ saw that he covered a desire for the destruction of our Lord, under the pretence of zeal for the law and welfare of the Jewish people.

To-day and to-morrow] It is probable that this phrase only means that he had but a short time to live, without specifying its duration.

Perfected] I shall then have accomplished the purpose for which I came into the world, leaving nothing undone which the counsel of God designed me to complete. Hence in reference to our Lord, the word implies his dying; as the plan of human redemption was not finished, till he bowed his head and gave up the ghost on the cross, see John xix. 30, where the same word is used. It is used also in reference and to-morrow, and the third day^a I shall be perfected.

33 Nevertheless I must walk to-day, and to-morrow, and the day following : for it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem.

34^d O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee! how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not!

35 Behold, your house is left unto you desolate: and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, 'Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

to Christ's death, Heb. ii. 10, v. 9; see also Acts xx. 24, and Heb. xii. 23.

Verse 33. I must walk, &c.] I must continue to work miracles and teach for a short time yet, and then I shall die in Jerusalem; therefore I cannot depart, according to the advice given me (ver. 31), nor can a hair of my head fall to the ground till my work be all done.

Perish out of Jerusalem.] A man who professes to be a prophet can be tried on that ground only by the grand Sanhedrin, which always resides at Jerusalem; and as the Jews are about to put me to death, under the pretence of my being a false prophet, therefore my sentence must come from this city, and my death take place in it. [The reference is not so much local as it is symbolical.]

Verse 35. Your house] The temple—called here your house, not my house—I acknowledge it no longer; I have abandoned it, and will dwell in it no more for ever. But some think that our Lord means, not the temple, but the whole commonwealth of the Jews.

CHAPTER XIV.

Christ heals a man ill of the dropsy on a sabbath day, 1-6. He inculcates humility by a parable, 7-11. The poor to be fed and not the rich, 12-14. The parable of the great supper, 15-24. How men must become disciples of Christ, 25-27. The parable of the prudent builder, who estimates the cost before he commences his work, 28-30. And of the provident king, 31, 32. The use of these parables, 33. The utility of salt while in its strength and perfection; and its total uselessness when it has lost its savour, 34, 35.

AND it came to pass, * as he went into the house of one of the chief Pharisees to eat bread on the sabbath day, that they watched him.

2 And, behold, there was a certain man before him which had the dropsy.

^a Job v. 13, 15. Ps. xxxvii. 32. xli. 5. Jer. xx. 10. Mark iii. 2. Ch. vi. 7. xi. 37.

Verse 1. Chief Pharisees] A man who was of the sect of the Pharisees, and one of the rulers of the people.

To eat bread on the sabbath day] But why is it that there should be an invitation or dinner given on the sabbath day? The Jews purchased and prepared the best viands they could procure for the sabbath day, in order to do it honour. As the sabbath is intended for the benefit both of the body and soul of man, it should not be a day of austerity or fasting, especially among the labouring poor. The most wholesome and nutritive food should be then procured if possible; that both body and soul may feel the influence of 3 And Jesus answering spake unto the lawyers and Pharisees, saying, ^b Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath day?

4 And they held their peace. And he took him, and healed him, and let him go;

5 And answered them, saying, ^c Which of you this divine appointment, and give God the glory of his grace. On this blessed day, let every man eat his bread with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God.

They watched him.] Or, were maliciously watching. The context plainly proves that this is the sense in which it is to be taken here. The conduct of this Pharisee was most execrable. Professing friendship and affection, he invited our blessed Lord to his table, merely that he might have a more favourable opportunity of watching his conduct, that he might accuse him, and take away his life.

Verse 2. The dropsy.] Probably the insidious Pharisee shall have an ass or an ox fallen into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the sabbath day?

6 And they could not answer him again to these things.

7 And he put forth a parable to those which were bidden, when he marked how they chose out the chief rooms; saying unto them,

8 When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not down in the highest room, lest a more honourable man than thou be bidden of him;

9 And he that bade thee and him, come and say to thee, Give this man place; and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room.

10 But when thou art bidden, go and sit down in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher: then shalt thou have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee.

11 For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

12 Then said he also to him that bade him, When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours; lest they also bid thee again, and a recompence be made thee.

13 But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind:

14 And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.

15 And when one of them that sat at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.

16 Then said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many:

17 And sent his servant at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come; for all things are now ready.

18 And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused.

19 And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.

had brought this dropsical man to the place, not doubting that our Lord's eye would affect his heart, and that he would instantly cure him; and then he could most plausibly accuse him for a breach of the sabbath.

Verse 4. They held their peace.] They could not answer the question but in the affirmative; therefore they were silent.

Verse 7. They chose out the chief rooms] In this parable our Lord only repeats advices which the Rabbins had given to their pupils, but were too proud to conform to themselves.

Verse 11. For whosoever exalteth himself, &c.] This is the unchangeable conduct of God: he is ever abasing the proud, and giving grace, honour, and glory to the humble.

Verse 12. Call not thy friends, &c.] Our Lord certainly does not mean that a man should not entertain, at particular times, his friends, &c.; but what he inculcates here is charity to the poor; and what he condemns is those entertainments which are given to the rich, either to flatter them, or to procure a similar return; because the money that is thus criminally laid out properly belongs to the poor.

Verse 14. For they cannot recompense thee] Because you have done it for God's sake only, and they cannot make you 20 And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.

21 So that servant came, and shewed his lord these things. Then the master of the house being angry said to his servant, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind.

22 And the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room.

23 And the lord said unto the servant, Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled.

24 For I say unto you, That none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.

25 And there went great multitudes with him: and he turned, and said unto them, 26 If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple.

27 And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple.

28 For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it?

29 Lest haply, after he hath laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him, a recompense, therefore God will consider himself your debtor, and will recompense you in the resurrection of the righteous.

30 Saying, This man began to build, and was not able to finish.

Verse 15. That shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.] Instead of bread, many MSS., with some Versions and Fathers, read a dinner. This is probably the best reading, as it is likely it was a dinner at which they now sat; and it would be natural for the person to say, Happy is he who shall dine in the kingdom of God.

Verses 16-24. A certain man made a great supper, &c.] See a similar parable, Matt. xxii. 1-14.

Verse 23. Compel them to come in] Prevail on them by the most earnest entreaties. The word is used by Matthew, chap. xiv. 22, and by Mark, chap. vi. 45; in both which places, when Christ is said to constrain his disciples to get into the vessel, nothing but his commanding or persuading them to do it can be reasonably understood. No other kind of constraint is ever recommended in the gospel of Christ; every other kind of compulsion is antichristian, can only be submitted to by cowards and knaves, and can produce nothing but hypocrites.

Verse 26. And hate not] Matthew, chap. x. 37, expressed the true meaning of this word, when he says, He who loveth his father and mother MORE than me. In chap. vi. 24, he uses the word hate in the same sense

Verse 28. To build a tower] Probably this means no more than a dwelling house, on the top of which, according to the Asiatic manner, battlements were built, both to take the fresh air on, and to serve for refuge from, and defence against, an enemy. It was also used for prayer and meditation.

Verse 33. Whosoever he be of you] This seems to be addressed particularly to those who were then, and who were to be, preachers of his gospel; and who were to travel over all countries, publishing salvation to a lost world.

CHAPTER XV.

Publicans and sinners draw near to hear our Lord, at which the Pharisees are offended, 1, 2. Christ vindicates his conduct in receiving them by the parable of the lost sheep, 3-7. The parable of the lost piece of money, 8-10; and the affecting parable of the prodigal son, 11-32.

THEN ^adrew near unto him all the publicans and sinners for to hear him.

2 And the Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, ^band eateth with them.

3 And he spake this parable unto them, saying,

4 ^cWhat man of you, having a hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it?

5 And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing.

6 And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep ^dwhich was lost.

7 I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, ^emore than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance.

Verse 1. Publicans and sinners] Tax-gatherers and heathens; persons who neither believed in Christ nor in Moses.

Verse 2. Receiveth sinners] He receives them cordially, affectionately—takes them to his bosom; for so the word implies. What mercy! Jesus receives sinners in the most loving, affectionate manner, and saves them unto eternal life!

Verse 4. A hundred sheep] The whole flock of mankind, both Jews and Gentiles, belongs unto this divine Shepherd; and it is but reasonable to expect, that the gracious proprietor will look after those who have gone astray, and bring them back to the flock. The lost sheep is an emblem of a headless, thoughtless sinner: one who follows the corrupt dictates of his own heart, without ever reflecting upon his conduct, or considering what will be the issue of his unholy course of life. No creature strays more easily than a sheep; none is more headless; and none so incapable of finding its way back to the flock, when once gone astray. No creature is more defenceless than a sheep, and more exposed to be devoured by dogs and wild beasts. Who but a Pharisee or a devil would find fault with the shepherd who endeavours to rescue his sheep from so much danger and ruin!

Verse 7. Just persons, which need no repentance.] Who do not require such a change of mind and purpose as these 9 And when she hath found it, she calleth her friends and her neighbours together, saying, Rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost.

10 Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

11 And he said, A certain man had two sons:

12 And the younger of them said to his father, Father, ^agive me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them ^bhis living.

13 And not many days after, the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there ^cwasted his substance with riotous living.

14 And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want.

15 And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine.

16 And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat; and no man gave unto him.

do—who are not so profligate, and cannot repent of sins they have never committed. On this ground, the owner is represented as feeling more joy in consequence of finding one sheep that was lost, there having been almost no hope of its recovery, than he feels at seeing ninety and nine sheep still safe under his care. There are some, and their opinion need not be hastily rejected, who imagine that by the ninety and nine just persons, our Lord means the angels—that they are in proportion to men, as ninety-nine are to one, and that the Lord takes more pleasure in the return and salvation of one sinner, than in the uninterrupted obedience of ninety-nine holy angels; and that it was through his superior love to fallen man that he took upon him his nature, and not the nature of angels.

Verse 8. Ten pieces of silver] Ten drachmas. I think it always best to retain the names of these ancient coins, and to state their value in English money. The Grecian drachma was worth about sevenpence three farthings of our money; being about the same value as the Roman denarius.

The drachma that was lost is a very expressive emblem of a sinner who is estranged from God. The longer a piece of money is lost, the less probability is there of its being again found; as it may not only lose its colour, and not be easily observed, but will continue to be more and more covered with 17 And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger!

18 I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee, 19 And am no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants.

20 And he arose, and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, fell on his neck, and kissed him.

21 And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven,^a and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son.

22 But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet:

23 And bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat, and be merry:

24 For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry.

26 And he called one of the servants, and asked what these things meant.

27 And he said unto him, Thy brother is come; and thy father hath killed the fatted calf, because he hath received him safe and sound.

28 And he was angry, and would not go in: therefore came his father out, and entreated him.

29 And he answering said to his father, Lo, these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment; and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends:

30 But as soon as this thy son was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf.

31 And he said unto him, Son thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine.

32 It was meet that we should make merry, and be glad: for this thy brother was dead, and is alive again; and was lost, and is found.

a mark of honour and dignity. See Gen. xli. 42; 1 Kings xxi. 8; Esth. viii. 2; Dan. vi. 17; Jam. ii. 2.

Shoes on his feet] Formerly those who were captivated had their shoes taken off, Isai. xx. 1; and when they were restored to liberty, their shoes were restored. See 2 Chron. xxviii. 15.

Verse 23. The fatted calf, and kill it] Sacrifice it. In ancient times the animals provided for public feasts were first sacrificed to God. The blood of the beast being poured out before God, by way of atonement for sin, the flesh was considered as consecrated, and the guests were considered as feeding on divine food.

Verse 24. Was dead] Lost to all good—given up to all evil.

Verse 25. His elder son] Meaning probably persons of a regular moral life, who needed no repentance in comparison of the prodigal already described.

In the field] Attending the concerns of the farm.

He heard music] A number of sounds mingled together, as in a concert.

Dancing] But Le Clerc denies that the word means dancing at all, as it properly means a choir of singers.

Verse 28. He was angry] This refers to the indignation of the scribes and Pharisees, mentioned ver. 1, 2. In every point of view, the anger of the elder son was improper and unreasonable. He had already received his part of the inheritance, see ver. 12, and his profligate brother had received no more than what was his just dividend. Besides, what the father had acquired since that division he had a right to dispose of as he pleased, even to give it all to one son; nor did the ancient customs of the Asiatic countries permit the other children to claim any share in such property thus disposed of.

Verse 29. Never—a kid] It is evident from ver. 12, that the father gave him his portion when his profligate brother claimed his; for he divided his whole substance between them. And though he had not claimed it, so as to separate from, and live independently of, his father, yet he might have done so whenever he chose; and therefore his complaining was both undutiful and unjust.

Verse 30. This thy son] This son of THINE—words expressive of supreme contempt: THIS son—he would not condescend to call him by his name, or to acknowledge him for his brother; and, at the same time, bitterly reproaches his amiable father for his affectionate tenderness, and readiness to receive his once undutiful, but now penitent, child!

For him] I have marked those words in small capitals which should be strongly accented in the pronunciation: this last word shows how supremely he despised his poor unfortunate brother.

Verse 31. All that I have is thine] See on ver. 28.

dust and dirt: or its value may be vastly lessened by being so trampled on that a part of the substance, together with the image and superscription, may be worn off. So the sinner sinks deeper and deeper into the impurities of sin, loses even his character among men, and gets the image and superscription of his Maker defaced from his heart.

Verse 12. Give me the portion of goods] This matter will appear plain, when it is considered, that it has been an immemorial custom in the East for sons to demand and receive their portion of the inheritance during their father's lifetime; and the parent, however aware of the dissipated inclinations of the child, could not legally refuse to comply with the application.

Verse 13. Riotous living] In a course of life that led him to spend all. And this we are informed, ver. 30, was among harlots; the readiest way in the world to exhaust the body, debase the mind, ruin the soul, and destroy the substance.

Verse 14. A mighty famine in that land] As he was of a profligate turn of mind himself, it is likely he sought out a place where riot and excess were the ruling characteristics of the inhabitants; and, as poverty is the sure consequence of prodigality, it is no wonder that famine preyed on the whole country.

Verse 15. To feed swine] The basest and vilest of all employments; and, to a Jew, peculiarly degrading. Shame, contempt, and distress are wedded to sin, and can never be divorced. No character could be meaner in the sight of a Jew than that of a swine-herd.

Verse 16. With the husks] The original word means the fruit of the charub tree, which grows plentifully in Syria; a kind of pulse made use of to feed swine.

Verse 17. When he came to himself] A state of sin is represented in the Sacred Writings as a course of folly and madness; and repentance is represented as a restoration to sound sense.

Verse 18. Against heaven] That is, against God. The Jews often make use of this periphrasis in order to avoid mentioning the name of God, which they have ever treated with the utmost reverence. But some contend that it should be translated, even unto heaven; a Hebraism for, I have sinned exceedingly—beyond all description.

Verse 20. And kissed him] Or, kissed him again and again; the proper import of the word. The father thus showed his great tenderness towards him, and his great affection for him.

Verse 22. Bring forth the best robe] Bring out that chief garment, the garment which was laid by, to be used only on birth-days or festival times. Such as that which Rebecca had laid by for Esau, and which she put on Jacob when she made him personate his brother.

Put a ring on his hand] Giving a ring was in ancient times

Verse 32. This thy brother] Or, THIS brother of THINE. To awaken this ill-natured, angry, inhumane man to a proper sense of his duty, both to his parent and brother, this amiable father returns him his own unkind words, but in a widely different spirit. This son of mine to whom I show mercy, is thy brother, to whom thou shouldst show bowels of tenderness and affection; especially as he is no longer the person he was: he was dead in sin—he is quickened by the power of God; he was lost to thee, to me, to himself, and to our God; but now he is found: and he will be a comfort to me, a help to thee, and a standing proof, to the honour of the Most High, that God receiveth sinners.

CHAPTER XVI.

The parable of the unjust steward, 1-8. Christ applies this to his hearers, 9-13. The Pharisees take offence, 14. Our Lord reproves them, and shows the immutability of the law, 15-17. Counsels against divorce, 18. The story of the rich man and the beggar, commonly called Dives and Lazarus, 19-31.

AND he said also unto his disciples, There was a certain rich man, which had a steward; and the same was accused unto him that he had wasted his goods.

2 And he called him, and said unto him, How is it that I hear this of thee? give an account of thy stewardship; for thou mayest be no longer steward.

3 Then the steward said within himself, What shall I do? for my lord taketh away from me the stewardship: I cannot dig; to beg I am ashamed.

4 I am resolved what to do, that, when I am put out of the stewardship, they may receive me into their houses.

5 So he called every one of his lord's debtors unto him, and said unto the first, How much owest thou unto my lord?

* Gen. xviii. 20.—^b Ps. l. 10. Eccles. xii. 14.—^c The word Baths in the original containeth nine gallons three quarts: See Ezek. xlv. 10, 11, 14.—^d The word here interpreted a measure in the original, containeth about fourteen bushels and a pottle.—^e John Verse 1. A steward] One who superintends domestic concerns, and ministers to the support of the family, having the products of the field, business, &c., put into his hands for this very purpose.

Wasted his goods.] Had been profuse and profligate; and had embezzled his master's substance.

Verse 2. Give an account of thy, &c.] Produce thy books of receipts and disbursements, that I may see whether the accusation against thee be true or false. The original may be translated, Give up the business of the stewardship.

Verse 3. I cannot dig] He could not submit to become a common day-labourer, which was both a severe and base employment; To beg I am ashamed. And as these were the only honest ways left him to procure a morsel of bread, and he would not submit to either, he found he must continue the system of knavery, in order to provide for his idleness and luxury, or else starve. Woe to the man who gets his bread in this way! The curse of the Lord must be on his head, and on his heart; in his basket, and in his store.

Verse 4. They may receive me] That is, the debtors and tenants, who paid their debts and rents, not in money, but in kind; such as wheat, oil, and other produce of their lands.

Verse 5. A hundred measures of oil.] A hundred baths. The bath was the largest measure of capacity among the Hebrews, except the homer, of which it was the tenth part, see Ezek. xiv. 11, 14. It is equal to the ephah, i. e., to seven gallons and a half of our measure.

Take thy bill] Thy account. The writing in which the debt was specified, together with the obligation to pay so much, at such and such times.

Verse 7. A hundred measures of wheat.] A hundred cors. As the bath was equal to the ephah, so the cor was equal to the homer. It contained about seventy-five gallons and five pints English.

Verse 8. The lord commended] He spoke highly of the address and cunning of his iniquitous servant. He had, on his own principles, made a very prudent provision for his support; but his master no more approved of his conduct in this, than he did in his wasting his substance before. From the ambiguous and improper manner in which this is expressed in the common English translation, it has been supposed that our blessed Lord commended the conduct of this wicked man: but the word translated lord, simply means the master of the unjust steward.

The children of this world] Such as mind worldly things only, without regarding God or their souls. A phrase by which the Jews always designate the Gentiles.

Children of light.] Such as are illuminated by the Spirit of God, and regard worldly things only as far as they may subserve the great purposes of their salvation, and become the instruments of good to others. But ordinarily the former evidence more carefulness and prudence in providing for the support and comfort of this life, than the latter do in providing for another world.

Verse 9. The mammon of unrighteousness] Literally, the mammon, or riches, of injustice. Riches promise much, and perform NOTHING: they excite hope and confidence, and deceive both: in making a man depend on them for happiness, they rob him of the salvation of God and of eternal glory. For these reasons, they are represented as unjust and deceitful. It is evident that this must be the meaning of the words, because the false or deceitful riches, here are put in opposition to the true riches, ver. 11; i. e., those divine graces and blessings which promise all good, and give what they promise; never deceiving the expectation of faithful also in much: and he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much.

11 If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous ^amammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches?

12 And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?

13 ^bNo servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

14 And the Pharisees also, ^cwho were covetous, heard all these things; and they derided him.

15 And he said unto them, Ye are they which ^djustify yourselves before men; but ^eGod knoweth your hearts; for ^fthat which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God.

16 ^gThe law and the prophets were until John: since that time, the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it.

17 ^hAnd it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle of the law to fail.

^aOr, riches.—^bMatt. vi. 24.—^cMatt. xxiii. 14.—^dCh. x. 29.—^ePs. vii. 9.—^f1 Sam. xvi. 7.—^gMatt. iv. 17. xi. 12, 13. Luke vii. 29.—^hPs. cii. 26, 27. Isa. xl. 8. ii. 6. Matt. v. 18. 1 Pet. i. 25.—ⁱMatt. v. 32. xix. 9. Mark x. 11. 1 Cor. vii. 10, 11.—^jProv.

any man. To insinuate that, if a man have acquired riches by unjust means, he is to sanctify them, and provide himself a passport to the kingdom of God, by giving them to the poor, is a most horrid and blasphemous perversion of our Lord's words.

When ye fail? That is, when ye die.

They may receive you? It does not appear that the poor are meant; because those who have relieved them may die a long time before them; and many poor persons may be relieved, who will live and die in their sins, and consequently never enter into heaven themselves. The expression seems to be a mere Hebraism:—they may receive you, for, ye shall be received; i. e., God shall admit you, if you make a faithful use of his gifts and graces. He who does not make a faithful use of what he has received from his Maker has no reason to hope for eternal felicity. [The reference is clearly to "friends."] ^j

Verse 10. He that is faithful in that which is least, &c. He who has the genuine principles of fidelity in him will make a point of conscience of carefully attending to even the smallest things; on the contrary, he who does not act uprightly in small matters will seldom feel himself bound to pay much attention to the dictates of honour and conscience, in cases of high importance.

Verse 12. That which is another man's That is, worldly riches, called another's: 1. Because they belong to God, and he has not designed that they should be any man's portion. 2. Because they are continually changing their possessors, being in the way of commerce, and in providence going from one to another.

That which is your own? Grace and glory, which God has particularly designed for you; which are the only proper satisfying portion for the soul; and which no man can enjoy in their plenitude, unless he be faithful to the first small motions and influences of the divine Spirit.

Verse 13. No servant can serve two masters The heart will be either wholly taken up with God, or wholly engrossed with the world.

Verse 14. They derided him. They treated him with the utmost contempt; and why? Because they were lovers of money, and he showed them that all such were in danger of perdition.

Verse 15. Ye—justify yourselves Ye declare yourselves to be just. Ye endeavour to make it appear to men that ye can still feel an insatiable thirst after the present world, and yet secure the blessings of another; but God knoweth your hearts; and he knoweth that ye are alive to the world, and dead to God and goodness.

Verse 16. The law and the prophets were until John The law and the prophets continued to be the sole teachers till John came, who first began to proclaim the glad tidings of 18 ⁱWhosoever putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery; and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband, committeth adultery.

22 And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried;

23 And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom:

24 And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and ^lcool my tongue; for I ^mam tormented in this flame.

the kingdom of God: and now, he who wishes to be made a partaker of the blessings of that kingdom must rush speedily into it; as there will be but a short time before an utter destruction shall fall upon this ungodly race.

Verse 18. Putteth away (or divorceth) his wife See on Matt. v. 31, 32; xix. 9, 10; Mark x. 12; where the question concerning divorce is considered at large.

Verse 19. There was a certain rich man This account of the rich man and Lazarus is either a parable or a real history. If it be a parable, it is what may be: if it be a history, it is that which has been. Either a man may live as is here described, and go to perdition when he dies; or, some have lived in this way, and are now suffering the torments of an eternal fire. The account is equally instructive in which soever of these lights it is viewed.

Verse 20. There was a certain beggar named Lazarus His name is mentioned, because his character was good, and his end glorious; and because it is the purpose of God that the righteous shall be had in everlasting remembrance. Lazarus is a contraction of the word Eliezar, which signifies the help or assistance of God—a name properly given to a man who was both poor and afflicted, and had no help but that which came from heaven.

Verse 21. And desiring to be fed with the crumbs And it is likely this desire was complied with, for it is not intimated that he spurned away the poor man from the gate, or that his suit was rejected. And as we find, ver. 24, that the rich man desired that Lazarus should be sent with a little water to him, it is a strong intimation that he considered him under some kind of obligation to him; for, had he refused him a few crumbs in his life-time, it is not reasonable that he would now have requested such a favour from him; nor does Abraham glance at any such uncharitable conduct on the part of the rich man.

Verse 22. The rich man also died, and was buried There is no mention of this latter circumstance in the case of Lazarus; he was buried, no doubt—necessity required this: but he had the burial of a pauper, while the pomp and pride of the other followed him to the tomb.

Verse 23. They have Moses and the prophets This plainly supposes they were all Jewish believers: they had these writings in their hands, but they did not permit them to influence their lives.

Verse 30. If one went to them from the dead, &c. Many are desirous to see an inhabitant of the other world, and converse with him, in order to know what passes there. Make way! Here is a damned soul, which Jesus Christ has evoked from the hell of fire! Hear him! Hear him tell of his torments! Hear him utter his regrets!

Verse 31. If they hear not Moses, &c. The answer of Abraham shows the sufficiency and perfection of the Sacred in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evils things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

26 And beside all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence.

27 Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house:

28 For I have five brethren; that he may testify

Writings. What influence could the personal appearance of a spirit have on an unbelieving and corrupted heart? None, except to terrify it for the moment, and afterwards to leave it ten thousand reasons for uncertainty and doubt. Christ caused this to be exemplified in the most literal man-unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment.

29 Abraham saith unto him, ^a They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them.

30 And he said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent.

31 And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, ^b neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead.

ner, by raising Lazarus from the dead. And did this convince the unbelieving Jews? No. They were so much the more enraged; and from that moment conspired both the death of Lazarus and of Christ! Faith is satisfied with such proofs as God is pleased to afford. Infidelity never has enow.

CHAPTER XVII.

Christ teaches the necessity of avoiding offences, 1, 2. How to treat an offending brother, 3, 4. The efficacy of faith, 5, 6. No man by his services or obedience can profit his Maker, 7-10. He cleanses ten lepers, 11-19. The Pharisees inquire when the kingdom of God shall commence; Christ answers them, and corrects their improper views of the subject, 20-37.

THEN said he unto his disciples, ^a It is impossible but that offences will come: but woe unto him, through whom they come!

2 It were better for him that a mill-stone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones.

3 Take heed to yourselves: ^b If thy brother trespass against thee, ^c rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him.

4 And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day return again to thee, saying, I repent; thou shalt forgive him.

5 And the Apostles said unto the Lord, Increase our faith.

6 ^d And the Lord said, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye might say unto this sycamine tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you.

^a Matt. xviii. 6, 7. Mark ix. 42. 1 Cor. xi. 19.—^b Matt. xviii. 15, 21.—^c Lev. xix. 17. Prov. xvii. 10. James v. 19.—^d Matt. xvii. 20. xxi. 21. Mark ix. 23. xi. 23.—^e Ch. xii. 37.—^f Job xxii. 3.

Verse 1. It is impossible but that offences will come] Such is the corrupt state of the human heart that, notwithstanding all the influences of grace, and the promises of glory, men will continue to sin against God; and his justice must continue to punish.

Verse 2. A mill-stone] See the note on Matt. xviii. 6, 7. To have a mill-stone hanged about the neck, was a common proverb.

Verse 5. Increase our faith.] This work of pardoning every offence, of every man, and that continually, seemed so difficult, even to the disciples themselves, that they saw, without an extraordinary degree of faith, they should never be able to keep this command.

Verse 6. As a grain of mustard seed] A faith that increases and thrives as that is described to do, Matt. xiii. 32, where see the note.

7 But which of you, having a servant plowing or feeding cattle, will say unto him by and by, when he is come from the field, Go and sit down to meat?

8 And will not rather say unto him, Make ready wherewith I may sup, and gird thyself, ^a and serve me, till I have eaten and drunken; and afterward thou shalt eat and drink?

9 Doth he thank that servant, because he did these things that were commanded him? I trow not.

10 So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do.

11 And it came to pass, ^a as he went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee.

12 And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, ^b which stood afar off:

xxxv. 7. Ps. xvi. 2. Matt. xxv. 30. Rom. iii. 19. xi. 35. 1 Cor. ix. 16, 17. Philomob 11.—^c Ch. ix. 51, 52. John iv. 4.—^d Lev. xiii. 46.

This sycamine] The sycamine is probably the same as the sycamore. The true sycamore is the figus Pharaonis or Ægyptia; called also, from its similitude in leaves and fruit, morosycus, or mulberry fig-tree.

Be thou plucked up by the root] This mode of speech refers to the accomplishment of things very difficult, but not impossible.

Verses 7-9. Which of you, having a servant] The servant is bound to wait on his master, and to do everything for him to the uttermost of his power: nor does the former expect thanks for it, for he is bound by his agreement to act thus, because of the stipulated reward, which is considered as being equal in value to all the service that he can perform.

Verse 10. We are unprofitable servants] This text has often been produced to prove that no man can live without committing sin against God. But the text says unprofitable, 13 And they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us.

14 And when he saw them he said unto them, *Go shew yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed.

15 And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God, 16 And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks; and he was a Samaritan.

17 And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?

18 There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger.

19 ^b And he said unto him, Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole.

20 And when he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not *with observation:

21 ^a Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, *the kingdom of God is *within you.

22 And he said unto the disciples, *The days will come, when ye shall desire to see one of the not sinful servants. If this could be fairly construed to countenance sinful imperfection, it would be easy to demonstrate that there is not one of the spirits of just men made perfect in paradise, nor a ministering angel at the throne of God, but is sinfully imperfect: for none of those can work righteousness, in the smallest degree, beyond those powers which God has given them; and justice and equity require that they should exert those powers to the uttermost in the service of their Maker; and, after having acted thus, it may be justly said, They have done only what it was their duty to do.

Verse 11. He passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee. All who went from Galilee to Jerusalem must have necessarily passed through Samaria, unless they had gone to the westward, a very great way about. Therefore John tells us, chap. iv. 4, that when Jesus left Judea to go into Galilee, it was necessary for him to pass through Samaria; for this plain reason, because it was the only proper road.

Verse 12. Which stood afar off] They kept at a distance, because forbidden by law and custom to come near to those who were sound, for fear of infecting them.

Verse 13. They lifted up their voices] As they were companions in suffering, they were also companions in prayer. Prayer should be strong and earnest, when the disease is great and inveterate.

Verse 14. Shew yourselves unto the priests.] According to the direction, Lev. xiii. 2, &c., xiv. 2, &c. Our Lord intended that their cure should be received by faith: they depended on his goodness and power; and though they had no promise, yet they went at his command to do that which those only were required by the law to do who were already healed.

And—as they went] In this spirit of implicit faith they were cleansed. God highly honours this kind of faith, and makes it the instrument in his hand of working many miracles. He who will not believe till he receives what he calls a reason for it, is never likely to get his soul saved. The highest, the most sovereign reason, that can be given for believing, is that God has commanded it.

Verse 15. One of them, when he saw that he was healed, &c.] It seems that he did not wait to go first to the priest, but turned immediately back.

Verse 16. He was a Samaritan.] One who professed a very corrupt religion; and from whom much less was to be expected than from the other nine, who probably were Jews.

Verse 17. Where are the nine?] Where are the numbers that from time to time have been converted to God?

Verse 18. This stranger.] Often God receives more praise and affectionate obedience from those who had long lived days of the Son of man, and ye shall not see it.

23 ^b And they shall say to you, See here! or, see there! go not after them, nor follow them.

24 ^c For as the lightning that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of man be in his day.

25 ^d But first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation.

26 ^e And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man.

27 They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all.

28 ^f Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded;

29 But ^g the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all.

30 Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man ^h is revealed.

31 In that day, he ⁱ which shall be upon the without his knowledge and fear, than from those who were bred up among his people, and who profess to be called by his name.

Verse 19. Thy faith hath made thee whole.] Thy faith hath been the means of receiving that influence by which thou hast been cleansed.

Verse 20. Cometh not with observation] With scrupulous observation. This is the proper meaning of the original, "The kingdom of God does not come in such a way as to be discerned only by sagacious critics, or is only to be seen by those who are scrupulously watching for it."

Verse 21. Lo here! or, lo there!] Perhaps those Pharisees thought that the Messiah was kept secret, in some private place, known only to some of their rulers; and that by and by he should be proclaimed in a similar way to that in which Joash was by Jehoiada the priest. See the account, 2 Chron. xxiii. 1-11.

Verse 22. When ye shall desire to see one of the days] He either means, ye of this nation, ye Jews, and addresses his disciples as if they should bear witness to the truth of the declaration, intimating that heavy calamities were about to fall upon them, and that they should desire in vain to have those opportunities of returning to God which now they rejected; or, he means that such should the distressed state of this people be, that the disciples would, through pity and tenderness, desire the removal of those punishments from them, which could not be removed because the cup of their iniquity was full. But the former is more likely to be the sense of the place.

Verse 23. And they shall say] Or, And if they shall say. See here! Some MSS. have, Behold the Christ is here. This is undoubtedly the meaning of the place.

Verse 25. But first must he suffer many things] As the cup of the iniquity of this people shall not be full till they have finally rejected and crucified the Lord of life and glory, so this desolation cannot take place till after my death.

Verse 27. They did eat, they drank, &c.] So it was when the Romans came to destroy Judea; there was a universal carelessness, and no one seemed to regard the warnings given by the Son of God.

Verse 29. It rained fire and brimstone] Instead of it rained, Gen. xix. 24, justifies the insertion of the pronoun he; for it is there said that Jehovah rained fire and brimstone from Jehovah out of heaven.

Verse 32. Remember Lot's wife.] Relinquish everything rather than lose your souls. She looked back, probably turned back also to carry some of her goods away—for so much the preceding verse seems to intimate—and became a monument of the divine displeasure, and of her own folly and sin. It is a proof that we have looked with a criminal housetop, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away; and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back.

32 * Remember Lot's wife.

33 ^b Whosoever shall seek to save his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life shall preserve it.

34 ^c I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left.

affection on that which we leave with grief and anxiety, though commanded by the Lord to abandon it.

Verse 37. Where, Lord? In what place shall all these dreadful evils fall? The answer our Lord gives in a figure, the application of which they are to make themselves. Where the dead carcass is, there will be the birds of prey—where the sin is, there will the punishment be.

35 Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

36 [^d Two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left.]

37 And they answered and said unto him, * Where, Lord? And he said unto them, Whosoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together.

^d This 36th verse is wanting in most of the Greek copies.—
* Job. xxxix. 30. Matt. xxiv. 28.

Thither will the eagles (or vultures) be gathered together. The jackal is a devourer of dead bodies; and the vulture is not less so; it is very remarkable how suddenly these birds appear after the death of an animal in the open field, though a single one may not have been seen on the spot for a long period before.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The parable of the importunate widow, 1-8. Of the Pharisee and the Publican, 9-14. Infants brought to Christ, 15-17. The ruler who wished to know how he might inherit eternal life, 18-23. Our Lord's reflections on his case, 24-27. What they shall receive who follow Christ, 28-30. He foretels his approaching passion and death, 31-34. He restores a blind man to sight at Jericho, 35-43.

AND he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought *always to pray, and not to faint;

2 Saying, There was ^b in a city a judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man:

3 And there was a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary.

4 And he would not for a while: but afterward, he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man;

5 * Yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me.

* Ch. xi. 5. xxi. 36. Rom. xii. 12. Eph. vi. 18. Col. iv. 2. 1 Thess. v. 17.—^b Gr. in a certain city.—^c Ch. xi. 8.—^d Rev. vi. 10.

Verse 1. Men ought always to pray] As afflictions and desolations were coming on the land, and they would have need of much patience and continual fortitude, and the constant influence and protection of the Almighty, therefore they should be instant in prayer.

Verse 2. A judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man] No person is worthy to be put in the sacred office of a judge who does not deeply fear God, and tenderly respect his fellow creatures. Because this person feared not God, he paid no attention to the calls of justice; and because he respected not man, he was unmoved at the complaint of the widow.

Verse 3. Avenge me of mine adversary.] Do me justice against, or vindicate me from, mine adversary. If the woman had come to get revenge, I think our blessed Lord would never have permitted her to have the honour of a place in the sacred records. She desired to have justice, and that only; and by her importunity she got that which the unrighteous judge had no inclination to give, but merely for his own case.

6 And the Lord said, Hear what the unjust judge saith.

7 And * shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them?

8 I tell you * that he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?

9 And he spake this parable unto certain * which trusted in themselves * that they were righteous, and despised others:

10 Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican.

11 The Pharisee ^b stood and prayed thus with —* Heb. x. 37. 2 Pet. iii. 8, 9.—^c Ch. x. 29. xvi. 15.—^d Or, as being righteous.—^e Ps. cxxxv. 2.

Verse 4. He said within himself] How many actions which appear good have neither the love of God, nor that of our neighbour, but only self-love of the basest kind, for their principle and motive!

Verse 5. She weary me.] Shun me. A metaphor taken from boxers, who bruise each other, and by beating each other about the face blacken the eyes.

Verse 6. Hear what the unjust judge saith.] If a person of such an infamous character as this judge was, could yield to the pressing solicitations of a poor widow, for whom he felt nothing but contempt, how much more ready must God be, who loves his creatures in the tenderest manner, to give his utmost salvation to all them who diligently seek it!

Verse 7. *And shall not God *avenge his own elect] Do justice for his chosen. Probably this may refer to the cruel usage which his disciples had met with from the Jews; and which should be finally visited upon them. But the text may have a more extensive meaning. As God has graciously promised to give salvation to every soul that comes unto him through his Son, and has put his Spirit in their hearts, himself, * God, I thank thee that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican.

12 I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess.

13 And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner.

14 I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other : ^b for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased ; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

15 ^c And they brought unto him also infants, that he would touch them : but when his disciples saw it, they rebuked them.

16 But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not : for ^d of such is the kingdom of God.

17 ^e Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, shall in no wise enter therein.

18 ^f And a certain ruler asked him, saying, Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life ?

19 And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good ? none is good, save one, that is God.

20 Thou knowest the commandments, ^g Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, ^h Honour thy father and thy mother.

21 And he said, All these have I kept from my youth up.

inducing them to cry unto him incessantly for it ; the goodness of his nature and the promise of his grace bind him to hear their prayers and to grant them all that salvation which he has led them to require.

Which cry day and night unto him, &c.] This is a genuine characteristic of the true elect or disciples of Christ.

Though he bear long with them.] Rather, and he is compassionate towards them, and consequently not at all like to the unrighteous judge. This reading is supported by several MSS. The common translation is so embarrassed as to be almost unintelligible ; while this is as plain as possible, and shows this beautiful parable to be one of the most invaluable pieces in the word of God.

Verse 8. He will avenge them speedily.] Instantly, in a trice.

When the Son of man cometh] To require the produce of the seed of the kingdom sown among this people.

Shall he find faith on the earth ?] Or rather, Shall he find fidelity in this land ? Shall he find that the soil has brought forth a harvest proportioned to the culture bestowed on it ? No. And therefore he destroyed that land.

Verse 9. Despised] Disdained, made nothing of others, treated them with sovereign contempt.

Verse 10. Publican.] Both these persons went to the temple to pray, i. e., to worship God : they were probably both Jews, and felt themselves led by different motives to attend at the temple, at the hour of prayer : the one to return thanks for the mercies he had received ; the other to implore that grace which alone could redeem him from his sins.

Verse 11. Stood and prayed thus with himself] Or, stood by himself and prayed, as some would translate the words. He seems not only to have stood by himself, but also to have prayed by himself ; neither associating in person nor in petitions with his poor guilty neighbour.

God, I thank thee, &c.] The righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees is described here by a Pharisee himself. It consisted first in doing no harm to others ; and second, in attending all the ordinances of God, then established in the Jewish economy.

Verse 12. I give tithes of all that I possess.] Or, of all I 22 Now when Jesus heard these things, he said unto him, Yet lackest thou one thing : 'sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven : and come, follow me.

23 And when he heard this, he was very sorrowful : for he was very rich.

24 And when Jesus saw that he was very sorrowful, he said, ⁱ How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God !

25 For it is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

26 And they that heard it said, Who then can be saved ?

27 And he said, ^j The things which are impossible with men, are possible with God.

28 ^k Then Peter said, Lo, we have left all, and followed thee.

29 And he said unto them, Verily, I say unto you, ^l There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, 30 ^m Who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come, life everlasting.

31 ⁿ Then he took unto him the twelve, and said unto them, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things ^o that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of man shall be accomplished.

32 For ^p he shall be delivered unto the Gentiles, and shall be mocked, and spitefully entreated, and spitted on :

acquire. "As fast as I gain any thing, I give the tenth part of it to the house of God and to the poor." Those who dedicate a certain part of their earnings to the Lord should never let it rest with themselves, lest possession should produce covetousness.

Verse 13. The publican, standing afar off] Not because he was a heathen, and dared not approach the holy place (for it is likely he was a Jew) ; but because he was a true penitent, and felt himself utterly unworthy to appear before God.

Would not lift up—his eyes] Holding down the head, with the eyes fixed upon the earth, was, 1. A sign of deep distress. 2. Of a consciousness and confession of guilt. And, 3. It was the very posture that the Jewish Rabbins required in those who prayed to God. So the Pharisee appears to have forgotten one of his own precepts.

But smote upon his breast] Smiting the breast was a token of excessive grief, commonly practised in all nations.

God be merciful to me] Be propitious toward me through sacrifice—or, let an atonement be made for me. I am a sinner, and cannot be saved but in this way. The Greek word often signifies to make expiation for sin ; and is used by the Septuagint, Ps. lxxviii. 88, lxxviii. 9, for kipper, he made an atonement. We see then, at once, the reason why our blessed Lord said that the tax-gatherer went down to his house justified rather than the other :—he sought for mercy through an atonement for sin, which was the only way in which God had from the beginning purposed to save sinners. As the Pharisee depended on his doing no harm, and observing the ordinances of religion for his acceptance with God, according to the economy of grace and justice, he must be rejected : for as all had sinned and come short of the glory of God, and no man could make an atonement for his sins, so he who did not take refuge in that which God's mercy had provided, must be excluded from the kingdom of heaven. This was no new doctrine : it was the doctrine publicly and solemnly preached by every sacrifice offered under the Jewish law. Without shedding of blood there is no remission, was the loud and constant cry of the whole Mosaic economy. We must humble ourselves before God, 33 And they shall scourge him, and put him to death : and the third day he shall rise again.

34 ^a And they understood none of these things : and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were spoken.

35 ^b And it came to pass, that as he was come nigh unto Jericho, a certain blind man sat by the way side begging :

36 And hearing the multitude pass by, he asked what it meant.

37 And they told him, that Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

38 And he cried, saying, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me.

^b Matt. xx. 29. Mark x. 46.

which they did not : we must take refuge in the blood of the cross, which they would not ; and be meek and humble of heart, which they were not.

Verse 14. Went down to his house justified] His sin blotted out, and himself accepted.

Rather than the other] That is, the other was not accepted, because he exalted himself—he made use of the mercies which he acknowledged he owed to God, to make claims on the divine approbation, and to monopolise the salvation of the Most High ! He was abased, because he vainly trusted that he was righteous, and depended on what he had been enabled to do, and looked not for a change of heart, nor for reconciliation to God.

Verse 25. It is easier for a camel] Instead of a camel, some MSS., read a cable.

39 And they which went before rebuked him, that he should hold his peace : but he cried so much the more, Thou son of David, have mercy on me.

40 And Jesus stood, and commanded him to be brought unto him : and when he was come near, he asked him, 41 Saying, what wilt thou that I shall do unto thee ? And he said, Lord, that I may receive my sight.

42 And Jesus said unto him, Receive thy sight : ^c thy faith hath saved thee.

43 And immediately he received his sight, and followed him, ^d glorifying God : and all the people, when they saw it, gave praise unto God.

^c Ch. xvii. 19.—^d Ch. v. 26. Acts iv. 21. xi. 18.

Verse 33. And the third day he shall rise again.] See Hos. vi. 2 ; the passage should be read thus : In the third day he will raise HIM up, and we shall live before him : his resurrection shall be the pledge, token, and cause of ours.

Verse 34. They understood none of these things] They could not as yet fully comprehend how the Messiah should suffer ; or how their Master should permit the Jews and Gentiles to torment and slay him as he here intimates they would.

Verse 43. And all the people—gave praise unto God.] The common people are often better judges of the work of God, than the Doctors themselves. They are more simple, are not puffed up with the pride of learning, and are less liable to be warped by prejudice or self-interest.

CHAPTER XIX.

The conversion of Zaccheus, 1-10. The parable of the nobleman, his ten servants, and the ten pounds, 11-27. Christ sends his disciples for a colt, on which he rides into Jerusalem, 28-40. He weeps over the city, and foretells its destruction, 41-44. Goes into the temple, and casts out the buyers and sellers, 45, 46. The chief priests and the scribes seek to destroy him, but are afraid of the people, who hear him attentively, 47, 48.

AND Jesus entered and passed through Jericho. 2 And, behold, there was a man named ^a Zaccheus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich.

3 And he sought to see Jesus, ^b who he was ; and could not for the press, because he was little of stature.

4 And he ran before, and climbed up into a sycamore tree to see him : for he was to pass that way.

^a Ezra ii. 9.—^b Ch. xiii. 8.

Verse 1. Entered and passed through] Was passing through ; for the house of Zaccheus, in which he was to lodge, ver. 5, was in it.

Verse 2. Zaccheus] It is not unlikely that this person was a Jew by birth, see ver. 9 ; but because he had engaged in a business so infamous, in the eyes of the Jews, he was considered as a mere heathen, ver. 7.

Chief among the publicans] Either a farmer-general of the taxes, who had subordinate collectors under him : or else the most respectable and honourable man among that class at Jericho.

Verse 3. And he sought to see Jesus who he was] So the mere principle of curiosity in him led to his conversion and 5 And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and saw him, and said unto him, Zaccheus, make haste and come down ; for to-day I must abide at thy house.

6 And he made haste, and came down, and received him joyfully.

7 And when they saw it, they all murmured, saying, ^c That he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner.

salvation, and to that of his whole family, ver. 9. [There seems to have been more than a mere curiosity. His case was like that of the Greeks, John xii. 21.]

Verse 4. He ran before] The shortness of his stature was amply compensated by his agility and invention. Even the imperfections of our persons may become subservient to the grace of God in our eternal salvation.

Verse 5. Make haste, and come down] With this invitation, our blessed Lord conveyed heavenly influence to his heart ; hence he was disposed to pay the most implicit and cheerful obedience to the call, and thus he received not the grace of God in vain.

Verse 6. Received him joyfully.] How often does Christ

8 And Zaccheus stood, and said unto the Lord; Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor: and if I have taken any thing from any man by ^a false accusation, ^b I restore him fourfold.

9 And Jesus said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house, forasmuch as ^c he also is ^d a son of Abraham.

10 ^e For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

11 And as they heard these things, he added and spake a parable because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because ^f they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear.

12 ^g He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country, to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return.

13 And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten ^h pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come.

14 ⁱ But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us.

15 And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the ^j money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading.

16 Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds.

17 And he said unto him, Well, thou good servant: because thou hast been ^k faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities.

18 And the second came, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds.

19 And he said likewise to him, Be thou also over five cities.

20 And another came, saying, Lord, behold, ^l here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin:

21 ^m For I feared thee, because thou art an austere man: thou takest up that thou laydest not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow.

22 And he saith unto him, ⁿ Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. ^o Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow:

23 Wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required my own with usury?

24 And he said unto them that stood by, Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds.

25 (And they said unto him, Lord, he hath ten pounds.)

26 For I say unto you, ^p That unto every one which hath shall be given; and from him that hath not, even that he hath shall be taken away from him.

27 But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me.

28 And when he had thus spoken, ^q he went before, ascending up to Jerusalem.

29 ^r And it came to pass, when he was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount called the make the proposal of lodging, not only in our house, but in our heart, without its being accepted! We lose much because we do not attend to the visitations of Christ: he passes by—he blesses our neighbours and our friends; but, often, neither curiosity nor any other motive is sufficient to induce us to go even to the house of God, to hear of the miracles of mercy which he works in behalf of those who seek him.

Verse 7. To be guest with a man that is a sinner.] Meaning either that he was a heathen, or, though by birth a Jew, yet as bad as a heathen, because of his unholy and oppressive office.

Verse 8. The half of my goods I give to the poor.] Probably he had already done so for some time past; though it is generally understood that the expressions only refer to what he now purposed to do.

I restore him fourfold.] This restitution the Roman laws obliged the tax-gatherers to make, when it was proved they had abused their power by oppressing the people. But here was no such proof: the man, to show the sincerity of his conversion, does it of his own accord. He who has wronged his fellow must make restitution, if he have it in his power. He that does not do so cannot expect the mercy of God.

Verse 9. To this house.] To this very house or family.

Verse 11. And as they heard these things.] I think the text should be read thus: And after they had heard these things, he proceeded to speak a parable, because they were nigh to Jerusalem.

Immediately appear.] Perhaps the generality of his followers thought that, on his arrival at Jerusalem, he would proclaim himself king.

Verse 12. A certain nobleman.] The meaning of the different parts of this parable appears to be as follows:

A certain nobleman.—The Lord Jesus, who was shortly to be crucified by the Jews.

Went into a far country.] Ascended to the right hand of the Divine Majesty.

To receive a kingdom.] To take possession of the mediatorial kingdom, the right to which, as Messiah, he had acquired by his sufferings; see Phil. ii. 8, 9; Heb. i. 3, 8, 9.

The allusion is to the custom of those days, when they who had kingdoms or governments given unto them, went to Rome to receive that dignity from the Emperors.

And to return.] To judge and punish the rebellious Jews. Verse 18. Ten servants.] Ten was a kind of sacred number among the Hebrews, as well as seven.

Ten pounds.] Ten minas. By the ten minas given to each, we may understand the gospel of the kingdom given to every person who professes to believe in Christ, and which he is to improve to the salvation of his soul. The same word is given to all, that all may believe and be saved.

Verse 14. His citizens.] Or, countrymen—the Jewish people, who professed to be subjects of the kingdom of God. Hated him.] Despised him for the meanness of his birth, his crucifixion to the world, and for the holiness of his doctrine.

Sent a message after him.] After the person went to receive his dignity (ver 12), some of the discontented citizens took the opportunity to send an embassy to the emperor, to prevent him from establishing the object of their hatred in the government.

We will not have this man, &c.] The Jews rejected Jesus Christ, would not submit to his government, and, a short time after this, preferred even a murderer to him.

Verse 15. When he was returned.] When he came to punish the disobedient Jews; and when he shall come to judge the world.

Verse 16. Lord, thy pound hath gained ten.] The principal difference between this parable and that of the talents is, that the mina given to each seems to point out the gift of the gospel, which is the same to all who hear it; but the talents distributed in different proportions, according to each man's ability, seem to intimate that God has given different capacities and advantages to men, by which this one gift of the gospel may be differently improved.

Verse 17. Over ten cities.] This is to be understood as referring to the new kingdom which the nobleman had just received.

Verse 23. With usury.] With its produce, i. e., what the loan of the money is fairly worth, after paying the person mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples, 30 Saying, Go ye into the village over against you; in the which at your entering ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man sat: loose him, and bring him hither.

31 And if any man ask you, Why do ye loose him? thus shall ye say unto him, Because the Lord hath need of him.

32 And they that were sent, went their way, and found even as he had said unto them.

33 And as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt?

34 And they said, The Lord hath need of him.

35 And they brought him to Jesus: and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon.

36 And as they went, they spread their clothes in the way.

37 And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice, for all the mighty works that they had seen;

38 Saying, Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest.

sufficiently for using it: for, in lent money, both the lender and borrower are supposed to reap profit.

Verse 25. And they said unto him, Lord, he hath ten pounds.] This observation was probably made while our Lord was delivering the parable, with a design to correct him in the distribution.

40 And he answered and said unto them, I tell you that if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out.

41 And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it, 42 Saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes.

43 For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, 44 And shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation.

45 And he went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought;

46 Saying unto them, It is written, My house is the house of prayer: but ye have made it a den of thieves.

47 And he taught daily in the temple. But the chief priests and the scribes and the chief of the people sought to destroy him, 48 And could not find what they might do: for all the people were very attentive to hear him.

that, if this multitude were silent, God would give even to the stones a voice, that the advent of the Messiah might be duly celebrated.

Verse 42. The things which belong unto thy peace!] It is very likely that our Lord here alludes to the meaning of the word Jerusalem, from yereh, he shall see, and shalom, peace or prosperity.

Verse 43. Cast a trench about thee] This was literally fulfilled when this city was besieged by Titus.

Verse 44. The time of thy visitation.] That is, the time of God's gracious offers of mercy to thee. This took in all the time which elapsed from the preaching of John the Baptist to the coming of the Roman armies, which included a period of above forty years.

Verse 47. And he taught daily in the temple.] This he did for five or six days before his crucifixion.

Verse 48. Were very attentive to hear him.] Literally, They hung upon him, hearing.

CHAPTER XX.

The question concerning the authority of Christ, and the baptism of John, 1-8. The parable of the vineyard let out to wicked husbandmen, 9-18. The chief priests and scribes are offended, and lay snares for him, 19, 20. The question about tribute, 21-26. The question about the resurrection of the dead, and our Lord's answer, 27-40. How Christ is the son of David, 41-44. He warns his disciples against the hypocrisy of the scribes, whose condemnation he points out, 45-47.

AND ^ait came to pass, that on one of these days, as he taught the people in the temple, and preached the gospel, the chief priests and the scribes came upon him with the elders,

2 And spake unto him, saying, Tell us ^bby what authority doest thou these things? or who is he that gave thee this authority?

3 And he answered and said unto them, I will also ask you one thing; and answer me:

4 The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men?

5 And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, Why then believed ye him not?

6 But and if we say, Of men; all the people will stone us: ^cfor they be persuaded that John was a prophet.

7 And they answered, that they could not tell whence it was.

8 And Jesus said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

9 Then began he to speak to the people this parable: ^dA certain man planted a vineyard, and let it forth to husbandmen, and went into a far country for a long time.

10 And at the season he sent a servant to the husbandmen, that they should give him of the fruit of the vineyard: but the husbandmen beat him, and sent him away empty.

11 And again he sent another servant: and they beat him also, and entreated him shamefully, and sent him away empty.

12 And again he sent a third: and they wounded him also, and cast him out.

13 Then said the lord of the vineyard, What shall I do? I will send my beloved son: it may be they will reverence him when they see him.

14 But when the husbandmen saw him, they reasoned among themselves, saying, This is the heir: come, let us kill him, that the inheritance may be our's.

15 So they cast him out of the vineyard, and killed him. What therefore shall the lord of the vineyard do unto them?

16 He shall come and destroy these husbandmen, and shall give the vineyard to others. And when they heard it, they said, God forbid.

17 And he beheld them, and said, What is this then that is written, ^eThe stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner?

18 Whosoever shall fall upon that stone shall be broken; but ^fon whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

19 And the chief priests and the scribes the same hour sought to lay hands on him; and they feared the people: for they perceived that he had spoken this parable against them.

20 ^gAnd they watched him, and sent forth spies, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of his words, that so they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor.

21 And they asked him, saying, ^hMaster, we know that thou sayest and teachest rightly, neither acceptest thou the person of any, but teachest the way of God ⁱtruly:

22 Is it lawful for us to give tribute unto Cæsar, or no?

23 But he perceived their craftiness, and said unto them, Why tempt ye me?

24 Shew me a ^jpenny. Whose image and superscription hath it? They answered and said, Cæsar's.

25 And he said unto them, Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which be Cæsar's, and unto God the things which be God's.

26 And they could not take hold of his words before the people: and they marvelled at his answer, and held their peace.

27 ^kThen came to him certain of the Sadducees, ^lwhich deny that there is any resurrection; and they asked him, 28 Saying, Master, ^mMoses wrote unto us, If any man's brother die, having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

29 There were therefore seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and died without children.

30 And the second took her to wife, and he died childless.

31 And the third took her; and in like manner the seven also: and they left no children, and died.

32 Last of all the woman died also.

33 Therefore in the resurrection whose wife of them is she? for seven had her to wife.

34 And Jesus answering said unto them, The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage:

35 But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage:

36 Neither can they die any more: for ⁿthey are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, ^obeing the children of the resurrection.

37 Now that the dead are raised, ^peven Moses shewed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.

38 For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living; for ^qall live unto him.

39 Then certain of the scribes answering said, Master, thou hast well said.

Our term mite seems to have been taken from the animal called by that name; for as that appeared to our ancestors to be the smallest of all animals, so this being the smallest of all coins was called by its name.

Verse 5. Goodly stones.] It has been thought by some that this relates not so much to the stones of which the temple persecutors) that you are thoroughly persuaded of the truth of what you teach, and that you are no impostors.

Verse 15. I will give you a mouth and wisdom] A ready utterance, or eloquence in speaking. They shall have an abundance of wisdom to know what to say; and they shall have an irresistible eloquence to say what they ought.

Verse 18. But there shall not a hair of your head perish.] A proverbial expression for, Ye shall not suffer any essential injury.

Verse 19. In your patience] Rather, your perseverance, your faithful continuance in my word and doctrine. Ye shall escape the Roman sword, and not one of you shall perish in the destruction of Jerusalem. Instead of possess, or preserve ye, I read, ye shall preserve. This reading is well supported.

Verse 24. They shall fall by the edge of the sword] Those who perished in the siege are reckoned to be not less than eleven hundred thousand.

And shall be led away captive] To the number of ninety-seven thousand.

Trodden down of the Gentiles] Judea was so completely subjugated that the very land itself was sold by Vespasian; the Gentiles possessing it, while the Jews were either nearly all killed or led away into captivity.

Of the Gentiles be fulfilled.] But when shall this be? We know not. The nations are still treading down Jerusalem, and the end is known only to the Lord.

Verse 25. The sea and the waves roaring] Figuratively pointing out the immense Roman armies by which Judea was to be overrun and destroyed.

Verse 26. Men's hearts failing them for fear] Or, Men fainting away through fear, being ready to die.

Coming on the earth] Or, Coming upon this land.

28 And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for 'your redemption draweth nigh.

29ⁱ And he spake to them a parable: Behold the fig-tree, and all the trees;

30 When they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves, that summer is now nigh at hand.

31 So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand.

32 Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away, till all be fulfilled.

33^j Heaven and earth shall pass away: but my words shall not pass away.

34 And^k take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares.

35 For^l as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth.

36^m Watch ye therefore, andⁿ pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and^o to stand before the Son of man.

37^p And in the day time he was teaching in the temple; and^q at night he went out, and abode in the mount that is called the mount of Olives.

38 And all the people came early in the morning to him in the temple, for to hear him.

Verse 29. He spake to them a parable] Illustrated all these predicted facts by the simile of a fig-tree.

Verse 31. The kingdom of God is nigh at hand.] After the destruction of the Jewish state, the doctrine of Christ crucified shall be preached every where, and every where prevail.

Verse 32. This generation] This race of men; but see on Matt. xxiv. 34.

Verse 34. Be overcharged] Literally, be made heavy, as is generally the case with those who have eaten or drank too much.

Verse 35. The face of the whole earth.] The land of Judea on which these heavy judgments were to fall.

Verse 36. Watch ye therefore, and pray always] The word continually belongs equally to both watch and pray; and no man is safe, at any time, who does not attend to this advice as literally as possible.

That shall come to pass] That is, the tribulations which are on their way to overwhelm and destroy the Jewish people.

To stand before the Son of man.] To be acquitted, and to be condemned, are expressed, in Rom. xiv. 4, by standing and falling.

Verse 37. And in the day time] Or, every day. This probably relates to the four last days of his life already mentioned.

Abode in the mount] He taught all day in the temple, and withdrew every evening, and lodged in Bethany; a town at the foot, or on the declivity, of the mount of Olives.

Verse 38. The people came early] He returned early from the mount of Olives, and the people came early in the morning to the temple to hear his teaching.

CHAPTER XXII

The chief priests and scribes plot our Lord's destruction, 1, 2. Judas, at the instigation of the devil, betrays him, 3-6. He eats his last supper with his disciples, 7-18. Institutes the eucharist, 19, 20. Announces one of his disciples as the traitor, 21-23. The contention which should be greatest, 24-30. Warns Peter against Satan's devices, 31, 32. Peter's resolution, 33. His denial foretold, 34. Tells his disciples to make prudent provision for their own support, 35-37. The two swords, 38. He goes to the mount of Olives, and has his agony in the garden, 39-46. Judas comes with a mob, 47, 48. Peter cuts off the ear of the high priest's servant, which Christ heals by a touch, 49-51. He addresses the chief priests and captains of the temple, 52, 53. They lead him to the high priest's house, and Peter follows and denies his Master, 54-60. Christ looks upon him, he is stung with remorse, and weeps bitterly, 61, 62. Jesus is mocked, and variously insulted, 63-65. The next morning he is questioned before the council, 66, 67. He acknowledges himself to be the Son of God, 68-70. They condemn him, 71.

NOW *the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the passover.

2 And ^bthe chief priests and scribes sought how they might kill him; for they feared the people.

3 ^cThen entered Satan into Judas, surnamed Iscariot, being of the number of the twelve.

4 And he went his way, and communed with the chief priests and captains, how he might betray him unto them.

5 And they were glad, and ^dcovenanted to give him money.

6 And he promised, and sought opportunity to betray him unto them, ^ein the absence of the multitude.

7 ^fThen came the day of unleavened bread, when the passover must be killed.

8 And he sent Peter and John, saying, Go and prepare us the passover that we may eat.

9 And they said unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare ^g?

10 And he said unto them, Behold, when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet you, bearing a pitcher of water: follow him into the house where he entereth in.

11 And ye shall say unto the good man of the house, The Master saith unto thee, Where is the guest-chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?

12 And he shall shew you a large upper room furnished: there make ready.

Verse 2. They feared the people. The great mass of the people seem to have been convinced that Christ was at least a prophet sent from God; and it is likely they kept steady in their attachment to him. The multitude, who are represented as clamouring for his blood at the crucifixion, appear to have been a mere mob, formed out of the creatures of the chief priests and Pharisees.

Verse 3. Then entered Satan into Judas The devil filled the heart of Judas with avarice; and that infamous passion led him to commit the crime here specified. What Satan could not do by the envy and malice of the high priests and Pharisees, he effects by Judas, a false and fallen minister of the gospel of God. None are so dangerous to the interests of Christianity as persons of this stamp.

Verse 5. They—covenanted to give him money. Matthew says thirty pieces, or staters, of silver, about £4 10s. English, the common price of the meanest slave.

Verse 6. And he promised He accepted the proposal.

Verse 7. The passover But see the notes on Matt. xvi.

Verse 15. With desire I have desired A Hebraism for, I have desired most earnestly. Our Lord's meaning seems 13 And they went, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover.

14 ^aAnd when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him.

15 And he said unto them, ^bWith desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer:

16 For I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, ^cuntil it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.

17 And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves:

18 For ^dI say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come.

19 ^eAnd he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you: ^fthis do in remembrance of me.

20 Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, ^gThis cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you.

21 ^hBut, behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table.

22 ⁱAnd truly the Son of man goeth, ^jas it was determined: but woe unto that man by whom he is betrayed!

23 ^kAnd they began to enquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing.

24 ^lAnd there was also a strife among them, to be, that, having purposed to redeem a lost world by his blood, he ardently longed for the time in which he was to offer himself up. Such love did the holy Jesus bear to the human race.

Verse 16. Until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God. That is, until that of which the passover is a type is fulfilled in my death, through which the kingdom of God shall be established among men.

Verse 17. He took the cup This was not the sacramental cup, for that was taken after supper, ver. 20, but was the cup which was ordinarily taken before supper.

Divide it among yourselves Pass the cup from one to another.

Verse 18. I will not drink of the fruit of the vine That is, before the time of another passover, the Holy Ghost shall descend, the gospel of the kingdom be established, and the sacramental supper shall take the place of the paschal lamb; for in a few hours his crucifixion was to take place.

Verse 20. This cup is the new testament in my blood Perhaps it might be better to paraphrase the passage thus: This cup which is poured out for you, signifies the blood of which of them should be accounted the greatest.

25 "And he said unto them, The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors.

26 "But ye shall not be so: "but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve.

27 "For whether is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth? is not he that sitteth at meat? but "I am among you as he that serveth.

28 Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations.

29 And "I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me;

30 That "ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, "and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

31 And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, "Satan hath desired to have you, that he may "sift you as wheat:

32 But "I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not; "and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

33 And he said unto him, Lord, I am ready to go with thee, both into prison, and to death.

34 "And he said, I tell thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me.

the new covenant, which is shortly to be ratified in (or by) the shedding of my blood. Or, This cup is the new covenant, poured out for you with my blood:—that is, the paschal sacrifice and my sacrifice happen together.

Verse 22. The Son of man goeth] That is, he is about to die.

Verse 24. There was also a strife among them] There are two different instances of this sort of contention or strife mentioned by the Evangelists, each of which was accompanied with very different circumstances; one by Matthew, in chap. xviii. 1, &c.; by Mark, chap. ix. 33, &c.; and by Luke, in chap. ix. 46, &c. That contention cannot have been the same with this which is mentioned here. The other, related in Matt. xx. 20, &c., and Mark x. 35, &c., must be what Luke intended here to record.

Verse 25. Are called benefactors.] The very Greek word used by the Evangelist, was the surname of some of the Ptolemies of Egypt; Ptolemy Euergetes, i. e., the Benefactor.

Verse 29. I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me] The Codex Alexandrinus with some other MSS., read in the first clause, a covenant. I appoint unto you a COVENANT, as my Father hath appointed unto me a kingdom.—Ye shall be ministers of the New Covenant, as I am King in that spiritual kingdom to which it relates. This is a curious reading; but our Lord is probably to be understood as promising that they should get a kingdom—a state of blessedness, as he should get it—they must go through much tribulation in order to enter into the kingdom of God.

Verse 30. Sit on thrones] See on Matt. xix. 28.

Verse 31. Simon, Simon] When a name is thus repeated in the Sacred Writings, it appears to be always intended as an expression of love, manifested by a warning voice.

Satan hath desired—[you]] That is, all the apostles, but particularly the three contenders: the plural pronoun sufficiently proves that these words were not addressed to Peter alone. Satan had already got one, Judas; he had nearly got another, Peter; and he wished to have all. But we see by this that the devil cannot even tempt a man unless he receive permission. He desires to do all evil; he is permitted only to do some.

Verse 32. I have prayed for thee] Peter's faith did fail, but not utterly: he did fail, but he did not fall off, apostatise, or forsake his Master and his cause finally, as Judas did.

35 "And he said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye any thing? And they said, Nothing.

36 Then said he unto them, But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip: and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one.

37 For I say unto you, that this that is written must yet be accomplished in me, "And he was reckoned among the transgressors: for the things concerning me have an end.

38 And they said, Lord, behold, here are two swords. And he said unto them, It is enough.

39 "And he came out, and "went, as he was wont, to the mount of Olives; and his disciples also followed him.

40 "And when he was at the place, he said unto them, Pray that ye enter not into temptation.

41 "And he was withdrawn from them about a stone's cast, and kneeled down, and prayed, 42 Saying, Father, if thou be "willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless "not my will, but thine, be done.

43 And there appeared "an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him.

44 "And being in an agony he prayed more earnestly: and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground.

45 And when he rose up from prayer, and was

When thou art converted] Restored to a sense of thy folly and sin, and to me and my cause—establish these thy brethren. Peter's two Epistles to the persecuted Christians show how well he was qualified for this important work.

Verse 34. The cock shall not crow this day] Matthew xxvi. 34, and Mark, xiv. 30, say, this night; both expressions are right, because the Jewish day, of twenty-four hours, began with the evening, and ended at the evening of the following day.

Verse 36. He that hath no sword] The word stands rather oddly in the passage; the verse, translated in the order in which it stands, is as follows: And he who hath none, let him sell his garment and buy—a sword. Now it is plain that the verb let him buy, may be referred to a scrip, in the former part of the verse, thus it would read: "if any of you have no scrip or wallet, he should sell even his upper garment to provide one." Some who are for retaining the word sword, think that it was a proverbial expression, intimating a time of great difficulty and danger, and that now the disciples had need to look to themselves, for his murderers were at hand. However the matter may be understood, we may rest satisfied that the swords were neither to be considered as offensive weapons, nor instruments to propagate the truth. The genius and spirit of the Christian religion is equally against both. Perhaps, in this counsel of our Lord, he refers to the contention about supremacy; as if he had said, Instead of contending among yourselves about who shall be the greatest, ye have more need to unite yourselves against the common enemy, who are now at hand: this counsel was calculated to show them the necessity of union among themselves, as their enemies were both numerous and powerful.

Verse 37. Must yet be accomplished] Probably meaning that, though this prophecy did refer to some particular matter in the time of the prophet, yet it further related to Christ, and could not have its complete accomplishment, but in his crucifixion as a criminal.

Verse 38. Lord, behold, here are two swords. And he said unto them, It is enough.] These words may be understood as pointing out the readiness and determination of Peter, and perhaps some others, to defend our Lord: Thou shalt not be treated as a transgressor; here are two swords, and we will fight for thee.

come to his disciples, he found them sleeping for sorrow, 46 And said unto them, Why sleep ye? rise and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.

47 And while he yet spake, behold a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus to kiss him.

48 But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?

49 When they which were about him saw what would follow, they said unto him, Lord, shall we smite with the sword?

50 And one of them smote a servant of the high priest, and cut off his right ear.

51 And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far. And he touched his ear, and healed him.

52 Then Jesus said unto the chief priests, and captains of the temple, and the elders, which were come to him, Be ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves?

53 When I was daily with you in the temple ye stretched forth no hands against me: but this is your hour, and the power of darkness.

54 Then took they him, and led him, and brought him into the high priest's house. And Peter followed afar off.

55 And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and were set down together, Peter sat down among them.

56 But a certain maid beheld him as he sat by the fire, and earnestly looked upon him, and said, This man was also with him.

57 And he denied him, saying, Woman, I know him not.

58 And after a little while, another saw him, and said, Thou art also of them. And Peter said, Man, I am not.

59 And about the space of one hour after, another confidently affirmed, saying, Of a truth this fellow also was with him: for he is a Galilean.

60 And Peter said, Man, I know not what thou sayest. And immediately, while he yet spake, the cock crew.

61 And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter. And Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how he had said unto him, Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

62 And Peter went out, and wept bitterly.

63 And the men that held Jesus mocked him, and smote him.

64 And when they had blindfolded him, they struck him on the face, and asked him, saying, Prophesy, who is it that smote thee?

65 And many other things blasphemously spake they against him.

66 And as soon as it was day, the elders of the people, and the chief priests, and the scribes came together, and led him into their council, saying,

67 Art thou the Christ? tell us. And he said unto them, If I tell you, ye will not believe:

68 And if I also ask you, ye will not answer me, nor let me go.

69 Hereafter shall the Son of man sit on the right hand of the power of God.

70 Then said they all, Art thou then the Son of God? And he said unto them, Ye say that I am.

71 And they said, What need we any further witness? for we ourselves have heard of his own mouth.

It is enough.] The meaning probably is, there is enough said on the subject; as immediately after this he entered into his agony.

I must here confess that the matter about the swords appears to me very obscure. I am afraid I do not understand it, and I know of none who does.

Verse 40. When he was at the place] Viz., Gethsemane.

Verse 43. There appeared an angel—from heaven] It was as necessary that the fullest evidence should be given, not only of our Lord's divinity, but also of his humanity: his miracles sufficiently attested the former; his hunger, weariness, and agony in the garden, as well as his death and burial, were proofs of the latter.

Verse 44. Prayed more earnestly] With greater emphasis and earnestness than usual, with strong crying and tears, Heb. v. 7; the reason given for which is, that he was in an agony.

Drops of blood] See the note on Matt. xxvi. 38. Some have thought that the meaning of the words is, that the sweat was so profuse that every drop was as large as a drop of blood, not that the sweat was blood itself: but this does not appear likely.

Verse 48. Betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?] Dost thou attempt to kiss me as a friend, while thou art delivering me up into the hands of my enemies?

Verse 51. Suffer ye thus far.] Or, Suffer me to go thus far. As they had now a firm hold of Christ, Matt. xxvi. 5, he wished them to permit him to go as far as Malchus, whose ear was cut off, that he might heal it. However, the words may be understood as an address to his disciples: Let them proceed; make no resistance; for in this way only are the Scriptures to be fulfilled.

Verse 53. This is your hour, and the power of darkness.] That is, the time in which you are permitted to unrein your malice; which ye could not do before, because God did not permit you; and so perfectly are ye under his control that neither you nor the prince of darkness can proceed a hair's breadth against me but through this permission. What a comfortable thought is it to the followers of Christ, that neither men nor demons can act against them but by the permission of their heavenly Father, and that he will not suffer any of those who trust in him to be tried above what they are able to bear, and will make the trial issue in their greater salvation, and in his glory!

Verse 56. A certain maid beheld him] Or, Attentively beholding him. And this she did by the help of the light of the fire at which Peter sat.

Verse 68. And if I also ask you] Concerning the Christ, in case ye cannot give me such an answer as may prove I am not the Christ, ye will not let me go; for I know ye are determined to put me to death.

Verse 69. Hereafter] From this very time. The kingdom of God is now going to be set up.

Verse 70. Art thou then the Son of God?] They all insisted on an answer to this question, and the high priest particularly put it to him, Matt. xxvi. 68.

Verse 71. We ourselves have heard] We have heard him profess himself the Son of God; he is therefore guilty of blasphemy, and, as an impious pretender to a divine mission, we must proceed against and condemn him to death.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Christ is led to Pilate, and accused by the Jews, 1, 2. Pilate examines, and pronounces him innocent, 3, 4. The Jews virulently accuse him, 5. Pilate, understanding that he was of Galilee, sends him to Herod, by whom he is examined, 6-9. The chief priests and scribes vehemently accuse him, and Herod and his soldiers mock him, 10, 11. Pilate and Herod become friends, 12. Pilate, before the chief priests, rulers, and people, pronounces Christ to be innocent, and offers to release him, 13-20. The Jews clamour for his condemnation, and Pilate gives him up to their will, 21-25. Simon bears his cross, 26. The people bewail him, and he foretells the destruction of the Jewish state, 27-31. He and two malefactors are brought to Calvary, and are crucified, 32, 33. He prays for his crucifiers, 34. He is derided, mocked, and insulted by the rulers, and by the soldiers, 35-37. The superscription on the cross, 38. The conduct of the two malefactors, to one of whom he promises paradise, 39-43. The great darkness, 44, 45. He gives up the ghost, 46. The Centurion and many others are greatly affected at his death, 47-49. Joseph of Arimathea begs the body, and puts it in his own new tomb, 50-53. The women prepare spices and ointments to enbalm him, 54 56.

AND *the whole multitude of them arose, and led him unto Pilate.

2 And they began to accuse him, saying, We found this fellow ^b perverting the nation, and ^c forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar, saying, ^d that he himself is Christ a King.

3 ^e And Pilate asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answered him, and said, Thou sayest it.

4 Then said Pilate to the chief priests and to the people, 'I find no fault in this man.

5 And they were the more fierce, saying, He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place.

6 When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a Galilean.

7 And as soon as he knew that he belonged unto ^e Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod, who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time.

Verse 1. The whole multitude] It seems most probable that the chief priests, elders, scribes, and captains of the temple, together with their servants, dependants, and other persons hired for the purpose, made up the multitude mentioned here. The common people were generally favourers of Christ; and for this reason the Jewish rulers caused him to be apprehended in the night, and in the absence of the people, chap. xxii. 6, and it was now but just the break of day, xxii. 66.

Verse 2. Pervverting the nation] The Greek word signifies stirring up to dissension and rebellion. They intimated that he not only preached corrupt doctrine, but that he endeavoured to make them dissatisfied towards the Roman government, for which they now pretended to feel a strong affection!

Forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar] These were the falsest slanders that could be invented. The whole of our Lord's conduct disproved them. And his decision in the case of the question about the lawfulness of paying tribute to Cæsar, Matt. xxii. 21, was so fully known that we find Pilate paid not the least attention to such evidently malicious and unfounded accusations.

Verse 5. Saying, He stirreth up the people, &c.] The charge of sedition was deemed frivolous by Pilate, so they changed it, and brought a charge equally false and groundless against his doctrine.

Verse 7. Herod's jurisdiction] The city of Nazareth, in which Christ had continued till he was thirty years of age, and that of Capernaum, in which he principally resided the last years of his life, were both in Lower Galilee, of which Herod Antipas was tetrarch. Pilate was probably glad of this opportunity to pay a little respect to Herod, whom it is likely he had irritated, and with whom he now wished to be friends.

Verse 10. The chief priests—vehemently accused him.] An affected moderation would have rendered these accusers less suspected, their accusations more probable, and the envy

8 And when Herod saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad: for ^h he was desirous to see him of a long season, because ⁱ he had heard many things of him; and he hoped to have seen some miracle done by him.

9 Then he questioned with him in many words; but he answered him nothing.

10 And the chief priests and scribes stood and vehemently accused him.

11 ^j And Herod with his men of war set him at nought, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe, and sent him again to Pilate.

12 And the same day ^k Pilate and Herod were made friends together: for before they were at enmity between themselves.

13 ^l And Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests and the rulers and the people,

14 Said unto them, ^m Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people: and, less visible than his vehemence, but envy seldom or never consults prudence; and God permits this to be so for the honour of truth and innocence.

Verse 11. A gorgeous robe] It probably means a white robe, for it was the custom of the Jewish nobility to wear such. But the nobility among the Romans wearing the purple for the most part, Pilate's soldiers, who were Romans, put on Jesus a purple robe, Mark xv. 17; John xix. 2; both of them following the custom of their own country, when, by way of mocking our Lord as a king, they clothed him in robes of state.

Verse 12. Pilate and Herod were made friends] It is generally supposed that their enmity arose from what is related, chap. xiii. of the Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with that of their sacrifices. These were Herod's subjects, and Pilate seems to have fallen on them at the time they were offering sacrifices to God at the temple. Wicked men cannot love one another: this belongs to the disciples of Christ. But, when Christ, his truth, or his followers are to be persecuted, for this purpose the wicked unite their counsels and their influence.

Verse 15. Nothing worthy of death is done unto him.] Or rather, nothing worthy of death is committed by him, not done unto him. This phrase is frequent in the purest Attic writers.

Verse 17. For of necessity he must release one] The custom, however it originated, had now been so completely established, that Pilate was obliged to attend to it.

Verse 18. Away with this man] Literally, take this one away, i. e., to punishment—to death.

Verse 22. I have found no cause of death in him] There is nothing proved against him that can at all justify me in putting him to death. So here our blessed Lord was in the most formal manner justified by his judge. Now, as this decision was publicly known, and perhaps, registered, it is evident that Christ died as an innocent person, and not as a malefactor.

behold, * I, having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him :

15 No, nor yet Herod : for I sent you to him ; and, lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him.

16 ^b I will therefore chastise him, and release him.

17 ^c (For of necessity he must release one unto them at the feast.)

18 And ^d they cried out all at once, saying, Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas :

19 (Who for a certain sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.)

20 Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, spake again to them.

21 But they cried, saying, Crucify him, crucify him.

22 And he said unto them the third time, Why, what evil hath he done ? I have found no cause of death in him : I will therefore chastise him, and let him go.

23 And they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified. And the voices of them and of the chief priests prevailed.

24 And ^e Pilate gave sentence that it should be as they required.

25 And he released unto them him that for sedition and murder was cast into prison, whom they had desired ; but he delivered Jesus to their will.

26 ^f And as they led him away, they laid hold upon one Simon, a Cyrenian, coming out of the country, and on him they laid the cross, that he might bear it after Jesus.

27 And there followed him a great company of people, and of women, which also bewailed and lamented him.

28 But Jesus turning unto them said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children.

29 ^h For, behold, the days are coming, in the Verse 27. Bewailed and lamented him.] Beat their breasts.

Verse 28. Weep not for me] Many pious persons have been greatly distressed in their minds, because they could not weep on reading or hearing of the sufferings of Christ. For the relief of all such, let it be for ever known, that no human spirit can possibly take any part in the passion of the Messiah. His sufferings were such as only God manifested in the flesh could bear ; and, as they were all of an expiatory nature, no man can taste or share in them. Besides, the sufferings of Christ are not a subject of sorrow to any man ; but, on the contrary, of eternal rejoicing to the whole of a lost world.

Relative to this point, there are many unwarrantable expressions used by religious people in their prayers and hymns. To give only one instance, how often do we hear these or similar words said or sung :

" Give me to feel thy agonies !

One drop of thy sad cup afford ! "

Reader ! one drop of this cup would bear down thy soul to endless ruin ; and these agonies would annihilate the universe.

Verse 31. If they do these things in a green tree] This seems to be a proverbial expression, the sense of which is : If they spare not a tree which, by the beauty of its foliage, abundance and excellence of its fruits, deserves to be preserved, then the tree which is dry and withered will surely be cut down. Our Lord alludes prophetically to these tribulations which fell upon the Jewish people about forty years after. See the notes on Matt. xiv.

Verse 32. Two other malefactors] Two others, malefactors. As it now stands in the text, it seems to intimate that our blessed Lord was also a malefactor.

which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck.

30 ⁱ Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us, and to the hills, Cover us.

31 ^j For if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry ?

32 ^k And there were also two other malefactors led with him to be put to death.

33 And ^l when they were come to the place which is called ^m Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

34 Then said Jesus, Father, ⁿ forgive them ; for ^o they know not what they do. And ^p they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

35 And ^q the people stood beholding. And the ^r rulers also with them derided him, saying, He saved others ; let him save himself, if he be Christ, the chosen of God.

36 And the soldiers also mocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar, 37 And saying, If thou be the king of the Jews, save thyself.

38 ^s And a superscription also was written over him in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

39 ^t And one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us.

40 But the other answering rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation ?

41 And we indeed justly ; for we receive the due reward of our deeds : but this man hath done nothing amiss.

42 And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom !

Verse 34. They know not what they do.] If ignorance do not excuse a crime, it at least diminishes the atrocity of it. However, these persons well knew that they were crucifying an innocent man ; but they did not know that, by this act of theirs, they were bringing down on themselves and on their country the heaviest judgments of God. In the prayer, Father, forgive them ! that word of prophecy was fulfilled, He made intercession for the transgressors, Isa. liii. 12.

Verse 35. Derided him] Treated him with the utmost contempt, in the most infamous manner.

Verse 36. Offering him vinegar] Vinegar or small sour wine, was a common drink of the Roman soldiers ; and it is supposed that wherever they were on duty they had a vessel of this liquor standing by. It appears that at least two cups were given to our Lord ; one before he was nailed to the cross, viz., of wine mingled with myrrh, and another of vinegar, while he hung on the cross.

Verse 38. In letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew] The inscription was written in Greek, on account of the Hellenistic Jews, who were then at Jerusalem because of the passover ; it was written in Latin, that being the language of the government under which he was crucified ; and it was written in Hebrew, that being the language of the place in which this deed of darkness was committed. But, by the good providence of God, the inscription itself exculpated him, and proved the Jews to be rebels against, and murderers of, their king. It is not to be wondered at that they wished Pilate to alter this inscription, John xix. 21, as it was a record of their infamy.

Verse 39. One of the malefactors which were hanged] It is likely that the two robbers were not nailed to their crosses, 43 And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise.

44 "And it was about the sixth hour, and there was darkness over all the earth, until the ninth hour.

45 And the sun was darkened, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst.

46 And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit: "and having said thus, he gave up the ghost.

47 "Now when the centurion saw what was done, he glorified God, saying, Certainly this was a righteous man.

48 And all the people that came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts, and returned.

49 "And all his acquaintance and the women that followed him from Galilee, stood afar off, beholding these things.

but only tied to them by cords, and thus they are represented in ancient paintings.

Verse 40. Do not thou fear God] The sufferings of this person had been sanctified to him, so that his heart was open to receive help from the hand of the Lord: he is a genuine penitent, and gives the fullest proof he can give of it, viz., the acknowledgment of the justice of his sentence.

Verse 42. Lord, remember me, &c.] It is worthy of remark, that this man appears to have been the first who believed in the intercession of Christ.

Verse 43. To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise.] This saying of our Lord is justly considered as a strong proof of the immateriality of the soul; and it is no wonder that those who have embraced the contrary opinion, should endeavour to explain away this meaning. In order to do this, a comma is placed after to-day, and then our Lord is supposed to have meant, "Thou shalt be with me after the resurrection: I tell thee this, TO-DAY." Such support a good cause cannot need; and, in my opinion, even a bad cause must be discredited by it.

The word paradise is not Greek, but is of Asiatic origin. In Arabic and Persian it signifies a garden, a vineyard, and also the place of the blessed. Paradise was, in the beginning, the habitation of man in his state of innocence, in which he enjoyed that presence of his Maker which constituted his supreme happiness. Our Lord's words intimate that this penitent should be immediately taken to the abode of the spirits of the just, where he should enjoy the presence and approbation of the Most High.

Verse 44. Darkness over all the earth] The darkness began at the sixth hour, about our twelve o'clock at noon, and lasted 50 "And, behold, there was a man named Joseph, a counsellor; and he was a good man, and a just:

51 (The same had not consented to the counsel and deed of them;) he was of Arimathea, a city of the Jews, who also himself waited for the kingdom of God.

52 This man went unto Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus.

53 "And he took it down, and wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a sepulchre that was hewn in stone, wherein never man before was laid.

54 And that day was the preparation, and the sabbath drew on.

55 And the women also, which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulchre, and how his body was laid.

56 And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments; and rested the sabbath day, according to the commandment.

till the ninth hour, which answered to our three o'clock in the afternoon.

Verse 46. Into thy hands I commend my spirit] Or, I will commit my spirit—I deposit my soul in thy hands. Another proof of the immateriality of the soul, and of its separate existence when the body is dead.

Verse 48. And all the people] All were deeply affected except the priests, and those whom they had employed to serve their base purposes. How dreadful is the state of those who, in consequence of their long opposition to the grace and truth of God, are at last given up to a reprobate mind!

Verse 54. And the sabbath drew on.] Or, The sabbath was lighting up, i. e., with the candles which the Jews light just before six in the evening, when the sabbath commences. The same word is used for the dawning of the day, Matt. xxviii. 1.

Verse 55. The women also, which came] These were Mary of Magdala, Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, chap. xxiv. 10. To these three, Mark, in chap. xvi. 1, adds Salome; but some think that this was only a surname of one of these Marys.

Verse 56. Prepared spices and ointments] This was in order to embalm him; which sufficiently proves that they had no hope of his resurrection the third day.

And rested the sabbath day] For though the Jewish canons allowed all works, necessary for the dead, to be done, even on the sabbath, such as washing and anointing, provided they moved not a limb of the dead person, yet, as the Jews had put Christ to death under the pretence of his being a malefactor, it would not have been either prudent or safe to appear too forward in the present business; and therefore they rested on the sabbath.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The women coming early to the sepulchre on the first day of the week, bringing their spices, find the stone rolled away, and the tomb empty, 1-3. They see a vision of angels, who announce Christ's resurrection, 4-8. The women return and tell this to the eleven, 9, 10. They believe not, but Peter goes and examines the tomb, 11, 12. Christ, unknown, appears to two of his disciples who were going to Emmaus, and converses with them, 13-29. While they were eating together, he makes himself known, and immediately disappears, 30, 31. They return to Jerusalem, and announce his resurrection to the rest of the disciples, 32-35. Jesus himself appears to them, and gives them the fullest proof of the reality of his resurrection, 36-43. He preaches to them, and gives them the promise of the Holy Spirit, 44-49. He takes them to Bethany, and ascends to heaven in their sight, 50-51. They worship him, and return to Jerusalem, 52, 53.

NOW ^aupon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, ^bbringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them.

2 ^cAnd they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre.

3 ^dAnd they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus.

4 And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, ^ebehold, two men stood by them in shining garments:

5 And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye ^fthe living among the dead?

6 He is not here, but is risen: ^gremember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee,

7 Saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.

8 And ^hthey remembered his words,

9 ⁱAnd returned from the sepulchre, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest.

10 It was Mary Magdalene, and ^jJoanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles.

11 ^kAnd their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not.

12 ^lThen arose Peter, and ran unto the sepulchre; and stooping down, he beheld the linen clothes laid by themselves, and departed, wondering in himself at that which was come to pass.

13 ^mAnd, behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs.

14 And they talked together of all these things which had happened.

Verse 1. Bringing the spices] There was a second embalming found necessary: the first must have been hastily and imperfectly performed; the spices now brought by the women were intended to complete the preceding operation.

Verse 2. They found the stone rolled away] When persons have strong confidence in God, obstacles do not hinder them from undertaking whatever they have reason to believe he requires; and the removal of them they leave to him: and what is the consequence? They go on their way comfortably, and all difficulties vanish before them.

Verse 3. And found not the body of the Lord] His holy soul was in Paradise, chap. xiii. 43; and the Evangelist mentions the body particularly, to show that this only was subject to death. It is, I think, evident enough, from these and other words of Luke, that the doctrine of the materiality of the soul made no part of his creed.

Verse 5. Why seek ye the living among the dead?] This was a common form of speech among the Jews, and seems to be applied to those who were foolishly, impertinently, or absurdly employed. As places of burial were unclean, it was not reasonable to suppose that the living should frequent them; or that if any was missing he was likely to be found in such places.

Verse 7. Sinful men] Or, heathens, i. e., the Romans, by whom only he could be put to death; for the Jews themselves acknowledged that this power was now vested in the hands of the Roman governor alone.

Verse 8. They remembered his words] Even the simple recollection of the words of Christ becomes often a source of 15 And it came to pass, that, while they communed together and reasoned, ^aJesus himself drew near and went with them.

16 But ^btheir eyes were holden that they should not know him.

17 And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?

18 And the one of them, ^cwhose name was Cleopas, answering said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?

19 And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, ^dwhich was a prophet ^emighty in deed and word before God and all the people:

20 ^fAnd how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him.

21 But we trusted ^gthat it had been he which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, to-day is the third day since these things were done.

22 Yea, and ^hcertain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre;

24 And ⁱcertain of which were with us went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said: but him they saw not.

25 Then he said unto them, O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken!

comfort and support to those who are distressed or tempted; for his words are the words of eternal life.

Verse 10. And Joanna] She was the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward.

Verse 12. Then arose Peter] John went with him, and got to the tomb before him.

The linen clothes laid by themselves] Or, The linen clothes only. No mean proof of the resurrection of our Lord. Had the body been stolen away, all that was wrapped about it would have been taken away with it; as the delay which must have been occasioned by stripping it might have led to the detection of the theft; nor would the disciples have run such a risk if they had stolen him, when stripping the body could have answered no end. This circumstance is related still more particularly by John, chap. xx. 5, 6, 7. Hurry and confusion necessarily mark every act of robbery.

Verse 13. Behold, two of them] One of these disciples was Cleopas, ver. 18, and the other is supposed by many learned men, both ancient and modern, to have been Luke himself.

Verse 15. And reasoned] It was a laudable custom of the Jews, to converse about the law in all their journeyings; and now they had especial reason to discourse together, from the transactions which had recently taken place.

Verse 16. Their eyes were holden] It does not appear that there was anything supernatural here.

Verse 18. Cleopas] The same as Alphaeus, father of the apostle James. Mark iii. 18, and husband of the sister of the virgin.

genuine prophet ; but this has been considered as a Hebraism. My own opinion is, that this word is often used to deepen the signification ; and here signifies a GENUINE prophet, nothing like those false ones by whom the people had been so often deceived.

Mighty in—word] Irresistibly eloquent. Powerful in deed, working incontrovertible miracles.

Verses 21-24. Cleopas prints the real state of his own mind in these verses. The narration is not at all in Luke's style ; but as it is probable he was the other disciple who was present, and had heard the words of Cleopas, he gave them in that simple, natural, artless manner in which they were spoken. Had the account been forged, those simple, natural touches would not have appeared.

Verse 25. O fools and slow of heart to believe] Inconsiderate men, justly termed such, because they had not properly attended to the description given of the Messiah by the prophets, nor to his teaching and miracles, as proofs that HE ALONE was the person they described.

Slow of heart—Backward, not easy to be persuaded of the truth, always giving way to doubtfulness and distrust. This very imperfection in them is a strong evidence of the truth of the doctrine which they afterwards believed, and proclaimed to the world.

Verse 26. Ought not Christ to have suffered] Was it not necessary that the Christ should suffer. The suffering Messiah is he alone by whom Israel and the world can be saved.

Verse 27. And beginning at Moses, &c.] No wonder their hearts burned within them, while hearing such a sermon from such a preacher. The law and the prophets had all borne testimony, either directly or indirectly, to Christ ; and we may naturally suppose that these prophecies and references were those which our Lord at this time explained and applied to himself. See ver. 32.

Verse 28. He made as though he would have gone further.] That is, he was going on, as though he intended to go further ; and so he doubtless would, had they not earnestly pressed him to lodge with them.

This is a constant effect of the doctrine of Christ : wherever it is felt, the author of it, the ever-blessed Jesus, is earnestly entreated to dwell in the heart ; and he who preaches it is amply provided with the necessities of life by those who have received his testimony.

Verse 29. For it is toward evening] And consequently both inconvenient and unsafe to proceed to another village. And he went in] And so he will to thee, thou penitent soul ! Therefore take courage, and be not faithless, but believing.

Verse 30. He took bread] This was the office of the master and father of a family ; and this was our Lord's usual custom among his disciples. Those whom Christ lodges with he feeds, and feeds too with bread that himself hath blessed, and this feeding not only strengthens, but also enlightens the soul.

Verse 31. Their eyes were opened] But we are not to and how he was known of them in breaking of bread. 36 'And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

37 But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen ^a a spirit.

38 And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled ? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts ?

39 Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself : ^b handle me, and see ; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have.

40 And when he had thus spoken, he shewed them his hands and his feet.

41 And while they yet believed not ^c for joy, and wondered, he said unto them, ^d Have ye here any meat ?

42 And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, and of a honeycomb.

43 ^e And he took it, and did eat before them.

44 And he said unto them, ^f These are the words

xx. 19. 1 Cor. xv. 5.—^a Mark vi. 49.—^b John xx. 20. 27. ^c Gen. xiv. 25.—^d John xxi. 5.—^e Acts x. 41.—^f Matt. xvi. 21. xvii. 22. xx. 18. Mark viii. 31. Ch. ix. 22. xviii. 31. Ver. 6.

imagine that he administered the Holy Eucharist at this time ; there is not the most distant evidence of this. It was a mere family meal, and ended before it was well begun.

They knew him] Perhaps by his acting as father of the family, in taking, blessing, and distributing the bread. Probably he also threw off the disguise which he had before assumed ; and now appeared in his own person.

He vanished out of their sight.] During their surprise, he took the opportunity of withdrawing from the place.

Verse 32. Did not our heart burn within us] His word was in our heart as a burning fire, Jer. xx. 9. Our hearts waxed hot within us, and while we were musing the fire burned, Ps. xxxix. 3.

Verse 34. Saying, The Lord is risen indeed] It is not the two disciples to whom we are to refer the word, saying ; but to the body of the disciples.

Verse 35. And they] The two disciples who were just come from Emmaus.

Verse 36. And as they thus spake] It is ever true that, wherever two or three are gathered together in his name, he is in the midst of them.

Peace be unto you.] The usual salutation among the Jews.

Verse 37. And supposed that they had seen a spirit.] But if there be no such thing as a disembodied spirit, would not our Lord have shown them their error ? Instead of this, he confirms them in their opinion, by saying, A spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have, ver. 39 ; therefore he says, handle me and see me. They probably imagined that it was the soul only of our blessed Lord which they saw ; but they were soon fully convinced of the identity of his person, and the reality of his resurrection.

Verse 41. They—believed not for joy] As we phrase it, they thought the news too good to be true.

Verse 44. The law—the prophets—the psalms] This was the Jewish division of the whole Old Covenant.

Verse 45. Then opened he their understanding] He fully opened. By the influence of Christ, they see, not only the prophecies which pointed out the Messiah, but also the Messiah who was pointed out by these prophecies. The book of God may be received in general as a divine revelation, but the proper meaning, reference, and application of the scriptures can only be discerned by the light of Christ. Even the very plain word of God is a dead letter to those who are not enlightened by the grace of Christ ; and why ? because this word speaks of spiritual and heavenly things ; and the carnal mind of man cannot discern them.

Verse 47. Remission of sins] The taking away—removal of sins, in general—everything that relates to the destruction of the power, the pardoning of the guilt, and the purification of the heart from the very nature of sin.

In his name—On his authority, and in virtue of the atonement made by him : for on what other ground could the inhabitants of the earth expect remission of sins ?

Among all nations] Because God wills the salvation of ALL ; and Jesus Christ by his grace has tasted death for EVERY man.

which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me.

45 Then ^a opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures,

46 And said unto them, ^b Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day :

47 And that repentance and ^c remission of sins should be preached in his name ^d among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

48 And ^e ye are witnesses of these things.

Beginning at Jerusalem.] Making the first overtures of mercy to my murderers ! If, then, the sinners of Jerusalem might repent, believe, and be saved, none, on this side hell, need despair.

Verse 48. Ye are witnesses of these things.] He gave them a full commission to proclaim these glad tidings of peace and salvation to a lost world. And these are the things of which their successors in the gospel ministry must bear witness. But no man can with any propriety bear witness of that grace that saves the soul, whose own soul is not saved by that grace.

Verse 49. The promise of my Father] That is, the Holy Ghost promised, John xv. 26.

Lifted up his hands] Probably to lay them on their heads, for this was the ordinary way in which the parental blessing was conveyed, see Gen. xlviii. 8-20.

Verse 51. Carried up into heaven.] Into that heaven from which he had descended, John i. 18. iii. 13. This was forty days after his resurrection, Acts i. 3, during which time he had given the most convincing proofs of that resurrection, not only to the apostles, but to many others—to upwards of five hundred at one time, 1 Cor. xv. 6.

As in his life they had seen the way to the kingdom, and 49 ^a And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you : but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.

50 And he led them out ^b as far as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them.

51 ^c And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven.

52 ^d And they worshipped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy :

53 And were continually ^e in the temple, praising and blessing God. Amen.

in his death the price of the kingdom, so in his ascension they had the fullest proof of the immortality of the soul, the resurrection of the human body, and of his continual intercession at the right hand of God.

Verse 52. They worshipped him] Let it be observed that this worship was not given by way of civil respect, for it was after he was parted from them, and carried back into heaven, that they offered it to him ; but acts of civil respect are always performed in the presence of the person. They adored him as their God, and were certainly too much enlightened to be capable of any species of idolatry.

Returned to Jerusalem with great joy] Having the fullest proof that Jesus was the promised Messiah ; and that they had a full commission to preach repentance and remission of sin to mankind, and that they should be divinely qualified for this great work by receiving the promise of the Father, ver. 49.

Verse 53. Were continually in the temple] Especially till the day of Pentecost came, when they received the promise, mentioned ver. 49.

Praising and blessing God.] Magnifying his mercy, and speaking good of his name. Thus the days of their mourning were ended ; and they began that life upon earth in which they still live in the kingdom of God.

JOHN, the writer of this Gospel, was the son of a fisherman named Zebedee, and his mother's name was Salome. His father was probably of Bethsaida, and with his sons, James and John, followed his occupation on the Sea of Galilee. John is generally supposed to have been about 25 years of age when he began to follow our Lord.

This Evangelist is supposed by some to have been the bridegroom at the marriage of Cana in Galilee, see chap. ii. 1. He was with our Lord in his transfiguration on the mount, Matt. xvii. 2; Mark ix. 2; Luke ix. 28; during his agony in the garden, Matt. xxvi. 37; Mark xiv. 33; and when he was crucified, John xix. 26. He saw our Lord expire upon the cross, and saw the soldier pierce his side with a spear, John xix. 34, 35. He was one of the first of the disciples that visited the sepulchre after the resurrection of Christ; and was present with the other disciples, when Jesus showed himself to them on the evening of the same day on which he arose; and likewise eight days after, chap. xx. 19-29. In conjunction with Peter, he cured a man who had been lame from his mother's womb, for which he was cast into prison, Acts iii. 1-10. He was afterwards sent to Samaria, to confer the Holy Ghost on those who had been converted there by Philip the Deacon, Acts viii. 5-25. St. Paul informs us, Gal. ii., that John was present at the Council of Jerusalem, of which an account is given, Acts xv.

Some of the ancients believed that he went into Parthia, and preached the gospel there; and his first Epistle has been sometimes cited under the name of the Epistle to the Parthians.

Irenæus, Eusebius, Origen, and others, assert that he was a long time in Asia, continuing there till Trajan's time, who succeeded Nerva, A. D. 98. And Polycrates, Bishop of Ephesus, A. D. 196, asserts that John was buried in that city. Jerome confirms this testimony, and says that John's death happened in the 68th year after our Lord's passion.

Tertullian and others say that Domitian having declared war against the Church of Christ, in the 15th year of his reign, A. D. 95, John was banished from Ephesus, and carried to Rome, where he was immersed in a cauldron of boiling oil, out of which however he escaped unhurt; and that afterwards he was banished to the Isle of Patmos, in the Ægean Sea, where he wrote the Apocalypse. Domitian having been slain in A. D. 96, his successor Nerva recalled all the exiles who had been banished by his predecessor; and John is supposed to have returned the next year to Ephesus, being then about 90 years of age. He is thought to have been the only apostle who died a natural death, and to have lived upwards of 100 years. Some say, having completed 100 years, he died the day following. This Gospel is supposed by learned men to have been written about A. D. 68 or 70; by others, A. D. 86; and by others, A. D. 97; but the most probable opinion is that it was written at Ephesus about the year 86.

PREFACE TO THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. JOHN.

Jerome, in his comment on Gal. vi., says that John continued preaching when he was so enfeebled with old age, that he was obliged to be carried into the assembly; and that, not being able to deliver any long discourse, his custom was to say, in every meeting, My dear children, love one another! The holy virgin lived under his care till the day of her death, which is supposed to have taken place 15 years after the crucifixion.

Some of the first disciples of our Lord, misunderstanding the passage, John xxi. 22, 23, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? believed that John should never die. Several in the primitive church were of the same opinion; and to this day his death is doubted by persons of the first repute for piety and morality.

Learned men are not wholly agreed about the language in which this Gospel was originally written. Some think St. John wrote it in his own native tongue, the Aramean or Syriac, and that it was afterwards translated, by rather an unskilful hand, into Greek. This opinion is not supported by strong arguments. That it was originally written in Greek is the general and most likely opinion.

What the design of St. John was, in writing this Gospel, has divided and perplexed many critics and learned divines. Some suppose that it was to refute the errors taught by one Cerintus, who rose up at that time, and asserted that Jesus was not born of a virgin, but was the real son of Joseph and Mary; that, at his baptism, the Christ, what we term the divine nature, descended into him in the form of a dove, by whose influence he worked all his miracles; and that, when he was about to suffer, this Christ or divine nature departed from him, and left the man Jesus to suffer death.

Others suppose he wrote with the prime design of confuting the heresy of the Gnostics, a class of mongrels who derived their existence from Simon Magus, and who formed their system out of Heathenism, Judaism, and Christianity; and whose peculiar, involved, and obscure opinions cannot be all introduced in this place. It is enough to know that, concerning the person of our Lord, they held opinions similar to those of Cerintus; and that they arrogated to themselves the highest degrees of knowledge and spirituality. They supposed that the Supreme Being had all things and beings included, in a certain seminal manner, in himself, and that out of Him they were produced. From God or Bythos, the infinite Abyss, they derived a multitude of subaltern governors, called Æons; whom they divided into several classes, among which we may distinguish the following nine:—Father, Grace, First-begotten, Truth, Word, Light, Life, Man, and Church, all these merging in what they termed Fulness, or complete round of being and blessings, terms which are of frequent occurrence in John's Gospel, and which some think he has introduced to fix their proper sense, and to rescue them from being abused by the Gnostics.

Though it is likely that the Gnostics held all these strange doctrines, and that many parts in John's Gospel may be successfully quoted against them, yet I must own I think the Evangelist had a more general end in view than the confutation of their heresies. It is more likely that he wrote for the express purpose of giving the Jews, his countrymen, proper notions of the Messiah and his kingdom; and to prove that Jesus, who had lately appeared among them, was this CHRIST. His own words sufficiently inform us of his motive, object, and design, in writing this Gospel: These things are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that, believing, ye might have life through his name, chap. xx. 31. This is a design as noble as it is simple; and every way highly becoming the wisdom and goodness of God.

5 And ^h the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not.

6 ⁱ There was a man sent from God, whose name was John.

7 ^j The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe.

Verse 1. In the beginning] This phrase fully proves, in the mouth of an inspired writer, that Jesus Christ was no part of the creation, as he existed when no part of that existed; and that consequently he is no creature, as all created nature was formed by him, ver. 3. Therefore Jesus, who was before all things and who made all things, must necessarily be the ETERNAL God.

Was the Word] Or, existed the Logos. This term should be left untranslated, for the very same reason why the names Jesus and Christ are left untranslated. The epithet Logos, signifies a word spoken, speech, eloquence, doctrine, reason, or the faculty of reasoning.

The apostle does not borrow this mode of speech from the writings of Plato, as some have imagined: he took it from the Scriptures of the Old Testament, and from the subsequent style of the ancient Jews.

And the Word was God] Or, God was the Logos:—therefore no subordinate being, no second to the Most High, but the supreme eternal Jehovah.

Verse 3. All things were made by him] That is, by this Logos. In Gen. i. 1, God is said to have created all things: in this verse Christ is said to have created all things: there-

8 He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light.

9 ^k That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

10 He was in the world, and ^l the world was made by him, and the world knew him not.

11 ^m He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

12 But ⁿ as many as received him, to them gave he ^o power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name;

13 ^p Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

fore Christ and the Father are ONE. To say that Christ made all things by a delegated power from God, is absurd; because the thing is impossible. God cannot delegate his omnipotence to another: were this possible, he to whom this omnipotence was delegated, would, in consequence, become God.

Verse 4. In him was life] Is there any reference here to Gen. iii. 20; And Adam called his wife's name Eve, chava, LIFE, because she was the mother of all living? And was not Jesus that seed of the woman that was to bruise the head of the serpent, and to give life to the world?

Verse 5. And the light shineth in darkness] By darkness here may be understood: 1. The heathen world, Eph. v. 8. 2. The Jewish people. 3. The fallen spirit of man.

Verse 6. Whose name was John] This was John the Baptist; see his name and the nature of his office explained, Mark i. 4, and Matt. iii. 1-3.

Verse 7. That all men through him might believe] This was bearing the most direct witness to the light which was now shining in the dark wilderness of Judea; and, from thence, shortly to be diffused over the whole world.

Verse 9. Which lighteth every man] All the wisdom

14 * And the Word ^b was made ^c flesh, and dwelt among us, (and ^d we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father) ^e full of grace and truth.

that is in man comes from Christ; the human intellect is a ray from his brightness; and reason itself springs from this Logos, the eternal reason.

That cometh into the world.] Or, coming into the world, a common phrase, among the Rabbins, to express every human being. As the human creature sees the light of the world as soon as it is born; in like manner, this heavenly light shines into the soul of every man, and it is through this light, which Christ mercifully gives to him, that what is termed conscience is produced. No man could discern good from evil, were it not for this light thus supernaturally and graciously restored.

Verse 10. The world knew him not.] Did not acknowledge him; for the Jewish rulers knew well enough that he was a teacher come from God; but, they did not choose to acknowledge him as such.

Verse 11. He came unto his own.] To those of his own family, city, country:—and his own people, his own citizens, brethren, subjects.

Received him not.] Would not acknowledge him as the Messiah, nor believe in him for salvation.

To receive Christ, is to acknowledge him as the promised Messiah; to believe in him as the victim that bears away the sin of the world; to obey his gospel, and to become a partaker of his holiness, without which no man, on the gospel plan, can ever see God.

Verse 12. Gave him power.] Privilege, honour, dignity, or right. What an astonishing thought is this! The sinner, who was an heir to all God's curses, has, through the sacrifice of Jesus, a claim on the mercy of the Most High, and a right to be saved! Even justice itself, on the ground of its holy and eternal nature, gives salvation to the vilest who take refuge in this atonement; for justice has nothing to grant, or heaven to give, which the blood of the Son of God has not merited.

Verse 13. Which were born, not of blood.] Not of bloods—the union of father and mother, or of a distinguished or illustrious ancestry; for the Hebrew language makes use of the plural to point out the dignity or excellence of a thing; and probably by this the Evangelist intended to show his countrymen, that having Abraham and Sarah for their parents, would not entitle them to the blessings of the New Covenant; as no man could lay claim to them, but in consequence of being born of God; therefore, neither the will of the flesh—anything that the corrupt heart of man could purpose or determine in its own behalf; nor the will of man—any thing that another may be disposed to do in our behalf, can avail here; this new birth must come through the will of God, through his own unlimited power and boundless mercy, prescribing salvation by Christ Jesus alone.

Verse 14. And the word was made flesh.] Is not this verse, taken in connexion with ver. 1, an absolute and incontestible proof of the proper and eternal Godhead of Christ Jesus?

And dwelt among us.] And tabernacled among us: the human nature which he took of the Virgin, being as the shrine, house, or temple, in which his immaculate Deity condescended to dwell. The word is probably an allusion to the Divine Shechinah in the Jewish temple; and as God has represented the whole Gospel dispensation by the types and ceremonies of the Old Covenant, so the Shechinah in the tabernacle and temple pointed out this manifestation of God in the flesh.

The doctrine of vicarious sacrifice and the incarnation of the Deity, have prevailed among the most ancient nations in 17 For ¹ the law was given by Moses, but ² grace and ³ truth came by Jesus Christ.

18 " No man hath seen God at any time; ^a the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

19 And this is ^b the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou?

20 And ^c he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ.

the world, and even among those which were not favoured with the letter of divine revelation.

We beheld his glory.] This refers to the transfiguration, at which John was present, in company with Peter and James.

The glory as of the only begotten.] That is, such a glory as became, or was proper to, the Son of God; for thus the particle should be here understood. There is also here an allusion to the manifestations of God above the ark in the tabernacle: see Exod. xxv. 22; Num. vii. 89; and this connects itself with the first clause, he tabernacled, or fixed his tent, among us.

The only begotten of the Father.] That is, the only person born of a woman, whose human nature never came by the ordinary way of generation; it being a mere creation in the womb of the Virgin, by the energy of the Holy Ghost. [This note involves Dr. Clarke's peculiar view of the Sonship of Christ.]

Full of grace and truth.] Full of favour, kindness, and mercy to men; teaching the way to the kingdom of God, with all the simplicity, plainness, dignity, and energy of truth.

Was before me.] Speaking by the prophets, and warning your fathers to repent and return to God.

Verse 16. This verse should be put in place of the fifteenth, and the 15th inserted between the 18th and 19th, which appears to be its proper place: thus John's testimony is properly connected. [But it seems most likely that this and the following verses are the testimony of the Evangelist, and not of the Baptist.]

And of his fulness.] Of the plenitude of his grace and mercy, by which he made an atonement for sin, and of the plenitude of his wisdom and truth, by which the mysteries of heaven have been revealed, and the science of eternal truth taught, we have all received: all we apostles have received grace or mercy to pardon our sins, and truth to enable us so to write and speak, concerning these things, that those who attend to our testimony shall be unerringly directed in the way of salvation, and with us continue to receive grace upon grace, one blessing after another, till they are filled with all the fulness of God. It is only necessary to add, that John seems here to refer to the Gospel as succeeding the Law. One dispensation of mercy and truth is designed to make way for, and to be followed by, another and a greater: thus the Law succeeded the patriarchal dispensation, and the Gospel the Law; more and more of the plenitude of the grace of the Gospel becomes daily manifest to the genuine followers of Christ; and, to those who are faithful unto death, a heaven full of eternal glory will soon succeed to the grace of the Gospel.

Verse 17. The Law was given by Moses.] Moses received the Law from God, and through him it was given to the Jews, Acts vii. 83.

But grace and truth.] The Law of Moses, however excellent in itself, was little in comparison of the Gospel: as it proceeded from the justice and holiness of God, and was intended to convict men of sin, that the way of the Gospel might be the better prepared, it was a law of rigour, condemnation, and death: Rom. iv. 15; 2 Cor. iii. 7, 8. It was a law of shadows, types, and figures, Heb. x. 1; and incapable of expiating sin by its sacrifices, Rom. viii. 3; Heb. vii. 18, 19; x. 1, 11. But Christ has brought that grace which is opposed to condemnation, Rom. v. 15, 20, 21, viii. 1; Gal. iii. 10; and he is himself the spirit and substance of all those shadows, Col. ii. 19; Heb. x. 1.

Jesus Christ.] JESUS THE CHRIST, the Messiah, or anointed prophet, priest, and king, sent from heaven.

21 And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No.

22 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself?

23 He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias.

24 And they which were sent were of the Pharisees.

25 And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet?

26 John answered them, saying, I baptize with water: but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not;

27 He it is, who coming after me is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose.

28 These things were done in Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

29 The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.

30 This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me.

31 And I knew him not: but that he should be

Verse 18. No man hath seen God at any time] Moses and others heard his voice, and saw the cloud and the fire, which were the symbols of his presence; but such a manifestation of God as had now taken place, in the person of Jesus Christ, had never before been exhibited to the world. It is likely that the word seen, here, is put for known, as in chap. iii. 32; 1 John iii. 2, 6, and 3rd Epistle, verse 11: and this sense the latter clause of the verse seems to require.

Lying in the bosom, is spoken of in reference to the Asiatic custom of reclining while at meals; the person who was next the other, was said to lie in his bosom; and he who had this place in reference to the master of the feast was supposed to share his peculiar regards, and to be in a state of the utmost favour and intimacy with him.

Verse 19. And this is the record of John] He persisted in this assertion, testifying to the Jews that this Jesus was THE CHRIST.

Verse 20. He confessed, and denied not; but confessed] A common mode of Jewish phraseology. John renounces himself, that Jesus may be all in all. Though God had highly honoured him, yet he considered he had nothing but what he had received, and therefore, giving all praise to his benefactor, takes care to direct the attention of the people to him alone from whom he had received his mercies.

Verse 21. Art thou Elias?] The scribes themselves had taught that Elijah was to come before the Messiah. This belief of theirs they supported by a literal construction of Mal. iv. 5.

Art thou that prophet?] The prophet spoken of by Moses, Deut. xviii. 15, 18. This text they had also misunderstood: for the prophet or teacher promised by Moses was no other than the Messiah himself. See Acts iii. 22.

I am not.] I am not the prophet which you expect, or Elijah: though he was the Elijah that was to come; for in the spirit and power of that eminent prophet he came, proclaiming the necessity of reformation in Israel. See Matt. xi. 14, xvii. 10-18.

Verse 22. That we may give an answer to them that sent us.] These Pharisees were probably a deputation from the Grand Sanhedrin; the members of which, hearing of the success of the Baptist's preaching, were puzzled to know what to make of him, and seriously desired to hear from himself what he professed to be.

Verse 25. Why baptizest thou then?] The Jews never made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water.

32 And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.

33 And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.

34 And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.

35 Again, the next day after, John stood, and two of his disciples;

36 And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God!

37 And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus.

38 Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek ye? They said unto him, Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) where dwellest thou?

39 He saith unto them, Come and see. They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was about the tenth hour.

40 One of the two which heard John speak, and followed him, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother.

41 He first findeth his own brother Simon, and received a proselyte into the full enjoyment of a Jew's privileges, till he was both baptized and circumcised. But such baptisms were never performed except by an ordinance of the Sanhedrin, or in the presence of three magistrates: and as John had, in this respect, altered the common custom so very essentially, the Sanhedrin took it for granted that no man had authority to make such changes, unless especially commissioned from on high; and that only the prophet, or Elijah, or the Messiah himself, could have authority to act as John did.

Verse 26. I baptize with water] I use the common form, though I direct the baptized to a different end, viz. that they shall repent of their sins, and believe in the Messiah.

There standeth one among you] That is, the person whose forerunner I am is now dwelling in the land of Judea, and will shortly make his appearance among you. Christ was not present when John spoke thus, as may be seen from ver. 29.

Verse 27. Is preferred before me] Who was before me. This clause is wanting in many MSS. and versions.

Verse 28. These things were done in Bethabara] Bethany should be inserted here, instead of Bethabara. This reading, in the judgment of the best critics, is the genuine one.

Verse 29. The next day] The day after that on which the Jews had been with John, ver. 19.

Behold the Lamb of God, &c.] This was said in allusion to what was spoken, Isa. liii. 7. Jesus was the true Lamb or Sacrifice required and appointed by God, of which those offered daily in the tabernacle and temple, Exod. xxix. 38, 39, and especially the paschal lamb, were only the types and representatives. All the lambs which had been hitherto offered had been furnished by men: this was provided by GOD, as the only sufficient and available sacrifice for the sin of the world. In three essential respects, this lamb differed from those by which it was represented. 1st. It was the Lamb of God; the most excellent, and the most available. 2nd. It made an atonement for sin: it carried sin away in reality, the others only representatively. 3rd. It carried away the sin of the world; whereas the other was offered only on behalf of the Jewish people.

Verse 31. And I knew him not, &c.] John did not know our Lord personally, and perhaps had never seen him, at the time he spoke the words in ver. 15.

But that he should be made manifest to Israel] One desaith unto him, We have found the Messias, which is, being interpreted, ^a the Christ.

42 And he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus beheld him, he said, Thou art Simon, the son of Jona: ^b thou shalt be called Cephas, which is by interpretation, ^c A stone.

43 The day following, Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and findeth Philip, and saith unto him, Follow me.

44 Now ^d Philip was of Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter.

45 Philip findeth ^e Nathanael, and saith unto him, We have found him of whom ^f Moses in the law, and the ^g prophets did write, Jesus ^h of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.

sign of my publicly baptizing was, that he, coming to my baptism, should be shown to be what he is, by some extraordinary sign from heaven.

Verse 32. I saw the Spirit descending, &c. See the notes on Matt. iii. 16, 17.

Verse 33. He that sent me—said unto me. From this we may clearly perceive that John had a most intimate acquaintance with the Divine Being; and received not only his call and mission at first, but every subsequent direction, by immediate, unequivocal inspiration.

Verse 35. The next day. After that mentioned, ver. 29.

Two of his disciples. One of them was Andrew, ver. 40, and it is very likely that John himself was the other; in everything in which he might receive honour he studiously endeavours to conceal his own name.

Verse 36. And looking upon Jesus. Attentively beholding. He who desires to discover the glories and excellencies of this Lamb of God, must thus look on him.

Behold the Lamb of God! By this the Baptist designed to direct the attention of his own disciples to Jesus, not only as the great sacrifice for the sin of the world, but also as the complete teacher of heavenly truth.

Verse 37. And the two disciples heard him. And they perfectly understood their master's meaning; in consequence of which, they followed Jesus. Happy they who, on hearing of the salvation of Christ, immediately attach themselves to its author!

Verse 38. What seek ye? These disciples might have felt some embarrassment in addressing our blessed Lord, after hearing the character which the Baptist gave of him; to remove or prevent this, he graciously accosts them, and gives them an opportunity of explaining themselves to him. Such questions, we may conceive, the blessed Jesus still puts to those who in simplicity of heart desire an acquaintance with him.

Rabbi! Teacher. Behold the modesty of these disciples—we wish to be scholars, we are ignorant—we desire to be taught; we believe thou art a teacher come from God.

Where dwellest thou? That we may come and receive thy instructions.

Verse 39. Come and see. If those who know not the salvation of God would come at the command of Christ, they should soon see that with him is the fountain of life, and in his light they should see light.

The tenth hour. Generally supposed to be about what we call four o'clock in the afternoon.

Verse 41. Findeth his own brother Simon. Every discovery of the gospel of the Son of God produces benevolence, and leads those to whom it is made to communicate it to others. Thus the knowledge of Christ becomes diffused—one invites another to come and see. Every man who has been brought to an acquaintance with God should endeavour to bring, at least, another with him; and his first attention should be fixed upon those of his own household.

Verse 42. Cephas, which is by interpretation, A stone. The reason why this name was given to Simon, who was ever afterwards called Peter, may be seen in the notes on Matt. xvi. 18, 19.

47 Jesus saw Nathanael coming to him, and saith of him, Behold ⁱ an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!

48 Nathanael saith unto him, Whence knowest thou me? Jesus answered and said unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig-tree, I saw thee.

49 Nathanael answered and saith unto him, Rabbi, ^k thou art the Son of God; thou art ^l the King of Israel.

50 Jesus answered and said unto him, Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig-tree, believest thou? thou shalt see greater things than these.

51 And he saith unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto you, ^m Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.

Verse 43. Philip. This apostle was a native of Bethsaida in Galilee. Clemens Alexandrinus mentions it as a thing universally acknowledged, that it was this apostle who, when commanded by our Lord to follow him, said, Let me first go and bury my father, Matt. viii. 21, 22. He must not be confounded with Philip the deacon, spoken of, Acts vi. 5.

Verse 45. Nathanael. This apostle is supposed to be the same with Bartholomew, which is very likely, for these reasons: 1. That the Evangelists who mention Bartholomew, say nothing of Nathanael; and that St. John, who speaks of Nathanael, says nothing of Bartholomew. 2. No notice is taken anywhere of Bartholomew's vocation, unless his and that of Nathanael mentioned here be the same. 3. The name of Bartholomew is not a proper name; it signifies the son of Pholomy; and Nathanael might have been his own name. 4. St. John seems to rank Nathanael with the apostles, when he says that Peter and Thomas, the two sons of Zebedee, Nathanael, and two other disciples, being gone a fishing, Jesus showed himself to them, John xxi. 2-4.

Verse 46. Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Some suppose that Nazareth, at this time, was become so abandoned that no good could be expected from any of those who dwelt in it, and that its wickedness had passed into a proverb. [But there is no authority for this. Nathanael's question is founded on the insignificance of the town, not its immorality.]

Come and see. He who candidly examines the evidences of the religion of Christ, will infallibly become a believer. No history ever published among men has so many external and internal proofs of authenticity as this has.

Verse 47. Behold an Israelite indeed. A worthy descendant of the patriarch Jacob, who not only professes to believe in Israel's God, but who worships him in sincerity and truth, according to his light.

In whom is no guile! Deceitfulness ever has been, and still is, the deeply marked characteristic of the Jewish people. To find a man, living in the midst of so much corruption, walking in uprightness before his Maker, was a subject worthy the attention of God himself.

Verse 48. Whence knowest thou me? He was not yet acquainted with the divinity of Christ, could not conceive that he could search his heart, and therefore asks how he could acquire this knowledge of him, or who had given him that character.

Under the fig-tree. Probably engaged in prayer with God, for the speedy appearing of the salvation of Israel; and the shade of this fig-tree was perhaps the ordinary place of retreat for this upright man. It is not a fig-tree, but the fig-tree, one particularly distinguished from the others. The Jewish Rabbins chose the shade of trees, and particularly the fig-tree, to sit and study under.

Verse 49. Rabbi. That is, Teacher! and so this word should be translated.

Thou art the Son of God. The promised Messiah. Thou art the King of Israel. The real descendant of David, who art to sit on that spiritual throne of which the throne of David was the type.

Verse 50. Because I said—I saw thee, &c. As thou hast credited my divine mission on this simple proof, thy faith shall not rest merely upon this, for thou shalt see greater things than these—more numerous and express proofs of my eternal power and Godhead.

Verse 51. Verily, verily,] Amen, amen. The doubling of this word probably came from the circumstance that it was written both in Hebrew and in Greek, signifying, it is true.

Heaven open] This seems to be a figurative expression: 1. Christ may be understood by this saying to mean, that a clear and abundant revelation of God's will should be now made unto man; that heaven itself should be laid as it were open, and all the mysteries which had been shut up and hidden in it from eternity, relative to the salvation and glorification of man, should be now fully revealed. 2. That by the angels of God ascending and descending, is to be understood, that a perpetual intercourse should now be opened between heaven and earth, through the medium of Christ, who was God manifested in the flesh.

What a glorious view does this give us of the Gospel dispensation! It is heaven opened to earth; and heaven opened on earth. The church militant and the church triumphant become one, and the whole heavenly family, in both, see and adore their common Lord. Neither the world nor the church is left to the caprices of time or chance. The Son of man governs as he upholds all. Wherever we are praying, studying, hearing, meditating, his gracious eye is upon us. He notes our wants, our weakness, and our petitions; and his eye affects his heart. Happy the man whose heart can rejoice in the reflection, Thou God seest me!

CHAPTER II.

The miracle at Cana in Galilee, where our Lord changed water into wine, 1-11. He goes to Capernaum, 12. He purges the temple at the feast of the passover, 13-17. The Jews require a miracle, as a proof that he had authority to do these things, 18. In answer, he refers to his own death and resurrection, 19-22. Many believe on him while at the feast of the passover, to whom Jesus would not trust himself, 23-25.

AND the third day there was a marriage in ^a Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there:

2 And both Jesus was called, ^b and his disciples, to the marriage.

3 And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto him, They have no wine.

^a See Josh. xix. 28.—^b Ver. 11. Deut. xvi. 14.—^c Ch. xix. 28.

Verse 1. Cana of Galilee] This was a small city in the tribe of Asher, Josh. xix. 28, and, by saying this was Cana of Galilee, the Evangelist distinguishes it from another Cana, which was in the tribe of Ephraim, in the Samaritan country, see Josh. xvi. 8, xvii. 9. [There was no Cana out of Galilee. The Cana mentioned in Joshua had disappeared.]

The mother of Jesus was there] Some of the ancients have thought that this was the marriage of John the Evangelist, who is supposed to have been a near relative of our Lord. [This is pure conjecture.]

Verse 2. And both Jesus was called, and his disciples] 1. This was probably the first Christian wedding that was ever celebrated in the world. The great Author of the Christian religion, with his disciples (probably then only four or five in number, see chap. i. 87, &c.), were invited to it. The first miracle Jesus Christ wrought was at it, and in honour of it. The mother of Christ, the most pure of all virgins, the most holy of all wives, and the first Christian mother, was also at it. The marriage was according to God, or these holy persons would not have attended it. The bride and bridegroom must have been a holy pair, otherwise they would have had nothing to do with such holy company.

Marriage is ever honourable in itself; but it is not at all times used honourably. Where Jesus is not invited to bless the union, no good can be expected; and where the disciples of sin and Satan are preferred to the disciples of Christ, on such occasions, it is a melancholy intimation that so bad a beginning will have a bad ending.

Verse 4. Woman what have I to do with thee?] O woman, what is this to thee and me? The words seem to convey a reproof to the Virgin, for meddling with that which did not particularly concern her. But here indeed there appears to be no blame. It is very likely the bride or bridegroom's family were relatives of the blessed Virgin; and she would naturally suppose that our Lord would feel interested for 4 Jesus saith unto her, ^c Woman, ^d what have I to do with thee? ^e mine hour is not yet come.

5 His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it.

6 And there were set there six waterpots of stone, ^f after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece.

the honour and comfort of the family, and, knowing that he possessed extraordinary power, made this application to him to come forward to their assistance. His answer, if properly translated, is far from being disrespectful. He addresses the Virgin as he did the Syrophenician woman, Matt. xv. 28; as he did the Samaritan woman John iv. 21; as he addressed his disconsolate mother when he hung upon the cross, chap. xix. 26; as he did his most affectionate friend, Mary Magdalene, chap. xx. 15, and as the angels had addressed her before, ver. 18; and as St. Paul does the believing Christian woman, 1 Cor. vii. 16; in all which places, the very term which occurs in this verse, is used; and where certainly no kind of disrespect is intended; but, on the contrary, complaisance, affability, tenderness, and concern. In this sense it is used in the best Greek writers.

Mine hour is not yet come.] My time for working a miracle is not yet fully come. What I do, I do when necessary, and not before. Nature is unsteady—full of haste; and ever blundering in consequence. It is the folly and sin of men that they are ever finding fault with the divine providence. According to them, God never does anything in due time—he is too early or too late: whereas it is utterly impossible for the divine wisdom to forestall itself; or for the divine goodness to delay what is necessary.

Verse 5. His mother saith, &c.] The Virgin seems to have understood our Lord as hinted above. But, silently receiving the respectful caution, she saw that the miracle should be wrought when it best suited the purposes of the divine wisdom.

Verse 6. After the manner of the purifying of the Jews] Or, for the purpose of the purifying of the Jews. These six vessels were set in a convenient place, for the purpose of the Jews washing their hands before they sat down to meat, and probably for other purposes of purification. As to the number six, we need seek for no mystery in it; the number of pots was proportioned to the number of the guests.

7 Jesus saith unto them, Fill the waterpots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.

8 And he saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast. And they bare it.

9 When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was (but the servants which drew the water knew); the governor of the feast called the bridegroom,

10 And saith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse: but thou hast kept the good wine until now.

11 This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him.

12 After this he went down to Capernaum, he, and his mother, and his brethren, and his disciples: and they continued there not many days.

13 And the Jews' passover was at hand: and Jesus went up to Jerusalem,

14 And found in the temple those that sold oxen and sheep and doves, and the changers of money sitting:

15 And when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables;

16 And said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence; make not my Father's house a house of merchandise.

17 And his disciples remembered that it was written, The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up.

18 Then answered the Jews and said unto him, What sign shewest thou unto us, seeing that thou doest these things?

19 Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.

20 Then said the Jews, Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days?

21 But he spake of the temple of his body.

22 When therefore he was risen from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them; and they believed the scripture, and the word which Jesus had said.

23 Now when he was in Jerusalem at the passover, in the feast day, many believed in his name, when they saw the miracles which he did.

24 But Jesus did not commit himself unto them, because he knew all men, 25 And needed not that any should testify of man: for he knew what was in man.

Containing two or three firkins apiece.] Measures or metretres. The measures of the ancients are so very uncertain that it is best, in this and numberless other cases, to attempt to determine nothing.

Verse 8. Governor of the feast.] The original word signifies one who is chief or head over three couches or tables. In the Asiatic countries, they take their meals sitting, or rather reclining, on small low couches. And when many people are present, so that they cannot all eat together, three of these low tables or couches are put together in form of a crescent, and some one of the guests is appointed to take charge of the persons who sit at these tables. Hence the appellation of architriclinus, the chief over three couches or tables, which in process of time became applied to the governor or steward of a feast, let the guests be many or few.

And they bare it.] A question has been asked, "Did our Lord turn all the water into wine which the six measures contained?" There is no proof that he did; and I take it for granted that he did not. "How could a part be turned into wine, and not the whole?" The water, in all likelihood, was changed into wine as it was drawn out, and not otherwise. "But did not our Lord by this miracle minister to vice, by producing an excess of inebriating liquor?" No; for the following reasons: 1. The company was a select and holy company, where no excess could be permitted. And, 2. Our Lord does not appear to have furnished any extra quantity, but only what was necessary. "But it is intimated in the text that the guests were nearly intoxicated before this miraculous addition to their wine took place; for the Evangelist says, when they have become intoxicated." 1. It is not intimated, even in the most indirect manner, that these guests were at all intoxicated. 2. The words are not spoken of the persons at that wedding at all: the governor of the feast only states that such was the common custom at feasts of this nature; without intimating that any such custom prevailed there. 3. The original word bears a widely different meaning from that which the objection forces upon it. The verb signifies not only to inebriate, but to take wine, to drink wine, to drink enough; and in this sense the verb is evidently used in the Septuagint, Gen. xliii. 34; Cant. v. 1; 1 Macc. xvi. 16; Hag. i. 6; Eccles. i. 16.

Verse 10. The good wine until now.] That which our Lord now made being perfectly pure, and highly nutritive.

Verse 11. This beginning of miracles.] It was probably the first he ever wrought—at any rate, it was the first he wrought after his baptism, and the first he wrought publicly. His glory.] His supreme divinity, chap. i. 14.

His disciples believed on him.] Were more abundantly confirmed in their faith, that he was either the promised Messiah, or a most extraordinary prophet, in the fullest intercourse with the ever blessed God.

Verse 13. And the Jews' passover was at hand.] This was the reason why he staid but a few days at Capernaum, ver. 12, as he wished to be present at the celebration of this feast at Jerusalem.

Verse 14. Found in the temple those that sold oxen, &c.] This is a similar fact to that mentioned, Matt. xxi. 12; Mark xi. 15; Luke xix. 45. See it explained on Matt. xxi. 12. If it be the same fact, then John anticipates three years of time in relating it here; as that cleansing of the temple, mentioned by the other Evangelists, took place in the last week of our Lord's life. Some contend that he purged the temple twice; and that this, mentioned by John, was the first cleansing, which none of the other Evangelists have mentioned.

The vindication of God's house from profanation, was the first and the last care of our Lord; and it is probable he began and finished his public ministry by this significant act.

Verse 17. The zeal of thine house.] See Ps. lix. 10. Zeal to promote thy glory, and to keep thy worship pure.

Verse 18. What sign shewest thou?] See on Matt. xii. 38, and xvi. 1. What miracle dost thou work to show us that thou art vested with similar authority?

Verse 19. Destroy this temple.] This very temple: perhaps pointing to his body at the same time.

Verse 20. Forty and six years was this temple in building.] The temple of which the Jews spake was begun to be rebuilt by Herod the Great, in the 18th year of his reign: Jos. Ant. b. xv. c. 11, s. 1; and xx. c. 9, s. 5, 7. But though he finished the main work in nine years and a half, yet some additional buildings or repairs were constantly carried on for many years afterwards. Herod began the work sixteen years before the birth of our Lord: the transactions which are here related, took place in the thirtieth year of our Lord, which make the term exactly forty-six years.

Verse 21. Of the temple of his body.] Rather, the temple, his body: his body had no particular temple: but it was the temple of his divinity—the place in which, as in the ancient temple, his Godhead dwelt.

Verse 22. They believed the scripture.] The scripture which the Evangelist immediately refers to may have been

Ps. xvi. 10. Compare this with Acts ii. 31, 32, and with chap. xiii. 35-37. See also Ps. ii. 7, and compare it with Heb. i. 5, and chap. v. 5; and with Acts xiii. 33. They understood these scriptures in a sense in which they never before understood them.

Verse 28. Many believed in his name] They believed him to be the promised Messiah, but did not believe in him to the salvation of their souls: for we find, from the following verse, that their hearts were not at all changed, because our blessed Lord could not trust himself to them.

Verse 24. He knew all men] Instead of all men, many MSS. read every man, or all things; and this I am inclined to believe is the true reading. Jesus knew all things; and why? Because he made all things, chap. i. 8, and because he was the all-wise God, ver. 1; and he knew all men, because he alone searches the heart, and tries the reins.

CHAPTER III.

The conversation between Nicodemus and our Lord, about the new birth and faith in his testimony, 1-15. The love of God, the source of human salvation, 16. Who are condemned, and who are approved, 17-21. Jesus and his disciples come to Judea, and baptize, 22. John baptizes in Enon, 23, 24. The disciples of John and the Pharisees dispute about purifying, 25. The discourse between John and his disciples about Christ, in which the excellence, perfection, and privileges, of the Christian dispensation are pointed out, 26-36.

THERE was a man of the Pharisees, * named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews.

2 ^b The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for ^c no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except ^d God be with him.

3 Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, ^e Except a man be born ^f again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.

4 Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?

5 Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, ^g Except a man be born of water and ^h of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

6 That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.

7 Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born ⁱ again.

8 ^j The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

9 Nicodemus answered and said unto him, ^k How can these things be?

*Ch. vii. 50. xix. 39.—^bCh. ix. 16, 83. ii. 23. vii. 13. xii. 42.—^cCh. ix. 16, 33. Acts ii. 22.—^dActs x. 38.—^eCh. i. 13. Gal. vi. 15. Tit. iii. 5. James i. 18. 1 Pet. i. 23. 1 John iii. 9.—^fOr, from Verse 1 Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews.] One of the members of the Grand Sanhedrin: for such were ordinarily styled rulers among the Jews.

Verse 2. Came to Jesus by night] He chose the night season, perhaps less through the fear of man than through a desire to have Jesus alone, as he found him all the day encompassed with the multitude. However, we may take it for granted that he had no design at present to become his disciple; as baptism and circumcision, which were the initiating ordinances among the Jews, were never administered in the night time.

Rabbi. My Master, or Teacher, a title of respect given to the Jewish doctors, something like our Doctor of Divinity, i. e., teacher of divine things.

We know that thou art a teacher come from God] We, all the members of the Grand Sanhedrin, and all the rulers of the people, who have paid proper attention to thy doctrine and miracles. It is possible, however, that we know, signifies no more than, it is known, it is generally acknowledged and allowed, that thou art a teacher come from God.

Verse 3. Jesus answered] But what connexion is there between our Lord's reply, and the address of Nicodemus? Probably our Lord saw that the object of his visit was to inquire about the Messiah's kingdom; and in reference to this he immediately says, Except a man be born again, &c.

Be born again] Or, from above: different to that new birth which the Jews supposed every baptized proselyte enjoyed; for they held that the Gentile, who became a proselyte, was like a child new born. This birth was of water from below: the birth for which Christ contends is from above—by the agency of the Holy Spirit. Every man must have two births, one from heaven, the other from earth—one of his body, the other of his soul: without the first he cannot see nor enjoy this world, without the last he cannot see nor enjoy the kingdom of God. The Jews had some general notion of the new birth; but, like many among Christians, they put the acts of proselytism, baptism, &c., in the place of the Holy Spirit and his influence: they acknowledged that a man must be born again; but they made that new birth to consist in profession, confession, and external washing.

The new birth which is here spoken of comprehends, not only what is termed justification or pardon, but also sanctification or holiness. Sin must be pardoned, and the impurity of the heart washed away, before any soul can possibly enter into the kingdom of God.

Verse 4. How can a man be born when he is old?] It is probable that Nicodemus was pretty far advanced in age at this time; and from his answer we may plainly perceive that, like the rest of the Jews, and like multitudes of Christians, he rested in the letter, without paying proper attention to the spirit: the shadow, without the thing signified, had hitherto satisfied him.

Verse 5. Of water and of the Spirit] To the baptism of water a man was admitted when he became a proselyte to the Jewish religion. But the water which was used on the occasion was only an emblem of the Holy Spirit. The soul was considered as in a state of defilement, because of past sin: now, as by that water the body was washed, cleansed, and refreshed, so, by the influences of the Holy Spirit, the soul was to be purified from its defilement, and strengthened to walk in the way of truth and holiness.

When John came baptizing with water, he gave the Jews the plainest intimations that this would not suffice; that it was only typical of that baptism of the Holy Ghost, under the similitude of fire, which they must all receive from Jesus

10 Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

11 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness.

12 If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?

13 And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven.

14 And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up;

15 That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.

^a Matt. xi. 27. Ch. i. 18. vii. 16. viii. 28. xii. 40. xiv. 24.—^b Ver. 32.—^c Prov. xxx. 4. Ch. vi. 33, 38, 51, 62. xvi. 28. Acts ii. 34. 1 Cor. xv. 47. Eph. iv. 9, 10.—^d Num. xxi. 9.—^e Ch. viii. 28. xii. 32.—^f Ver. 36. Ch. vi. 47.—^g Rom. v. 8. 1 John iv. 9.—

Christ, see Matt. iii. 11. Therefore, our Lord asserts that a man must be born of water and the Spirit, i. e., of the Holy Ghost, which, represented under the similitude of water, cleanses, refreshes, and purifies the soul.

Though baptism by water, into the Christian faith, was necessary to every Jew and Gentile that entered into the kingdom of the Messiah, it is not necessary that by water and the Spirit (in this place) we should understand two different things: it is probably only an elliptical form of speech for the Holy Spirit, under the similitude of water; as in Matt. iii. 3, the Holy Ghost and fire, do not mean two things, but one, viz., the Holy Ghost under the similitude of fire—pervading every part, refining and purifying the whole.

Verse 6. That which is born of the flesh is flesh. That is the answer to the objection made by Nicodemus in ver. 4. Our Lord intimates that, were even this possible, it would not answer the end; for the plant will ever be of the nature of the seed that produces it—like will beget its like.

Verse 8. The wind bloweth. Though the manner in which this new birth is effected by the Divine Spirit, be incomprehensible to us, yet we must not, on this ground, suppose it to be impossible. The wind blows in a variety of directions—we hear its sound, perceive its operation in the motion of the trees, &c., and feel it on ourselves—but we cannot discern the air itself; we only know that it exists by the effects which it produces: so is every one who is born of the Spirit: the effects are as discernible and as sensible as those of the wind; but itself we cannot see. But he who is born of God knows that he is thus born, Rom. viii. 16; 1 John iv. 13, and v. 10; Gal. iv. 6.

Verse 9. How can these things be? So intent was this great man on making everything submit to the testimony of his senses, that he appears unwilling to believe anything unless he can comprehend it. This is the case with many; but there is not a man in the universe that can fully comprehend one operation, either of God, or his instrument, nature.

Verse 10. Art thou a master of Israel, &c. Hast thou taken upon thee to guide the blind into the way of truth; and yet knowest not that truth thyself?

Verse 11. We speak that we do know. A strong but delicate proof to Nicodemus, who, though a master of Israel, did not understand the very rudiments of the doctrine of salvation.

Ye receive not our witness. Nicodemus grants that our Lord is a teacher come from God, and yet scruples to receive his testimony relative to the new birth, and the spiritual nature of the Messiah's kingdom.

Verse 12. If I have told you earthly things. If, after I have illustrated this new birth by a most expressive metaphor taken from earthly things, and after all you believe not; how can you believe, should I tell you of heavenly things, in such language as angels use, where earthly images and illustrations can have no place?

Verse 13. No man hath ascended. This seems a figurative expression for, No man hath known the mysteries of the kingdom of God; as in Deut. xxx. 12; Ps. lxxiii. 17; Prov. xxx. 4; Rom. xi. 34. But our Lord probably spoke to correct a false notion among the Jews, viz. that Moses had ascended to heaven, in order to get the Law. It is not Moses who is to be heard now, but Jesus: Moses did not 16 For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

17 For God sent not his son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.

18 He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God.

19 And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.

20 For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved.

^a Luke ix. 58. Ch. v. 45. viii. 15. xii. 47. 1 John iv. 14.—^b Ch. v. 24. vi. 40, 47. xxi. 31.—^c Ch. i. 4, 8, 10, 11. viii. 12.—^d Job xxiv. 13, 17. Eph. v. 13.—^e Or, discovered.

ascend to heaven; but the Son of man is come down from heaven to reveal the divine will.

Which is in heaven. Lost a wrong meaning should be taken from the foregoing expression, our blessed Lord qualifies it; pointing out thus the ubiquity or omnipresence of his nature: a character essentially belonging to God; for no being can possibly exist in more places than one at a time but He who fills the heavens and the earth.

Verse 14. As Moses lifted up. Crucified, for the salvation of mankind, and so be, by the appointment of God, as certain a remedy for sinful souls as the brazen serpent was for the bodies of the Israelites, which had been bitten by the fiery serpents in the wilderness. It does not appear to me that the brazen serpent was ever intended to be considered as a type of Christ. Among the Jews, it was considered a type of the resurrection—through it the dying lived; and so, by the voice of God, they that were dead shall be raised to life. As the serpent was raised up, so shall Christ be lifted up: as they who were stung by the fiery serpents were restored by looking up to the brazen serpent, so those who are infected with, and dying through, sin, are healed and saved by looking up to and believing in Christ crucified. The lifting up of the Son of man may refer to his mediatorial office at the right hand of God.

Verse 15. That whosoever believeth. The words contain the reason of the subject in the following verse, and seem to break in upon our Lord's argument before he had fully stated it.

Verse 16. For God so loved the world. Such a love as that which induced God to give his only begotten Son to die for the world, could not be described—Jesus Christ does not attempt it. He has put an eternity of meaning in the particle so, and left a subject for everlasting contemplation, wonder, and praise, to angels and to men. The same Evangelist uses a similar mode of expression, 1 Epist. iii. 1; Behold, WHAT MANNER of love the Father hath bestowed upon us.

Verse 17. For God sent not, &c. It was the opinion of the Jews that the Gentiles, whom they often term the world, and nations of the world, were to be destroyed in the days of the Messiah. Christ corrects this false opinion; and teaches here a contrary doctrine. God, by giving his Son, and publishing his design in giving him, shows that he purposes the salvation, not the destruction, of the world—the Gentile people: nevertheless, those who will not receive the salvation he has provided for them, whether Jews or Gentiles, must necessarily perish; for this plain reason, There is but one remedy, and they refuse to apply it.

Verse 18. Is not condemned. For past sin, that being forgiven on his believing in Christ.

But he that believeth not. When the gospel is preached to him, and the way of salvation made plain.

Is condemned already. Continues under the condemnation which divine justice has passed upon all sinners; and has this superadded, He hath not believed on the name of the only begotten Son of God, and therefore is guilty of the grossest insult to the divine majesty, in neglecting, slighting, and despising the salvation which the infinite mercy of God had provided for him.

Verse 19. This is the condemnation. That is, this is the 21 But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

22 After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea; and there he tarried with them, and baptized.

23 And John also was baptizing in Ænon, near to ^bSalim, because there was much water there: and they came and were baptized.

24 For ^dJohn was not yet cast into prison.

25 Then there arose a question between some of John's disciples and the Jews about purifying.

26 And they came unto John, and said unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, ^ato whom thou barest witness, behold, the same baptizeth, and all men come to him.

27 John answered and said, ^a'A man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven.

reason why any shall be found finally to perish, not that they came into the world with a perverted and corrupt nature, which is true; nor that they lived many years in the practice of sin, which is also true; but because they refused to receive the salvation which God sent to them.

Light is come] That is, Jesus, the Son of Righteousness, the fountain of light and life; diffusing his benign influences everywhere, and favouring men with a clear and full revelation of the divine will.

Men loved darkness] Have preferred sin to holiness, Belial to Christ, and hell to heaven. Darkness is frequently used by the Jewish writers for the angel of death and for the devil.

Because their deeds were evil.] An allusion to robbers and cut-throats, who practise their abominations in the night season, for fear of being detected.

Verse 20. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light] He who doth vile or abominable things: alluding to the subject mentioned in the preceding verse.

Lest his deeds should be reproved.] To manifest or discover, is one sense of the original word, in the best Greek writers, and it is evidently its meaning in this place.

Verse 21. Wrought in God.] In his presence, and through his assistance.

Verse 22. Came—into the land of Judea] Jerusalem itself, where Christ held the preceding discourse with Nicodemus, was in Judea; but the Evangelist means that our Lord quitted the city and its suburbs, and went into the country parts.

And baptized.] It is not clear that Christ did baptize any with water, but his disciples did—chap. iv. 2; and what they did, by his authority and command, is attributed to himself.

Verse 23. In Ænon] This place was eight miles southward from Scythopolis, between Salim and Jordan.

There was much water] And this was equally necessary, where such multitudes were baptized, whether the ceremony were performed either by dipping or sprinkling. But as the Jewish custom required the persons to stand in the water, and, having been instructed, and entered into a covenant to renounce all idolatry, and take the God of Israel for their God, then plunge themselves under the water, it is probable that the rite was thus performed at Ænon.

Verse 25. John's disciples and the Jews] Instead of Jews, many MSS., some Versions and Fathers, read, a Jew. The person here spoken of was probably one who had been baptized by the disciples of our Lord; and the subject of debate seems to have been, whether the baptism of John, or that of Christ, was the most efficacious towards purifying.

Verse 26. And they came unto John] That he might decide the question.

Verse 27. A man can receive nothing, &c.] Or, A man can receive nothing from heaven, unless it be given him.

I have received, not only my commission, but the power also by which I have executed it, from above. I am only the forerunner of the Messiah; and am sent, not to form a separate party, but to point out to men that Lamb of God which takes away the sin of the world.

Verse 29. He that hath the bride] The congregation of believers.

Is the bridegroom] The Lord Jesus—the Head of the church, see Matt. xxii. 2, &c.

The friend of the bridegroom] The person whom the Greeks called the paranymphe—there were two at each wedding. John considers himself as standing in this relation to the Lord Jesus, while espousing human nature, and converting souls to himself: this is the meaning of standeth by, i. e., ready to serve.

Verse 30. He must increase] His present success is but the beginning of a most glorious and universal spread of righteousness, peace, truth, and good-will among men.

I must decrease.] My baptism and teaching, as pointing out the coming Messiah, must cease; because the Messiah is now come, and has entered publicly on the work of his glorious ministry.

Verse 31. Is above all] Superior to Moses, the Prophets, and me.

He that is of the earth] John himself, who was born in the common way of man.

Speaketh of the earth] Cannot speak of heavenly things as Christ can do; and only represents divine matters by these earthly ordinances; for the spirit and meaning of which, you must all go to the Messiah himself.

Verse 32. And no man receiveth his testimony.] Or, And this his testimony no man taketh up. No person is found to tread in my steps, and to publish to the Jews that this is the Christ, the Saviour of the world. [The common interpretation is better.]

Verse 33. Hath set to his seal] As a testator sets his seal to an instrument in order to confirm it, so I, by taking up this testimony of Christ, and proclaiming it to the Jews, have fully confirmed it, as I know it to be a truth; which knowledge I have from the immediate inspiration of the Holy Spirit.

Verse 34. For God giveth not the Spirit by measure] Not for a particular time, people, purpose, &c., but for the whole compass of time, and in reference to all eternity. Former dispensations of the Holy Spirit made partial discoveries of infinite justice and mercy; but now the sum of justice, in requiring such a sacrifice, and the plenitude of mercy, in providing it, shall, by that Spirit with which he baptizes, be made manifest to all the children of men.

Verse 35. All things into his hand.] The prophets had various gifts: some had visions, others dreams; some had the gift of teaching, others of comforting, &c.; but none possessed all these gifts; Christ alone possessed their plenitude, and is all things in all.

Verse 36. Hath everlasting life] He has already the seed of this life in his soul, having been made a partaker of the grace and spirit of him in whom he has believed.

He that believeth not] The person who will not be persuaded; in consequence, does not believe; and, not having believed, he cannot obey.

Shall not see life] Shall never enjoy it: there being no way to the kingdom of God, but through Christ Jesus, Acts iv. 12. And none can expect to enter into this kingdom but those who obey him; for to such only he is the author of eternal salvation, Heb. v. 9.

But the wrath of God abideth on him.] I should prefer displeasure to wrath, because the common acceptance of the latter is not properly applicable here. Perhaps we may consider the phrase as a Hebraism: punishment of God, i. e., the most heavy and awful of all punishments; such as sin deserves, and such as it becomes divine justice to inflict. And this abideth on him—endures as long as his unbelief and disobedience remain!

CHAPTER IV.

Jesus finding that the Pharisees took offence at his making many disciples, leaves Judea to pass into Galilee, 1-3.

And passing through Samaria comes to Sychar, and rests at Jacob's well, 4-6. While his disciples were gone to the city to buy meat, a woman of Samaria comes to draw water, with whom our Lord discourses at large on the spiritual nature of his religion, the perfection of the divine nature, and the purity of his worship, 7-24. On his informing her that he was the Messiah, she leaves her pitcher, and goes to inform her townsmen, 25-30. His discourse with his disciples in her absence, 31-38. Many of the Samaritans believe on him, 39-42. He stays two days with them, and goes into Galilee, 43-45. He comes to Cana, and heals the son of a nobleman, in consequence of which, he believes on him, with his whole family, 46-54.

WHEN therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and ^a baptized more disciples than John,

2 (Though Jesus himself baptized not, ^b but his disciples,)

3 He left Judea, ^c and departed again into Galilee.

4 And he must needs go through Samaria.

5 Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar, near to the parcel of ground ^d that Jacob gave to his son Joseph.

6 Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being wearied with his journey, ^e sat thus on the well: and it was about the sixth hour.

7 There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water: Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink.

^d Gen. xxxiii. 19. xlviii. 22. Josh. xxiv. 32.

Verse 2. Jesus himself baptized not] See chap. iii. 22.

Verse 4. And he must needs go through Samaria.] For this plain reason, and no other, because it was the only proper road. Samaria lay northward of Judea, and between the great sea, Galilee, and Jordan; and there was therefore no going from Galilee to Jerusalem but through this province.

Verse 5. A city—called Sychar] This city was anciently called Shechem. It seems to have been situated at the foot of Mount Gerizim, on which the temple of the Samaritans was built. It was about ten miles from Shiloh, forty from Jerusalem, and fifty-two from Jericho. It probably got the name of Sychar, which signifies drunken, from the drunkenness of its inhabitants. The present name of this city is Neapolis, or Naplouse.

That Jacob gave to his son Joseph.] See Gen. xxxiii. 19; xlviii. 21, 22, and Josh. xxiv. 32.

Verse 6. Jacob's well was there.] This well had the name of Jacob, because he had digged it, and it was for public use. Sat thus] The word thus is probably a mere expletive, and is often so used by Josephus.

The sixth hour.] About twelve o'clock. The time is noted here: 1. To account for Christ's fatigue—he had already travelled several hours. 2. To account for his thirst—

8 (For his disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat.)

9 Then saith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? for ^f the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans.

10 Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee ^g living water.

11 The woman saith unto him, Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then hast thou that living water?

12 Art thou greater than our father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle?

the sun had at this time waxed hot. 3. To account for the disciples going to buy food, verse 8, because this was the ordinary time of dinner among the Jews.

Verse 7. There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water] That this was the employment of the females, we see in different parts of the Sacred writings. See Gen. xxiv. 11, &c.; Exod. ii. 16.

Verse 9. That thou, being a Jew] It is likely that our Lord spake the Galilean dialect, by which we find, from Mark vi. 70. a Jew of that district might easily be known.

The Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans.] Perhaps better, Jews have no communion with Samaritans. These words appear to be added by the Evangelist himself, in explanation of the woman's question. The deadly hatred that subsisted between these two nations is known to all. The Jews cursed them, and believed them to be accursed. Their most merciful wish to the Samaritans was, that they might have no part in the resurrection; or, in other words, that they might be annihilated.

Verse 10. If thou knewest the gift of God] The free gift. A gift is anything that is given, for which no equivalent has been or is to be returned: a free gift is that which has been given without asking or entreaty. Such a gift of kindness was Jesus Christ to the world, chap. iii. 16; and through 13 Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again :

14 But * whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst ; but the water that I shall give him * shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

15 * The woman saith unto him, Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither.

17 The woman answered and said, I have no husband. Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband :

18 For thou hast had five husbands ; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband : in that saidst thou truly.

19 The woman saith unto him, Sir, * I perceive that thou art a prophet.

20 Our fathers worshipped in * this mountain ; and ye say, that in ' Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship.

him comes the gift of the Spirit which those who believed on his name were to receive.

Living water.] By this expression, which was common to the inhabitants both of the East and of the West, is always meant spring water, in opposition to dead, stagnant water contained in ponds, pools, tanks, or cisterns ; and what our Lord means by it is evidently the Holy Spirit, as may be seen, chap. vii. 38, 39.

Verse 11. Thou hast nothing to draw with] Thou hast no bucket. Good water is not plentiful in the East ; and travellers are often obliged to carry leathern bottles or buckets, and a line also, to let them down into the deep wells, in order to draw up water.

Verse 12. Our father Jacob] The ancient Samaritans were undoubtedly the descendants of Jacob ; but those in our Lord's time were not genuine Israelites, but a corrupted race, sprung from a mixture of different nations, sent thither by Shalmanezzer, king of the Assyrians. See 2 Kings xvii.

Verse 14. Springing up into everlasting life.] On this account he can never thirst—for how can he lack water who has in himself a living, eternal spring ? By this water our Lord means also his doctrine, explaining and promising the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost, which proceed from Jesus Christ their fountain, dwelling in a believing heart.

Verse 15. Give me this water] Her curiosity was much excited, and this was the design of our Lord, that he might have her mind properly prepared to receive the great truths which he was about to announce.

Verse 16. Call thy husband] He appears to have spoken these words, 1. To make the woman consider her own state. 2. To show her that he knew her heart, and the secret actions of her life ; and was therefore well qualified to teach her heavenly truths.

Verse 18. Thou hast had five husbands] It is not clear that this woman was a prostitute : she might have been legally married to those five, and might have been divorced through some misbehaviour of her own, not amounting to adultery ; for the adulteress was to be put to death, both by the Jewish and Samaritan law, not divorced : or she might have been cast off through some caprice of her husband ; for, in the time of our Lord, divorces were very common among the Jews, so that a man put away his wife for any fault.

Verse 19. I perceive that thou art a prophet.] And therefore thought him well qualified to decide the grand question in dispute between the Jews and the Samaritans : but she did not perceive him to be the Messiah.

Verse 20. Worshipped in this mountain] Probably pointing to Mount Gerizim, at the foot of which Sychar was situated. The patriarchs had worshipped here—Jacob builded an altar on this mountain, and worshipped the true God : see Gen. xxii. 2 ; xxxiii. 20.

Verse 21. The hour cometh, &c.] The time was now at hand in which the spiritual worship of God was about to be 21 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, * when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father.

22 Ye worship * ye know not what : we know what we worship : for ¹ salvation is of the Jews

23 But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in ² spirit ³ and in truth : for the Father seeketh such to worship him.

24 ¹ God is a Spirit : and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.

25 The woman saith unto him, I know that Messias cometh, which is called Christ : when he is come, * he will tell us all things.

26 Jesus saith unto her, * I that speak unto thee am he.

27 And upon this came his disciples, and marvelled that he talked with the woman : yet no man said, What seekest thou ? or, Why talkest thou with her ?

28 The woman then left her waterpot, and went established in the earth, and all the Jewish rites and ceremonies entirely abolished.

Worship the Father.] This epithet shows the mild, benignant, and tender nature of the Gospel dispensation. Men are called to worship their heavenly Father, and to consider themselves as his children.

Verse 22. Ye worship ye know not what] The Samaritans believed in the same God with the Jews ; but, as they rejected all the prophetic writings, they had but an imperfect knowledge of the Deity : besides, as they incorporated the worship of idols with his worship, they might be justly said to worship him whom they did not properly know. See the account of their motley worship, 2 Kings xvii. 26-34. But after Sanballat had built the temple on Mount Gerizim, the idolatrous worship of the Outhians and Sepharvites, &c., was entirely laid aside ; the same religious service being performed in the Samaritan temple which was performed in that at Jerusalem.

We know what we worship] We Jews acknowledge all the attributes of his nature, and offer to him only the sacrifices prescribed in the Law.

Salvation is of the Jews.] Salvation is from the Jews. Salvation seems here to mean the Saviour, the Messiah, as it does, Luke ii. 30 ; Acts iv. 12 ; and so the woman appears to have understood it, ver. 25. It was to the Jews that the promises were made ; and it was in their prophetic scriptures which the Samaritans rejected, that Jesus Christ was proclaimed and described. See Isa. xi. 3.

Verse 23. The true worshippers shall worship—in spirit] The worship of the Samaritans was a defective worship—they did not receive the prophetic writings : that of the Jews was a carnal worship, dealing only in the letter, and referring to the spirit and design, which were at a distance, by types and ceremonies.

Verse 24. God is a Spirit] This is one of the first, the greatest, the most sublime, and necessary truths in the compass of nature ! A man worships God in spirit, when, under the influence of the Holy Ghost, he brings all his affections, appetites, and desires to the throne of God ; and he worships him in truth, when every purpose and passion of his heart, and when every act of his religious worship is guided and regulated by the word of God.

Verse 25. *I know that Messias cometh*] Though the Samaritans did not receive the prophetic writings, yet the tradition of the advent of the Messiah, which was common among the Jews, and founded on promises contained even in the books of Moses, was generally received among them also.

Which is called Christ] This appears to be the Evangelist's explanation of the Hebrew word, for we cannot suppose that the woman understood Greek, so as to translate the Hebrew word to our Lord ; or that she should suppose that a person who was a Jew, ver. 9, and a prophet, ver. 19, could stand in need of this interpretation.

her way into the city, and saith to the men, 29 Come, see a man 'which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?

30 Then they went out of the city, and came unto him.

31 In the meanwhile, his disciples prayed him, saying, Master, eat.

32 But he said unto them, I have meat to eat that ye know not of.

33 Therefore said the disciples one to another,
Hath any man brought him ought to eat?

34 Jesus saith unto them, 'My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work.

35 Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; 'for they are white already to harvest.

36 'And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: 'that both he that soweth, and he that reapeth, may rejoice together.

37 And herein is that saying true, One soweth, and another reapeth.

He will tell us all things.] Relative to the nature of God, the nature of his worship, and the proper place to adore him in.

Verse 26. Jesus saith unto her, I—am he.] Our Lord never spoke in such direct terms concerning himself to his own countrymen; nor even to his own disciples, till a little before his death.

Verse 27. Came his disciples.] From the town, whither they went to buy food, ver. 8.

Marvelled that he talked with the woman.] Because it was contrary to the custom of the Eastern countries; and there are many canons, among the Rabbins, against it.

Yet no man said, &c.] They were awed by his majesty, and knew that he must have sufficient reasons to induce him to act a part to which he was not at all accustomed.

Verse 28. Left her waterpot.] She was so penetrated with the great truths which Jesus had announced that she forgot her errand to the well, and returned to the city without the water for which she came out!

Verse 29. All things that ever I did.] The Jews believed that one essential characteristic of the Messiah would be, that he should be able to tell the secrets of all hearts.

Verse 30. They went out of the city.] Such effect had the simple testimony of the woman on their minds.

And came unto him.] Or, Were coming to him; for they did not reach him immediately; all that discourse between him and his disciples, mentioned ver. 31 to 39, inclusive, having taken place before the people of Sychar got to the well.

Verse 31. Master, eat.] They knew that he was greatly spent both with hunger and fatigue.

Verse 32. I have meat to eat that ye know not of.] Our blessed Lord seizes every opportunity to raise the minds of his apostles to heavenly things, through the medium of earthly matters. Nor does he force these things into such service. Properly understood, earthly substances are the types, representatives, and shadows of heavenly things.

Verse 33. Hath any man brought him ought to eat?]
They could not help remembering the miraculous interventions of divine providence, 1 Kings xvii. 4-6. chap. xix. 5-8;
and Matt. iv. 11.

Verse 34. My meat is to do the will of him that sent me]
In these words, our blessed Lord teaches a lesson of zeal and earnestness to his apostles, and to all their successors in the Christian ministry. Let the salvation of souls lie nearer your heart than life itself. Let eating and drinking, labour and rest, reading, thinking, study, prayer, and all things, be directed to the accomplishment of this great work.

Verse 35. There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest?] In Palestine, the harvest did not begin till after passover, which was fixed on the 14th of the month Nisan, which answers to our March, and sometimes extends into April.

After all that learned men have said on this passage, it

38 I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labour: other men laboured, and ye are entered into their labours.

39 And many of the Samaritans of that city believed on him 'for the saying of the woman, which testified, He told me all that ever I did.

40 So when the Samaritans were come unto him, they besought him that he would tarry with them;
and he abode there two days.

41 And many more believed because of his own word;

42 And said unto the woman, Now we believe, not because of thy saying: for 'we have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

43 Now after two days he departed thence, and went into Galilee.

44 For 'Jesus himself testified, that a prophet hath no honour in his own country.

45 Then when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, 'having seen all the things that he did at Jerusalem at the feast: 'for they also went unto the feast.

Heb. xi. 40.—^f Ver. 29.—^g Ch. xvii. 18. 1 John iv. 14.—^h Matt.

does not appear that our Lord meant anything by it more than an illustration of his present subject. Though there were ordinarily four months from seed-time to harvest, so that a man, after he had sowed his seed, must wait patiently till the regular and natural harvest came, yet it was not the case now: the seed of life which he had sown but a few hours ago had already brought forth much fruit; therefore he says, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields, over which it is likely the Samaritans were then coming in troops, guided by the woman who had already received the light of the gospel of peace.

Verse 36. And he that reapeth receiveth wages.] Or, And already the reaper receiveth wages. By making the word already the beginning of this verse, on the authority of some excellent MSS. and Versions, a more consistent sense is obtained than from the common arrangement. [This criticism is not admissible.]

Verse 37. Herein is that saying true, One soweth, and another reapeth.] The proverb which our Lord quotes was taken from what ordinarily happens in the course of the divine providence, where one takes a great deal of pains to procure that of which another reaps the benefit. See instances, Lev. xxvi. 16; Micah vi. 15; also Hos. vii. 9.

Verse 39. Many of the Samaritans—believed on him for the saying of the woman.] This woman was the first apostle of Christ in Samaria!

Verse 40. He abode there two days.] We are not told that he wrought any miracles among them; this does not appear to have been necessary; they were a simple-hearted, teachable people, and they credited him on the evidence of his own eternal truth.

Verse 42. The Saviour of the world.] Not of the Jews only, but of the Samaritans, and of the whole Gentile world.

Verse 43. Went into Galilee.] Bishop Pearce thinks that some words have been lost from the end of this verse, which may be supplied thus: Went into Galilee, but not to Nazareth; for Jesus himself had declared, &c. [The difficulty is met by supposing that Jesus went into Galilee for the reason given in v. 41; that is, in order to avoid publicity.]

Verse 45. The Galileans received him.] They received him as the promised Messiah, because of the miracles which they had seen him perform at Jerusalem, at the passover.

Verse 46. Where he made the water wine.] Cana was on the road from Nazareth to Capernaum and the Sea of Tiberias.

A certain nobleman.] An officer of the king's court: for this is the meaning of the original word. This officer belonged to Herod Antipas, who was then tetrarch of Galilee.

Verse 48. Except ye see signs and wonders, &c.] Our Lord does not tell this man that he had no faith, but that he had not enough. If he had had none, he would not have come from Capernaum to Cana, to beg him to heal his son.
If he had had enough, he would have been contented with recommending his son to our Lord, without entreating him

46 So Jesus came again into Cana of Galilee, * where he made the water wine. And there was a certain ^b nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum.

47 When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went unto him, and besought him that he would come down, and heal his son; for he was at the point of death.

48 Then said Jesus unto him, ^c Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe.

49 The nobleman saith unto him, Sir, come down ere my child die.

50 Jesus saith unto him, ^d Go thy way; thy son

* Ch. ii. 1, 11.—^b Or, courtier, or, ruler.—^c 1 Cor. i. 22.

to go to Capernaum to heal him; which intimates that he did not believe our Lord could do it at a distance.

Verse 49. Sir, come down, &c.] He did not think our Lord could cure him without being present, and seems here to feel himself hurt, because our Lord did not come at his first entreaty.

Verse 50. Go thy way; thy son liveth.] Had our Lord gone with him, as he wished, his unbelief could not have been fully removed; as he would have still thought that our Lord's power could not reach from Cana to Capernaum: in order to destroy his unbelief at once, and bring him into the fulness of the faith of his supreme power, he cures him, being apparently absent, by that energy through which he fills both the heavens and the earth. Here it may be observed our blessed Lord did what this man requested him to do, but not in the way in which he wished it to be done. God will save all to the uttermost who call upon him, but not in the way in which they may desire.

The man believed the word] And yet it appears that he liveth. And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way.

51 And as he was now going down, his servants met him, and told him, saying, Thy son liveth.

52 Then inquired he of them the hour when he began to amend. And they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.

53 So the father knew that it was at the same hour in the which Jesus said unto him, Thy son liveth: * and himself believed, and his whole house.

54 This is again the second miracle that Jesus did, when he was come out of Judea into Galilee.

^d Ps. lxxi. 20. Luke vii. 50.—* Acts xviii. 8. xvi. 15, 34.

had suspended his faith upon a certain condition: "If I find on my return that my son is healed, I will believe that Jesus is the Messiah."

Verse 52. Yesterday at the seventh hour] At the time we would call one o'clock.

Verse 53. So the father knew] He had the fullest proof that his son's cure was supernatural, and that it was wrought by the Lord Jesus.

Himself believed, and his whole house.] The sickness of the child became the means of salvation to all the household. They, no doubt, thought at first that God was dealing hardly with them, when threatening to remove the child; but now they see that in very faithfulness God had afflicted them.

Verse 54. This—second miracle] The first miracle which Christ performed was in this same city of Cana, just after his baptism; and this second took place after his arrival here from Jerusalem, whence, we have seen, he was driven by the persecution raised against him by the scribes and Pharisees.

CHAPTER V.

The man who had been diseased thirty-eight years healed on the sabbath day, 1-9. The Jews cavil, persecute Christ, and seek to kill him, because he had done this cure on the sabbath, 10-16. Our Lord vindicates his conduct, and shows, from the testimony of the Father, the Scriptures, John the Baptist, and his own works, that he came from God, to be the light and salvation of the world, 17-39. He reproves the Jews for their obstinacy, 40; hatred to God, 41, 42; pride, 43-44; and disbelief of their own law, 45-47.

AFTER * this there was a feast of the Jews; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem.

2 Now there is at Jerusalem ^b by the sheep ^c market a pool, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda, having five porches.

* Lev. xxiii. 2. Deut. xvi. 1. Ch. ii. 13.—^b Neh. iii. 1. xii. 39.

Verse 1. A feast] This is generally supposed, by the best critics, to have been the feast of the Passover, which was the most eminent feast among the Jews. In several excellent MSS. the article is added, the feast, the grand, the principal festival.

Verse 2. There is] This is thought by some to be a proof that John wrote his Gospel before the destruction of Jerusalem; and that the pool and its porticoes were still remaining. Though there can be little doubt that Jerusalem was destroyed many years before John wrote, yet this does not necessarily imply that the pool and its porticoes must have been destroyed too.

By the sheep market] Rather, gate; see Neh. iii. 1, 32; xii. 39. This was in all probability the gate through which 3 In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water.

4 For ^d an angel went down at a certain season into the pool, and troubled the water: whosoever the sheep were brought which were offered in sacrifice in the temple.

^c Or, gate.—^d Matt. xxviii. 2. 1 Cor. ix. 24.

Bethesda] Bethesda signifies literally, the house of mercy. It got this name probably from the cures which God mercifully performed there. It is likely the porticoes were built for the more convenient reception of the poor and distressed, who came hither to be healed.

Verse 3. Waiting for the moving of the water.] This clause, with the whole of the fourth verse, is wanting in some MSS. and Versions: but I think there is no sufficient evidence against their authenticity. Some have imagined that the sanative virtue was communicated to the waters by washing in them the entrails of the beasts which were offered in sacrifice; and that the angel meant no more than merely then first after the troubling of the water, stepped in, was made whole of whatsoever disease he had.

5 And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity ^a thirty and eight years.

6 When Jesus saw him lie, and knew that he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole?

7 The impotent man answered him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool: but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me.

8 Jesus saith unto him, ^b Rise, take up thy bed, and walk.

9 And immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed, and walked: and ^c on the same day was the sabbath.

^a Lam. iii. 39. Hab. ii. 3. Luke viii. 43.—^b Matt. ix. 6. Mark ii. 11. Luke v. 24.—^c Ch. ix. 14.—^d Exod. xx. 10. Neh. xiii. 19. Jer. xvii. 21, &c. Matt. xii. 2. Mark ii. 24. iii. 4. Luke vi. 2.

a man sent to stir up from the bottom this corrupt sediment, which being distributed through the water, the pores of the person who bathed in it were penetrated by this matter, and his disorder repelled! But this is a miserable shift to get rid of the power and goodness of God; built on the merest conjectures, self-contradictory, and every way as unlikely as it is insupportable. It has never yet been satisfactorily proved that the sacrifices were ever washed; and, could even this be proved, who can show that they were washed in the pool of Bethesda? These waters healed a man, in a moment, of whatsoever disease he had. Now, there is no one cause under heaven that can do this. Had only one kind of disorders been cured here, there might have been some countenance for this deistical conjecture—but this is not the case; and we are obliged to believe the relation just as it stands, and thus acknowledge the sovereign power and mercy of God, or take the desperate flight of an infidel, and thus get rid of the passage altogether. [The authenticity of this passage is yet the subject of controversy; the names of illustrious critics are ranged on both sides.]

Went down] The word seems to imply that the angel had ceased to descend when John wrote. Neither Josephus, Philo, nor any of the Jewish authors mention this pool; so that it is very likely that it had not been long celebrated for its healing virtue, and that nothing of it remained when those authors wrote.

Certain season] This probably refers to the time of the feast, during which only this miraculous virtue lasted. It is not likely that the angel appeared to the people—his descent might be only known by the ebullition caused in the waters. Was not the whole a type of Christ? See Zech. xiii. 1.

Verse 5. Had an infirmity thirty and eight years.] There could have been no collusion in this case; as his affliction had lasted thirty-eight years, it must have been known to multitudes; therefore he could not be a person prepared for the occasion. All Christ's miracles have been wrought in such a way, and on such persons and occasions, as absolutely to preclude all possibility of the suspicion of imposture.

Verse 6. Wilt thou be made whole?] Christ, by asking this question, designed to excite in this person, faith, hope, and a greater desire of being healed. He wished him to reflect on his miserable state, that he might be the better prepared to receive a cure, and to value it when it came.

Verse 8. Rise, take up thy bed and walk.] Jesus speaks here as God. He speaks in no name but his own, and with an authority which belongs to God alone. And what is the consequence? The man became whole immediately; and this sudden restoration to health and strength was an incontestable proof of the omnipotence of Christ.

The bed of the poor in the East is seldom anything besides a single mat, or a cloth as thick as a bed-quilt. Men carrying such beds may be seen daily on the highways.

Verse 9. The same day was the sabbath.] But why did our Lord command this man to carry his bed on the sabbath, as the law prohibited all servile work, and especially the carrying of burthens? 1. The man was a poor man, and if he had left his bed he might have lost it; and he could not have conveniently watched it till the next morning. 2. Christ showed by this that he was Lord of the sabbath, see Matt. xii. 6. 3. This was not contrary to the spirit of the law: the sabbath was made to honour God in, and this was a 10 The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured, It is the sabbath day: ^a it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed.

11 He answered them, He that made me whole, the same said unto me, Take up thy bed, and walk.

12 Then asked they him, What man is that which said unto thee, Take up thy bed and walk?

13 And he that was healed wist not who it was: for Jesus had conveyed himself away, ^a a multitude being in that place.

14 Afterward Jesus findeth him in the temple, and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: ^b sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee.

15 The man departed, and told the Jews that it was Jesus, which had made him whole.

16 And therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, xiii. 14.—^a Or, from the multitude that was.—^b Matt. xii. 45. Ch. viii. 11.

public monument of his power and goodness. 4. It was the wisdom of Christ to do his miracles so that they might be seen and known by a multitude of people, and especially in Jerusalem, which was the capital of the country, and the centre of the Jewish religion; and this very circumstance of the healed man carrying his bed on the sabbath day must call the attention of many to this matter, and cause the miracle to be more generally known.

Verse 11. He that made me whole, &c.] The poor man reasoned conclusively:—He who could work such a miracle must be at least the best of men: now a good man will neither do evil himself, nor command others to do it: but he who cured me ordered me to carry my bed; therefore, there can be no evil in it.

Verse 13. Jesus had conveyed himself away] And this he might easily do, as there was a crowd in the place. Some think the words indicate, that Jesus withdrew on seeing a multitude in the place, i. e., raising a tumult, because of the man carrying his bed. He had not yet finished his work, and would not expose himself to the envy and malice of the Jewish rulers.

Verse 14. Jesus findeth him in the temple] Whether this was on the same day, or some other, does not distinctly appear: it was probably the same day, after he had carried home his couch. How many, when they are made well, forget the hand that has healed them, and, instead of gratitude and obedience to God, use their renewed health and strength in the service of sin!

Sin no more, unless a worse thing come unto thee.] Our Lord, intending to discover to this man who he was, gave him two proofs of the perfection of his knowledge. 1. He showed him that he knew the secret of the past—sin no more: thereby intimating that his former sins were the cause of his long affliction. 2. He showed him that he knew the future—lest a worse thing come unto thee: if thy iniquity be repeated, thy punishment will be increased.

Verse 16. And sought to slay him] This clause is omitted by several ancient MSS. and Versions; but it does not appear to me that it should be omitted. However, it was true of the Jews, whether the words were originally in the Evangelist or not. The spirit of religious persecution has always been the most fell and dangerous of all on this side perdition. Every other disposition appears to have its moderator; but this is wholly abandoned to the guidance of Satan, and has for its objects the men who know the truth, and who live to the glory of their God, and for the benefit of mankind.

Verse 17. My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.] God created the world in seven days: on the seventh he rested from all creating acts, and set it apart to be an everlasting memorial of his work. But, though he rested from creating, he never ceased from preserving and governing that which he had formed: in this respect he can keep no sabbaths; for nothing can continue to exist, or answer the end proposed by the divine wisdom and goodness, without the continual energy of God. So I work—I am constantly employed in the same way, governing and supporting all things, comforting the wretched, and saving the lost; and to me, in this respect, there is no sabbath.

Verse 18. Making himself equal with God.] This the Jews understood from the preceding verse: nor did they take a wrong meaning out of our Lord's words; for he plainly stated and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the sabbath day.

17 But Jesus answered them, * My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.

18 Therefore the Jews ^bsought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, * making himself equal with God.

19 Then answered Jesus and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, ^dThe Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.

20 For * the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself doeth: and he will shew him greater works than these, that ye may marvel.

21 For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; ^eeven so the Son quickeneth whom he will.

22 For the Father judgeth no man, but * hath committed all judgment unto the Son:

* Ch. ix. 4. xiv. 10.—^aCh. vii. 19.—^cCh. x. 30, 33. Phil. ii. 6.—^dVer. 30. Ch. viii. 28. ix. 4. xii. 49. xiv. 10.—^eMatt. iii. 17. Ch. iii. 35. 2 Pet. i. 17.—^fLuke vii. 14. viii. 54. that, whatever was the Father's work, his was the same; thus showing that He and the Father were ONE.

Verse 19. The Son can do nothing of himself. Because of his inseparable union with the Father: nor can the Father do anything of himself, because of his infinite unity with the Son.

What things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son. God does nothing but what Christ does. What God does is the work of God, and proper to no creature—Jesus does whatsoever God does, and therefore is no created being. The conclusion from our Lord's argument is: If I have broken the sabbath, so has God also; for I can do nothing but what I see him doing. He is ever governing and preserving; I am ever employed in saving.

Verse 20. That ye may marvel. Or, So as to make you wonder. Our Lord sometimes speaks of himself as God, and sometimes as the ambassador of God. As he had a human and divine nature, this distinction was essentially necessary.

Verse 21. As the Father raiseth up the dead. This he did in the case of the widow's son at Sarepta, 1 Kings xvii. 22, by the ministry of the prophet Elijah. And again, in the case of the Shunamite's son, 2 Kings iv. 32-35, by the ministry of the prophet Elisha.

The Son quickeneth whom he will. He raiseth from death to life whosoever he pleases. So he did, for he raised the ruler's daughter, Mark v. 43-45; the widow's son at Nain, Luke vii. 11-15; and Lazarus, at Bethany, John xi. 14-44.

Whom he will. Here our Lord points out his sovereign power and independence; he gives life according to his own will—not being obliged to supplicate for the power by which it was done, as the prophets did.

Verse 22. The Father judgeth no man. This confirms what he had said before, ver. 17, 19.

Verse 23. That all men should honour the Son, &c. If then the Son is to be honoured, EVEN as the Father is honoured, then the Son must be God, as receiving that worship which belongs to God alone.

He that honoureth not the Son. God will not receive that man's adoration who refuses to honour Jesus, even as he honours him.

Verse 24. He that heareth my words. My doctrine—and believeth on him that sent me—he who credits my divine mission, that I am come to give light and life to the world by my doctrine and death—hath eternal life—the seed of this life is sown in his heart the moment he believes—and shall not come into condemnation, into judgment—that which will speedily come on this unbelieving race; and that which shall overwhelm the wicked in the great day.

But is passed from death unto life. Has changed his country, or place of abode. Death is the country where every Christless soul lives. The man who knows not God lives a dying life, or a living death; but he who belives in 23 That all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. * He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath sent him.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, ^aHe that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; ^bbut is passed from death unto life.

25 Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when ^cthe dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live.

26 For as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself;

27 And ^dhath given him authority to execute judgment also, * because he is the Son of man.

28 Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice,

29 * And shall come forth: * they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that the Son of God passes over from the empire of death, to the empire of life.

Verse 25. The dead shall hear the voice. Three kinds of death are mentioned in the scriptures: natural, spiritual, and eternal.

The first consists in the separation of the body and soul. The second in the separation of God and the soul. The third in the separation of body and soul from God in the other world. Answerable to these three kinds of death, there is a threefold life: Natural life, which consists in the union of the soul and body. Spiritual life, which consists in the union of God and the soul by faith and love. Eternal life, which consists in the communion of the body and soul with God, by holiness, in the realms of bliss.

Verse 26. Hath he given to the Son to have life, &c. Here our Lord speaks of himself in his character of Messiah or envoy of God.

Verse 27. Because he is the Son of man. Because he is the Messiah; for in this sense the phrase, Son of man, is often to be understood.

Verse 30. I can of mine own self do nothing. Because of my intimate union with God. See on ver. 19.

I seek not mine own will. I do not, I cannot attempt to do anything without God. This, that is, the Son of man, the human nature which is the temple of my divinity, chap. i. 14, is perfectly subject to the Deity that dwells in it. In this respect our blessed Lord is the perfect pattern of all his followers. In every thing their wills should submit to their heavenly Father.

Verse 31. If I bear witness. If I had no proof to bring of my being the Messiah, and equal to God, common sense would direct you to reject my testimony; but the mighty power of God, by which I work my miracles, sufficiently attests that my pretensions are well founded.

Verse 32. There is another. God the Father, who, by his Spirit in your prophets, described my person, office, and miracles.

Verse 33. Ye sent unto John. I am not without human testimony of the most respectable kind:—Ye sent to John and he bare witness. There are several circumstances in John's character which render his testimony unexceptionable.

Verse 34. But I receive not testimony from man [only]. I have no need of John's testimony: the works that I do bear sufficient testimony to me, ver. 36.

But these things I say, &c. You believed John to be a prophet—a prophet cannot lie: he bore testimony that I am the Lamb of God, that beareth away the sin of the world, chap. i. 29; therefore, that ye may be saved by believing in me as such, I have appealed to John's testimony.

Verse 35. He was a burning and a shining light. He was a burning and a shining LAMP. He was not the light of the world, i. e., the sun; but he was a lamp, to give a clear and have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation.

80 'I can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just; because 'I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me.

81 'If I bear witness of myself, my witness is not true.

82 'There is another that beareth witness of me; and I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true.

83 Ye sent unto John, 'and he bare witness unto the truth.

84 But I receive not testimony from man: but these things I say, that ye might be saved.

85 He was a burning and a shining light: and 'ye were willing for a season to rejoice in his light.

86 But 'I have greater witness than that of John: for 'the works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me.

87 And the Father himself, which hath sent me, 'hath borne witness of me. Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, 'nor seen his shape.

steady light till the sun should arise. It is supposed that John had been cast into prison about four months before this time.

The expression of lamp our Lord took from the ordinary custom of the Jews, who termed their eminent doctors the lamps of Israel. A lighted candle is a proper emblem of a minister of God; and, Alteri serviens consumor—"In serving others, I myself destroy"—a proper motto. There are few who preach the gospel faithfully that do not lose their lives by it. Burning may refer to the zeal with which John executed his message; and shining may refer to the clearness of the testimony which he bore concerning Christ. Only to shine is but vanity; and to burn without shining will never edify the church of God. Some shine and some burn, but few both shine and burn; and many there are who are denominated pastors, who neither shine nor burn. He who wishes to save souls must both burn and shine, the clear light of the knowledge of the sacred records must fill his understanding; and the holy flame of loving zeal must occupy his heart. Zeal without knowledge is continually blundering; and knowledge without zeal makes no converts to Christ.

For a season] The time between his beginning to preach and his being cast into prison.

To rejoice] To jump for joy, as we would express it. They were exceedingly rejoiced to hear that the Messiah was come, because they expected him to deliver them out of the hands of the Romans: but when a spiritual deliverance, of infinitely greater moment, was preached to them, they rejected both it and the light which made it manifest.

Verse 86. But I have greater witness] I prove that God bears testimony to me, by my works: these miracles, which attest my mission, and prove by themselves that nothing less than unlimited power and boundless love could ever produce them. By my word only, I have perfectly and instantly healed a man who was diseased thirty and eight years. Ye see the miracle—the man is before you whole and sound. Why then do ye not believe in my mission, that ye may embrace my doctrine, and be saved?

Verse 87. The Father himself—hath borne witness] That is by his prophets.

Ye have neither heard his voice] The sense is—"Not that my Father ever appeared visibly or spake audibly to any of you; but he did it by the mouths of his prophets." Lately, however, he had added to their testimony his own voice from heaven, on the day of Christ's baptism.

Verse 88. Ye have not his word abiding in you] Though ye believe the scriptures to be of God, yet ye do not let them take hold of your hearts—his word is in your mouth, but not in your mind.

Verse 89. Search the scriptures] This should be trans-

38 And ye have not his word abiding in you: for whom he hath sent, him ye believe not.

39 'Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and 'they are they which testify of me.

40. 'And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life.

41 'I receive not honour from men.

42 But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you.

43 I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not; if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive.

44 'How can ye believe, which receive honour one of another, and seek not 'the honour that cometh from God only?

45 Do not think that I will accuse you to the Father: 'there is one that accuseth you, even Moses, in whom ye trust.

46 For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me: 'for he wrote of me.

47 But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?

lated, not in the imperative, but in the indicative mood—thus, Ye search the scriptures diligently.

Perhaps the scriptures were never more diligently searched than at that very time; first, because they were in expectation of the immediate appearing of the Messiah; secondly, because they wished to find out allegories in them: and, thirdly, because they found these scriptures to contain the promise of an eternal life.

Verse 40. And ye will not come to me] Though ye thus search the scriptures, in hopes of finding the Messiah and eternal life in them, yet ye will not come unto me, believe in me, and be my disciples, though so clearly pointed out by them, that ye may have that eternal life which can only come through me.

Verse 41. I receive not honour from men] Your salvation can add nothing to me, nor can your destruction injure me: I speak only through my love for your souls, that ye may be saved.

Verse 42. But I know you, that ye have not, &c.] Do not say that you oppose me through zeal for God's honour, and love for his name, because I make myself equal to him. I know the dispositions of your souls; and I know ye have neither love for his name, nor zeal for his glory.

Verse 43. I am come in my Father's name] With all his influence and authority.

If another shall come in his own name] Having no divine influence, and no other authority than his own, him ye will receive.

Verse 44. How can ye believe, which receive honour, &c.] The grand obstacle to the salvation of the Scribes and Pharisees was their pride, vanity, and self-love. They lived on each other's praise. If they had acknowledged Christ as the only teacher, they must have given up the good opinion of the multitude; and they chose rather to lose their souls than to forfeit their reputation among men! This is the ruin of millions. They will not accept the salvation which is offered to them on these terms—Deny thyself: take up thy cross, and follow ME. It is no wonder that we never find persons making any progress in religion who mix with the world, and in any respect regulate their conduct by its antichristian customs, maxims, and fashions.

Verse 45. Do not think that I will accuse you] You have accused me with a breach of the sabbath, which accusation I have demonstrated to be false: I could, in return, accuse you, and substantiate the accusation, with the breach of the whole law; but this I need not do, for Moses, in whom ye trust, accuses you. You read his law, acknowledge you should obey it, and yet break it both in the letter and in the spirit. This law, therefore, accuses and condemns you.

Verse 46. He wrote of me.] For instance, in reciting the prophecy of Jacob, Gen. xlix. 10. Confer this with Acts

iii. 22, and vii. 87. Besides, Moses pointed out the Messiah in a multitude of symbols and figures, which are found in the history of the patriarchs, the ceremonial laws, and especially in the whole sacrificial system. All these were well-defined, though shadowy, representations of the birth, life, sufferings, death, and resurrection of the Saviour of the world.

Verse 47. But if ye believe not his writings, &c.] If you lay them not to heart—if you draw not those conclusions from them which their very letter, as well as their spirit, authorizes you to draw, how shall ye believe my words, against which ye have taken up the most ungrounded prejudice?

It appears that this discourse of our Lord had effectually confounded these Jews, for they went away without replying—a manifest proof that they had nothing to say.

CHAPTER VI.

Jesus passes the Sea of Tiberias, and a great multitude follow him, 1-4. He feeds five thousand with five loaves and two fishes, 5-13. They acknowledge him to be the prophet that should come into the world, 14. They purpose to force him to become their king; and he withdraws from the multitude, 15. The disciples take ship, and go towards Capernaum, and are overtaken with a storm, 16-18. Christ comes to them, walking upon the water, 19-21. The people take boats and follow him, 22-24. He reproves their fleshly motives, 25-27. They profess a desire to be instructed, 28. Christ preaches to them, and shows them that he is the bread of life, and that those who reject him are without excuse, 29-40. They are offended, and cavil, 41, 42. He asserts and illustrates his foregoing discourse, 43-51. They again cavil, and Christ gives further explanations, 52-59. Several of his disciples are stumbled at his assertion, that unless they ate his flesh and drank his blood they could not have life, 60. He shows them that his words are to be spiritually understood, 61-65. Several of them withdraw from him, 66. He questions the twelve, whether they also were disposed to forsake him, and Peter answers for the whole, 67-69. Christ exposes the perfidy of Judas, 70, 71.

A*FTER* these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias.

2 And a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased.

3 And Jesus went up into a mountain, and there he sat with his disciples.

4 And the passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh.

5 When Jesus then lifted up his eyes, and saw a great company come unto him, he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?

*Matt. xiv. 15. Mark vi. 35. Luke ix. 10, 12.—^bLuke vi. 17. ix. 11.—^cLev. xxiii. 5, 7. Deut. xvi. 1. Ch. ii. 13. v. 1.—^dMatt.

Verse 1. After these things] This is a sort of indefinite expression, from which we can gather nothing relative to the time in which these things happened.

Jesus went over the sea of Galilee] Or, by the side of the sea of Galilee. The sea of Galilee, Gennesaret, and Tiberias, are the same in the New Testament with the sea of Cinnereth in the Old. Tiberias was a city in Galilee, situated on the western side of the lake.

Verse 2. They saw his miracles which he did] John does not mention these miracles; but Matthew details them, from chap. xii. 2, to chap. xiv. 13.

Verse 3. Went up into a mountain] This mountain must have been in the desert of Bethsaida, in the territories of Philip, Tetrarch of Galilee. Our Lord withdrew to this place for a little rest; for he and his disciples had been so thronged with the multitudes, continually coming and going, that they had not time to take necessary food.

Verse 4. And the passover—was nigh.] This happened about ten or twelve days before the third passover which Christ celebrated after his baptism.

Verse 5. Saith unto Philip] Philip was probably the provider for the disciples, as Judas was the treasurer.

Whence shall we buy bread] Or, may we buy. As Philip was of Bethsaida, chap. i. 44, xii. 21, he must have been

6 And this he said to prove him: for he himself knew what he would do.

7 Philip answered him, 'Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

8 One his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him, 9 There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves, and two small fishes: 'but what are they among so many?

10 And Jesus said, Make the men sit down. (Now there was much grass in the place.) So the men sat down, in number about five thousand.

11 And Jesus took the loaves; and when he had much better acquainted with the country in which they then were than any other of the disciples.

Verse 6. This he said to prove him] To try his faith, and to see whether he and the other apostles had paid proper attention to the miracles which they had already seen him work; and to draw their attention more particularly to that which he was now about to perform.

Verse 7. Two hundred pennyworth] This sum, rating the denarius at 7½d., would amount to £6 9s. 2d. of our money, and appears to have been more than our Lord and all his disciples were worth of this world's goods.

Verse 8. Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith] The other Evangelists attribute this answer to the apostles in general.

Verse 9. There is a lad here] A little boy, or servant, probably one who carried the apostles' provisions, or who came on purpose to sell his bread and fish.

Five barley loaves] Barley scarcely bore one-third of the value of wheat in the East, see Rev. vi. 6. That it was a very mean fare appears from Ezek. xiii. 19, where the false prophetesses are said to pollute the name of God for handfuls of barley, i. e., for the meaneast reward. From this and other circumstances, we may plainly perceive that the self-denying doctrine preached by Christ and his apostles was fully exemplified in their own manner of living.

given thanks he distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would.

12 When they were filled, he said unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost.

13 Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten.

14 Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did, said, This is of a truth^a that prophet that should come into the world.

15 When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain himself alone.

16^b And when even was now come, his disciples went down unto the sea, 17 And entered into a ship, and went over the sea toward Capernaum. ^c And it was now dark, and Jesus was not come to them.

^a Gen. xlix. 10. Deut. xviii. 15, 18. Matt. xi. 3. Ch. i. 21. iv. 19, 25. vii. 40.

Two small fishes] This word signifies whatever is eaten with bread, to perfect the meal, or to make it easy of deglutition, or to help the digestion. There is no word in the English language for it, which is a great defect. From the parallel places in the other three Evangelists, we gather that the word evidently means fish in the text of St. John, see on chap. xxi. 5.

Verse 10. There was much grass in the place.] Perhaps newly mown grass, or hay, is meant, and this circumstance marks out particularly that the passover was at hand.

Verse 11. Jesus took the loaves] See the notes on Matt. xiv. 19-21.

Verse 12. Gather up the fragments] Among the Jews the peah, or residue after a meal, was the property of the servants.

Verse 14. This is of a truth that prophet] Spoken of, Deut. xviii. 25, viz., the Messiah. How near were those people at this time to the kingdom of heaven!

Verse 15. Take him by force, to make him a king] Our Lord perceiving this, either by some words which they had dropped, or by his penetration of their hearts, retired before the project had been fully formed, or could be put into execution. It was not till a considerable time afterwards that even the disciples fully understood that his kingdom was not of this world.

Into a mountain] That on which he was with his disciples previously to his working this miracle, see ver. 3.

Worldly wisdom would have said, "Declare thyself king: yield to the desires of the people: this will be the readiest way of converting the Jews." No. Jesus must die for the sin of the world. No man's heart can be turned to God by outward pomp or splendour—no saving change can be brought about by any might or any power, but by the Spirit of the Lord of hosts. Zech. iv. 6.

Verse 17. Toward Capernaum.] Our Lord seems to have desired them to go either to Bethsaida or Capernaum, which were only a very few miles distant, and on the same side of the sea. The reason why they could reach neither was the storm which the Evangelist says rose at the time, and the wind being contrary: the storm being probably excited by the prince of the power of the air.

Verse 19. Had rowed] Their vessel was a small one only, something of the boat kind: as to sails, if they had any, they could not now venture to carry them, because of the storm.

Five and twenty or thirty furlongs] Between three and four miles. The Sea of Tiberias, on which they now were, was forty furlongs, or five miles in breadth; and one hundred and forty furlongs, or eighteen miles in length.

Verse 21. Immediately the ship was at the land] How far they were from the place at which they landed, when our Lord came to them, we know not. But the Evangelist seems to speak of their sudden arrival there as extraordinary and miraculous.

18 And the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew.

19 So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, they see Jesus walking on the sea, and drawing nigh unto the ship: and they were afraid.

20 But he saith unto them, It is I; be not afraid.

21 Then they willingly received him into the ship: ^a and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went.

22 The day following, when the people which stood on the other side of the sea saw that there was none other boat there, save that one whereinto his disciples were entered, and that Jesus went not with his disciples into the boat, but that his disciples were gone away alone;

23 (Howbeit there came other boats from Tiberias nigh unto the place where they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks:)

24 When the people therefore saw that Jesus was not there, neither his disciples, they also took shipping, and came to Capernaum, seeking for Jesus.

^b Matt. xiv. 23. Mark vi. 47.—^c Matt. xiv. 25. Mark vi. 47. ^a Matt. xiv. 32. Mark vi. 51.

Verse 22. The people which stood on the other side] Standing by the sea side. The people were not on the other side, i. e., in Perea, as our version states, but on that side where Bethsaida lay. The Greek word seems to signify in scripture sometimes on the side of, and sometimes on this side of.

Verse 23. There came other boats] After Jesus and his disciples had departed.

From Tiberias] Herod Antipas built this city near the Lake of Genesaret, in the best parts of Galilee, and called it Tiberias, in honour of Tiberius, the Roman Emperor.

Verse 24. They also took shipping] That is, as many of them as could get accommodated with boats took them, and thus got to Capernaum; but many others doubtless went thither on foot, as it is not at all likely that five or six thousand persons could get boats enough to carry them.

Verse 25. On the other side of the sea] That is, on the sea coast, to the northward of it, where Capernaum lies in the land of Genesaret.

Verse 26. Ye seek me, not because ye saw, &c.] Though the miracle of the loaves was one of the most astonishing that ever was wrought upon earth; and though this people had, by the testimony of all their senses, the most convincing proof of its reality; yet we find many of them paid little attention to it, and regarded the omnipotent hand of God in it no farther than it went to satisfy the demands of their appetite!

Verse 27. Labour not for the meat] That is, for that only, but also for the bread, &c. Our Lord wills every man to be active and diligent in that employment in which providence has placed him; but it is his will also that that employment, and all the concerns of life, should be subservient to the interest of his soul.

But for that meat, &c.] He who labours not in the work of his salvation, is never likely to enter into the kingdom of God. Though our labour cannot purchase it, either in whole or in part, yet it is the way in which God chooses to give salvation; and he that will have heaven must strive for it.

Him hath God the Father sealed.] By this expression, our Lord points out the commission which, as the Messiah, he received from the Father, to be prophet and priest to an ignorant, sinful world.

Verse 28. That we might work the works of God] That is, divine works, or such as God can approve.

Verse 29. This is the work of God, that ye believe] There is nothing you can be employed in more acceptable to God than in yielding to the evidence set before you, and acknowledging me as your Messiah, and the Saviour of a lost world.

Verse 30. What sign] What miracle; so the word is evidently used, John ii. 11, 23, and in many other places.

That we may see, and believe thee] That, having seen the miracle, we may believe thee to be the promised Messiah.

25 And when they had found him on the other side of the sea, they said unto him, Rabbi, when camest thou hither?

26 Jesus answered them and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.

27 * Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: * for him hath God the Father sealed.

28 Then said they unto him, What shall we do, that we might work the works of God?

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, * This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent.

30 They said therefore unto him, * What sign showest thou then, that we may see, and believe thee? what dost thou work?

31 * Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, * He gave them bread from heaven to eat.

32 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven.

33 For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven and giveth life unto the world.

34 * Then said they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread.

35 And Jesus said unto them, * I am the bread of life: * he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

Verse 31. Our fathers did eat manna in the desert. Their argument seems to run thus: Thou hast, we grant, fed five thousand men with five loaves and ~~two~~ small fishes; but what is this in comparison of what ~~Moses~~ did in the desert, who for forty years fed more than a million of persons with bread from heaven: do something like this, and then we will believe in thee, as we have believed in Moses.

Verse 32. Moses gave you not that bread from heaven. Our Lord refutes the argument of the Jews, by proving: 1. That it was not Moses, but God, who gave the manna. 2. That this bread was not the true bread, but was merely a type of it. 3. That God had given them now a bread infinitely more excellent. 4. That himself is that heavenly nourishment of which he spake, and that he was typified by manna in the desert.

Verse 34. Lord, evermore give us this bread. Either meaning, "Let the miracle of the manna be renewed, and continue among us for ever:" or, "Let that bread, of which thou hast spoken, become our constant nourishment."

Verse 35. I am the bread of life. That is, the bread which gives life, and preserves from death.

He that cometh to me. The person who receives my doctrine, and believes in me as the great atoning sacrifice, shall be perfectly satisfied, and never more feel misery of mind. All the guilt of his sins shall be blotted out, and his soul shall be purified unto God; and, being enabled to love him with all his heart, he shall rest, fully, supremely, and finally happy, in his God.

Verse 37. All that the Father giveth me. The neuter gender is probably used here for the masculine.

Shall come to me. All that are drawn by the Father, ver. 44, i. e., all those who are influenced by his Spirit, and yield to those influences: for as many as are LED—not driven or dragged—by the Spirit of God, they are the children of God, Rom. viii. 14. God sent his prophets to proclaim his salvation to this people; and he accompanied their preaching with the influence of his Spirit. Those who yielded were 36 * But I said unto you, That ye also have seen me, and believe not.

37 * All that the Father giveth me shall come to me: and * him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.

38 For I came down from heaven * not to do mine own will, * but the will of him that sent me.

39 And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, * that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day.

40 And this is the will of him that sent me, * that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day.

41 The Jews then murmured at him, because he said, I am the bread which came down from heaven.

42 And they said, * Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? how is it then that he saith, I came down from heaven?

43 Jesus therefore answered and said unto them, Murmur not among yourselves.

44 * No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day.

45 * It is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. * Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

46 * Not that any man hath seen the Father, * save he which is of God, he hath seen the Father.

47 Verily, verily, I say unto you, * He that believeth on me hath everlasting life.

48 * I am that bread of life.

saved: those who did not yield to these drawings were lost. This Spirit still continued to work and to allure; but the people being uncircumcised both in heart and ears, they always resisted the Holy Ghost; as their fathers did, so did they, Acts vii. 51. And though Christ would have gathered them together, as a hen would gather her chickens under her wings, yet they would not. Those who come at the call of God are represented here as given to Christ, because it is through his blood alone that they can be saved.

I will in no wise cast out. Our blessed Lord alludes to the case of a person in deep distress and poverty, who comes to a nobleman's house, in order to get relief: the person appears, and the owner, far from treating the poor man with asperity, welcomes, receives him kindly, and supplies his wants. So does Jesus. Never did he reject the suit of a penitent, however grievous his crimes might have been.

Verse 38. Not to do mine own will. I am come, not to act according to human motives, passions, or prejudices: but according to infinite wisdom, goodness, and mercy.

Verse 39. I should lose nothing. It is the will of God that every soul who believes should continue in the faith, and have a resurrection unto life eternal. But he wills this continuance in salvation, without purposing to force the persons so to continue. God may will a thing to be, without willing that it shall be. Judas was given to Christ by the Father, chap. xvii. 12. The Father willed that this Judas should continue in the faith, and have a resurrection unto life eternal: but Judas sinned and perished. Now it is evident that God willed that Judas might be saved, without willing that he must be saved infallibly and unconditionally. When a man is a worker together with the grace of God, he is saved: when he receives that grace of God in vain, he is lost—not through a lack of will or mercy in God, but through lack of his co-operation with divine grace. God saves no man as a stock or a stone, but as a reasonable being and free agent.

Raise it up again at the last day. The Jews believed that 49 • Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead.

50 ^b This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

51 I am the living bread ^c which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and ^d the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world.

52 The Jews therefore ^e strove among themselves, saying, 'How can this man give us his flesh to eat?

53 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ^f ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.

54 ^g Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day.

55 For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.

56 He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, ^h dwelleth in me, and I in him.

57 As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father: so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me.

58 ⁱ This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead: he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.

59 These things said he in the synagogue, as he taught in Capernaum.

60 ^j Many therefore of his disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is a hard saying; who can hear it?

61 When Jesus knew in himself that his disciples murmured at it, he said unto them, Doth this offend you?

62 ^k What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?

63 ^l It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.

64 But ^m there are some of you that believe not. For ⁿ Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who should betray him.

65 And he said, Therefore ^o said I unto you that no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father.

66 ^p From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him.

67 Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away?

68 Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to

^a Ver. 31.—^b Ver. 51, 58.—^c Ch. iii. 13.—^d Heb. x. 5, 10.—^e Ch. vii. 43. ix. 16. x. 19.—^f Ch. iii. 9.—^g Matt. xxvi. 28, 28.—^h Ver. 27, 40, 63. Ch. iv. 14.—ⁱ John iii. 24. iv. 16, 16.—^j Ver. 40, 50, 51.—

the wicked should have no resurrection: and that the principle that led to the resurrection of the body in the righteous, was the indwelling Spirit of God.

Verse 40. This is the will of him that sent me] God gives the grace of repentance and faith to every man; but he neither repents nor believes for any man. Each must repent for his own sins, and believe in the Lord Jesus, through the grace given, or perish.

Verse 41. The Jews then murmured] Because the whole of his discourse went to prove that he was infinitely greater than Moses; and that he alone could give present peace and eternal glory to men.

Verse 44. Except the Father—draw him] But how is a man drawn? God shows him his wants—he shows the Saviour whom he has provided for him; the man feels himself a lost sinner; and, through the desire which he finds to escape hell, and get to heaven, he comes unto Christ, that he may be justified by his blood. Unless God thus draw, no man will ever come to Christ; because none could, without this drawing, ever feel the need of a Saviour.

Drawing or alluring, not dragging, is here to be understood. The best Greek writers use the verb in this same sense.

Verse 45. It is written in the prophets] Isai. liv. 13; Jer. xxxi. 34.

They shall be all taught of God.] This explains the preceding verse. God teaches a man to know himself, that, finding his need of salvation, he may flee to lay hold on the hope which his heavenly Father has set before him in the gospel. God draws men by his love, and by showing them what his love has done for them. Fear repels, but love attracts. He who is ever preaching the terrors of the law, and representing God as a vindictive judge, will never bring sinners to him. They are afraid of this terrible God: but they love him, who so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life.

Verse 46. Not that any man hath seen the Father] He does not teach men by appearing personally before them, or by any other outward voice than that of his word and messengers; but he teaches by his Spirit.

He which is of God] That is, Christ alone: neither Moses nor any of the prophets had ever seen God: Jesus, who lay in the bosom of the Father, he saw and revealed him, chap. i. 18.

Verse 47. Hath everlasting life.] He is entitled to this, on his believing me to be the Messiah, and trusting in me alone for salvation.

^k Ver. 66. Matt. xi. 6.—^l Ch. iii. 13. Mark xvi. 19. Acts i. 9. Eph. iv. 8.—^m 2 Cor. iii. 6.—ⁿ Ver. 36.—^o Ch. ii. 24, 25. xiii. 11.—^p Ver. 44, 45.—^q Ver. 81.

Verse 48. I am that bread of life] I alone afford, by my doctrine and Spirit, that nourishment by which the soul is saved unto life eternal.

Verse 49. Your fathers did eat manna—and are dead.] That bread neither preserved their bodies alive, nor entitled them to life eternal; but those who receive my salvation, shall not only be raised again in the last day, but shall inherit eternal life.

Verse 50. This is the bread, &c.] I am come for this very purpose, that men may believe in me, and have eternal life.

Verse 51. Is my flesh which I will give, &c.] Here our Lord plainly declares that his death was to be a vicarious sacrifice and atonement for the sin of the world; and that, as no human life could be preserved unless there was bread (proper nourishment) received, so no soul could be saved but by the merit of his death.

Verse 52. How can this man give us his flesh to eat?] Our Lord removes this difficulty, and answers the question in ver. 63.

Verse 53. Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man] As a man must eat bread and flesh, in order to be nourished by them, so a man must receive the grace and Spirit of Christ, in order to his salvation. Bishop Pearce justly observes that the ideas of eating and drinking are here borrowed to express partaking of, and sharing in. This, indeed, was a very common mode of expression among the Jews.

Verse 54. Hath eternal life] This can never be understood of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. 1. Because this was not instituted till a year after, at the last passover. 2. It cannot be said that those who do not receive that sacrament must perish everlastingly. 3. Nor can it be supposed that all those who do receive it are necessarily and eternally saved. On the contrary, St. Paul intimates that many who received it at Corinth perished, because they received it unworthily, not discerning the Lord's body: not distinguishing between it and a common meal; and not properly considering that sacrifice for sin, of which the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was a type, see 1 Cor. xi. 30.

Verse 55. My flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.] Or, rather, My flesh is the true meat, &c. Our Lord terms his flesh, the true meat, and his blood the true drink, because those who received the grace merited by his death would be really nourished and supported thereby unto eternal life. He calls himself the true vine, chap. xv. 1, in exactly the same sense in which he calls himself the true bread, ver. 32, and the true meat and drink in this verse.

Verse 56. Dwelleth in me, and I in him.] Of all connexions and unions, none is so intimate and complete as that whom shall we go? thou hast * the words of eternal life.

69 ^b And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God.

* Acts v. 20.—^b Matt. xvi. 18. Mark viii. 29. Luke ix. 20. Ch. i. 49. xi. 27.

which is effected by the digestion of aliments, because they are changed into the very substance of him who eats them; and this our Lord makes the model of that union which subsists between himself and genuine believers. He lives in them, and they in him; for they are made partakers of the divine nature, 2 Pet. i. 4.

Verse 57. So he that eateth me, even he shall live by me.] From which we learn that the union between Christ and his followers shall be similar to that which subsists between God and Christ.

Verse 60. Many therefore of his disciples] So it appears that he had many more than the twelve, who constantly accompanied him.

This is a hard saying; who can hear it?] Who can digest such doctrine as this? It is intolerable: it is impracticable.

Verse 61. Jesus knew in himself] By giving them this proof that he knew their hearts, he also proved that he was God; that he could not be deceived himself, and that it was impossible for him to deceive any; consequently, that the doctrine he taught them must be the truth of God.

Verse 62. If ye shall see the Son of man ascend] Ye need not be stumbled at what I say concerning eating my flesh and drinking my blood, for ye shall soon have the fullest proof that this is figuratively spoken, for I shall ascend with the same body with which I shall arise from the dead; therefore my flesh and blood, far from being eaten by men, shall not even be found among them.

Verse 63. It is the spirit that quickeneth] It is the spiritual sense only of my words that is to be attended to, and through which life is to be attained, 2 Cor. iii. 6.

The flesh profiteth nothing] If ye could even eat my flesh and drink my blood, this would not avail for your salvation. These words contain a caution that the hearers should not understand his words in the strict literal sense, as if his body were really BREAD, and as if his flesh and blood were really to be eaten and drunk.

Are spirit, and they are life.] As my words are to be spiritually understood, so the life they promise is of a spiritual nature.

Verse 64. But there are some of you that believe not.] This is addressed to Judas, and to those disciples who left him, ver. 66.

And who should betray him] Or, who would deliver him up. Because he knew all things; he knew from the first, from Judas's call to the apostleship, and from eternity (if the reader pleases), who it was who would (not should) deliver him up into the hands of the Jews. Should, in the apprehension of most, implies necessity and compulsion; would implies that he was under the influence of his own free will, without necessity or constraint. The former takes 70 Jesus answered them, * Have not I chosen you twelve, ^d and one of you is a devil?

71 He spake of Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon: for he it was that should betray him, being one of the twelve.

* Luke vi. 13.—^d Ch. xiii. 27.

away his guilt: for what a man is irresistibly compelled to do, by the supreme authority of God, he cannot avoid; and therefore to him no blame can attach: but Judas, having acted through his own free will, abusing his power, and the grace he had received, was guilty of the murder of an innocent man, and deserved the perdition to which he went.

Verse 65. Except it were given unto him] None can come at first, unless he be drawn by the Father; and none can continue, unless he continue under those sacred influences which God gives only to those who do not receive his first graces in vain.

Verse 66. Many of his disciples went back] None of these were of the twelve. Christ had many others who generally attended his ministry, and acknowledged him for the Messiah.

Verse 67. Will ye also go away?] Or, Do ye also desire, &c. These words are very emphatical. Will you abandon me?—you, whom I have distinguished with innumerable marks of my affection—you, whom I have chosen out of the world to be my companions—you, to whom I have revealed the secrets of the eternal world—you, who have been witnesses of all my miracles—you, whom I intend to seat with me on my throne of glory; will you go away?

Verse 68. Simon Peter answered] With his usual zeal and readiness, speaking in behalf of the whole, To whom shall we go? Where shall we find a more gracious master—a more powerful Redeemer—a more suitable Saviour? Thou alone hast the words of eternal life. None can teach the doctrine of salvation but thyself; and none can confer the gift of eternal life but thou alone.

Verse 69. We believe] On the authority of thy word; and are sure—have known, by the evidence of thy miracles, that thou art the Christ, the promised Messiah.

Verse 70. Have not I chosen you twelve] Have I not, in an especial manner, called you to believe in my name, and chosen you to be my disciples, and the propagators of my doctrine? Nevertheless, one of you is a devil, or accuser, enlisted on the side of Satan, who was a murderer from the beginning.

Verse 71. He spake of Judas—for he it was that should betray him] By referring to this matter so often, did not our blessed Lord intend to warn Judas? Was not the evil fully exposed to his view? And who dare say that it was impossible for him to avoid what he had so often been warned against? When the temptation did take place, and his heart, in purpose, had brought forth the sin, might he not have relented, fallen at his injured master's feet, acknowledged his black offence, and implored forgiveness? And surely his most merciful Lord would have freely pardoned him.

CHAPTER VII.

Jesus continues in Galilee, 1. He is desired to go to the feast of Tabernacles, 2-5. His answer, 6-9. He goes up, and the Jews seek him at the feast, 10-13. He teaches in the temple, 14-24. The Jews are confounded by his preaching, 25-27. He continues to teach; they wish to slay him, 28-30. Many of the people believe on him, 31. The Pharisees murmur, and our Lord reasons with them, 32-36. His preaching on the last day of the feast, 37-39. The people are greatly divided in their opinions concerning him, 40-44. The officers, who were sent by the Pharisees to take him, return, and because they did not bring him, their employers are offended, 45-49. Nicodemus reasons with them, 50-53.

AFTER these things Jesus walked in Galilee: for he would not walk in Jewry, *because the Jews sought to kill him.
2 *Now the Jews' feast of tabernacles was at hand.

3 *His brethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence, and go into Judea, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou doest.

4 For there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly. If thou do these things, shew thyself to the world.

5 (For *neither did his brethren believe in him.)

6 Then Jesus said unto them, *My time is not yet come: but your time is always ready.

7 *The world cannot hate you: but me it hateth, *because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil.

8 Go ye up unto this feast: I go not up yet unto this feast; ^hfor my time is not yet full come.

9 When he had said these words unto them, he abode still in Galilee.

*Ch. v. 16, 18.—^b Lev. xxiii. 34.—^c Matt. xii. 46. Mark iii. 31. Acts i. 14.—^d Mark iii. 21.—^e Ch. ii. 4. viii. 20. Ver. 8, 30.—^f Ch. xv. 19.—^g Ch. iii. 19.—^h Ch. viii. 20. Ver. 6.—ⁱ Ch. xi. 56.—^j Ch. ix. 16. x. 19.—^k Matt. xxi. 46. Luke vii. 16. Ch. vi. 14. Ver. 40.

Verse 1. After these things] St. John passes from the preceding discourse of our Lord, which he delivered a little before the passover, chap. vi. 4, to the Feast of Tabernacles, which happened six months after, and thus omits many things mentioned by the other Evangelists, which our blessed Lord said and did during that time.

For he would not walk in Jewry] He found greater scope for the exercise of his important ministry in Galilee than in Judea, as the chief priests, &c., were continually plotting his death.

Verse 2. Feast of Tabernacles] This feast was celebrated on the fifteenth day of the month Tisri, answering to the last half of our September, and the first half of October. This month was the seventh of the ecclesiastical, and first of the civil, year. The feast took its name from the tents which were erected about the temple, in public places, in courts, and on the flat roofs of their houses, and in gardens; in which the Jews dwelt for eight days, in commemoration of the forty years during which their fathers dwelt in the wilderness. It was one of the three solemn annual feasts in which all the males were obliged, by the law, to appear at Jerusalem.

Verse 3. His brethren—said] It is generally supposed that these were the children of the sisters of his mother Mary; but some of the ancients have stated that Joseph had several children by a former wife. No solid proof can be alleged against this; nor can we pretend to say that these were not the children of Joseph and Mary. Our blessed Lord, it is true, was her first-born, while she was yet a virgin; but no man can prove that he was her last. However this may be, it is certain that the Hebrews gave the name of brethren to all the relatives of a particular family.

That thy disciples also may see] That is, the disciples which he had made two years and six months before, at the passover, chap. ii. 23. [This is very doubtful.]

Verse 4. No man that doeth anything in secret, &c.] They took it for granted that Christ was influenced by the same spirit which themselves felt; and that therefore he should use every opportunity of exhibiting himself to the public, that he might get into repute; and they hoped that a part of his honour would be reflected back upon themselves, as being his near relations.

Verse 5. Neither did his brethren believe in him.] They did not receive him as the promised Messiah; but, having seen so many of his miracles, they could not but consider him as an eminent prophet.

Verse 6. My time is not yet come] It is probable our Lord meant no more than this, that he had some business to transact before he could go to Jerusalem; but his brethren, having nothing to hinder them, might set off immediately.

Verse 7. The world cannot hate you] The Jews will not persecute you, because ye are in their sentiments and interests.

But me it hateth] Because I condemn its injustice, its 10 But when his brethren were gone up, then went he also up unto the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret.

11 Then *the Jews sought him at the feast, and said, Where is he?

12 And *there was much murmuring among the people concerning him: for *some said, He is a good man: others said, Nay; but he deceiveth the people.

13 Howbeit no man spake openly of him ¹for fear of the Jews.

14 Now about the midst of the feast Jesus went up into the temple, and taught.

15 *And the Jews marvelled, saying, How knoweth this man *letters, having never learned?

16 Jesus answered them, and said, *My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

17 *If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

pride, its ambition, and its maxims, by my life and doctrine. It is very likely that the term world means here the Jewish people only; this is an acceptance in which it frequently occurs in this gospel.

Verse 8. I go not up yet unto this feast] Our Lord did not say, I will not go to this feast; but merely, I go not yet, or am not going, i. e., at present; because, as he said, ver. 6, and repeats here, his time was not yet come—he had other business to transact before he could go. And it is very likely that his business detained him in Galilee till the feast was half over; for we do not find him at Jerusalem till the middle of the feast, ver. 14, i. e., till the feast had been begun four days. He might also be unwilling to go at that time, there being such a great concourse of people on the road to Jerusalem, and his enemies might say that he had availed himself of this time and multitude in order to excite sedition.

Verse 10. But when his brethren were gone up] Having dispatched his business, and the concourse of people being now past, he went up also.

Verse 11. Then the Jews sought him] By Jews here are to be understood the scribes, Pharisees, and rulers of the people, and not the inhabitants of the province of Judea.

Verse 12. Some said, He is a good man] Calumny and slander are among the privileged orders; they stalk abroad with their thousand brazen mouths, and blast the reputation of the followers of God. Benevolence and candour are only on sufferance; and a whisper in secret is the most they are permitted to give in behalf of Christ and his followers, whose laws and maxims condemn a vicious world, and goad it to revenge.

Verse 15. How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?] The Jewish learning consisted in the knowledge of their own scriptures, and the traditions of their elders. In this learning our blessed Lord excelled. No person ever spoke with more grace and dignity, or knew better how to make a more proper use, or a happier application, of Jewish allegories and parables; because none ever penetrated the sense of the scriptures as he did; none ever cited them more successfully, or ever showed their accomplishment in so complete and satisfactory a manner. As these branches of learning were taught at the Jewish schools, and our Lord had never attended there, they were astonished to find him excelling in that sort of learning, of which they themselves professed to be the sole teachers.

Verse 16. My doctrine is not mine] Our blessed Lord, in the character of Messiah, might as well say, My doctrine is not mine, as an ambassador might say, I speak not my own words, but his who sent me: and he speaks these words to draw the attention of the Jews from the teaching of man to the teaching of God; and to show them that he was the promised Messiah, the very person on whom, according to the prophet (Isa. xi. 2), the Spirit of Jehovah should rest.

Verse 17. If any man will do his will, &c.] If you really wish to do the will of God, begin the practice of it; and take glory : but he that seeketh his glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him.

19 ^a Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law ? ^b Why go ye about to kill me ?

20 The people answered and said, 'Thou hast a devil : who goeth about to kill thee ?

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, I have done one work, and ye all marvel.

22 ^a Moses therefore gave unto you circumcision : (not because it is of Moses, ^b but of the fathers ;) and ye on the sabbath day circumcise a man.

23 If a man on the sabbath day receive circumcision, ^c that the law of Moses should not be broken ; are ye angry at me, because ^d I have made a man every whit whole on the sabbath day ?

24 ^e Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment.

25 Then said some of them of Jerusalem, Is not this he, whom they seek to kill ?

my doctrine, and apply it to all that you know God requires of man ; and if you find one of my precepts contrary to the nature, perfections, and glory of God, or to the present or eternal welfare of men, then ye shall be at liberty to assert that my doctrine is human and erroneous, and God has not sent me.

Verse 18. He that speaketh of himself, &c. If I speak so as to procure my own glory, to gratify vanity, or to secure and promote my secular interests, then reject me as a deceiver and as a false prophet. But if I act only to promote the glory of God, to induce all men to love and obey him ; if I propose nothing but what leads to the perfection of his law, and the accomplishment of its ordinances, you cannot help acknowledging me at least for a true prophet ; and, if you add to this the proofs which I have given of my mission and power, you must acknowledge me as the mighty power of God, and the promised Messiah.

And no unrighteousness is in him. Or, there is no falsehood in him : so the word should be translated here ; and it is frequently used by the Septuagint for sheker, a lie, falsehood, &c.

Verse 19. Did not Moses give you the law, &c. The scribes and Pharisees announced our Lord to the multitude as a deceiver, on the ground that he was not an exact observer of the law, for he had healed a man on the sabbath day, chap. v. 9, 10 ; and consequently must be a false prophet, whom the interests of religion required to be put to death. To destroy this evil reasoning, our Lord speaks in this wise : If I deserve death for curing a man on the sabbath, and desiring him to carry home his bed, which you consider a violation of the law, you are more culpable than I am, for you circumcise a child on the sabbath, which requires much more bustle, and is of so much less use than what I have done to the infirm man. Why, therefore, go ye about to kill me, as a transgressor of the law, when not one of yourselves keeps it ?

Verse 20. Thou hast a devil The crowd, who made this answer, were not in the secret of the chief priests. They could not suppose that any person desired to put him to death for healing a diseased man ; and therefore, in their brutish manner, they say, Thou hast a demon—thou art beside thyself, and slanderest the people, for none of them desires to put thee to death.

Verse 21. I have done one work That of curing the impotent man already referred to, see chap. v. 9.

And ye all marvel. Or, ye all marvel because of this. The word, therefore, in the beginning of the next verse, conveys no meaning at all, and should be connected with, ye all marvel. All the eminent critics are on the side of this arrangement of the words.

Verse 22. But of the fathers That is, it came from the patriarchs. Circumcision was not, properly speaking, one of the laws of the Mosaic institution, it having been given at first to Abraham, and continued among his posterity till the giving of the law, Gen. xvii. 9, 10, &c.

26 But, lo, he speaketh boldly, and they say nothing unto him. Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ ?

Ye—circumcise a man. That is, a male child : for every male child was circumcised when eight days old ; and if the eighth day after its birth happened to be a sabbath, it was nevertheless circumcised, that the law might not be broken, which had enjoined the circumcision to take place at that time, Lev. xii. 3.

Verse 23. Every whit whole The law of circumcision required the removal of a small portion of flesh, which was considered a blot and reproach among the Hebrews, because it confounded them with the nations who were not in covenant with God. Christ, to this, opposes the complete cure of the infirm man, who was diseased throughout his whole body : if the one was permitted on the sabbath day, for the reason already alleged, surely the other had stronger reasons to recommend it.

Verse 24. Judge not according to the appearance Attend to the law, not merely in the letter, but in its spirit and design. Learn that the law, which commands men to rest on the sabbath day, is subordinate to the law of mercy and love, which requires them to be ever active to promote God's glory in the comfort and salvation of their fellow-creatures ; and endeavour to judge of the merit or demerit of an action, not from the first impression it may make upon your prejudices, but from its tendency, and the motives of the person, as far as it is possible for you to acquaint yourselves with them ; still believing the best, where you have no certain proof to the contrary.

Verse 27. No man knoweth whence he is. The generality of the people knew very well that the Messiah was to be born in Bethlehem, in the city, and of the family of David, see ver. 42. But from Isaiah liii. 3, Who shall declare his generation ? they probably thought that there should be something so peculiarly mysterious in his birth, or in the manner of his appearing, that no person could fully understand. Had they considered his miraculous conception, they would have felt their minds relieved on this point.

Verse 28. Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am Perhaps they should be read interrogatively : Do ye both know me, and know whence I am ? Our Lord takes them up on their own profession, and argues from it. Since you have got so much information concerning me, add this to it, to make it complete ; viz., that I am not come of myself ; am no self-created or self-authorized prophet ; I came from God :—the testimony of John the Baptist, the descent of the Holy Ghost, the voice from heaven, the purity and excellence of my doctrine, and the multitude of my miracles, sufficiently attest this. Now, God is true who has borne testimony to me ; but ye know him not, therefore it is that this testimony is disregarded.

Verse 31. Will he do more miracles It was the belief of the Jews, and they founded it upon Isa. xxxv. 5, that when sees and the chief priests sent officers to take him.

33 Then said Jesus unto them, 'Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me.

34 Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me; and where I am, thither ye cannot come.

35 Then said the Jews among themselves, Whither will he go, that we shall not find him? will he go unto the dispersed among the Gentiles, and teach the Gentiles?

36 What manner of saying is this that he said, Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come?

37 In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, 'If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink.

38 He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

39 ('But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)

40 Many of the people therefore, when they heard this saying, said, Of a truth this is the Prophet.

41 Others said, 'This is the Christ. But some said, Shall Christ come out of Galilee?

the Messiah came, he would do all kinds of miracles; and, in order that they might have the fullest proof of the divine mission of Christ, it had pleased God to cause miracles to cease for between four and five hundred years, and that John the Baptist himself had not wrought any. His miracles, therefore, were a full proof of his divine mission.

Verse 32. The people murmured such things] The people began to be convinced that he was the Messiah; and this being generally whispered about, the Pharisees, &c., thought it high time to put him to death, lest the people should believe on him; therefore they sent officers to take him.

Verse 34. Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me] When the Roman armies came against you, you will vainly seek for a deliverer. But ye shall be cut off in your sins, because ye did not believe in me; and where I am—in the kingdom of glory, ye cannot come; for nothing that is unholy shall enter into the new Jerusalem.

Verse 35. The dispersed among the Gentiles] Or Greeks. By the dispersed, are meant here the Jews who were scattered through various parts of that empire which Alexander the Great had founded, where the Greek language was used, and where the Jewish scriptures in the Greek version of the Septuagint were read.

Verse 37. In the last day, that great day of the feast] This was called the great day, because of certain traditional observances, and not on account of any excellence which it derived from the original institution. It was probably when they went to draw water from the pool Siloam, and while they were pouring it out at the foot of the altar, that our Lord spoke these words; for, as that ceremony pointed out the gracious influences of the Holy Spirit, our Lord, who was the fountain whence it was to proceed, called the people to himself, that, by believing on him, they might be made partakers of that inestimable benefit.

Verse 38. He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said] He who receives me as the Messiah, according to what the scripture has said concerning me; my person, birth, conduct, preaching, and miracles, being compared with what is written there, as ascertaining the true Messiah. Out of his belly—from his heart and soul; for in his soul shall this Spirit dwell.

Living water.] As a true spring is ever supplied with water from the great deep, with which it has communication, so shall the soul of the genuine believer be supplied with light, life, love, and liberty, and all the other graces of the indwelling Spirit, from the indwelling Christ.

42 Hath not the scripture said, that Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, where David was?

43 So there was a division among the people because of him.

44 And some of them would have taken him; but no man laid hands on him.

45 Then came the officers to the chief priests and Pharisees; and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him?

46 The officers answered, 'Never man spake like this man.

47 Then answered them the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived?

48 Have any of the rulers or of the Pharisees believed on him?

49 But this people who knoweth not the law are cursed.

50 Nicodemus saith unto them, ('he that came to Jesus by night, being one of them,)

51 Doth our law judge any man, before it hear him, and know what he doeth?

52 They answered and said unto him, Art thou also of Galilee? Search, and look: for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet.

53 And every man went unto his own house.

Verse 39. Was not yet given] Certain measures of the Holy Spirit had been vouchsafed from the beginning of the world to believers and unbelievers: but that abundant effusion of his graces spoken of by Joel, chap. ii. 28, which peculiarly characterizes the gospel times, was not granted till after the ascension of Christ. 1. Because this Spirit in its plenitude was to come in consequence of his atonement; and therefore could not come till after his crucifixion. 2. It was to supply the place of Christ to his disciples, and to all true believers; and therefore it was not necessary till after the removal of his bodily presence from among them.

Verse 40. Of a truth this is the Prophet] The great prophet, or teacher, spoken of by Moses, Deut. xviii. 15, which they improperly distinguished from the Messiah, ver. 41. Some no doubt knew that by the prophet the Messiah was meant; but others seem to have thought that one of the ancient prophets should be raised from the dead, and precede the appearing of the Messiah.

Verse 41. Shall Christ come out of Galilee?] As the prophets had declared that the Messiah was to come from the tribe of Judah, and from the family of David, and should be born in the city of Bethlehem, these Jews, imagining that Christ had been born in Galilee, concluded that he could not be the Messiah.

Verse 42. Where David was?] That is, where he was born, 1 Sam. xvi. 1, 4, and where he was before he became king in Israel.

Verse 43. There was a division] A schism; they were divided in sentiment, and separated into parties. This is the true notion of schism.

Verse 44. Would have taken him] Or, they wished to seize him. But their being divided in opinion, ver. 43, was the cause, under God, why his life was at that time preserved, Psalm lxxvi. 10.

Verse 45. Then came the officers] They had followed him for several days, seeking for a proper opportunity to seize on him, when they might fix some charge of sedition, &c., upon him.

Verse 46. Never man spake like this man] They heard, they felt, that no man ever spoke with so much grace, power, majesty, and eloquence. They had never heard a discourse so affecting and persuasive. So Jesus still speaks to all who are simple of heart.

Verse 48. Have any of the rulers—believed on him?] Very few. But is this a proof that he is not of God? No, truly. If he were of the world, the world would love its own. The religion of Christ has been in general rejected by the rulers of the world.

Verse 49. This people] This rabble. The common people were treated by the Pharisees with the most sovereign contempt: they were termed am-ha-arets, people of the earth; and were not thought worthy to have a resurrection to eternal life.

Verse 50. Nicodemus—being one of them] That is, a Pharisee, and a ruler of the Jews, see on chap. iii. 1.

Verse 51. Doth our law judge any man] The man, i. e., who is accused. Perhaps Nicodemus did not refer so much to anything in the law of Moses, as to what was commonly practised among them.

Verse 52. Art thou also of Galilee?] They knew very well that he was not; but they spoke this by way of reproach. As if they had said, thou art no better than he is, as thou takest his part.

Search, and look] Examine the scriptures, search the public registers, and thou wilt see that out of Galilee there ariseth no prophet.

Verse 53. And every man went, &c.] The authority and influence of Nicodemus, in this case, was so great, that the Sanhedrin broke up without being able to conclude anything. As the feast was now ended, they were not obliged to continue any longer in or about Jerusalem; and therefore all returned to their respective dwellings.

This verse and the first eleven verses of the following chapter are wanting in several MSS.

CHAPTER VIII.

The story of the woman taken in adultery, 1-11. Jesus declares himself the light of the world, 12. The Pharisees cavil, 13. Jesus answers, and shows his authority, 14-20. He delivers a second discourse, in which he convicts them of sin, and foretels their dying in it, because of their unbelief, 21-24. They question him; he answers, and foretels his own death, 25-29. Many believe on him, in consequence of this last discourse, 30. To whom he gives suitable advice, 31, 32. The Jews again cavil, and plead the nobility and advantages of their birth, 33. Jesus shows the vanity of their pretensions, and the wickedness of their hearts, 34-47. They blaspheme, and Christ convicts and reproves them, and asserts his divine nature, 48-58. They attempt to stone him, 59.

JESUS went unto the ^a mount of Olives.
2 And early in the morning he came again into the temple, and all the people came unto him; and he sat down, and taught them.

3 And the scribes and Pharisees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery; and when they had set her in the midst,

4 They say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act.

5 ^b Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou?

6 This they said, tempting him, that they might have to accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not.

7 So when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, ^c He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her.

8 And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9 And they which heard it, ^d being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, even unto the last; and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst.

10 When Jesus lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?

conjectures concerning what our Lord wrote on the ground.

Verse 7. He that is without sin] Meaning the same kind of sin, adultery, fornication, &c.

Let him first cast a stone at her.] Or, upon her. The Jewish method of stoning, according to the Rabbins, was as follows: The culprit, half naked, the hands tied behind the back, was placed on a scaffold, ten or twelve feet high; the witnesses, who stood with her, pushed her off with great force: if she was killed by the fall there was nothing farther done; but if she was not, one of the witnesses took up a very large stone, and dashed it upon her breast, which generally was the coup de grace, or finishing stroke. This mode of punishment seems referred to, Matt. xxi. 44.

Verse 9. Being convicted by their own conscience] So it is likely they were all guilty of similar crimes. Their own is not in the original, and is needless: being convicted by conscience is expressive enough.

Beginning at the eldest, even unto the last] From the most honourable to those of the least repute. In this sense the words are undoubtedly to be understood.

The woman standing in the midst.] But if they all went out how could she be in the midst? It is not said that all the people whom our Lord had been instructing went out, Verse 3. A woman taken in adultery] Adultery was at this time so common that they had ceased to put the law in force against it. The waters of jealousy (Num. v. 14), were no longer drunk; and the men who were guilty themselves dared not try their suspected wives, as it was believed the waters would have no evil effect upon the wife, if the husband himself had been criminal.

Verse 5. That such should be stoned] It is not strictly true that Moses ordered adultery in general to be punished by stoning. The law simply says that the adulterer and adulteress shall be put to death; Lev. xx. 10, Deut. xxii. 22. The Rabbins say they were strangled.

Verse 6. That they might have to accuse him.] Had our Lord condemned the woman to death, they might have accused him to Pilate, as arrogating to himself the power of life and death, which the Romans had taken away from the Jews; besides, the Roman laws did not condemn an adulteress to be put to death. On the other hand, if he had said she should not be put to death, they might have represented him to the people as one who decided contrary to the law, and favoured the crime of which the woman was accused.

With his finger wrote] Several MSS. add, their sins who accused her, and the sins of all men. There are many idle 11 She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, 'Neither do I condemn thee: go, and ^bsinno more.

12 Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, 'I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

13 The Pharisees therefore said unto him, 'Thou bearest record of thyself; thy record is not true.

14 Jesus answered and said unto them, Though I bear record of myself, yet my record is true: for I know whence I came, and whither I go; but 'ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go.

15 'Ye judge after the flesh; 'I judge no man.

16 And yet if I judge, my judgment is true: for 'I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent me.

17 'It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true.

18 I am one that bear witness of myself: and 'the Father that sent me beareth witness of me.

19 Then said they unto him, Where is thy Father?

Jesus answered, 'Ye neither know me, nor my Father: 'if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also.

20 These words spake Jesus in 'the treasury, as he taught in the temple: and 'no man laid hands on him; for 'his hour was not yet come.

21 Then said Jesus again unto them, I go my way, and 'ye shall seek me, and 'shall die in your sins: whither I go, ye cannot come.

22 Then said the Jews, Will he kill himself? because he saith, Whither I go, ye cannot come.

23 And he said unto them, 'Ye are from beneath; I am from above: 'ye are of this world; I am not of this world.

24 'I said therefore unto you, that ye shall die in your sins: 'for if ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins.

25 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? And Jesus saith unto them, Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning.

26 I have many things to say and to judge of you:

but only her accusers, see ver. 2. The rest undoubtedly continued with their teacher.

Verse 11. Neither do I condemn thee] It would have been strange if Jesus, when he was not a magistrate, and had not the witnesses before him to examine them, and when she had not been tried and condemned by the law and legal judges, should have taken upon him to condemn her.

Verse 12. I am the light of the world] The fountain whence all intellectual light and spiritual understanding proceed: without me all is darkness, misery, and death. The Divine Being was, by the Rabbins, denominated, The light of the world. Our Lord, therefore, assumes here a well-known character of the Supreme Being; and with this we find the Jews were greatly offended.

Shall not walk in darkness] He shall be saved from ignorance, infidelity, and sin. If he follow me, become my disciple, and believe on my name, he shall have my Spirit to bear witness with his, that he is a child of God. He shall have the light of life—such a light as brings and supports life. The sun, the fountain of light, is also the fountain of life: by his vivifying influences, all things live. Neither animal nor vegetative life could exist, were it not for his influence. Jesus, the sun of righteousness, Mal. iv. 2, is the fountain of all spiritual and eternal life. His light brings life with it, and they who walk in his light live in his life.

As the Messiah was frequently spoken of by the prophets under the emblem of light, see Isai. ix. 1, xlix. 6, ix. 2, the Pharisees must at once perceive that he intended to recommend himself to the people as the Messiah, when he said, I am the light of the world.

Verse 13. Thou bearest record] As if they had said, Dost thou imagine that we shall believe thee, in a matter so important, on thy bare assertion?

Verse 14. I know whence I came] I came from God, and am going to God, and can neither do nor say anything but what leads to and glorifies him.

Verse 15. Ye judge after the flesh] Because I appear in the form of man, ye think I am but a mere man—pay attention to my teaching and miracles, and ye shall then see that nothing less than infinite wisdom and unlimited power could teach and do what I have taught and performed. Our Lord speaks here exactly in the character of an ambassador. Such a person does not bring a second with him to vouch his truth; his credentials from his king ascertain his character: he represents the king's person. So our Lord represents the Father as bearing witness with him.

Verse 19. Ye neither know me, &c.] Ye know neither the Messiah, nor the God that sent him.

If ye had known me] The nature and perfections of God never can be properly known, but in the light of the gospel of Jesus Christ. It is worthy of remark that, in all this discourse, our blessed Lord, ever speaks of the Father and himself as two distinct persons.

Verse 20. The treasury] The treasury was in what was called the court of the women. It seems that our Lord sometimes sat in this court to teach the people, see Mark xii. 41, &c.

His hour was not yet come.] The time was not arrived, in which he had determined to give himself up into the hands of his crucifiers.

Verse 21. Then said Jesus again unto them] He had said the same things to them the day before, see chap. vii. 34.

Ye shall seek me] When your calamities come upon you, ye shall in vain seek for the help of the Messiah, whom ye now reject, and whom ye shall shortly crucify.

Verse 22. Will he kill himself?] They now understood that he spake concerning his death.

Verse 23. Ye are from beneath] Ye are capable of murder, and of self-murder too, because ye have nothing of God in you.

Verse 25. Who art thou?] This marks the indignation of the Pharisees—as if they had said: Who art thou that takest upon thee to deal out threatenings in this manner against us?

Jesus saith unto them, Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning.] Rather, Just what I have already told you, i. e., that I am the light of the world—the Christ—the Saviour of mankind. There are a variety of renderings for this verse among the critics. I have given it that meaning which I thought the most simple and plain.

Verse 26. I have many things to say and to judge of you] Or, to speak and to condemn, &c. I could speedily expose all your iniquities, and show that these are the reasons why I say you will die in your sins.

He that sent me is true] Whatever he hath spoken of you by the prophets shall surely come to pass; his word cannot fail.

Verse 28. When ye have lifted up] To be lifted up, is a common mode of expression among the Jewish writers for to die, or to be killed.

Verse 29. The Father hath not left me alone] Though ye shall have power to put me to death, yet this shall not be because he hath abandoned me. No—he is ever with me, because I do that which pleaseth him; and it is his pleasure that I should lay down my life for the salvation of the world.

Verse 30. As he spake these words, many believed on him.] The same sun that hardens the clay softens the wax. This discourse, which proved the savour of death unto death to the obstinate Pharisees, became the savour of life unto life to many of the simple-hearted people.

Verse 31. If ye continue in my word] Or, in this doctrine of mine. It is not enough to receive God's truth—we must retain and walk in it. And it is only when we receive the truth, love it, keep it, and walk in it, that we are the genuine disciples of Christ.

Verse 32. Ye shall know the truth] Shall have a constant but ^a he that sent me is true : and ^b I speak to the world those things which I have heard of him.

27 They understood not that he spake to them of the Father.

28 Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have ^c lifted up the Son of man, ^d then shall ye know that I am he, and ^e that I do nothing of myself; but ^f as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things.

29 And ^g he that sent me is with me : ^h the Father hath not left me alone; ⁱ for I do always those things that please him.

30 As he spake these words, ^j many believed on him.

31 Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, ^k then are ye my disciples indeed;

32 And ye shall know the truth, and ^l the truth shall make you free.

33 They answered him, ^m We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man : how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free ?

34 Jesus answered them, Verily, I say unto you, ⁿ Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.

35 And ^o the servant abideth not in the house for ever : but the Son abideth ever.

experimental knowledge of its power and efficacy. And the truth shall make you free.] No man is truly free, but he in whose heart the power of sin is destroyed, and who has received the Spirit of adoption, through which he cries, Abba! Father!

Verse 33. They answered] That is, the carping, cavilling Pharisees already mentioned; for the words cannot be spoken of the simple people who had already believed.

We were never in bondage to any man.] This assertion was not only false, but it was ridiculous in the extreme; seeing their whole history, sacred and profane, is full of recitals of their servitude in Egypt, in Chaldea, under the Persians, under the Macedonians, and under the Romans. If the words are to be restrained to themselves alone, we were never in bondage, they have a faint shadow of truth.

Verse 34. Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.] Or, is the slave of sin. This was the slavery of which Christ spoke; and deliverance from it was the liberty which he promised.

Verse 35. And the servant abideth not in the house] Or, rather, Now the slave abideth not in the family. A slave has no right to any part of the inheritance in the family to which he belongs; but the son—the legitimate son—has a right. He can make any servant of the family free, though no slave can. He can divide or bestow the inheritance as he pleases.

Verse 37. My word hath no place in you.] Or, this doctrine of mine hath no place in you. Ye hear the truths of God, but ye do not heed them; the word of life has no influence over you; and how can it, when ye seek to kill me because I proclaim this truth to you?

Verse 38. I speak that which I have seen] I speak nothing but that unchangeable, eternal truth which I have received from the bosom of God.

Ye do that which ye have seen] Instead of ye have seen, I think we should read, ye have heard, on the authority of many MSS., Versions, and Fathers. This reading seems preferable to the other, because it could not be said, with the same propriety, that the Jews had seen anything with their father the devil, as it could that Jesus had seen with his.

Jesus saw the Father, for he was the Word that was with God from eternity. The Jews did not see, they only felt and heard, their father the devil. It is the interest of Satan to keep himself out of sight, and to work in the dark.

Verse 39. Ye would do the works of Abraham.] Ye would imitate him in his faith, obedience, and uprightness; but 36 ^a If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.

37 I know that ye are Abraham's seed; but ^b ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you.

38 ^c I speak that which I have seen with my Father : and ye do that which ye have seen with your father.

39 They answered and said unto him, ^d Abraham is our father. Jesus saith unto them, ^e If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham.

40 ^f But now ye seek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, ^g which I have heard of God : this did not Abraham.

41 Ye do the deeds of your father. Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication; ^h we have one Father, even God.

42 Jesus said unto them, ⁱ If God were your Father, ye would love me : ^j for I proceeded forth and came from God; ^k neither came I of myself, but he sent me.

43 ^l Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word.

44 ^m Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts ⁿ of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and ^o abode not in the truth, this ye do not, for ye seek to kill me—ye are watching for an opportunity to destroy me, merely because I tell you the truth: Abraham never did anything like this; therefore, you have no spiritual relationship to him.

Verse 41. Ye do the deeds of your father.] You have certainly another father than Abraham—one who has instilled his own malignant nature into you.

We be not born of fornication.] We are not a mixed, spurious breed—our tribes and families have been kept distinct—we are descended from Abraham by his legal wife Sarah; and we are no idolaters.

We have one Father, even God.] In the spiritual sense of father and son, we are not a spurious, that is, an idolatrous race; because we acknowledge none as our spiritual father, and worship none as such, but the true God.

Verse 42. If God were your Father, ye would love me] I came from God, and it would be absurd to suppose that you would persecute me if you were under the influence of God.

Verse 43. Why do ye not understand my speech?] This my mode of speaking—when illustrating spiritual by natural things.

Because ye cannot hear my word.] That is, ye cannot bear my doctrine: it comes too close to you; it searches your hearts, detects your hypocrisy, and exposes your iniquitous intentions and designs.

Verse 44. Ye are of your father the devil] Ye are the seed of the old serpent.

The lusts of your father] Like father like son. What Satan desires, ye desire, because ye are filled with his nature. Awful state of unregenerate men! They have the nearest alliance to Satan; they partake of his nature, and have in them the same principles and propensities which characterize the very nature and essence of the devil!

He was a murderer from the beginning] It was through him that Adam transgressed; in consequence of which death entered into the world, and slew all his posterity.

Abode not in the truth] He stood not in the truth—was once in a state of glorious felicity, but fell from it; and, being deprived of all good himself, he could not endure that others should enjoy any.

He speaketh of his own] He speaketh of his own offspring, or, from his own disposition, for he is the father and fountain of all error and falsity; and all who are deceived by him, and partake of his disposition, falsity and cruelty, are his offspring, for he is a liar, and the father of it; literally, his father also. [That is, the father of the liar.]

because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own : for he is a liar, and the father of it.

45 And because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.

46 Which of you convinceth me of sin ? And if I say the truth, why do ye not believe me ?

47 * He that is of God heareth God's words : ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.

48 Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil ?

49 Jesus answered, I have not a devil ; but I honour my Father, and ye do dishonour me.

50 And * I seek not mine own glory : there is one that seeketh and judgeth.

51 Verily, verily, I say unto you, † If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.

52 Then said the Jews unto him, Now we know that thou hast a devil. * Abraham is dead, and the prophets ; and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying, he shall never taste of death.

53 Art thou greater than our father Abraham, which is dead ? and the prophets are dead : whom makest thou thyself ?

54 Jesus answered, † If I honour myself, my honour is nothing : † it is my Father that honoureth me ; of whom ye say, that he is your God :

55 Yet † ye have not known him ; but I know him : and if I should say, I know him not, I shall be a liar like unto you : but I know him, and keep his saying.

56 Your father Abraham † rejoiced to see my day : † and he saw it, and was glad.

57 Then said the Jews unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham ?

58 Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, † I am.

59 Then † took they up stones to cast at him : but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple, † going through the midst of them, and so passed by.

Verse 46. Which of you convinceth me of sin ?] Can any of you prove me guilty of any fault ? You have maliciously watched all my steps ; have you seen the smallest matter to reprove, in any part of my conduct ?

But it is probable that sin is put here in opposition to truth, in the same verse, and then it should be rendered falsehood. [This is not the New Testament usage of the word, and it would materially weaken the passage.]

Verse 47. He that is of God] Meaning probably himself : he who came from God, or was born of God—heareth the words of God—has the constant inspiration of his Spirit, speaks nothing but truth, and cannot possibly err.

Verse 48. Thou art a Samaritan] This was the same, among them, as heretic or schismatic among us. This is the only time in which the Jews gave our Lord this title of reproach.

Hast a devil ?] Art possessed by an evil spirit ; and art, in consequence, deranged.

Verse 49. I have not a devil] Our Lord does not stop a moment to refute the first part of the charge ; but he answers to the second with the utmost meekness and conclusiveness : I honour God. This is what no demon can do, nor any man who is under such influence.

Verse 50. I seek not mine own glory] Another proof that I am not influenced by any Spirit but that which proceeds from God.

Verse 51. Shall never see death.] He shall never come under the power of the death of the soul, but shall live eternally with me in glory.

Verse 54. Your God] They called God their God, while enemies to him both in their spirit and conduct.

nestly desired to see my day ; his soul leaped forward in earnest hope and strong expectation that he might see the incarnation of Jesus Christ. The metaphor is, taken from a person who, desiring to see a long-expected friend who is coming, runs forward, now and then jumping up to see if he can discover him. [But this rendering spoils the force of the passage, and is not warranted by usage.]

And he saw it] Not only in the promises, Gen. iii. 15, xii. 7, xxii. 18 ; but he saw this day especially when Jehovah appeared to him in a human form, Gen. xviii. 2, 17, which many suppose to have been a manifestation of the Lord Jesus. [But the vision was one of faith, and refers to the day of Christ's appearance in the flesh.]

Verse 57. Thou art not yet fifty years old] The age of our blessed Lord has never been properly determined. Some of the primitive fathers believed that he was fifty years old when he was crucified ; but their foundation, which is no other than these words of the Jews, is but a very uncertain one.

Verse 59. Then took they up stones, &c.] It appears that the Jews understood him as asserting his Godhead ; and, supposing him to be a blasphemer, they proceeded to stone him, according to the law, Lev. xxiv. 16.

But Jesus hid himself] In all probability he rendered himself invisible—though some will have it that he conveyed himself away from those Jews who were his enemies, by mixing himself with the many who believed on him (ver. 80, 81), and who, we may suppose, favoured his escape.

Going through the midst of them, and so passed by.] These words are wanting in several editions and versions. But they seem necessary to explain the manner of our Lord's escape.

CHAPTER IX.

Account of the man who was born blind, 1-5. Christ heals him, 6, 7. The man is questioned by his neighbours, 8-12. He is brought to the Pharisees, who question him, 13-17, and then his parents, 18-23. They again interrogate the man, who, vindicating the conduct of Christ, is excommunicated by them, 24-34. Jesus, hearing of the conduct of the Pharisees, afterwards finds the man, and reveals himself to him, 35-38. He passes sentence on the obduracy and blindness of the Pharisees, 39-41.

AND as Jesus passed by, he saw a man which^a was blind from his birth.

2 And his disciples asked him, saying, Master, ^bwho did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?

3 Jesus answered, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents: ^cbut that the works of God should be made manifest in him.

4 ^dI must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.

5 As long as I am in the world, ^eI am the light of the world.

6 When he had thus spoken, ^fhe spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he ^ganointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay.

7 And said unto him, Go, wash ^hin the pool of Siloam, (which is by interpretation, Sent.) ⁱHe went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing.

8 The neighbours therefore, and they which before had seen him that he was blind, said, Is not this he that sat and begged?

^a Acts iii. 2.—^b Ver. 34.—^c Ch. xi. 4.—^d Ch. iv. 34. v. 19, 38. xi. 9. xii. 35. xvii. 4.—^e Ch. i. 5, 9. iii. 19. viii. 12. xii. 35, 46.—^f Mark vii. 33. viii. 23.—^g Or, spread the clay upon the eyes of the blind man.

Verse 2. Who did sin, this man, or his parents? The Pythagoreans believed the souls of men were sent into other bodies for the punishment of some sin which they had committed in a pre-existent state. This seems to have been the foundation of the disciples' question to our Lord. Did this man sin in a pre-existent state, that he is punished in this body with blindness? Or, did his parents commit some sin, for which they are thus plagued in their offspring?

Verse 3. Neither hath this man sinned nor his parents? That is, the blindness of this person is not occasioned by any sin of his own, nor of his parents; but has happened in the ordinary course of divine providence, and shall now become the instrument of salvation to his soul, edification to others, and glory to God.

Verse 4. While it is day? It was about six months after this that our Lord was crucified. It is very likely that the day was now declining, and night coming on; and he took occasion from this circumstance to introduce the elegant metaphor immediately following. By this we are taught that no opportunity for doing good should be omitted—DAY representing the opportunity: NIGHT, the loss of that opportunity.

Verse 5. I am the light of the world. Like the sun, it is my business to dispense light and heat everywhere: and to neglect no opportunity that may offer to enlighten and save the bodies and souls of men.

Verse 6. Anointed the eyes of the blind man. This procedure can never be supposed to have been any likely medical means to restore sight to a man who was born blind; this action, therefore, had no tendency to assist the miracle.

The Jews believed that there was some virtue in spittle to cure the diseases of the eye; but then they always accompanied this with some charm. Our Lord might make play with the spittle to show that no charms or spells were used, and to draw their attention more particularly to the miracle which he was about to work. Perhaps the best lesson we can learn from this is: That God will do his own work in his own way; and, to hide pride from man, will often accomplish the most beneficial ends by means not only simple or despicable in themselves, but by such also as appear entirely contrary, in their nature and operation, to the end proposed to be effected by them.

Verse 7. Siloam. Called also Shiloah, Siloe, or Siloa, was a fountain under the walls of Jerusalem, towards the east, between the city and the brook Kidron. Its waters were collected in a great reservoir for the use of the city; and a stream from it supplied the pool of Bethesda.

By interpretation, SENT.] From the Hebrew shalach, he sent: either because it was looked upon as a gift sent from God, for the use of the city; or because its waters were directed or sent by canals or pipes, into different quarters, for the same purpose. Some think there is an allusion here to Gen. xlix. 10; that this fountain was a type of Shiloh, 9 Some said, This is he: others said, He is like him: but he said, I am he.

10 Therefore said they unto him, How were thine eyes opened?

11 He answered and said, A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight.

12 Then said they unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not.

13 They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was blind.

14 And it was the sabbath day when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Then again the Pharisees also asked him how he had received his sight. He said unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed, and do see.

16 Therefore said some of the Pharisees, This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath day. Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? And there was a division among them.

—^h Neh. iii. 15.—ⁱ See 2 Kings v. 14.—^j Ver. 6, 7.—^k Ver. 33. Ch. iii. 2.—^l Ch. vii. 12, 43. x. 19.

the Christ, the SENT of God; and that it was to direct the man's mind to the accomplishment of the above prophecy that our Lord sent him to this fountain. This supposition does not appear very solid.

Verse 9. Some said, This is he! Those who knew him before were divided in their opinion concerning him; whether this was the person who was born blind, and who used in a particular place to sit begging.

Others said, He is like him! This was very natural: for certainly the restoration of his sight must have given him a very different appearance to what he had before.

Verse 11. A man that is called Jesus! The whole of this relation is simple and artless in the highest degree. The blind man had never seen Jesus, but he had heard of his name—he felt that he had put something on his eyes, which he afterwards found to be clay—but how this was made he could not tell, because he could not see Jesus when he did it; therefore he does not say, he made clay of spittle—but simply he made clay and spread it upon my eyes. Where a multitude of incidents must necessarily come into review, imposture and falsehood generally commit themselves, as it is termed; but, however numerous the circumstances may be in a relation of fact, simple truth is never embarrassed.

Verse 12. Where is he? They had designed to seize and deliver him up to the Sanhedrin, as a violator of the law, because he had done this on the sabbath day.

Verse 13. They brought to the Pharisees! These had the chief rule, and determined all controversies among the people; in every case of religion, their judgment was final.

Verse 16. This man is not of God! He can neither be the Messiah, nor a prophet, for he has broken the sabbath. The Jews always argued falsely on this principle. The law relative to the observance of the sabbath never forbade any work but what was of the servile and unnecessary kind. Works of necessity and mercy never could be forbidden on that day by him whose name is mercy, and whose nature is love; for the sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath; were it otherwise, the sabbath would be rather a curse than a blessing.

How can a man that is a sinner, &c.] They knew very well that though magicians and impostors might do things apparently miraculous, yet nothing really good could be performed by them.

And there was a division among them.] A schism, a decided difference of opinion, which caused a separation of the assembly.

Verse 17. He is a prophet! Now, according to a Jewish maxim, a prophet might dispense with the observance of the sabbath. If they allow that Jesus was a prophet, then, even in their sense, he might break the law of the sabbath, and be guiltless: or, if they did not allow him to be a prophet, they must account for the miracle some other way than by the power of God; as from Satan or his agents no good can 17 They say unto the blind man again, What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, "He is a prophet.

18 But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight.

19 And they asked them, saying, Is this your son, who ye say was born blind? how then doth he now see?

20 His parents answered them and said, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind :

21 But by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who hath opened his eyes, we know not: he is of age; ask him: he shall speak for himself.

22 These words spake his parents, because they feared the Jews: for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue.

23 Therefore said his parents, He is of age; ask him.

24 Then again called they the man that was blind, and said unto him, Give God the praise: "we know that this man is a sinner.

25 He answered and said, Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not: one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see.

26 Then said they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes?

27 He answered them, I have told you already, and ye did not hear; wherefore would ye hear it again? will ye also be his disciples?

28 Then they reviled him, and said, Thou art his disciple; but we are Moses' disciples.

29 We know that God spake unto Moses: as for this fellow, we know not from whence he is.

30 The man answered and said unto them, "Why herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes!

31 Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth.

32 Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind.

33 "If this man were not of God, he could do nothing.

34 They answered and said unto him, "Thou wast altogether born in sins, and dost thou teach us? And they cast him out.

35 Jesus heard that they had cast him out; and when he had found him, he said unto him, Dost thou believe on the Son of God?

36 He answered and said, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him?

37 And Jesus said unto him, Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee.

38 And he said, Lord, I believe. And he worshipped him.

39 And Jesus said, "For judgment I am come into this world, that they which see not might see; and that they which see might be made blind.

40 And some of the Pharisees which were with him heard these words, and said unto him, Are we blind also?

41 Jesus said unto them, "If ye were blind, ye should have no sin; but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth.

proceed—to do this it was impossible. So the wisdom of God taught the poor man to give them such an answer as put them into a complete dilemma, from which they could not possibly extricate themselves.

Verse 18. But the Jews did not believe] All the subterfuge they could use was simply to sin against their conscience, by asserting that the man had not been blind; but out of this subterfuge they were soon driven by the testimony of the parents.

Verse 21. He is of age] Literally, he has stature, i. e., he is a full-grown man; and in this sense the phrase is used by the best Greek writers. Mature age was fixed among the Jews at thirty years.

Verse 22. Put out of the synagogue] That is, excommunicated—separated from all religious connexion with those who worshipped God. This was the lesser kind of excommunication among the Jews, and was termed nidui. The cherem, or anathema, was not used against the followers of Christ till after the resurrection.

Verse 24. Give God the praise] The form of an oath, proposed by the chief magistrate to those who were to give evidence to any particular fact, or to attest anything, as produced by or belonging to the Lord, see Josh. vii. 19; 1 Sam. vi. 5; and Luke xvii. 18.

Verse 25. Whereas I was blind, now I see] In the simplicity of his heart, he speaks to the fact, of the reality of which he was ready to give them the most substantial evidence.

Verse 28. Then they reviled him] They spoke cutting, piercing words. Solomon talks of some who spoke like the piercings of a sword, Prov. xii. 18. So the Psalmist, Ps. lv. 21.

We are Moses' disciples] By this they meant that they were genuine Pharisees; for they did not allow the Sadducees to be disciples of Moses.

Verse 29. We know not from whence he is] We have the fullest assurance that the commission of Moses was divine; but we have no proof that this man has such a commission; and should we leave Moses, and attach ourselves to this stranger?

Verse 31. God heareth not sinners] I believe the word signifies heathens, or persons not proselyted to the Jewish religion; and therefore it is put in opposition to a worshipper of the true God.

Verse 32. Since the world began] From the age—probably meaning from the commencement of time.

Opened the eyes of one that was born blind] That there are cases in which a person who was born blind may be restored to sight by surgical means, we know; but no such means were used by Christ.

Verse 33. If this man were not of God, &c.] God is the fountain of all good: all good must proceed from him, and no good can be done but through him; if this person were not commissioned by the good God, he could not perform such beneficent miracles as these.

34. Thou wast altogether born in sins] Thou hast not only been a vile wretch in some other pre-existent state, but thy parents also have been grossly iniquitous; therefore thou and they are punished by this blindness.

And they cast him out] They immediately excommunicated him, as the margin properly reads—drove him from their assembly with disdain, and forbade his further appearing in the worship of God. Thus a simple man, guided by the Spirit of truth, and continuing steady in his testimony, utterly confounded the most eminent Jewish doctors.

Verse 25. Dost thou believe on the Son of God?] This was the same with, Dost thou believe on the Messiah? for these two characters were inseparable: see chap. i. 34, 49, x. 36; Matt. xvi. 16; Mark i. 1.

Verse 36. Who is he, Lord?] It is very likely that the blind man did not know that it was Jesus Christ who now spoke to him; for it is evident he had never seen him before this time; and he might now see him without knowing that he was the person by whom he was cured, till our Lord made that discovery of himself, mentioned in the following verse.

Verse 88. And he said, Lord, I believe] That is, I believe thou art the Messiah; and, to give the fullest proof of the sincerity of his faith, he fell down before and adored him. Never having seen Jesus before, but simply knowing that a person of that name had opened his eyes, he had only considered him as a holy man and a prophet; but now that he sees and hears him he is convinced of his divinity, and glorifies him as his Saviour. We may hear much of Jesus, but can never know his glories and excellencies till he has discovered himself to our hearts by his own Spirit; then we believe on him, trust him with our souls, and trust in him for our salvation.

Verse 88. For judgment I am come] In a word, salvation shall be taken away from the Jews, because they reject it; and the kingdom of God shall be given to the Gentiles.

Verse 40. Are we blind also?] These Pharisees understood Christ as speaking of blindness in a spiritual sense, and wished to know if he considered them in that state.

Verse 41. If ye were blind] If ye had not had sufficient opportunities to have acquainted yourselves with my divine nature, by the unparalleled miracles which I have wrought before you, and the holy doctrine which I have preached, then your rejecting me could not be imputed to you as sin; but because ye say, we see—we are perfectly capable of judging between a true and false prophet, and can, from the scriptures, point out the Messiah by his works—on this account you are guilty, and your sin is of no common nature, it remaineth, i. e., it shall not be expiated: ye have rejected the Lord from being your deliverer, so the Lord has rejected you from being his people.

CHAPTER X.

Christ speaks the parable of the sheepfold, 1-6. Proclaims himself the door of the sheepfold, 7-10, and the good shepherd who lays down his life for the sheep, 11-18. The Jews are again divided, and some revile and some vindicate our Lord, 19-21. His discourse with the Jews at the temple, on the feast of dedication, 22-29. Having asserted that he was one with the Father, the Jews attempt to stone him, 30, 31. He vindicates his conduct, and appeals to his works, 32-38. They strive to apprehend him; he escapes, and retires beyond Jordan, 39, 40. Many resort to and believe on him there, 41, 42.

VERILY, verily, I say unto you, ^a He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.

2 But he that ^b entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep.

3 To him the porter openeth; ^c and the sheep hear his voice: and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out.

^a Jer. xxiii. 21. Ezek. xxxiv. 23. Mic. ii. 12.—^b 1's. ex. 4. Matt. vii. 15. Acts xv. 28.—^c Isa. xliii. 1. Matt. xxv. 34, 41.

Verse 1. Verily, verily, &c.] Some think our Lord delivered this discourse immediately after that mentioned in the preceding chapter; others think it was spoken not less than three months after.

He that entereth not by the door] Christ assures us, ver. 7, that he is the door; whoever, therefore, enters not by Jesus Christ into the pastoral office, is no other than a thief and a robber in the sheepfold. And he enters not by Jesus Christ who enters with a prospect of any other interest besides that of Christ and his people. Ambition, avarice, love of ease, a desire to enjoy the conveniences of life, to be distinguished from the crowd, to promote the interests of one's family, and even the sole design of providing against want—these are all ways by which thieves and robbers enter into the church. And whoever enters by any of these ways, or by simony, craft, solicitation, &c., deserves no better name.

Verse 2. He that entereth in by the door] Observe here the marks, qualities, and duties of a good pastor: The first is, that he has a lawful entrance into the ministry by the internal call of Christ, namely, by an impulse proceeding from his Spirit, upon considerations which respect only his glory, and upon motives which aim at nothing but the good of his church, the salvation of souls, the doing the will of God, and the sacrificing himself entirely to his service, and to that of the meanness of his flock.

Verse 3. To him the porter openeth] In the porter opening the door to the true shepherd, we may discover the second mark of a true minister—his labour is crowned with success. The Holy Spirit opens his way into the hearts of 4 And ^d when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice.

5 And ^e a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers.

6 This ^f parable spake Jesus unto them: but they understood not what things they were which he spake unto them.

Acts xx. 31.—^d 2 Sam. vii. 8. Jer. xvii. 15. Matt. xxv. 32.—^e Gal. i. 8. 1 Thess. v. 21.—^f Ezek. xx. 49.

his hearers, and he becomes the instrument of their salvation.

The sheep hear his voice] A third mark of a good shepherd is that he speaks so as to instruct the people—the sheep hear his voice; he does not take the fat and the fleece, and leave another hiring on less pay to do the work of the pastoral office. No: himself preaches Christ Jesus the Lord, and in that simplicity too that is best calculated to instruct the common people. A man who preaches in such a language as the people cannot comprehend, may do for a stage-player or a mountebank, but not for a minister of Christ.

He calleth his own sheep by name] A fourth mark of a good pastor is that he is well acquainted with his flock; he knows them by name—he takes care to acquaint himself with the spiritual states of all those that are entrusted to him.

And leadeth them out.] A fifth mark of a good shepherd is, he leads the flock, does not lord it over God's heritage; nor attempt, by any rigorous discipline not founded on the gospel of Christ, to drive men into the way of life; nor drive them out of it, which many do, by a severity which is a disgrace to the mild gospel of the God of peace and love.

He leads them out of themselves to Christ, out of the follies, diversions, and amusements of the world, into the path of Christian holiness: in a word, he leads them, by those gentle yet powerful persuasions that flow from a heart full of the word and love of Christ, into the kingdom and glory of his God.

Verse 4. He goeth before them] A sixth mark of a true pastor is, he gives them a good example: he not only preaches, but he lives, the truth of the gospel; he enters into the depths

7 Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep.

8 All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers: but the sheep did not hear them.

9 'I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture.

10 The thief cometh not but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.

11 'I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.

12 But he that is an hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth: and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep.

13 The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep.

14 I am the good shepherd, and ^d know my sheep, and am known of mine.

of the salvation of God; and, having thus explored the path, he knows how to lead those who are entrusted to his care into the fulness of the blessings of the gospel of peace. The minister who is in this state of salvation, the sheep, genuine Christians, will follow, for they know his voice. It was the custom in the eastern countries for the shepherd to go at the head of his sheep, and they followed him from pasture to pasture.

Verse 5. And a stranger will they not follow] That is, a man who, pretending to be a shepherd of the flock of God, is a stranger to that salvation which he professes to preach.

Verse 7. I am the door of the sheep.] It is through me only that a man can have a lawful entrance into the ministry; and it is through me alone that mankind can be saved.

Verse 8. All that ever came before me] Our Lord probably refers to the scribes and Pharisees, who pretended to show the way of salvation to the people—who in fact stole into the fold, and clothed themselves with the fleece, and devoured the sheep.

The thief and the robber should be properly distinguished; one takes by cunning and stealth; the other openly and by violence. It would not be difficult to find bad ministers who answer to both these characters. Tithes have been often enforced and collected in a most exceptionable manner, and in a most disgraceful spirit.

Verse 9. I am the door: by me if any man enter, &c.] Those who come for salvation to God, through Christ, shall obtain it: he shall be saved—he shall have his sins blotted out, his soul purified, and himself preserved unto eternal life.

Go in and out] A good shepherd conducts his flock to the fields where good pasturage is to be found; watches over them while there, and brings them back again and secures them in the fold. So he that is taught and called of God feeds the flock of Christ with those truths of his word of grace which nourish them unto eternal life; and God blesses together both the shepherd and the sheep, so that going out and coming in they find pasture: every occurrence is made useful to them; and all things work together for their good.

Verse 10. But for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy] Those who enter into the priesthood that they may enjoy the revenues of the church, are the basest and vilest of thieves and murderers. Their character is well pointed out by the prophet Ezekiel, chap. xxiv. 2, &c.

That they might have life] My doctrine tends to life, because it is the true doctrine—that of the false and bad shepherds tends to death, because it neither comes from, nor can lead to, that God who is the fountain of life.

Might have it more abundantly.] That they might have an abundance, meaning either of life, or of all necessary good things; greater felicity than ever was enjoyed under any period of the Mosaic dispensation; and it is certain that Christians have enjoyed greater blessings and privileges than 15 'As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: 'and I lay down my life for the sheep.

16 And ^e other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; ^b and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

17 Therefore doth my Father love me, 'because I lay down my life, that I might take it again.

18 No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I ^c have power to take it again. ^d This commandment have I received of my Father.

19 'There was a division therefore again among the Jews for these sayings.

20 And many of them said, ^a He hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him?

21 Others said, These are not the words of him that hath a devil. ^a Can a devil ^c open the eyes of the blind?

22 And it was at Jerusalem the ^b feast of the dedication, and it was winter.

were ever possessed by the Jews, even in the promised land. Verse 11. I am the good shepherd] Whose character is the very reverse of that which has already been described.

Giveth his life for the sheep.] That is, gives up his soul as a sacrifice to save them from eternal death.

Some will have the phrase here only to mean, hazarding his life in order to protect others; but the 15th, 17th, and 18th verses, as well as the whole tenor of the new covenant, sufficiently prove that the first sense is that in which our Lord's word should be understood.

Verse 12. But he that is an hireling] He who makes merchandise of men's souls; bartering them, and his own too, for filthy lucre.

Whose own the sheep are not] He has no other interest in their welfare than that which comes from the fleece and the fat. The hireling counts the sheep his own, no longer than they are profitable to him; the good shepherd looks upon them as his, so long as he can be profitable to them.

Among the ancient Jews some kept their own flocks, others hired shepherds to keep them for them.

Verse 14. I—know my sheep] I know them that are mine: I know their hearts, their wishes, their purposes, their circumstances; and I approve of them; for in this sense the word to know is often taken in the scriptures.

And am known of mine.] They know me as their father, protector, and saviour; they acknowledge me and my truth before the world; and they approve of me, my word, my ordinances, and my people, and manifest this by their attachment to me, and their zeal for my glory. The first clause of the 15th verse should be joined to the fourteenth.

Verse 16. Other sheep I have] The Gentiles and Samaritans.

The original word, which is here translated fold, signifies properly a court. It is probable that our blessed Lord was now standing in what was termed the inner court, or court of the people, in the temple, see ver. 23; and that he referred to the outer court, or court of the Gentiles, because the Gentiles who were proselytes of the gate were permitted to worship in that place; but only those who were circumcised were permitted to come into the inner court, over the entrance of which were written, in large characters of gold, these words, Let no uncircumcised person enter here!

Verse 17. Therefore doth my Father love me] The Father loveth me particularly on this account, because I am going to lay down my life for the life of the world. Do not suppose that I shall be put to death by your rulers, because I have not strength to resist them. I LAY DOWN my life voluntarily and cheerfully; no one can take it away from me, see ver. 18; and I shall give you the fullest proof of my supreme power, by raising, in three days, that very crucified, wounded body from the grave.

Verse 18. I have power] Or, authority. Our Lord speaks of himself here as man, or the Messiah, as being God's mes-

23 And Jesus walked in the temple, 'in Solomon's porch.

24 Then came the Jews round about him, and said unto him, How long dost thou 'make us to doubt? If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly.

25 Jesus answered them, I told you, and ye believed not: 'the works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me.

26 But 'ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you.

27 'My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me.

28 And I give unto them eternal life; and 'they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand.

29 'My Father, 'which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand.

30 'I and my Father are one.

31 Then 'the Jews took up stones again to stone him.

32 Jesus answered them, Many good works have I showed you from my Father; for which of those works do ye stone me?

senger, and sent upon earth to fulfil the divine will, in dying and rising again for the salvation of men.

This commandment have I received.] That is, I act according to the divine commandment in executing these things, and giving you this information.

Verse 20. He hath a devil, and is mad.] So, then, a demoniac and a madman were not exactly the same in the apprehensions of the Jews; no more than the effect is the same with the cause which produces it. They believed him to be possessed by a demon, who deranged his faculties, and that he must have been a wicked man, and a deceiver, thus to be put under the power of such a spirit.

Verse 21. These are not the words of him that hath a devil.] If he were deranged by an unclean spirit, his words would bear a similitude to the spirit that produced them; but these are words of deep sense, soberness and piety: besides, could a demoniac open the eyes of blind men?

Verse 22. The feast of the dedication.] This was a feast instituted by Judas Maccabæus, in commemoration of his purifying the temple after it had been defiled by Antiochus Epiphanes.

It was winter.] It was stormy or rainy weather. And this is the reason, probably, why our Lord is represented as walking in Solomon's porch, or portico, ver. 23. Though it certainly was in winter when this feast was held, yet it does not appear that the word above refers so much to the time of the year as to the state of the weather. Indeed, there was no occasion to add it was winter, when the feast of the dedication was mentioned, because every body knew that, as that feast was held on the twenty-fifth of the month Cisleu, it was in the winter season.

Verse 23. Solomon's porch.] This portico was four hundred cubits long, and was left standing by Herod, when he rebuilt the temple, probably, because of its grandeur and beauty.

Verse 24. How long dost thou make us to doubt?] Literally, How long wilt thou take away our life? [This is rather too strong. "How long dost thou excite our mind?"] The Jews asked this question through extreme perfidiousness: they wished to get him to declare himself king of the Jews, that they might accuse him to the Roman governor; and by it they insolently insinuated that all the proofs he had hitherto given them of his divine mission were good for nothing.

Verse 25. I told you, &c.] That is, I told you before what I tell you now again, that the works which I do, bear testimony to me. Have you not noticed my omniscience, in searching and discovering the very secrets of your hearts? Have you not seen my omnipotence in the miracles which I have wrought?

33 The Jews answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy; and because that thou, being a man, 'makest thyself God.

34 Jesus answered them, 'Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods?

35 If he called them gods, 'unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken;

36 Say ye of him, 'whom the Father hath sanctified, and 'sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; 'because I said, I am 'the Son of God?

37 'If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not.

38 But if I do, though ye believe not me, 'believe the works: that ye may know, and believe, 'that the Father is in me, and I in him.

39 'Therefore they sought again to take him: but he escaped out of their hand, 40 And went away again beyond Jordan into the place 'where John at first baptized; and there he abode.

41 And many resorted unto him, and said, John did no miracle: 'but all things that John spake of this man were true.

42 'And many believed on him there.

Verse 26. Ye are not of my sheep.] Ye have not the disposition of those who come unto me to be instructed and saved: see what follows.

Verse 27. My sheep hear my voice.] Any person who reads without prejudice may easily see, that our Lord does not at all insinuate that these persons could not believe, because God had made it impossible to them; but simply because they did not hear and follow Christ, which the whole of our blessed Lord's discourse proves that they might have done.

Verse 28. They shall never perish.] Why? Because they hear my voice, and follow me; therefore I know, I approve of and love them, and give them eternal life. They who continue to hear Christ's voice, and to follow him, shall never perish. Final perseverance implies final faithfulness—he that endures to the end shall be saved—he that is faithful unto death shall have a crown of life. And will any man attempt to say that he who does not endure to the end, and is unfaithful, shall ever enter into life?

Verse 29. My Father—is greater than all.] More powerful than all the united energies of men and demons. He who loves God must be happy; and he who fears him need fear nothing on this side eternity.

Verse 30. I and my Father are one.] If Jesus Christ were not God, could he have said these words without being guilty of blasphemy? It is worthy of remark that Christ does not say, I and my Father, which my our translation very improperly supplies, and which in this place would have conveyed a widely different meaning: for then it would imply that the human nature of Christ, of which alone, I conceive, God is ever said to be the Father in scripture, was equal to the Most High: but he says, speaking then as God over all, I and the Father, the Creator of all things, the Judge of all men, the Father of the spirits of all flesh—are ONE, ONE in nature, ONE in all the attributes of Godhead, and ONE in all the operations of those attributes: and so it is evident the Jews understood him. [This criticism, which favours Dr. Clarke's theory of the Sonship of our Lord, is at variance with the usage of the Greek language respecting the article.]

Verse 31. The Jews took up stones.] To stone him as a blasphemer, Lev. xxiv. 14-16, because he said he was one with God.

Verse 32. Many good works have I showed you.] To show good works or good things is a Hebraism, which signifies to do them really, to give good things liberally. The phrase is similar to the following: Who will show us any good? Ps. iv. 6; i. e. who shall give us good things. So also Ps. lxxxv. 7, lx. 8, lxxi. 20.

Verse 33. But for blasphemy.] The original word, when applied to men, signifies to speak injuriously of their persons, character, connexions, &c.; but when applied to God it signifies to speak impiously, i. e., contrary to his nature, perfections, the wisdom of his providence, or goodness of his works.

Thou, being a man] That is, only a man—makest thyself God. When Christ said before, ver. 30, I and the Father are one, had the Jews understood him (as many called Christians profess to do) as only saying he had a unity of sentiments with the Father, they would not have attempted to treat him for this as a blasphemer: because in this sense Abraham, Isaac, Moses, David, and all the prophets, were one with God. But what irritated them so much was that they understood him as speaking of a unity of nature.

Verse 84. Is it not written in your law] The words which our Lord quotes are taken from Ps. lxxiii. 6, which shows that, under the word law, our Lord comprised the Jewish sacred writings in general.

Ye are gods?] That is, judges, who are called elohim. That judges are here meant appears from Ps. lxxiii. 2, &c., and also from what follows here.

Verse 85. Unto whom the word of God came] When it is there said that the word of the Lord came, &c., it means, God gave an order, commission, &c., to such a person, to declare or do such and such things.

And the scripture cannot be broken] Dissolved, rendered of none effect, i. e., it cannot be gainsaid or set aside; every man must believe this, because it is the declaration of God.

Verse 37. If I do not the works, &c.] I desire you to believe only on the evidence of my works: if I do not do such works as God only can perform, then believe me not.

Verse 38. Believe the works] There was no possibility of weakening the force of this reasoning, but by asserting that these miracles were not wrought by the power of God; and then they must have proved that not only a man, but a bad man, such as they said Jesus was, could work these miracles. As this was impossible, then the argument of Christ had a complete triumph.

Verse 39. They sought again to take him] They could not reply to his arguments but by stones. Truth may confound the obstinately wicked, but it does not convert them; and it is a just judgment of God, to leave those to perish in their gainsayings who obstinately continue to gainsay and disbelieve.

But he escaped] In such a way as we know not, for the Evangelist has not specified the manner of it.

Verse 40. Beyond Jordan] Rather, to the side of Jordan, not beyond it.

Where John at first baptized] That is, at Bethabara, see chap. i. 28. Afterwards, John baptized at Enon: chap. iii. 23.

Verse 42. Many believed on him there.] 1. Because of the testimony of John the Baptist, whom they knew to be a good and a wise man, and a prophet of the Lord; and 2. because of the miracles which they saw Jesus work. These fully proved that all that John had said of him was true. The scribes and Pharisees with all their science could not draw a conclusion so just. Truth and common sense are often on the side of the common people, whom the insolently wise, the unscientifically learned, and the tyrannically powerful sometimes disingenuously brand with the epithets of mob and swinish multitude.

CHAPTER XI

Account of the sickness of Lazarus, 1. His sisters Martha and Mary send for Christ, 2. Our Lord's discourse with his disciples on this sickness and consequent death, 3-16. He arrives at Bethany four days after the burying of Lazarus, 17, 18. Martha meets Christ—their conversation, 19-27. She returns, and Mary goes out to meet him, in great distress, 28-33. Christ comes to the grave—His conversation there, 34-42. He raises Lazarus from the dead, 43-46. The priests and Pharisees, hearing of this, hold a council, and plot his destruction, 47, 48. The remarkable prophecy of Caiaphas, and the consequent proceedings of the Jews, 49-53. Jesus withdraws into a city called Ephraim, 54. They lay wait for him at the Passover, 55-57.

NOW a certain man was sick, named Lazarus, of Bethany, the town of * Mary and her sister Martha.

2 (* It was that Mary which anointed the

* Luke x. 38, 39.

Verse 1. Lazarus, of Bethany] It is surprising that the other Evangelists have omitted so remarkable an account as this is, in which some of the finest traits in our Lord's character are exhibited. Some think that the other three Evangelists wrote their histories during the life of Lazarus; and that they did not mention him for fear of exciting the malice of the Jews against him. And indeed we find, from chap. xii. 10, that they sought to put Lazarus to death also, that our Lord might not have one monument of his power and goodness remaining in the land. Probably both Lazarus and his sisters were dead before St. John wrote. Bethany was situated at the foot of the mount of Olives about two miles from Jerusalem.

The harmonists and chronologists differ much in fixing dates, and ascertaining times. In cases of this nature, I believe men innocently guess as well as they can; but they should assert nothing.

Verse 2. It was that Mary which anointed] There is much disagreement between learned men relative to the two anointings of our Lord, and the persons who performed these acts.

Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus was sick.)

3 Therefore his sisters sent unto him, saying, Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick.

^b Matt. xxvi. 7. Mark xiv. 8. Ch. xii. 8.

Some think that the aorist, which we translate anointed, should have its full force, and be translated who had formerly anointed; and others that the anointing of which the Evangelist speaks is that mentioned, chap. xii. 1, &c., and which happened about six days before the passover. St. John, therefore, is supposed to anticipate the account, because it served more particularly to designate the person of whom he was speaking. [But there can be no doubt that the anointing recorded in Matt. xxvi; Mark iii; and John xii; is totally distinct from that related in Luke vii.]

Verse 3. He whom thou lovest is sick.] Nothing could be more simple, or more modest, than this prayer: they content themselves with simply stating the case, and using an indirect but a most forcible argument, to induce our Lord to show forth his power and goodness.—He is sick, and thou lovest him.

Verse 4. This sickness is not unto death] Not to final privation of life at this time; but a temporary death shall be now permitted, that the glory of God may appear in the miracle of his resurrection.

Verse 5. Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and 4 When Jesus heard that, he said, This sickness is not unto death, ^abut for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby.

5 Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.

6 When he had heard therefore that he was sick, ^bhe abode two days still in the same place where he was.

7 Then after that saith he to his disciples, Let us go into Judea again.

8 His disciples say unto him, Master, ^cthe Jews of late sought to stone thee; and goest thou thither again?

9 Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours in the day? ^dIf any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world.

10 But ^eif a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him.

11 These things said he: and after that he saith unto them, Our friend Lazarus ^fsleepeth: but I go, that I may awake him out of sleep.

12 Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well.

^a Ch. ix. 3. Ver. 40.—^b Ch. x. 40.—^c Ch. x. 31.—^d Ch. ix. 4.—
^e Ch. xii. 35.

Lazarus.] Therefore his staying two days longer in Bethabara, was not through lack of affection for this distressed family, but merely that he might have a more favourable opportunity of proving to them how much he loved them. Christ never denies a less favour, but in order to confer a greater. God's delays in answering prayers offered to him by persons in distress are often proofs of his purpose to confer some great kindness; and they are also proofs that his wisdom finds it necessary to permit an increase of the affliction, that his goodness may be more conspicuous in its removal.

Verse 8. The Jews of late sought to stone thee] It was but a few weeks before that they were going to stone him in the temple, on the day of the feast of the dedication, chap. x. 31.

Verse 9. Are there not twelve hours in the day?] The Jews as well as most other nations, divided the day, from sun-rising to sun-setting, into twelve equal parts; but these parts, or hours, were longer or shorter, according to the different seasons of the year.

Our Lord alludes to the case of a traveller, who has to walk the whole day: the day points out the time of life—the night, that of death. I have not travelled these twelve hours yet—my last hour is not yet come; I am immortal till my work is done; and this, that I am now going to Bethany to perform, is a part of it. When all is completed, then their hour, and that of the power of darkness, shall commence.

If any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not] During the day he has the sun, the light of the world: he sees his way, and does not stumble: but, if he walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in it, ver. 10; i. e. there is no sun above the horizon.

Verse 11. Lazarus sleepeth] It was very common among the Jews to express death by sleep; and the expressions, falling asleep—sleeping with their fathers, were in great use among them.

It is certain that our Lord received no intimation of Lazarus's death from any person, and that he knew it through that power by which he knows all things.

Verse 12. If he sleep, he shall do well.] That is, if he sleep only, &c. Though the word sleep frequently meant death (see Acts vii. 60, 1 Cor. xi. 30, xv. 18, 20), yet, as it was an ambiguous term, the disciples appear here to have mistaken its meaning.

Verse 15. I am glad for your sakes that I was not there] It was a miracle to discover that Lazarus was dead, as no person had come to announce it. It was a greater miracle to raise a dead man than to cure a sick man. And it was a still greater miracle, to raise one that was three or four days buried, and in whose body putrefaction might have begun to take place, than to raise one that was but newly dead. See ver. 39.

Verse 16. Thomas, which is called Didymus] Thomas, or Thaom, was his Hebrew name, and signifies a twin—one who 13 Howbeit Jesus spake of his death: but they thought that he had spoken of taking of rest in sleep.

14 Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead.

15 And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent ye may believe; nevertheless let us go unto him.

16 Then said Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellow-disciples, Let us also go, that we may die with him.

17 Then when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already.

18 Now Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem, ^aabout fifteen furlongs off:

19 And many of the Jews came to Martha and Mary, to comfort them concerning their brother.

20 Then Martha, as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming, went and met him: but Mary sat still in the house.

21 Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

22 But I know, that even now, ^bwhatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee.

^aSo Deut. xxxi. 16. Dan. xii. 2. Matt. ix. 24. Acts vii. 60. 1 Cor. xv. 18, 51.—^bThat is, about two miles.—^cCh. ix. 31.

had a brother or a sister born with him at the same time: Didymus is a literal translation of the Hebrew word into Greek.

Let us also go, that we may die with him.] Some think Thomas spoke these words peevishly, as much as to say: "If he will obstinately go and risk his life in so imminent a danger, let us act with more prudence and caution." But I think the sense in which the words are generally understood is to be preferred.

Verse 17. He had lain in the grave four days already.] Though it was the Jewish custom to embalm their dead, yet we find, from ver. 39, that he had not been embalmed; and God wisely ordered this, that the miracle might appear the more striking.

Verse 18. Fifteen furlongs] About two miles: for the Jewish miles contained about seven furlongs and a half.

Verse 19. Many of the Jews came] Mourning, among the Jews, lasted about thirty days; the three first days were termed days of weeping; then followed seven of lamentation. During the three days, the mourner did no servile work; and, if any one saluted him, he did not return the salutation. During the seven days, he did no servile work, except in private—lay with his bed on the floor—did not put on his sandals—did not wash nor anoint himself—had his head covered—and neither read in the Law, the Mishnah, or the Talmud. All the thirty days he continued unshaven, wore no white or new clothes, and did not sow up the rents which he had made in his garments.

Verse 20. Martha—went and met him] Some suppose she was the eldest of the two sisters—she seems to have had the management of the house.

Mary sat still in the house.] It is likely that by this circumstance the Evangelist intended to convey the idea of her sorrow and distress; because, anciently, afflicted persons were accustomed to put themselves in this posture, as expressive of their distress; their grief having rendered them as it were immovable.

Verse 21. If thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.] It plainly appears that the sisters had not a proper notion of his divinity; and indeed the following verse proves that they considered him in no other light than that of a prophet.

Verse 22. I know, that even now] She durst not ask so great a favour in direct terms; she only intimated modestly that she knew he could do it.

Verse 23. Thy brother shall rise again.] That is, directly; for it was by raising him immediately from the dead that he intended to comfort her.

Verse 24. I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection.] The doctrine of the resurrection of the dead was then commonly received. The Jewish writings after the captivity are full of it.

Verse 25. I am the resurrection, and the life] Thus our 23 Jesus saith unto her, Thy brother shall rise again.

24 Martha said unto him, 'I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.

25 Jesus saith unto her, I am ^b the resurrection, and the ^c life: ^d he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live:

26 And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?

27 She saith unto him, Yea, Lord: 'I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world.

28 And when she had so said, she went her way, and called Mary her sister secretly, saying, The Master is come, and calleth for thee.

29 As soon as she heard that, she arose quickly, and came unto him.

30 Now Jesus was not yet come into the town, but was in that place where Martha met him.

31 'The Jews then which were with her in the house, and comforted her, when they saw Mary, that she rose up hastily and went out, followed her, saying, She goeth unto the grave to weep there.

32 Then when Mary was come where Jesus was, and saw him, she fell down at his feet, saying unto him, 'Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

blessed Lord raises her hope, animates her faith, and teaches her that he was not a mere man, but the essential principle and author of existence.

Though he were dead] Every man who has believed or shall believe in me, though his believing shall not prevent him from dying a natural death, yet his body shall be reanimated, and he shall live with me in an eternal glory.

Verse 26. Shall never die.] Or, Shall not die for ever. Though he die a temporal death, he shall not continue under its power for ever; but shall have a resurrection to life eternal.

Believest thou this?] God has determined to work in the behalf of men only in proportion to their faith in him: it was necessary, therefore, that these persons should be well instructed concerning his nature, that they might find no obstacles to their faith.

Verse 27. Yea, Lord: I believe] I have believed. Either meaning that she had believed this for some time past, or that, since he began to teach her, her faith had been considerably increased: but verbs preter, in Greek, are often used to signify the present.

Verse 28. The Master is come] This was the appellation which he had in the family; and from these words it appears that Christ had inquired for Mary, desiring to have her present, that he might strengthen her faith, previously to his raising her brother.

Verse 30. Jesus was not yet come into the town] The Jewish burying-places were without their cities and villages.

Verse 31. She goeth unto the grave to weep there.] It was the custom for the nearest relatives of the deceased to go at times, during the three days of weeping, accompanied by their friends and neighbours, to mourn near the graves of the deceased. They supposed that the spirit hovered about the place where the body was laid for three days, to see whether it might be again permitted to enter; but, when it saw the face change, it knew that all hope was now past.

Verse 33. He groaned in the spirit, &c.] Here the blessed Jesus shows himself to be truly a man; and a man, too, who, notwithstanding his amazing dignity and excellence, did not feel it beneath him to sympathize with the distressed, and weep with those who wept. After this example of our Lord, shall we say that it is weakness, folly, and sin to weep for the loss of relatives?

It is abolishing one of the finest traits in our Lord's human character to say that he went and mourned here because of sin and its consequences. No: Jesus had humanity in its perfection, and humanity unadulterated is generous and sympathetic. Behold the man, in his deep, heartfelt troubles, and in his flowing tears! But when he says, Lazarus come forth!

33 When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, he groaned in the spirit, and ^a was troubled, 34 And said, Where have ye laid him? They said unto him, Lord, come and see.

35 'Jesus wept.

36 Then said the Jews, Behold how he loved him!

37 And some of them said, Could not this man, ^b which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man should not have died?

38 Jesus, therefore, again groaning in himself, cometh to the grave. It was a cave, and a stone lay upon it.

39 Jesus said, Take ye away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him, Lord, by this time he stinketh: for he hath been dead four days.

40 Jesus saith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that, if thou wouldst believe, thou shouldst ^c see the glory of God?

41 Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I think thee that thou hast heard me.

42 And I knew that thou hearest me always: but ^d because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me.

^a—^e Ver. 21.—^b Gr. he troubled himself.—^c Luke xix. 41.—^d Ch. ix. 6.—^e Ver. 4, 23.—^f Ch. xii. 31.

behold the GOD! and the God too of infinite clemency, love, and power. Can such a Jesus refuse to comfort the distressed, or save the lost? Can he restrain his mercies from the penitent soul, or refuse to hear the yearnings of his own bowels? Can such a character be inattentive to the welfare of his creatures? Here is God manifested in the flesh! living in human nature, feeling for the distressed, and suffering for the lost!

Verse 35. Jesus wept.] The least verse in the Bible yet inferior to none.

Verse 36. Behold how he loved him!] And when we see him pouring out his blood and life upon the cross for mankind, we may with exultation and joy cry out, Behold how he hath loved us!

Verse 37. Could not this man, which opened the eyes, &c.] Through the maliciousness of their hearts, these Jews considered the tears of Jesus as a proof of his weakness. Thus will men reason, or rather madden, concerning the works and providence of God; till, by his farther miracles of mercy or judgment, he converts or confounds them.

Verse 38. It was a cave, &c.] There seems to have been something peculiar in the formation of this tomb. It might have been a natural grotto, or dug in the side of a rock or hill, and the lower part of the door level with the ground, or how could Lazarus have come forth, as he is said to have done, ver. 44?

Verse 39. Take ye away the stone.] He desired to convince all those who were at the place, and especially those who took away the stone, that Lazarus was not only dead, but that putrescency had already taken place, that it might not be afterwards said that Lazarus had only fallen into a lethargy; and that the greatness of the miracle might be fully evinced.

He stinketh] The body is in a state of putrefaction. The Greek word signifies simply to smell, whether the scent be good or bad; but the circumstances of the case sufficiently show that the latter is its meaning here.

For he hath been dead four days.] This is the fourth day, i. e., since his interment. Christ himself was buried on the same day on which he was crucified, see chap. xix. 42, and it is likely that Lazarus was buried also on the same day on which he died.

Verse 40. If thou wouldst believe, &c.] So it appears that it is faith alone that interests the miraculous and saving power of God in behalf of men.

Verse 41. Father, I thank thee] As it was a common opinion that great miracles might be wrought by the power and in the name of the devil, Jesus lifted up his eyes to 43 And when he thus had spoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth.

44 And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes: and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go.

45 Then many of the Jews which came to Mary, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him.

46 But some of them went their ways to the Pharisees, and told them what things Jesus had done.

47 Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, 'What do we? for this man doeth many miracles.'

48 If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.

49 And one of them, named Caiaphas, being the high priest that same year, said unto them, Ye know nothing at all,

50 'Nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.

heaven, and invoked the supreme God before these unbelieving Jews, that they might see that it was by his power, and by his only, that this miracle was done. On this account our Lord says, he spoke because of the multitude, that they might see there was no diabolical influence here.

Ver. 44. Bound hand and foot with grave-clothes] Swathed about with rollers. These were long slips of linen a few inches in breadth, with which the body and limbs of the dead were swathed, and especially those who were embalmed, that the aromatics might be kept in contact with the flesh. But as it is evident that Lazarus had not been embalmed, it is probable that his limbs were not swathed together, as is the constant case with those who are embalmed, but separately, so that he could come out of the tomb at the command of Christ, though he could not walk freely till the rollers were taken away.

Loose him, and let him go.] He would have the disciples and those who were at hand take part in this business, that the fullest conviction might rest on every person's mind concerning the reality of what was wrought.

Ver. 45. Many of the Jews—believed on him.] They saw that the miracle was incontestable; and they were determined to resist the truth no longer. Their friendly visit to these distressed sisters became the means of their conversion.

Ver. 46. But some of them went their ways] Those who obstinately resist the truth of God are capable of everything that is base, perfidious, and cruel.

Ver. 47. Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council] The Pharisees, as such, had no power to assemble councils: and therefore only those are meant who were scribes or elders of the people, in conjunction with Annas and his son-in-law Caiaphas, who were the high-priests here mentioned.

What do we?] This last miracle was so clear, plain, and incontestable, that they were driven now to their wits' end.

Ver. 48. All men will believe on him] Thus, under the pretence of the public good, these men of blood hide their hatred against Christ, and resolve to put him to death. To get the people on their side, they must give the alarm of destruction to the nation: if this man be permitted to live, we shall be all destroyed!

Both our place and nation.] Literally, this place: but that the temple only is understood is clear from Acts vi. 13, 14; 2 Macc. i. 14; ii. 18; iii. 18; v. 16, 17; x. 7; where it is uniformly called the place, or the holy place, because they considered it the most glorious and excellent place in the world.

Ver. 49. Caiaphas, being the high-priest that same year] By the law of Moses, Exod. xl. 15, the office of high-priest was for life; but at this time the high-priesthood was almost annual; the Romans and Herod put down and raised up

51 And this spake he not of himself: but being high priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation;

52 And not for that nation only, but that also he should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad.

53 Then from that day forth they took counsel together for to put him to death.

54 Jesus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews; but went thence unto a country near to the wilderness, into a city called Ephraim, and there continued with his disciples.

55 And the Jews' passover was nigh at hand: and many went out of the country up to Jerusalem before the passover, to purify themselves.

56 Then sought they for Jesus, and spake among themselves, as they stood in the temple, What think ye, that he will not come to the feast?

57 Now both the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a commandment, that, if any man knew where he were, he should shew it, that they might take him.

whom they pleased, and when they pleased, without attending to any other rule than merely that the person put in this office should be of the sacerdotal race.

Ver. 50. Nor consider] Ye talk more at random than according to reason, and the exigencies of the case.

That one man should die for the people] In saying these remarkable words, Caiaphas had no other intention than merely to state that it was better to put Jesus to death than to expose the whole nation to ruin on his account. His maxim was, it is better to sacrifice one man than a whole nation.

Ver. 51. This spake he not of himself] Wicked and worthless as he was, God so guided his tongue that, contrary to his intention, he pronounced a prophecy of the death of Jesus Christ.

As Caiaphas was high-priest, his opinion was of most weight with the council; therefore God put these words into his mouth rather than into the mouth of any other of its members. It was a maxim among the Jews that no prophet ever knew the purport of his own prophecy, Moses and Isaiah excepted.

Ver. 52. And not for that nation only, &c.] These, and the preceding words in ver. 51, are John's explication of what was prophetic in the words of Caiaphas.

Gather together in one] That he should collect into one body;—from one church out of the Jewish and Gentile believers.

Children of God that were scattered abroad.] Probably John only meant the Jews who were dispersed among all nations since the conquest of Judea by the Romans; and these are called the dispersed, chap. vii. 35, and James i. 1; and it is because he refers to these only, that he terms them here, the children of God, which was an ancient character of the Jewish people: see Dent. xxxii. 5; Isa. xliii. 6; xlv. 11; Jer. xxxii. 1. His views of this subject were afterwards very much extended: he saw that Jesus Christ was not only a propitiation for their sins (the Jews) but for the sins of the whole world: see his 1st Epistle, chap. ii. ver. 2. All the truths of the gospel were not revealed at once, even to the apostles themselves.

Ver. 53. They took counsel together] They were of one accord in the business, and had fully made up their minds on the subject; and they waited only for a proper opportunity to put him to death.

Ver. 54. Walked no more openly] He did not go as before through the cities and villages, teaching, preaching, and healing the sick.

A city called Ephraim] This was a little village, situated in the neighbourhood of Bethel, 2 Chron. xiii. 19.

Ver. 55. The Jews' passover was nigh at hand] Most chronologists agree that our Lord spent at least two months in Ephraim.

Verse 56. Then sought they for Jesus] Probably those of Ephraim, in whose company Christ is supposed to have departed for the feast; or, the agents of the high-priest, &c., who, hearing that Christ had been at Ephraim, came and inquired among the people that came from that quarter, whether Jesus would not attend the festival.

Verse 57. Had given a commandment] Positive order, or injunction, and perhaps with a grievous penalty, that no one should keep the place of his residence a secret.

CHAPTER XII

Jesus sups in the house of Lazarus, and Mary anoints his feet, 1-3. Judas Iscariot finds fault, and reproves her, 4-6. Jesus vindicates Mary and reproves Judas, 7, 8. The chief priests consult to put Lazarus to death, because that through him many believed on Jesus, 9-11. He enters Jerusalem in triumph; the people meet him, and the Pharisees are troubled, 12-19. Greeks inquire after Jesus, 20-22. Our Lord's discourse on the subject, 23-26. Speaks of his passion, and is answered by a voice from Heaven, 27, 28. The people are astonished at the voice, and Jesus explains it to them, and foretells his death, 29-33. They question him concerning the perpetuity of the Messiah, and he instructs them, 34-36. Many believe not; and in them the saying of Isaiah is fulfilled, 37-41. Some of the chief rulers believe, but are afraid to confess him, 42, 43. He proclaims himself the light of the world, and shows the danger of rejecting his words, 44-50.

THEN Jesus, six days before the passover, came to Bethany, *where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead.

2 ^b There they made him a supper; and Martha served: but Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him.

3 Then took ^c Mary a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment.

4 Then saith one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, which should betray him,

5 Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?

6 This he said, not that he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and ^d had the bag, and bare what was put therein.

7 Then said Jesus, Let her alone: against the day of my burying hath she kept this.

8 For ^e the poor always ye have with you; but me ye have not always.

9 Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there: and they came not for Jesus' sake only, but that they might see Lazarus also, ^f whom he had raised from the dead.

10 ^g But the chief priests consulted that they might put Lazarus also to death;

11 ^h Because that by reason of him, many of the Jews went away, and believed on Jesus.

Verse 1. Six days before the passover] Reckoning the day of the passover to be the last of the six. Our Lord came on our sabbath, the first day of the Jewish week, to Bethany, where he supped; and on the next day he made his public entry into Jerusalem, ver. 12.

Verse 3. Then took Mary a pound of ointment] See the note on Matt. xxvi. 7; see also Mark xiv. 3. It does not seem the most likely that this was the same transaction with that mentioned above. [It is generally admitted that the cases were identical.]

Verse 5. Three hundred pence] Or, denarii: about 9l. 18s. 9d. of our money; reckoning the denarius at 7½d.

Verse 6. Not that HE cared for the poor] There should be a particular emphasis laid on the word he, as the Evangelist studies to show the most determined detestation to his conduct.

And bare what was put therein.] Or rather, as some eminent critics contend, And stole what was put in it. This seems the proper meaning of the word, and in this sense it is used, chap. xx. 15. If stealing were not intended by the Evangelist, the word itself must be considered as superfluous; for, when we are told that he had the bag, we need not be informed that he had what was in it. But the apostle says he was a thief; and because he was a thief, and had the common purse in his power, therefore he stole as much as he conveniently could, without subjecting himself to detection. And, as he saw that the death of Christ was at hand, he wished to secure a provision for himself, before he left the company of the apostles. [The Greek word does not, however, bear this sense. In all the cases that have been cited in favour of this meaning, the idea of stealing is otherwise expressed.]

The word which we translate bag, meant originally the little box, or sheath, in which the tongues or reeds used for pipes were carried. As our Lord and his disciples lived on charity, a bag or scrip was provided to carry those pious donations by which they were supported. And Judas was steward and treasurer to this holy company.

Verse 7. Let her alone: against the day of my burying hath she kept this.] Several MSS. and Versions read thus:—Let her alone, THAT she may keep it to the day of my embalming. This reading intimates that only a part of the ointment was then used, and that the rest was kept till the time that the women came to embalm the body of Jesus, Luke xxiv. 1.

Verse 9. Much people of the Jews] John, who was a Galilean, often gives the title of Jews to those who were inhabitants of Jerusalem.

Verse 10. Consulted that they might put Lazarus also to death.] As long as he lived they saw an incontestable proof of the divine power of Christ; therefore they wished to put him to death, because many of the Jews who came to see him through curiosity became converts to Christ through his testimony.

Verse 12. On the next day] On what we call Monday.

Verse 13. Took branches] See on Matt. xxi. 1, &c., where this transaction is largely explained.

Verse 16. Then remembered they, &c.] After the ascension of Christ, the disciples saw the meaning of many prophecies

12 *On the next day, much people that were come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, 13 Took branches of palm trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried, ^bHosanna: Blessed is the King of Israel, that cometh in the name of the Lord.

14 ^c And Jesus, when he had found a young ass, sat thereon; as it is written, 15 ^d Fear not, daughter of Sion: behold, thy King cometh, sitting on an ass's colt.

16 These things * understood not his disciples at the first: 'but when Jesus was glorified, * then remembered they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him.

17 The people therefore that was with him when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raised him from the dead, bare record.

18 ^b For this cause the people also met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle.

19 The Pharisees therefore said among themselves, ^b Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing? behold, the world is gone after him.

20 And there ^c were certain Greeks among them, ^b that came up to worship at the feast:

21 The same came therefore to Philip, ^b which which referred to Christ, and applied them to him, which they had not fully comprehended before. Indeed it is only in the light of the New Covenant, that the Old is to be fully understood.

Verse 19. The world is gone after him.] This is a very common form of expression among the Jews, and simply answers to the French, tout le monde, and to the English, every body—the bulk of the people.

Verse 20. Certain Greeks] They were either proselytes of the gate or covenant, who came up to worship the true God at this feast; or real Jews, who lived in Grecian provinces, and spoke the Greek language; or mere Gentiles, who never knew the true God: and, hearing of the fame of the temple, or the miracles of our Lord, came to offer sacrifices to Jehovah, and to worship him according to the manner of the people of that land.

Verse 21. The same came therefore to Philip] Some suppose that these Gentiles were of Phœnicia or Syria, or perhaps inhabitants of Decapolis, near to the lake of Genesareth and Bethsaida; and therefore they addressed themselves to Philip, who was of the latter city, and probably known to them. [The Greek form of Philip's name seems to imply some connexion with the Hellenistic Jews.]

Sir, we would see Jesus.] We have heard much concerning him, and we wish to see the person of whom we have heard such strange things.

Verse 22. Andrew and Philip tell Jesus.] How pleasing to God is this union, when the ministers of his gospel agree and unite together to bring souls to Christ.

Verse 23. The hour is come, that the Son of man, &c.] The time is just at hand in which the gospel shall be preached to all nations, the middle wall of partition broken down, and Jews and Gentiles united in one fold.

Verse 34. Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die] Our Lord compares himself to a grain of wheat; his death, to a grain sown and decomposed in the ground; his resurrection, to the blade which springs up from the dead grain; which grain, thus dying, brings forth an abundance of fruit. I must die so to be glorified; and, unless I am glorified, I cannot establish a glorious church of Jews and Gentiles upon earth.

These words indicate the mystery of our Lord's death, which we must credit without being able fully to comprehend; as we believe the dead grain multiplies itself, and we are nourished by that multiplication, without being able to comprehend how it is done. All we can say is, the thing is so;

was of Bethsaida of Galilee, and desired him, saying, Sir, we would see Jesus.

22 Philip cometh and telleth Andrew: and again Andrew and Philip tell Jesus.

23 And Jesus answered them, saying, ^a The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, ^a Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.

25 ^a He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world, shall keep it unto life eternal.

26 If any man serve me, let him follow me; and ^a where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, him will my Father honour.

27 ^a Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: ^a but for this cause came I unto this hour.

28 Father, glorify thy name. ^a Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again.

29 The people therefore that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered: others said, An angel spake to him.

30 Jesus answered and said, ^a This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes.

—^a 1 Cor. xv. 36.—^b Matt. x. 39. xvi. 25. Mark viii. 35. Luke ix. 24. xvii. 33.—^c Ch. xiv. 3. xvi. 24. 1 Thess. iv. 17.—^d Matt. xxvi. 38, 39. Luke xii. 50. Ch. xvi. 21.—^e Luke xxii. 53. Ch. xviii. 37.—^f Matt. iii. 17.—^g Ch. xi. 42.

and it has pleased God that it should be so, and not otherwise. So there are many things in the person, death, and sacrifice of Christ, which we can neither explain nor comprehend. All we should say here is, It is by this means that the world was redeemed—through this sacrifice men are saved: it has pleased God that it should be so, and not otherwise. But, I would ask, has ever a more correct philosophy on this point appeared? Is it not a physical truth that the whole body of the grain dies, is converted into fine earth which forms the first nourishment of the embryo plant, and prepares it to receive a grosser support from the surrounding soil; and that nothing lives but the germ, which was included in this body, and which must die also, if it did not receive, from the death or putrefaction of the body of the grain, nourishment, so as to enable it to unfold itself? Though the body of our Lord died, there was still the germ, the quickening power of the Divinity, which reanimated that body, and stamped the atonement with infinite merit.

Verse 26. If any man serve me] He who wishes to serve Christ must become: 1. His disciple or scholar, that he may be taught: 2. His servant, that he may be employed by and obey his master. To such a person a twofold promise is given: 1. He shall be with Christ, in eternal fellowship with him; and 2. He shall be honoured by the Lord; he shall have an abundant recompense in glory; but how great, eye hath not seen, ear heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive.

Verse 27. Now is my soul troubled] Our blessed Lord took upon him our weaknesses, that he might sanctify them to us. As a man he was troubled at the prospect of a violent death. Nature abhors death: God has implanted that abhorrence in nature, that it might become a principle of self-preservation; and it is to this that we owe all the prudence and caution by which we avoid danger.

And what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour] And why should I say, Father save me from this hour? when for this cause I am come to this hour. The common version makes our blessed Lord contradict himself here, by not attending to the proper punctuation of the passage, and by translating the particle what, instead of why or how. [Some critics give a very different sense: they regard the words of the Lord as a veritable prayer: and understand the words "for this cause," as referring to the salvation for which he prayed.]

Verse 28. Father, glorify thy name.] By the name of God is to be understood himself, in all his attributes; which 31 Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out.

32 And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.

33 This he said, signifying what death he should die.

34 The people answered him, We have heard out of the law, that Christ abideth for ever: and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be lifted up? who is this Son of man?

35 Then Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you. Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you: for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth.

36 While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light. These things spake Jesus, and departed, and did hide himself from them.

37 But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him:

were all more abundantly glorified by Christ's death and resurrection than they had ever been before. Christ teaches here a lesson of submission to the divine will.

Verse 29. The people—said that it thundered: others—an angel spake to him. Wetstein supposes that the voice was in the language then in use among the Jews; which the Greeks, not understanding, took for thunder; the others, the Jews, who did understand it, said it was the voice of an angel. The voice mentioned was probably very loud, which some heard distinctly, others indistinctly; hence the variety of opinion.

Verse 30. This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes. Probably meaning those Greeks who had been brought to him by Philip and Andrew.

Verse 31. Now is the judgment of this world. The judgment spoken of in this place is applied by some to the punishment which was about to fall on the Jewish people for rejecting Christ. And the ruler or prince, of this world, is understood to be Satan, who had blinded the eyes of the Jews, and hardened their hearts, that they might not believe on the Son of God.

Verse 32. I will draw all men unto me. After I shall have died and risen again, by the preaching of my word and the influence of my Spirit, I shall attract and illumine both Jews and Gentiles. It was one of the peculiar characteristics of the Messiah, that unto him should the gathering of the people be, Gen. xlix. 10. And probably our Lord refers to the prophecy, Isa. xi. 10, which probably belonged to the Gentiles.

Verse 34. We have heard out of the law. The words here are quoted from Ps. cx. 4; but the Jews called every part of the sacred writings by the name, The Law, in opposition to the words or sayings of the scribes.

That Christ abideth for ever. There was no part of the law nor of the scripture that said the Messiah should not die; but there are several passages that say as expressly as they can that Christ must die, and die for the sin of the world too. But as there were several passages that spoke of the perpetuity of his reign, they probably confounded the one with the other, and thus drew the conclusion, The Messiah cannot die; for the scripture hath said, his throne, kingdom, and reign shall be eternal.

Verse 35. Yet a little while is the light with you. The Christ shall abide for ever, it is true; but he will not always be visible. When he shall depart from you, ye shall be left in the thickest darkness; in impotence and hardness of heart.

Lest darkness come upon you. Ye have a good part of your journey yet to go; ye cannot travel safely but in the daylight—that light is almost gone—run, that the darkness overtake you not, or in it ye shall stumble, fall, and perish!

Verse 36. Children of light. As truly as a child is the produce of his own parent, and partakes of his nature, so be ye children of the light, having nothing in you but truth and righteousness.

38 That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake, Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed?

39 Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again, 40 He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them.

41 These things said Esaias, when he saw his glory, and spake of him.

42 Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue:

43 For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.

44 Jesus cried and said, He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that sent me.

Did hide himself from them. Either by rendering himself invisible, or by suddenly mingling with the crowd, so that they could not perceive him.

Verse 37. Yet they believed not on him. They were blinded by their passions, and obstinately hardened their hearts against the truth.

Verse 38. That the saying of Esaias. Or, Thus the word of Isaiah was fulfilled. For it certainly does not mean the end the Pharisees had in view by not believing; nor the end which the prophet had in view in predicting the incredulity of the Jews; but simply, such a thing was spoken by the prophet, concerning the Jews of his own time, and it had its literal fulfilment in those of our Lord's time.

Verse 39. Therefore they could not believe. The prophecy of Isaiah was neither the cause nor the motive of their unbelief: it was a simple prediction, which imposed no necessity on them to resist the offers of mercy. They might have believed, notwithstanding the prediction, for such kinds of prophecies always include a tacit condition; they may believe, if they properly use the light and power which God has given them. Such prophecies also are of a general application—they will always suit somebody, for in every age persons will be found who resist the grace and Spirit of God like these disobedient Jews. However, it appears that this prediction belonged especially to these rejectors and crucifiers of Christ; and if the prophecy was infallible in its execution, with respect to them, it was not because of the prediction that they continued in unbelief, but because of their own voluntary obstinacy; and God, foreseeing this, foretold it by the prophet. "If I be asked why they could not believe? I immediately answer, Because THEY WOULD NOT. And God, having foreseen their BAD WILL, foretold it by the prophet." Augustine on John.

Verse 40. And I should heal them. This verse is taken from Isa. vi. 9, and, perhaps, refers more to the judgments that should fall upon them as a nation, which God was determined should not be averted, than it does to their eternal state. To suppose that the text meant that God was unwilling that they should turn unto him, lest he should be obliged to save them, is an insupportable blasphemy.

Verse 41. When he saw his glory. Isa. vi. 1, &c. It appears evident, from this passage, that the glory which the prophet saw was the glory of Jehovah: John, therefore, saying here that it was the glory of Jesus, shows that he considered Jesus to be Jehovah.

Verse 42. Among the chief rulers—many believed on him. We only know the names of two of them, Nicodemus, and Joseph of Arimathea.

But—they did not confess him. Or it: they were as yet weak in the faith, and could not bear the reproach of the cross of Christ.

Verse 43. They loved the praise of men. The glory or honour that cometh from men.

Verse 44. Jesus cried and said. Probably this and the following verses should be understood as a part of the discourse which was left off at the 36th verse.

Believeth not on me (only), but on him that sent me.] Here he asserts again his indivisible unity with the Father:—he who believes on the Son believes on the Father: he who hath seen the Son hath seen the Father: he who honours the Son honours the Father. Though it was for asserting this (his oneness with God) that they were going to crucify him, yet he retracts nothing of what he had spoken, but strongly re-asserts it, in the very jaws of death!

Verse 46. I am come a light into the world] Probably referring to what his forerunner had said, chap. i. 5.

Verse 47. I judge him not] I need not do it: the words of Moses and the Prophets judge and condemn him.

Verse 48. The word that I have spoken—shall judge him] Ye shall be judged according to my doctrine: the maxims which ye have heard from my mouth shall be those on which ye shall be tried in the great day; and ye shall be condemned or acquitted according as ye have believed or obeyed them, or according as ye have despised and violated them.

words, hath one that judgeth him: 'the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.

49 For ^a I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, ^b what I should say and what I should speak.

50 And I know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.

^d Ch. viii. 38. xiv. 10.—^e Deut. xviii. 18.

Verse 49. For I have not spoken of myself] I have taught you, not the things of men, but the deep, everlasting truths of God. As his envoy, I came to you; and his truth only I proclaim.

Gave me a commandment] Or, commission. Christ, as the Messiah, received his commission from God: what he should command—every thing that related to the formation and establishment of the Christian institution: and what he should speak—all his private conversations with his disciples or others, he, as man, commanded and spoke through the constant inspiration of the Holy Spirit.

Verse 50. I know that this commandment is life everlasting] Every word of Christ, properly credited, and carefully applied, leads to peace and happiness here, and to glory hereafter. This sacred truth Jesus witnessed with his last breath. He began his public ministry proclaiming the kingdom of God: and he now finishes it by asserting that the whole commission is eternal life; and, having attested this, he went out of the temple, and retired to Bethany.

CHAPTER XIII.

Christ washes the feet of his disciples, and gives them instructions concerning humility and charity, 1-17. He tells them that one of themselves will betray him, 18-20. The disciples doubting of whom he spoke, Peter desires John to ask him, 21-25. Jesus shows that it is Judas Iscariot, 26. Satan enters into Judas, and he rises up and leaves the company, 27-30. Christ shows his approaching death, and commands his disciples to love one another, 31-35. Peter, professing strong attachment to Christ, is informed of his denial, 36-38.

NOW ^a before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew that ^b his hour was come, that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.

2 And supper being ended, ^c the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him;

^a Matt. xxvi. 2. Luke xxii. 1.—^b Ch. xii. 23. xvii. 1, 11.—^c Luke xxii. 8. Ver. 27.—^d Matt. xi. 27. xxviii. 18. Ch. iii. 35. xvii. 2.

Verse 1. Now before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew, &c.] The supper mentioned in ver. 2 is supposed to have been that on the Thursday evening, when the feast of the passover began; and though, in our common translation, this passage seems to place the supper before that feast, yet, according to the amended translation, what is here said is consistent with what we read in the other Evangelists.

Having loved his own] His disciples.
Which were in the world] Who were to continue longer in their troubles and difficulties.

He loved them unto the end.] Continued his fervent affection towards them to his latest breath, and gave them that convincing proof of it which is mentioned ver. 5.

3 Jesus knowing ^a that the Father had given all things into his hands, and ^b that he was come from God, and went to God;

4 ^c He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself.

5 After that, he poureth water into a bason, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded.

Acts ii. 36. 1 Cor. xv. 27. Heb. ii. 8.—^a Ch. viii. 42. xvi. 28.—
^b Luke xxii. 27. Phil. ii. 7, 8.

Verse 2. And supper being ended] Rather, while supper was preparing. For from ver. 26 and 30, it appears that the supper was not then ended: nay, it is probable that it was not then begun: because the washing of feet (ver. 5) was usually practised by the Jews before they entered upon their meals, as may be gathered from Luke vii. 44, and from the reason of the custom.

The devil having now put into the heart] Judas formed his plot six days before this, on occasion of what happened at the house of Simon the leper, see Matt. xxvi. 14.

Verse 3. Knowing that the Father had given, &c.] Our Lord, seeing himself almost at the end of his race, and being about to leave his apostles, thought it necessary to leave

6 Then cometh he to Simon Peter : and * Peter said unto him, Lord, ^b dost thou wash my feet ?

7 Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now ; ^c but thou shalt know hereafter.

8 Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, ^d If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me.

9 Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head.

10 Jesus saith to him, He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit ; and * ye are clean, but not all :

11 For ^e he knew who should betray him ; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean.

them a lesson of humility exemplified by himself, to deliver them from the bad influence of those false ideas which they formed concerning the nature of his kingdom.

Verse 4. He riseth from supper] Not from eating, but from his place at table ; probably the dishes were not as yet laid down, though the guests were seated.

Laid aside his garments] That is, his gown or upper coat, with the girdle wherewith it was girded close to his tunic or under coat.

Verse 5. Poureth water into a basin, &c.] This was the office of the meanest slaves, 1 Sam. xxv. 41. There is every reason to believe that he washed the feet of all the twelve.

Verse 6. Lord, dost thou wash my feet ?] Every word here is exceedingly emphatic. Peter had often seen the great humility of his Lord, but never saw his condescension so particularly marked as in this instance.

Verse 7. Thou shalt know hereafter.] I will shortly explain to you the nature of this action, and my motives for doing it. And so we find he explained the whole to them, as soon as he had finished the washing, see ver. 12-17.

Verse 8. If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me.] Thou canst not be my disciple unless I wash thee. It is certain, Christ did not mean to exclude him from the apostolic office, if he should persist, through the deepest reverence for his Master, to refuse to let him wash his feet : this act of his was emblematical of something spiritual ; therefore our Lord said, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me. There is a mystical washing by the blood of Christ, 1 John i. 7 ; and by his Spirit, 1 Cor. vi. 11 ; Tit. iii. 5, 6. It was the common custom of our Lord to pass from sensible and temporal things to those which were spiritual and eternal ; and to take occasion, from everything that presented itself, to instruct his disciples, and to raise their souls to God.

Verse 9. Lord, not my feet only, &c.] It appears that Peter entered into our Lord's meaning, and saw that this was emblematical of a spiritual cleansing, therefore he wishes to be completely washed.

Verse 10. He that is washed] That is, he who has been in the bath, as probably all the apostles had lately been, in order to prepare themselves the better for the paschal solemnity ; for, on that occasion, it was the custom of the Jews to bathe twice.

Needeth not save to wash his feet] To cleanse them from any dirt or dust that might have adhered to them, in consequence of walking from the bath to the place of supper. The washing, therefore, of the feet of such persons was all that was necessary, previously to their sitting down to table.

If these last words of our Lord had any spiritual reference, it is not easy to say what it was. A common opinion is the following : He who is washed—who is justified through the blood of the lamb, needeth only to wash his feet—to regulate all his affections and desires ; and to get, by faith, his conscience cleansed from any fresh guilt, which he may have contracted since his justification.

14 ^b If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet ; ^c ye also ought to wash one another's feet.

15 For ^d I have given you an example, that ye should do, as I have done to you.

16 * Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord ; neither he that is sent, greater than he that sent him.

17 ^e If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.

18 I speak not of you all : I know whom I have chosen : but that the scripture may be fulfilled, ^f He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me.

19 * Now ^g I tell you before it come, that when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am he.

20 ^h Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send, receiveth me ; and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me.

Ye are clean, but not all] Eleven of you are upright and sincere ; the twelfth is a traitor. So it appears he had washed the feet of all the twelve ; but, as no external ablutions can purify a hypocrite or a traitor, therefore Judas still remained unclean.

Verse 12. Know ye what I have done] I think it more likely that he gives a command, here, than asks a question, as he knew himself that they did not comprehend his design.

Verse 13. Ye call me Master and Lord] This double title was not given except to the most accredited teachers.

Verse 14. Ye also ought to wash one another's feet.] That is, ye should be ready, after my example, to condescend to all the weakness of your brethren ; to be willing to do the meanest offices for them, and to prefer the least of them in honour to yourselves.

Verse 16. The servant is not greater than his lord] Christ has ennobled the acts of humility by practising them himself. The true glory of a Christian consists in being, in his measure, as humble as his Lord.

Neither he that is sent] Nor an apostle. As I think these words were intended for the suppression of all worldly ambition and lordly conduct in the apostles and their successors in the ministry, therefore I think the original word should be translated apostle, rather than he that is sent, because the former rendering ascertains and determines the meaning better. [This is rather fanciful.]

Verse 17. If ye know these things, happy, &c.] True happiness consists in the knowledge of God, and in obedience to him. A man is not happy because he knows much ; but because he receives much of the divine nature, and is, in all his conduct, conformed to the divine will.

Verse 18. I know whom I have chosen] I am not deceived in my choice ; I perfectly foresaw every thing that has happened, or can happen.

That the scripture may be fulfilled] Or, thus the scripture is fulfilled. Christ applies to Judas what David had said of his rebellious son Absalom, Ps. xli. 9, who was one of the most express emblems of this traitor.

He that eateth bread with me] That is, he who was in habits of the utmost intimacy with me.

Hath lifted up his heel] An allusion to a restive, ill-natured horse, that sometimes kicks even the person who feeds and takes care of him.

Verse 19. That—ye may believe] These frequent predictions of his death, so circumstantial in themselves, had the most direct tendency to confirm the disciples, not only in the belief of his being the Messiah, but also in that of his omniscience.

Verse 20. He that receiveth whomsoever I send] Our Lord spoke this to comfort his disciples : he showed them that, although they should be rejected by many, they would be received by several ; and that whoever received them should reap the utmost benefit by it.

Verse 21. And testified] Spoke with great earnestness.

in spirit, and testified, and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, that * one of you shall betray me.

22 Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake.

23 Now ^b there was leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved.

24 Simon Peter therefore beckoned to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake.

25 He then lying on Jesus' breast, saith unto him, Lord, who is it?

26 Jesus answered, He it is, to whom I shall give a * sop, when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon.

27 ^a And after the sop, Satan entered into him. Then said Jesus unto him, That thou doest, do quickly.

28 Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him.

29 For some of them thought, because * Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast; or, that he should give something to the poor.

30 He then, having received the sop, went immediately out: and it was night.

Shall betray me.] Will deliver me up. Judas had already betrayed our blessed Lord, and he was now on the point of delivering him up into the hands of the chief priests.

Verse 22. Looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake.] Even Judas himself is not suspected. Is not this a proof that his general conduct had been such as to subject him to no suspicion?

Verse 23. Now there was leaning on Jesus' bosom.] The Jews of those days, at their suppers, reclined, supported by their left arm, on couches placed round the table, as the Greeks and Romans did.

Verse 25. He then lying on Jesus' breast.] Laying his head against the breast of Christ, in a loving respectful manner. As the expressions in the text are different here from those in the preceding verse, it shows that John altered his position at table, in order to ask the question which Peter suggested, which he probably did by whispering to our Lord; for, from ver. 28, we may learn that the other disciples had not heard what John said; and it is likely that the following words—It is he to whom I shall give the morsel when I have dipped it, were whispered back by Christ to John.

Verse 27. Satan entered into him.] He had entered into him before, and now he enters again, to strengthen him in his purpose of delivering up his master. But the morsel was not the cause of this entering in; the giving of it only marks the time in which the devil confirmed Judas in his traitorous purpose.

That thou doest, do quickly.] As if he had said: "Thou art past all counsel; thou hast filled up the measure of thy iniquity, and hast wholly abandoned thyself to Satan; I will not force thee to turn from thy purpose, and without this thou wilt not."

Verse 29. Give something to the poor.] It is well known that our Lord and his disciples lived on public charity; and yet they gave alms out of what they had thus received. From this we learn that even those who live on charity themselves are expected to divide a little with those who are in deeper distress and want.

Verse 30. He—went immediately out: and it was night.] He set off to Jerusalem from Bethany, which was about two miles distant; and, under the conduct of the prince of darkness, and in the time of darkness, he did this work of darkness.

Verse 31. Now is the Son of man glorified.] Hath been glorified. I have already been glorified by this appointment and am about to be farther glorified by my death, resurrection, and ascension.

Verse 32. And shall straightway glorify him.] Or, glorify 31 Therefore when he was gone out, Jesus said, 'Now is the Son of man glorified, and * God is glorified in him.

32 ^b If God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in himself, and ^c shall straightway glorify him.

33 Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: ^d and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you.

34 ^e A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.

35 ^f By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

36 Simon Peter said unto him, Lord, whither goest thou? Jesus answered him, Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now: but ^g thou shalt follow me afterwards.

37 Peter said unto him, Lord, why cannot I follow thee now? I will ^h lay down my life for thy sake.

38 Jesus answered him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for my sake? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, The cock shall not crow, till thou hast denied me thrice.

him immediately; as he did, not only in the miracles wrought at his death, but also in that remarkable case mentioned, chap. xviii. 6, when the whole crowd that came to seize him were driven back with a word from his mouth, and fell to the ground.

Verse 33. Little children.] Or, rather, beloved children. It is an expression which implies great tenderness and affection, and such as a fond mother uses to her most beloved babes.

Ye shall seek me.] For a few days ye shall feel great distress because of my absence.

Verse 34. A new commandment I give unto you.] In what sense are we to understand that this was a new commandment? Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, was a positive precept of the law, Lev. xix. 18. Our Lord answers this question, Even as I have loved you. Now Christ not only loved his neighbour as himself, but he loved him more than himself, for he laid down his life for men. In this he calls upon the disciples to imitate him; to be ready on all occasions to lay down their lives for each other.

Verse 35. By this shall all men know, &c.] The disciples of different teachers were known by their habits, or some particular creed or rite, or point of austerity which they had adopted; but the disciples of Christ were known by this love which they bore to each other. The primitive Christians were particularly known by this among the Gentiles. Tertullian, in his Apology, gives us their very words: "See, said they, how they love one another, and are ready to lay down their lives for each other."

Verse 36. Thou canst not follow me now.] Thou hast not faith strong enough to die for me, nor is thy work yet done; but hereafter thou shalt suffer for my sake, and die in defence of my truth.

Verse 37. Why cannot I follow thee now?] Peter probably thought that our Lord intended to go some long journey, which would necessarily subject him to many inconveniences and fatigue; and he felt quite disposed to follow him in this supposed journey, at all hazards.

I will lay down my life for thy sake.] Poor Peter! thou wast sincere, but thou didst not know thy own strength. Thou wast at this time willing to die, but when the time came wast not able. Christ must first die for Peter, before Peter can die for him. Peter's denial should be an eternal warning to all self-confident persons: though there be sincerity and good will at the bottom, yet in the trial these cannot perform that office which belongs to the power of God. We should will, and then look to God for power to execute: without him we can do nothing.

Verse 38. The cock shall not crow, &c.] See on Matt. xxvi. 34.

CHAPTER XIV.

Christ comforts his disciples, on the event of his removal from them, by the consideration of his going to prepare a place for them in heaven, 1-4. Thomas questions him concerning the way to the Father, and is answered, 5-7. Philip proposes a difficulty, and Christ shows that he and the Father are one; that he is Mediator between God and man; and that whatsoever is asked in his name shall be obtained, 8-14. He promises them the Holy Spirit as the Comforter and Spirit of truth, 15-18. Shows them that he is shortly to leave them, and that those who love him should be loved of the Father, 19-21. Jude asks a question, how Christ is to manifest himself to the disciples, and not to the Jews? 22. Christ answers, and shows that the manifestation is to be made to those who love God, and to them the Holy Spirit is to be an infallible teacher, 23-26. He bequeaths his peace to them, and fortifies them against discouragements, 27-29. Foretels his approaching death, 30, 31.

LET ^anot your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me.

2 In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. ^bI go to prepare a place for you.

3 And if I go and prepare a place for you, ^cI will come again, and receive you unto myself; that ^dwhere I am, there ye may be also.

4 And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know.

5 Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?

6 Jesus saith unto him, I am ^ethe way, and ^fthe truth, and ^gthe life: ^hno man cometh unto the Father, but by me.

Verse 1. Ye believe in God, believe also in me.] It is best to read both the verbs in the imperative mood:—Place your confidence in God, and in me as the Mediator between God and man, ver. 12-14; and expect the utmost support from God; but expect it all through me.

Verse 2. In my Father's house, &c.] The kingdom of glory.

Many mansions] I am going to that state of glory where there is not only a place of supreme eminence for myself, but also places for all my disciples;—various degrees of glory, suited to the various capacities and attainments of my followers.

Our Lord alludes here to the temple, which was called the house of God, in the precincts of which there were a great number of chambers, 1 Kings vi. 5; Ezra viii. 29; Jer. xxiv. 2, 4, xxxvi. 10.

If—not—I would have told you.] I would not have permitted you to have indulged a vain hope concerning future blessedness.

Verse 3. And if I go] Dr. Lightfoot thinks, and with great probability too, that there is an allusion here to Num. x. 33: And the ark of the Lord went before them, to search out a resting-place for them.

Verse 4. And whither I go ye know] I have told you this so often and so plainly that ye must certainly have comprehended what I have said.

Verse 5. Lord, we know not] Thomas, perhaps, thought that our Lord only spoke of his going some distance from the place where he then was.

Verse 6. I am the way] That leads to the Father—the truth that teaches the knowledge of God, and directs in the way:—the life that animates all those who seek and serve him, and which is to be enjoyed eternally at the end of the way.

No man cometh unto the Father] By any other doctrine, by any other merit, or by any other intercession than mine.

Verse 7. If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father] Because I and the Father are one, chap. x. 30.

Verse 8. Shew us the Father] As if he had said, We have seen and adored thee, and our happiness will be complete if thou show us the Father. The demand of Philip was similar to that made by Moses, Exod. xxxiii. 18. In Peter, James, my Father also; and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him.

8 Philip saith unto him, Lord, shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us.

9 Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? ^jhe that hath seen me hath seen the Father: and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father?

10 Believest thou not that I ^kam in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you ^lI speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works.

or John, this would have been inexcusable; but Philip had not seen the transfiguration on the mount.

Verse 9. He that hath seen me hath seen the Father] Could any creature say these words? Do they not evidently imply that Christ declared himself to his disciples to be the everlasting God?

Verse 10. I am in the Father, and the Father in me] We are essentially one; and those who have seen me have seen him who sent me.

He doeth the works.] We are not only one in nature, but one also in operation.

Verse 12. And greater works than these] Perhaps the greater works refer to the immense multitudes that were brought to God by the ministry of the apostles. It is certainly the greatest miracle of divine grace to convert the obstinate, wicked heart of man from sin to holiness. This was done in numberless cases by the disciples, who were endued with power from on high, while proclaiming remission of sins through faith in his blood.

The reason which our Lord gives for this is worthy of deep attention:—

Because I go unto my Father.] Where I shall be an Intercessor for you, that—

Verse 13. Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name] To enable you to perform these miracles, and to convert souls, may be granted you. Besides, by going unto the Father, I shall receive the Holy Spirit, and send down his abundant influences into the hearts of those who believe.

Verse 15. If ye love me, keep my commandments.] This I shall receive as a greater proof of your affection than your tears.

Verse 16. I will pray the Father] I will become the Mediator between God and man; and through my mediation and intercession shall all the blessings of grace and glory be acquired.

Another Comforter] The word signifies not only a comforter, but also an advocate, a defender of a cause, a counsellor, patron, mediator. Christ is thus termed, 1 John ii. 1, where the common translation renders the word advocate. Christ is thus called, because he is represented as transacting the concerns of our souls with God; and for this cause, he tells us, he goes unto the Father, ver. 12. The Holy Spirit loveth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father.

13 * And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son.

14 If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it.

15 * If ye love me, keep my commandments.

16 And I will pray the Father, and * he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever;

17 Even * the Spirit of truth; * whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, * and shall be in you.

18 * I will not leave you * comfortless: * I will come to you.

19 Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but * ye see me: * because I live, ye shall live also.

20 At that day ye shall know that * I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you.

is thus called, because he transacts the cause of God and Christ with us, explains to us the nature and importance of the great atonement, shows the necessity of it, counsels us to receive it, instructs us how to lay hold on it, vindicates our claim to it, and makes intercessions in us with unutterable groanings. As Christ acted with his disciples while he sojourned with them, so the Holy Ghost acts with those who believe in his name.

For ever] As the death and atonement of Christ will be necessary to man till the conclusion of the world, so the office of the Holy Spirit must be continued among men till the end of time.

Verse 17. The Spirit of truth] The Spirit, or Holy Ghost, whose essential office is to manifest, vindicate, and apply the truth.

The world cannot receive] By the world, St. John means those who are influenced only by the desire of the flesh, the desire of the eye, and the pride of life, 1 John ii. 16. Now these cannot receive the Spirit of the truth, because they see him not, have no spiritual discernment, attend to nothing but the dictates of their corrupt passions and affections, and will admit of no influence but what can be an object of their senses. Hence all the deism and irreligion in the world.

But ye know him] Probably our Lord refers to the knowledge which they should afterwards attain.

For he dwelleth with you] It is certain the Holy Spirit was not yet given to the disciples so as to dwell in them; this St. John himself assures us, chap. vii. 39. And it is evidently of that Spirit and its influences, which was not given till the day of Pentecost, that our Lord here speaks. The Evangelist often uses the present for the future tense.

Verse 18. I will not leave you comfortless] Literally, orphans.

The disciples of a particular teacher among the Hebrews called him father; his scholars were called his children, and, on his death, were considered as orphans. Christ calls his disciples children, beloved children, chap. xiii. 33; and assures them that they shall not be left fatherless, or without a teacher; for, after his ascension, they should be made partakers of that Spirit which would be their comforter, advocate, teacher, and guide for ever.

Verse 19. Because I live] As surely as I shall rise from the dead, so shall ye. My resurrection shall be the proof and pledge of yours. And because I live a life of intercession for you at the right hand of God, ye shall live a life of grace and peace here, and a life of glory hereafter.

Verse 20. That I am in my Father] After my resurrection, ye shall become fully convinced of this important truth, that I and the Father are one.

Verse 21. And will manifest myself to him] I will manifest my power and goodness to all those who believe in and obey me, even to the end of the world.

21 * He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.

22 * Judas saith unto him, not Iscariot, Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?

23 Jesus answered and said unto him, * If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, * and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

24 He that loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings: and * the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me.

25 These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you.

26 But * the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, * he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.

27 * Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you.

Verse 22. Judas] The same as Thaddeus and Lebbeus, the brother of James, and author of what is called the Epistle of Jude.

How is it?] Judas, who was probably thinking that the kingdom of Christ should extend over all the earth, wonders how this can be, and yet Christ manifest himself only to his disciples and not to the world, ver. 19.

And make our abode with him] Will make his heart our temple, where God, the Father, Son, and Spirit, shall rest, receive homage, and dwell to eternity. Thus will I manifest myself to the believing, loving, obedient disciple, and not to the world, who will not receive the Spirit of the truth.

Verse 24. He that loveth me not, &c.] Hence we learn that the man who is not obedient to the testimonies of Christ does not love him; and the Spirit of this truth hath said, He who loves not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be accursed. 1 Cor. xvi. 22.

Verse 26. He shall teach you all things] If in the things which I have already spoken to you, there appear to you any obscurity, the Holy Spirit, the Advocate, Counsellor, and Instructor, will take away all your doubts, free you from all embarrassment, and give you a perfect understanding in all things.

And bring all things to your remembrance] Thus they have been able to transmit to posterity the identical words which Jesus uttered in his sermons, and in his different discourses with them, the Jews, and others.

Verse 27. Peace I leave with you] The Jewish form of salutation and benediction.

My peace I give unto you] It is my last, my best, my dying legacy.

Not as the world giveth] Not as the Jews, in empty wishes: not as the people of the world, in empty compliments. To his followers, Jesus gives peace, procures it, preserves it, and establishes it.

Neither let it be afraid] Let not your heart shrink back through fear of any approaching evil. This is the proper meaning of the word.

Verse 28. I go away] To the Father by my death: And come again unto you.] By my resurrection. Ye would rejoice] Because, as the Messiah, I am going to receive a kingdom, and power, and glory, for ever.

My Father is greater than I] It certainly requires very little argument, and no sophistry, to reconcile this saying with the most orthodox notion of the Godhead of Christ; as he is repeatedly speaking of his divine and of his human nature. Of the former, he says, I and the Father are one, chap. x. 30; and of the latter, he states, with the same truth, The Father is greater than I.

Verse 29. I have told you before it come to pass] Lest my death should be a stumbling-block to you, I have spoken of it beforehand, and showed you the necessity of it, that

* Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

28 Ye have heard how ^b I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said, ^c I go unto the Father: for ^d my Father is greater than I.

when it happens ye may believe, that as I could predict it so clearly, and so circumstantially, so all the good which I have promised shall be the result may be confidently expected by you; and that your sorrow, if not entirely removed, may at least be much mitigated.

Verse 30. The prince of this world.] But who is the person called here the Prince of the World? The most general opinion is that Satan is meant, who is called the prince of the power of the air, Eph. ii. 2; and who is supposed to be the same that is called the god of this world, 2 Cor. iv. 4; and who at his last and most desperate trial, the agony in the garden, should be convinced that there was nothing of his nature in Christ, nothing that would coincide with his solicitations, and that he should find himself completely foiled in all his attacks, and plainly foresee the impending ruin of his kingdom.

Verse 31. Arise, let us go hence.] It was now about midnight, and the moon was almost full, it being the 14th day of her age, about the time in which the Jewish passover was to be slain.

CHAPTER XV.

The union of Jesus Christ with his followers, represented by the parable of a vine and its branches, 1-11. He exhorts them to mutual love, 12. Calls them his friends, and promises to lay down his life for them, 13-15. Appoints them their work, and promises them success in it, 16. Renews the exhortation to mutual love, 17, and foretels the opposition they would meet with from the world, 18-21. The sin of the Jews in rejecting Christ, 22-25. The Holy Spirit is promised as a witness for Christ, and the Comforter of the disciples, 26, 27.

I AM husbandman. the

2 ^b Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.

3 ^c Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.

4 ^d Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.

Verse 1. I am the true vine] Perhaps the vines which they met with, on their road from Bethany to Gethsemane, might have given rise to this discourse. Some think that, as this discourse followed the celebration of the Eucharist, our Lord took occasion from the fruit of the vine, used in that ordinance, to introduce this similitude.

Verse 2. Every branch in me] I stand in the same relation to my followers, and they to me, as the vine to the branches, and the branches to the vine.

He taketh away] As the vine-dresser will remove every unfruitful branch from the vine, so will my Father remove every unfruitful member from my mystical body.

He purgeth it] He pruneth. He who brings forth fruit to God's glory, according to his light and power, will have the hindrances taken away from his heart; for his very thoughts shall be cleansed by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost.

Verse 3. Now ye are clean] Ye are pruned. As our Lord has not changed the metaphor, it would be wrong to change the expression.

Through the word] Through that word—that doctrine of 5 I am the vine, ye are the branches: he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much ^a fruit: for ^b without me ye can do nothing.

6 If a man abide not in me, ^c he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.

7 If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ^d ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

8 ^e Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; ^f so shall ye be my disciples.

holiness which I have incessantly preached unto you, and which ye have received.

Verse 4. Abide in me] These two things are absolutely necessary to our salvation: 1. That we continue closely united to Christ by faith and love, and live in and to him. 2. That we continually receive from him the power to do good; for as the branch, however good in itself, cannot bear fruit from itself, through its own juice, which it has already derived from the tree, and can be no longer supported than it continues in union with the parent stock, neither can ye, unless ye abide in me.

Verse 5. Without me ye can do nothing.] Separated from me, ye can do nothing at all. Following the metaphor of our Lord, it would be just as possible to do any good without him, as for a branch to live, thrive, and bring forth good fruit, while cut off from that tree from which it not only derives its juices, but its very existence also.

Verse 6. If a man abide not in me] Our Lord, in the plainest manner, intimates that a person may as truly be united to him as the branch is to the tree that produces it, and yet be afterwards cut off and cast into the fire; beca

9 As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: continue ye in my love.

10 * If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love.

11 These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and ^b that your joy might be full.

12 * This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you.

13 ^d Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

14 * Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.

15 Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends; ^f for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you.

16 * Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ^h ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: ⁱ that, ^j whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you.

17 These things I command you, that ye love one another.

he has not brought forth fruit to the glory of his God. No man can cut off a branch from a tree to which that branch was never united.

He is cast forth.] Observe, that person who abides not in Christ, in a believing, loving, obedient spirit, is—1. Cut off from Jesus, having no longer any right or title to him or to his salvation. 2. He is withered—deprived of all the influences of God's grace and Spirit. 3. He is gathered—becomes (through the judgment of God) again united with backsliders like himself, 4. Cast into the fire—separated from God's people, from God himself, and from the glory of his power. And, 5. He is burned—is eternally tormented with the devil and his angels.

Verse 8. Herein is my Father glorified] Or, honoured. It is the honour of the husbandman to have good, strong, vigorous vines, plentifully laden with fruit: so it is the honour of God to have strong, vigorous, holy children, entirely freed from sin, and perfectly filled with his love.

Verse 10. If ye keep my commandments, &c.] Hence we learn that it is impossible to retain a sense of God's pardoning love, without continuing in the obedience of faith.

Verse 11. That my joy may remain in you] That the joy which I now feel, on account of your steady, affectionate attachment to me, may be lasting, I give you both warnings and directions, that ye may abide in the faith.

That your joy might be full.] Or, complete—filled up: a metaphor taken from a vessel, into which water or any other thing is poured, till it is full to the brim.

Verse 12. That ye love one another] See on chap. xiii. 34.

Verse 13. That a man lay down his life for his friends.] No man can carry his love for his friend farther than this: for, when he gives up his life, he gives up all that he has. This proof of my love for you I shall give in a few hours; and the doctrine which I recommend to you I am just going to exemplify myself.

Verse 15. Henceforth I call you not servants] Which he at least indirectly had done, chap. xiii. 16; Matt. x. 24, 25; Luke xvii. 10.

I have called you friends.] I have admitted you into a state of the most intimate fellowship with myself; and have made known unto you whatsoever I have heard from the Father, which, in your present circumstances, it was necessary for you to be instructed in.

his own: but ^m because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

20 Remember the word that I said unto you, ⁿ The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; ^o if they have kept my saying, they will keep your's also.

21 But ^p all these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they know not him that sent me.

22 * If I had not came and spoken unto them, they had not had sin; ^q but now they have no ^r cloke for their sin.

23 * He that hateth me hateth my Father also.

24 If I had not done among them ^s the works which none other man did, they had not had sin: but now have they both seen and hated both me and my Father.

25 But this cometh to pass, that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, ^t They hated me without a cause.

26 * But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, ^u he shall testify of me:

27 And ^v ye also shall bear witness, because ^w ye have been with me from the beginning.

Verse 16. Ye have not chosen me] It was customary among the Jews for every person to choose his own teacher. And ordained you] Rather, I have appointed you: I have PUT or placed you, i. e., in the vine.

Verse 18. If the world hate you] Dr. Lardner thinks that the adjective should be used substantively, and that this clause of the text should be translated thus: If the world hate you, know that it hated me, your CHIEF.

Verse 19. Ye are not of the world—therefore, &c.] On this very account, because ye do not join in fellowship with those who know not God, therefore they hate you.

Verse 20. If they have kept my saying] Some translate the passage thus: If they have WATCHED my sayings, i. e., with an intent to accuse me for something which I have said, they will WATCH your's also: therefore be on your guard. [But this sense is not admissible.]

Verse 21. Because they know not him that sent me.] This is the foundation of all religious persecution: those who are guilty of it, whether in church or state, know nothing about God.

Verse 22. But now they have no cloke for their sin.] They are without excuse. See the margin, and see the note on chap. ix. 41.

Verse 25. Written in their law] See on chap. x. 34. These words are taken from Ps. lxxix. 4. This Psalm is applied to Christ, chap. ii. 17, xix. 28; to the vengeance of God against Judas, Acts i. 20. The Psalm seems entirely prophetic of Christ.

Verses 26, 27. He shall testify—and ye also shall bear witness] He shall bear his testimony in your souls, and ye shall bear this testimony to the world.

But in what sense can it be said that Christ wrought more miracles than any other had done, ver. 24? Christ's miracles were greater: 1. As to their number. 2. As to their utility—they were wrought to comfort the distressed, and to save the lost. 3. Christ wrought all his miracles by his own power alone; and they wrought theirs through his power only. 4. Christ wrought his numerous miracles in the space of three or four years, and in the presence of the same people; and the others were wrought from time to time in different centuries.

CHAPTER XVI.

Christ warns his disciples, and foretells the persecutions they should receive from the Jews, 1-4. Foretells his death, and promises them the Comforter, 5-7. Points out his operations among the Jews, and in the world, 8-11. His peculiar influences on the souls of the disciples, 12-15. Speaks figuratively of his death and resurrection, at which his disciples are puzzled, 16-18. He explains and illustrates the whole by a similitude, 19-22. Shows himself to be the Mediator between God and man, and that all prayers must be put up in his name, 23-28. The disciples clearly comprehend his meaning and express their strong faith in him, 29, 30. He again foretells their persecution, and promises them his peace and support, 31-33.

THESE things have I spoken unto you, that ye^a should not be offended.

2^b They shall put you out of the synagogues: yea, the time cometh, ^c that whosoever killeth you, will think that he doeth God service.

3 And ^d these things will they do unto you, because they have not known the Father, nor me.

4 But ^e these things have I told you, that when the time shall come, ye may remember that I told you of them. And ^f these things I said not unto you at the beginning, because I was with you.

5 But now ^g I go my way to him that sent me; and none of you asketh me, Whither goest thou?

6 But because I have said these things unto you, ^h sorrow hath filled your heart.

Verse 1. These things have I spoken] Particularly what is mentioned in the two last chapters.

Be offended.] That ye should not be stumbled. May not fall away from the faith, nor receive any injury to your souls, as that man does to his body who stumbles, or falls over a stone, or block in the way, which he has not discovered.

Verse 2. They shall put you out of the synagogues] They will excommunicate you, and consider you as execrable, and utterly unworthy to hold any commerce with God by religion; or with man by civil fellowship.

That whosoever killeth you, &c.] This Paul found, for more than forty Jews bound themselves under a curse that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed him, Acts xiii. 12, 13; and agreeably to this, it is said in the Talmud, "He who sheds the blood of the ungodly, is equal to him who brings an offering to God."

Verse 3. Because they have not known the Father] Ignorance of the benevolence of GOD, and of the philanthropy of CHRIST, is the grand foundation whence all religious persecution and intolerance proceed.

Verse 4. At the beginning] Lest you should be discouraged; and I declare them now only because it is absolutely necessary that you should be put upon your guard.

Verse 5. None of you asketh me, whither goest thou?] In chap. xiii. 36, Peter had asked, Lord, whither goest thou?—and Thomas much the same, in chap. xiv. 5, both of whom had received an answer. But now, at the time when Jesus was speaking this, none of them asked this question, because their hearts were filled with sorrow, ver. 6.

Verse 8. He will reprove] He will demonstrate these matters so clearly as to leave no doubt on the minds of those who are simple of heart; and so fully as to confound and shut the mouths of those who are gainsayers.

The world] The Jewish nation first, and afterwards the Gentile world; for his influence shall not be confined to one people, place, or time.

Verse 9. Of sin] Of the sin of the Jews in not receiving me as the Messiah, though my mission was accredited by the very miracles which the prophets foretold, see Isa. xxxv. 3-6; see Acts ii. 87.

If we take this prediction of our Lord in a more general sense, then we may consider that it is one of the grand offices of the Holy Spirit to convince of sin, to show men what sin is, to demonstrate to them that they are sinners, and to show the necessity of an atonement for sin.

7 Nevertheless I tell you the truth: it is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, ⁱ the Comforter will not come unto you; but ^j if I depart, I will send him unto you.

8 And when he is come, he will ^k reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment:

9 ^l Of sin, because they believe not on me;

10 ^m Of righteousness, ⁿ because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more;

11 ^o Of judgment, because ^p the prince of this world is judged.

12 I have yet many things to say unto you, ^q but ye cannot bear them now.

13 Howbeit when he, ^r the Spirit of truth, is come, ^s he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that

Verse 10. Of righteousness] Of my innocence and holiness, because I go away to my Father; of which my resurrection from the dead, and my ascension to heaven shall be complete proofs. [The term righteousness has here a wider signification. It refers to the possible justification of men, through the atonement of Christ.]

Verse 11. Of judgment] Perhaps our Lord's meaning is, that as a most astonishing judgment, or punishment, was now about to fall upon the Jews, in consequence of their obstinate infidelity, the Holy Ghost, by the ministry of the apostles, should demonstrate that this judgment, severe as it might seem, was amply merited by this worst of all people.

It was one office of the Spirit to convince of a judgment to come; and this he did particularly by the apostles, in declaring that God had appointed a day in which he would judge the world by him whom he had appointed for that purpose, Acts xvii. 31.

One general exposition may be given of these three verses. The Holy Spirit will convince the world of sin committed, and guilt and condemnation thereby incurred. Of righteousness—of the necessity of being pardoned, and made righteous through the blood of the Lamb, who, after being offered up for sin, went to the Father, ever to appear in his presence as our intercessor: and of judgment—of the great day thereof, when none shall be able to stand but those whose sins are pardoned, and whose souls are made righteous.

Verse 12. Ye cannot bear them now.] Yet, in saying what he did, our Lord sowed the seeds of the whole system of theological knowledge, and heavenly wisdom, which the Holy Spirit of this truth afterwards watered and ripened into a glorious harvest of light and salvation, by the ministry of the apostles.

Verse 13. He will guide you] He will consider your feeble infant state; and, as a father leads his child by the hand, so will the Holy Spirit lead and guide you.

Verse 15. All things that the Father hath are mine] If Christ had not been equal to God, could he have said this without blasphemy?

And shew it unto you.] The Holy Spirit is represented as the ambassador of the Son, coming vested with his authority, as the interpreter and executor of his will.

Verse 16. A little while] He had but a few hours to live. And ye shall not see me] I shall be hidden from your view in the grave.

shall he speak : and he will shew you things to come.

14 He shall glorify me : for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

15 * All things that the Father hath are mine : therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shew it unto you.

16 ^b A little while, and ye shall not see me : and again a little while, and ye shall see me, ^c because I go to the Father.

17 Then said some of his disciples among themselves, What is this that he saith unto us, A little while, and ye shall not see me : and again a little while, and ye shall see me : and, Because I go to the Father ?

18 They said therefore, What is this that he saith, A little while ? we cannot tell what he saith.

19 Now Jesus knew that they were desirous to ask him, and said unto them, Do ye inquire among yourselves of that I said, A little while, and ye shall not see me : and again a little while, and ye shall see me ?

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, That ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice : and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.

21 ^d A woman when she is in travail hath sorrow, because her hour is come : but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world.

22 * And ye now therefore have sorrow : but I will see you again, and ^e your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you.

Again a little while] In three days after my death : Ye shall see me] I will rise again, and show myself to you. Or, I will pour out my Spirit upon you, and others through your ministry ; and ye shall see me virtually in the great and wonderful work which shall then take place in the hearts and lives of men.

This may also refer to his coming again to destroy the Jewish state, and also to judge the world ; but how can this latter be said to be in a little while ? Because a thousand years are but as a day in the sight of God, Ps. xc. 4.

Verse 20. Ye shall weep and lament] To see me crucified and laid in the grave.

But the world shall rejoice] The chief priests, scribes, Pharisees, and persecuting Jews in general, will triumph, hoping that their bad cause is crowned with success.

But your sorrow shall be turned into joy.] When ye see me risen from the dead.

Verse 21. For joy that a man is born] A human creature, whether male or female ; as homo among the Romans denoted either man or woman.

Verse 22. Your joy no man taketh from you.] Or, shall take away.—Some excellent MSS. and Versions read the verb in the future tense.

Verse 23. Ye shall ask me nothing.] Ye shall then be led to address your prayers to the Father in my name—in the name of Jesus the Saviour, because I have died to redeem you—in the name of Christ the Anointed, because I have ascended to send down the gift of the Holy Ghost. [This is hardly the sense of the passage. "That day" refers to the fruition of all Christian hope, in the vision of Jesus, when his servants shall not ask for anything, because of the fulness of their joy.]

Verse 24. Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name] Ye have not as yet considered me the great Mediator between God and man ; but this is one of the truths which shall be more fully revealed to you by the Holy Spirit.

Ask] In my name ; and ye shall receive—all the salvation ye thus request ; the consequence of which shall be that 23 And in that day ye shall ask me nothing. * Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you.

24 Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name : ask, and ye shall receive, ^a that your joy may be full.

25 These things have I spoken unto you in ^b proverbs : but the time cometh, when I shall no more speak unto you in ^c proverbs, but I shall shew you plainly of the Father.

26 ^d At that day ye shall ask in my name : and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you :

27 ^e For the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and ^f have believed that I came out from God.

28 ^g I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world : again, I leave the world, and go to the Father.

29 His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no ^h proverb.

30 Now are we sure that ⁱ thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee : by this ^j we believe that thou camest forth from God.

31 Jesus answered them, Do ye now believe ?

32 ^k Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye shall be scattered, ^l every man to ^m his own, and shall leave me alone : and ⁿ yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.

33 These things I have spoken unto you, that ^o in me ye might have peace. ^p In the world ye shall have tribulation : ^q but be of good cheer ; ^r I have overcome the world.

your joy shall be full—ye shall be thoroughly happy in being made completely holy.

Verse 25. In proverbs] That is, I have represented heavenly things to you through the medium of earthly.

The time cometh] Viz., the interval from his resurrection to his ascension, during which he instructed his disciples in the most sublime mysteries and truths of his kingdom. Acts i. 3. [This is too, limited an interpretation.]

Verse 26. I say not unto you that I will pray the Father for you] I need not tell you that I will continue your intercessor : I have given you already so many proofs of my love that ye cannot possibly doubt this : besides, the Father himself needs no entreaty to do you good, for he loves you, and is graciously disposed to save you to the uttermost.

Verse 28. I came forth from the Father, &c.] These four words contain the whole economy of the gospel of man's salvation, and a consummate abridgment of the Christian faith.

Verse 30. Now are we sure that thou knowest all things] We believe that thou art not only the Messiah but that God who searchest the heart and triest the reins, and needest not to be asked in order to make thee acquainted with the necessities of thy creatures ; for thou perfectly knowest their wants, and art infinitely disposed to relieve them.

Verse 31. Do ye now believe ?] And will ye continue to believe ?

Verse 32. The hour cometh] Ye shall shortly have need of all the faith ye profess : ye now believe me to be the Omniscient ; but ye will find difficulty to maintain this faith when ye see me seized, condemned, and crucified as a malefactor.

Verse 33. That in me ye might have peace.] The peace of God is ever to be understood as including all possible blessedness—light, strength, comfort, support, a sense of the divine favour, unction of the Holy Spirit, purification of heart, &c. &c. , and all these to be enjoyed in Christ.

In the world ye shall have tribulation] Or, as most of the very best MSS. read, ye have—the tribulation is at hand ; ye are just about to be plunged into it.

But be of good cheer] Do not despond on account of what I have said: the world shall not be able to overcome you, how severely soever it may try you.

I have overcome the world] I am just now going by my death to put it and its god to the rout.

CHAPTER XVII.

Christ prays the Father to glorify him, 1. In what eternal life consists, 2, 3. Shows that he has glorified his Father, by fulfilling his will upon earth, and revealing him to the disciples, 4-8. Prays for them, that they may be preserved in unity and kept from evil, 9-16. Prays for their sanctification, 17-19. Prays also for those who should believe on him through their preaching, that they all might be brought into a state of unity, and finally brought to eternal glory, 20-26.

THESE words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, 'the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee:

2 ^b As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many ^c as thou hast given him.

3 And ^d this is life eternal, that they might know thee ^e the only true God, and Jesus Christ, ^f whom thou hast sent.

4 ^g I have glorified thee on the earth: ^h I have finished the work ⁱ which thou gavest me to do.

5 And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory ^j which I had with thee before the world was.

6 ^k I have manifested thy name unto the men ^l which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word.

Verse 1. These words spake Jesus] That is, what is related in the preceding chapters. We may consider our Lord as still moving towards Gethsemane, not having yet passed the brook Cedron, chap xviii. 1.

Father] Here our Lord addresses the whole divine nature, as he is now performing his last acts in his state of humiliation.

Glorify thy Son] Cause him to be acknowledged as the promised Messiah by the Jewish people, and as the universal Saviour by the Gentile world; and let such proofs of his Godhead be given as shall serve to convince and instruct mankind.

That thy Son also may glorify thee] That by dying he may magnify thy law and make it honourable, respected among men—show the strictness of thy justice, and the immaculate purity of thy nature.

Verse 2. As thou hast given him power] All flesh, i. e., all the human race, was given unto him, that by one sacrifice of himself he might reconcile them all to God; having by his grace tasted death for every man, Heb. ii. 9.

Verse 3. This is life eternal] The salvation purchased by Christ, and given to them who believe, is called life: 1. Because the life of man was forfeited to divine justice; and the sacrifice of Christ redeemed him from that death to which he was exposed. 2. Because the souls of men were dead in trespasses and sins; and Christ quickens them by his word and Spirit. 3. Because men who are not saved by the grace of Christ do not live, they only exist, no good purpose of life being answered by them. 4. It is called eternal life to show that it reaches beyond the limits of time, and that it necessarily implies—1. the immortality of the soul; 2. the resurrection of the body; and 3. that it is never to end. And indeed no words can more forcibly convey the idea of eternity than these. It is called that eternal life, by way of eminence. There may be an eternal existence without blessedness; but this is that eternal life with which infinite happiness is inseparably connected.

9 I pray for them: ^o I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine.

10 And all mine are thine, and ^p thine are mine: and I am glorified in them.

11 ^q And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, ^r keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, ^s that they may be one, ^t as we are.

The only true God] The way to attain this eternal life is to acknowledge, worship, and obey, the one only true God, and to accept as teacher, sacrifice, and Saviour, the Lord Jesus, the one and only true Messiah.

Verse 4. I have glorified thee] Our Lord, considering himself as already sacrificed for the sin of the world, speaks of having completed the work which God had given him to do; and he looks forward to that time when, through the preaching of his gospel, his sacrifice should be acknowledged, and the true God should be known and worshipped by the whole world.

Verse 5. Before the world was] That is, from eternity, before there was any creation—so the phrase, and others similar to it, are taken in the sacred writings, see ver. 24; Ps. xc. 2; Eph. i. 4. See chap. i. 1.

Verse 6. I have manifested thy name] I have brought it into light, and caused it to shine in itself, and to illuminate others. A little of the Divine Nature was known by the works of creation; a little more was known by the Moses perdition; *that the scripture might be fulfilled.

13 And now come I to thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves.

14 ^b I have given them thy word; * and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, ^a even as I am not of the world.

15 I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but *that thou shouldest keep them from the evil.

16 ^c They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

17 ^d Sanctify them through thy truth: ^e thy word is truth.

18 ^f As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world.

19 And ^g for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be ^h sanctified through the truth.

20 Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word;

21 ⁱ That they all may be one; ^j as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.

22 And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them; *that they may be one, even as we are one:

23 I in them, and thou in me, * that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me.

24 ^k Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me: *for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world.

25 O righteous Father, *the world hath not known thee; but *I have known thee, and *these have known that thou hast sent me.

26 ^l And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it: that the love * wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, and I in them.

revelation; but the full manifestation of God, his nature, and his attributes, came only through the revelation of Christ. The men which thou gavest me] That is, the apostles, who, having received this knowledge from Christ, were, by their preaching and writings, to spread it through the whole world.

Out of the world] From among the Jewish people; for in this sense is the word to be understood in various parts of our Lord's last discourses.

Thine they were] Objects of thy choice; and thou gavest them to me from among this very unbelieving people, that they might be my disciples and the heralds of my salvation.

Verse 8. I have given—them the words] I have delivered thy doctrine to them, so that they have had a pure teaching immediately from heaven.

And have known surely] Are fully convinced and acknowledge that I am the promised Messiah.

Verse 9. I pray not for the world] These words may be understood as applying to the rebellious Jews. God's wrath was about to descend upon them, and Christ prays that his own followers might be kept from the evil, ver. 15. But he does not thus pray for the world, the rebellious Jews, because the cup of their iniquity was full, and their judgment slumbered not.

Verse 10. I am glorified in them] Christ speaks of the things which were not, but which should be, as though they were.

Verse 11. I am no more in the world] They have need of all the influence of my intercession, that they may be preserved in thy truth.

Keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me] The whole passage should be read thus: Holy Father keep them through thy own name WHICH thou hast given me, that they may be one, &c. By the name, here, it is evident that the doctrine or knowledge of the true God is intended; as if our Lord had said, Keep them in that doctrine WHICH thou hast given me, that they may be one, &c. This reading is supported by the most ample evidence and indisputable authority.

That they may be one] The union which Christ recommends here and prays for, is so complete and glorious as to be fitly represented by that union which subsists between the Father and the Son.

Verse 12. I kept them in thy name] In thy doctrine and truth.

But the son of perdition] So we find that Judas, whom all account to have been lost, and whose case at best is extremely dubious, was at first given by God to Christ!

Perdition or destruction is personified; and Judas is represented as being her son, i. e., one of the worst of men—one whose crime appears to have been an attempt to destroy, not only the Saviour of the world, but also the whole human race. And all this he was capable of through the love of money!

That the scripture might be fulfilled] Or, Thus the scripture is fulfilled, see Ps. xli. 9, cix. 8, compared with Acts i. 20.

Verse 14. I have given them thy word] Or, thy doctrine.

And the world hath hated them] How terrible is the perversion of human nature! Men despise that which they should esteem, and endeavour to destroy that without which they must be destroyed themselves!

Verse 15. That thou shouldest take them out of the world] Christ does not desire that his faithful apostles should soon die, and be taken to God. No: but that they may live long, labour long, and bring forth much fruit. He does not intimate that they should seclude themselves from the world by going to the desert, or to the cloisters; but that they should continue in and among the world, that they may have the opportunity of recommending the salvation of God. Christ only prays that while they are in the world, employed in the work of the ministry, they may be preserved from the influence of the evil one, the devil, who had lately entered into Judas, chap. xiii. 27, and who would endeavour to enter into them ruin their souls, and destroy their work. A devil without can do no harm; but a devil within ruins all.

Verse 17. Sanctify them] This word has two meanings:

1. It signifies to consecrate, to separate from earth and common use, and to devote or dedicate to God and his service.
2. It signifies to make holy or pure. The prayer of Christ may be understood in both these senses.

Through thy truth] It is not only according to the truth of God that ministers are to be set apart to the sacred work; but it is from that truth, and according to it, that they must preach to others. That doctrine which is not drawn from the truth of God can never save souls.

Verse 18. As thou hast sent me—so have I also sent them] The apostles had the same commission which Christ had, considered as man—they were endued with the same Spirit, so that they could not err, and their word was accompanied with the same success.

Verse 19. I sanctify myself] I consecrate and devote myself to death—that I may thereby purchase eternal salvation for them. There seems to be here an allusion to the entering of the high-priest into the holy of holies, when, having offered the sacrifice, he sprinkled the blood before the ark of the covenant.

Verse 20. Neither pray I for these alone] This prayer extends itself through all ages, and takes in every soul that believes in the Lord Jesus.

Verse 21. That they all may be one] This prayer was literally answered to the first believers, who were all of one heart and of one soul, Acts iv. 32. And why is it that believers are not in the same spirit now? Because they neither attend to the example nor to the truth of Christ.

Verse 22. And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them] I have communicated to all those who believe, or shall believe in me, the glorious privilege of becoming sons of God; that, being all adopted children of the same Father, they may abide in peace, love, and unity.

Verse 24. That they may behold my glory] That they may enjoy eternal felicity with me in thy kingdom.

Verse 25. The world hath not known thee] Has not acknowledged me.

Verse 26. I have declared unto them thy name, &c.] I have taught them the true doctrine.

And will declare it] This he did: 1st. By the conversations he had with his disciples after his resurrection, during the space of forty days. 2nd. By the Holy Spirit which was poured out upon them on the day of Pentecost.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Jesus passes the brook Cedron, and goes to the garden of Gethsemane, 1. Judas, having betrayed him, comes to the place with a troop of men to take him, 2, 3. Jesus addresses them, and they fall to the ground, 4-6. He addresses them again, and Peter smites Malchus, 7-11. They seize him, and lead him away to Caiaphas, 12-14. Peter follows to the palace of the high-priest, 15-18. The high-priest questions Christ concerning his doctrine, and Jesus answers, and is smitten, 19-23. Peter denies his Lord twice, 24-27. Jesus is led to the Judgment Hall, and Pilate and the Jews converse about him, 28-32. Pilate converses with Jesus, who informs him of the spiritual nature of his kingdom, 33-37. Pilate returns to the Jews, and declares Christ to be innocent, 38. He seeks to discharge him, and the Jews clamour for his condemnation, 39, 40.

WHEN Jesus had spoken these words, ^a he went forth with his disciples over ^b the brook Cedron, where was a garden, into the which he entered, and his disciples.

2 And Judas also, which betrayed him, knew the place: (^c for Jesus oftentimes resorted thither with his disciples.)

3 ^d And Judas then, having received a band of men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns and torches and weapons.

4 Jesus therefore, knowing all things that should come upon him, went forth, and said unto them, Whom seek ye?

5 They answered him, Jesus of Nazareth. Jesus saith unto them, I am he. And Judas also, which betrayed him, stood with them.

6 As soon then as he had said unto them, I am he, they went backward, and fell to the ground.

7 Then asked he them again, Whom seek ye? And they said, Jesus of Nazareth.

8 Jesus answered, I have told you that I am he, if therefore ye seek me, let these go their way:

9 That the saying might be fulfilled, which he spake, ^e Of them which thou gavest me, have I lost none.

10 ^f Then Simon Peter having a sword drew it, and smote the high-priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Malchus.

^a Matt. xxvi. 38. Mark xiv. 32. Luke xxii. 39.—^b 2 Sam. xv. 23.—^c Luke xxi. 37. xxii. 39.—^d Matt. xxvi. 47. Mark xiv.

43. Luke xxii. 47. Acts i. 16.—^e Ch. xvii. 12.—^f Matt. xxvi. 51. Mark xiv. 47. Luke xxii. 49, 50.

Verse 1. Over the brook Cedron] Having finished the prayer related in the preceding chapter, our Lord went straight to the garden of Gethsemane, which was in the mount of Olives, eastward of Jerusalem. This mount was separated from the city by a very narrow valley, through the midst of which the brook Cedron ran. Cedron is a very small rivulet, about six or seven feet broad, nor is it constantly supplied with water, being dry all the year, except during the rains. It had its name probably from Kadar, he was black; it being the place into which the blood of the sacrifices, and other filth of the city, ran. It was rather, says Lightfoot, the sink, or the common sewer, of the city, than a brook.

A garden] Gethsemane, see on Matt. xxvi. 36.

Verse 2. Judas—knew the place] As many had come from different quarters to celebrate the passover at Jerusalem, it could not be an easy matter to find lodging in the city: Jesus therefore chose to pass the night in the garden with his disciples, which, from this verse, and from Luke xxii. 39, we find was his frequent custom, though he often lodged in Bethany.

Verse 3. A band] The band, or troop. This band was probably those Roman soldiers given by the governor for the defence of the temple; and the officers were those who belonged to the Sanhedrin.

With lanterns and torches] With these they had intended to search the corners and caverns, provided Christ had hidden himself; for they could not have needed them for any other purpose, it being now the fourteenth day of the moon's age, in the month Nisan, and consequently she appeared full and bright.

Verse 5. Jesus of Nazareth.] They did not say this till after Judas kissed Christ, which was the sign which he had agreed with the soldiers, &c., to give them, that they might know whom they were to seize, see Matt. xxvi. 48.

Verse 6. They went backward, and fell to the ground.] Our Lord chose to give them this proof of his infinite power, that they might know that their power could not prevail against him if he chose to exert his might, seeing that the very breath of his mouth confounded, drove back, and struck them down to the earth.

Verse 8. Let these go their way] These words are rather words of authority, than words of entreaty. I voluntarily give myself up to you, but you must not molest one of these my disciples. At your peril injure them. It was certainly the supreme power of Christ that kept the soldiers and the mob from destroying all the disciples present, when Peter had given them such provocation, in cutting off the ear of Malchus. There were probably no other disciples with Christ than Peter, James, and John, at this time, see Matt. xxvi. 87, Mark xiii. 83.

Verse 10. Cut off his right ear.] He probably designed to have cloven his scull in two, but God turned it aside.

The other three Evangelists mention this transaction; but neither gives the name of Peter nor of Malchus, probably be-11 Then said Jesus unto Peter, Put up thy sword into the sheath: ^athe cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?

12 Then the band and the captain and officers of the Jews took Jesus, and bound him,

13 And ^bled him away to ^cAnnas first; for he was father-in-law to Caiaphas, which was the high-priest that same year.^d

14 ^eNow Caiaphas was he, which gave counsel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die for the people.

15 ^fAnd Simon Peter followed Jesus, and so did another disciple: that disciple was known unto the high-priest, and went in with Jesus into the palace of the high-priest.

16 ^gBut Peter stood at the door without. Then went out that other disciple, which was known unto the high-priest, and spake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

17 Then saith the damsel that kept the door unto Peter, Art not thou also one of this man's disciples? He saith, I am not.

18 And the servants and officers stood there, who had made a fire of coals; for it was cold: and they warmed themselves: and Peter stood with them, and warmed himself.

cause both persons were alive when they wrote; but it is likely both had been long dead before St. John published his history.

Verse 11. The cup which my Father hath given me] The cup signifies sometimes the lot of life, whether prosperous or adverse: here it signifies the final sufferings of Christ.

Verse 12. The captain] The chiliarch, or chief over one thousand men—answering nearly to a colonel with us. He was probably the prefect or captain of the temple-guard.

Verse 13. To Annas] This man must have had great authority in his nation: 1. Because he had been a long time high-priest; 2. Because he had no less than five sons who successively enjoyed the dignity of the high-priesthood; and, 3. Because his son-in-law Caiaphas was at this time in possession of that office.

That same year.] The office was now no longer during life as formerly.

Verse 14. Caiaphas was he which gave counsel, &c.] Therefore he was an improper person to sit in judgment on Christ, whom he had prejudged and precondemned, see on chap. xi. 50-52.

Verse 15. And—another disciple] There are many conjectures who this disciple was: many of the fathers say it was John. It is true John frequently mentions himself in the third person; but then he has always, whom Jesus loved, as in chap. xiii. 23, xix. 26, xxi. 7, 20, except in chap. xix. 35, where he has plainly pointed out himself as writer of this gospel; but, in the place before us, he has mentioned no circumstance by which that disciple may be known to be John. To this may be added, that John being not only a Galilean, but a fisherman by trade, it is not likely that he should have been known to the high-priest, as it is here said of that disciple who followed Jesus with Peter. St. Augustine, Tract. 118, speaks like a man of sound sense: We should not decide hastily, says he, on a subject concerning which the scripture is silent.

Verse 17. The damsel that kept the door] It is worthy of remark that women, especially old women, were employed by the ancients as porters.

Verse 18. Servants and officers] These belonged to the chief priests, &c.; the Roman soldiers had probably been dismissed after having conducted Christ to Annas.

Verse 19. Asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.] As religion was interested in these things, the high-priest was considered as being the proper judge. But all this, with what follows, was transacted by night, and this was contrary to established laws. For the Talmud enjoins that criminal processes should neither commence nor terminate, but during 19 The high-priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.

20 Jesus answered him ^aI spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing.

21 Why askest thou me? ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said.

22 And when he had thus spoken, one of the officers which stood by ^bstruck Jesus ^cwith the palm of his hand, saying, Answerest thou the high-priest so?

23 Jesus answered him, If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil: but if well, why smitest thou me?

24 ^dNow Annas had sent him bound unto Caiaphas the high-priest.)

25 And Simon Peter stood and warmed himself. ^eThey said therefore unto him, Art not thou also one of his disciples? He denied it, and said, I am not.

26 One of the servants of the high-priest, being his kinsman whose ear Peter cut off, saith, Did not I see thee in the garden with him?

27 Peter then denied again: and ^fimmediately the cock crew.

xxvi. 55. Luke lv. 15. Ch. vii. 14, 26, 28. viii. 2.—Jer. xx. 2. Acts xxiii. 2.—Or, with a rod.—^b Matt. xxvi. 57.—^c Matt. xxvi. 69, 71. Mark xiv. 69. Luke xxii. 58.—^d Matt. xxvi. 74. Mark xiv. 72. Luke xxii. 60. Ch. xiii. 38.

the course of the day; and that no kind of judgment should be executed, either on the eve of the sabbath, or the eve of any festival. Nevertheless, to the lasting infamy of this people, Christ was judicially interrogated and condemned during the night; and on the night too of the passover, or, according to others, on the eve of the feast.

Verse 20. I spake openly to the world] This is another proof that St. John uses the term world to mean the Jewish people only; for it is certain our Lord did not preach to the Gentiles.

Verse 22. One of the officers—struck Jesus] This was an outrage to all justice: for a prisoner, before he is condemned, is ever considered to be under the especial protection of justice; nor has any one a right to touch him, but according to the direction of the law.

Verse 24. Now Annas had sent him, &c.] This should be read in parenthesis, and considered as a recapitulation of what had been before done.

Verse 27. And—the cock crew.] Concerning the nature and progress of Peter's denial, see the notes on Matt. xxvi. 58, 69-75.

Verse 28. The hall of judgment] To the prætorium. This was the house where Pilate lodged; hence called in our margin, Pilate's house. The prætorium is so called from being the dwelling-place of the prætor, or chief of the province. It was also the place where he held his court and tried causes.

Lest they should be defiled] The Jews considered even the touch of a Gentile as a legal defilement; and therefore would not venture into the prætorium, for fear of contracting some impurity, which would have obliged them to separate themselves from all religious ordinances till the evening, Lev. xv. 10, 11, 19, 20.

That they might eat the passover.] That Jesus ate a passover this last year of his life is sufficiently evident from Matt. xxvi. 17-19; Mark xiv. 12-18; Luke xxii. 8-15; and that he ate this passover some hours before the ordinary time, and was himself slain at that hour in which the paschal lamb was ordered by the law to be sacrificed, is highly probable, if not absolutely certain.

Verse 29. Pilate then went out] He went out to them, that they might not be obliged to come into the hall, and thus run the risk of being defiled.

Verse 30. If he were not a malefactor] So they did not wish to make Pilate the judge, but the executor of the sentence which they had already illegally passed.

Verse 31. It is not lawful for us to put any man to death] They might have judged Jesus according to their law, as Pilate bade them do; but they could only secommunicate or 28 *Then led they Jesus from Caiaphas unto the hall of judgment: and it was early: and they themselves went not into the judgment hall, lest they should be defiled; but that they might eat the passover.

29 Pilate then went out unto them, and said, What accusation bring ye against this man?

30 They answered and said unto him, If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up unto thee.

31 Then said Pilate unto them, Take ye him, and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore said unto him, It is not lawful for us to put any man to death:

32 *That the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled, which he spake, signifying what death he should die.

33 *Then Pilate entered into the judgment hall again, and called Jesus, and said unto him, Art thou the King of the Jews?

34 Jesus answered him, Sayest thou this thing of thyself, or did others tell it thee of me?

35 Pilate answered, Am I a Jew? Thine own nation and the chief priests have delivered thee unto me: what hast thou done?

36 *Jesus answered, *My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence.

37 Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice.

38 Pilate saith unto him, What is truth? And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, I find in him no fault at all.

39 *But ye have a custom, that I should release unto you one at the passover, will ye therefore that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

40 *Then cried they all again, saying, Not this man, but Barabbas. *Now Barabbas was a robber.

Verse 35. Am I a Jew?] That is, I am not a Jew, and cannot judge whether thou art what is called the Christ, the king of the Jews.

Verse 36. My kingdom is not of this world] It is purely spiritual and divine. If it had been of a secular nature, then my servants would have contended—they would have opposed force with force, as the kingdoms of this world do in their wars; but, as my kingdom is not of this world, therefore no resistance has been made.

Verse 37. Thou sayest] A common form of expression for, yee, it is so.

Verse 38. What is truth?] Pilate perhaps might have asked the question in a mocking way; and his not staying to get an answer indicated that he either despaired of getting a satisfactory one, or that he was indifferent about it.

Verse 39. But ye have a custom] Nothing relative to the origin or reason of this custom is known. Commentators have swam in an ocean of conjecture on this point. They have lost their labour, and made nothing out.

Verse 40. Barabbas was a robber.] See Matt. xxvii. 16. The later Syriac has in the margin, a chief robber, a captain of banditti, and it is probable that this was the case.

CHAPTER XIX.

Jesus is scourged, crowned with thorns, and mocked by the soldiers, 1-3. He is brought forth by Pilate, wearing the purple robe; and the Jews clamour for his death, 4-8. Conversation between our Lord and Pilate, 9-11. Pilate expostulates with the Jews on their barbarous demands; but they become more inveterate, and he delivers Christ into their hands, 12-16. He, bearing his cross, is led to Golgotha, and crucified, 17-22. The soldiers cast lots for his raiment, 23, 24. Jesus commends his mother to the care of John, 25-27. Jesus thirsts, receives vinegar, and dies, 28-30. The Jews request that the legs of those who were crucified might be broken; the soldiers break those of the two thieves, and pierce the side of Christ; the scriptures fulfilled in these acts, 31-37. Joseph of Arimathea begs the body of Christ; and Nicodemus brings spices to embalm it, 38-40. He is laid in a new sepulchre, 41, 42.

THEN ^a Pilate therefore took Jesus and scourged him.

2 And the soldiers platted a crown of thorns, and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple robe,

3 And said, Hail, King of the Jews! and they smote him with their hands.

4 Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, ^b that ye may know that I find no fault in him.

5 Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man!

6 ^c When the chief priests therefore and officers saw him, they cried out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Take ye him, and crucify him: for I find no fault in him.

7 The Jews answered him, ^d We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, because ^e he made himself the Son of God.

8 When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he was the more afraid;

9 And went again into the judgment hall, and saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou? ^f But Jesus gave him no answer.

10 Then saith Pilate unto him, Speakest thou not unto me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?

11 Jesus answered, ^g Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above: therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin.

12 And from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him: but the Jews cried out, saying, ^h If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend: ⁱ whosoever maketh himself a king, speaketh against Cæsar.

13 When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth, and sat down in the judgment seat in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, Gabbatha.

14 And ^j it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour: and he saith unto the Jews, Behold your King!

15 But they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your King? The chief priests answered, ^k We have no king but Cæsar.

16 ^l Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jesus, and led him away.

17 ^m And he bearing his cross, ⁿ went forth into a place called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew Golgotha:

18 Where they crucified him, and two other with him, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst.

19 ^o And Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS.

[Verse 1. Pilate—took Jesus, and scourged him.] That is, caused him to be scourged: for we cannot with Bede suppose that he scourged him with his own hand. Though it was customary to scourge the person who was to be crucified, yet it appears that Pilate had another end in view by scourging our Lord. He hoped that this would have satisfied the Jews, and that he might then have dismissed Jesus. This appears from Luke xxiii. 16.

[Verse 5. Behold the man!] The man who, according to you, affects the government, and threatens to take away the empire from the Romans. Behold the man whom ye have brought unto me as an enemy to Cæsar, and as a sower of the seeds of sedition in the land! In him I find no guilt; and from him ye have no occasion to fear any evil.

[Verse 7. We have a law!] In Lev. xxiv. 14-16, we find that blasphemers of God were to be put to death; and the chief priests having charged Jesus with blasphemy, they therefore voted that he deserved to die. They might refer also to the law against false prophets, Dent. xviii. 20.

[The Son of God.] When Christ called himself the Son of God, they understood it to imply positive equality to the Supreme Being; and, if they were wrong, our Lord never attempted to correct them.

[Verse 8. He was the more afraid.] While Jesus was accused only as a disturber of the peace of the nation, which accusation Pilate knew to be false, he knew he could deliver him, because the judgment in that case belonged to himself; but when the Jews brought a charge against him of the most capital nature, from their own laws, he then saw that he had everything to fear, if he did not deliver Jesus to their will. Pilate was certainly to be pitied: he saw what was right, and he wished to do it; but he had not sufficient firmness of mind.

[Verse 9. Whence art thou?] This certainly does not mean, From what country art thou? for Pilate knew this well enough; but it appears he made this inquiry to know who were the parents of Christ; what were his pretensions, and whether he really were a demigod, such as the heathens believed in.

[Verse 11. Hath the greater sin.] Thy ignorance in some measure excuses thee; but the rage and malice of the Jews put them at present out of the reach of mercy.

[Verse 12. Pilate sought to release him.] Pilate made five several attempts to release our Lord; as we may learn from Luke xxiii. 4, 15, 20, 22; John xix. 4, 12, 13.

[Thou art not Cæsar's friend!] This insinuation determined Pilate to make no longer resistance: he was afraid of being accused, and he knew Tiberius was one of the most jealous and distrustful princes in the world.

[Verse 13. The Pavement.] Probably it was that place in the open court where the chair of justice was set, for the prefects of provinces always held their courts of justice in the open air, and which was paved with stones of various colours.

[Gabbatha.] That is, an elevated place; from gabah, high, raised up; and it is very likely that the judgment seat was considerably elevated in the court, and that the governor went up to it by steps; and perhaps these very steps were what was called the Pavement.

[Verse 14. It was the preparation of the passover.] That is, the time in which they were just preparing to kill the paschal lamb.

[The sixth hour.] Mark says, chap. xv. 25, that it was the third hour. The major part of the best critics think that the third is the genuine reading. [The difficulty is probably owing to a mistake as to one of the Greek numerals.]

[Behold your king!] This was probably intended as an irony; and, by thus turning their pretended serious apprehensions into ridicule, he hoped still to release him.

[Verse 15. Away with him!] Probably this means, kill him.

[Verse 16. Then delivered he him.] This was not till after he had washed his hands, Matt. xxvii. 24, to show, by that symbolical action, that he was innocent of the death of Christ.

[Verse 17. Bearing his cross.] He bore it all alone first; when he could no longer carry the whole through weakness, occasioned by the ill usage he had received, Simon, a Cyrenian, helped him to carry it: see the note on Matt. xxvii. 32.

[Verse 18. Two other.] Matthew and Mark in the parallel place call them robbers or murderers; they probably belonged to the gang of Barabbas.

[Verse 22. What I have written, I have written.] That is, I will not alter what I have written. The Roman laws forbade the sentence to be altered when once pronounced; and as this inscription was considered as the sentence pronounced against our Lord, therefore it could not be changed:

20 This title then read many of the Jews: for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city: and it was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin.

21 Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews; but that he said, I am King of the Jews.

22 Pilate answered, What I have written, I have written.

23 * Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also his coat: now the coat was without seam, ^b woven from the top throughout.

24 They said therefore among themselves, Let us not rend it, but cast lots for it, whose it shall be: that the scripture might be fulfilled, which saith, ^c They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots. These things therefore the soldiers did.

25 * Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of * Cleophas, ^d and Mary Magdalene.

* Matt. xxvii. 35. Mark xv. 24. Luke xxiii. 31.—^b Or, wrought.—^c Ps. xlii. 18.—^d Matt. xxvii. 55. Mark xv. 40. Luke xxii. 49.—^e Or, Cleopas.—^f Luke xiv. 18.—^g Ch. xiii. 23. xx. 2. xxi. 7, 20, 24.

but this form of speech is common in the Jewish writings, and means simply, what is done shall continue.

Verse 23. To every soldier a part] So it appears that there were four soldiers employed in nailing him to and rearing up the cross.

The coat was without seam] Several have seriously doubted whether this can be literally understood, as they imagine that nothing with sleeves, &c., can be woven without a seam. The clothes of a Hindoo are always without a seam; and the Brahmins would not wear clothes that were otherwise made.

Our Lord was now in the grand office of high-priest, and was about to offer the expiatory victim for the sin of the world. And it is worthy of remark that the very dress he wore was similar to that of the Jewish high-priest.

Verse 24. That the scripture might be fulfilled] The words are taken from Ps. xxii. 18, where it appears they were spoken prophetically of this treatment which Jesus received, upwards of a thousand years before it took place!

But it should be remarked that this form of speech, which frequently occurs, often means no more than that the thing so fell out that such a portion of scripture may be exactly applied to it.

Verse 25. Mary the wife of Cleophas] She is said, in Matt. xxvii. 56 (see the note there), and Mark xv. 40, to have been the mother of James the Less, and of Josès; and this James her son is said, in Matt. x. 3, to have been the son of Alphaeus; hence it seems that Alphaeus and Cleophas were the same person.

Verse 26. The disciple—whom he loved] John, the writer of this Gospel.

Woman, behold thy son!] This remarkable expression conveys no idea of disrespect, nor of unconcern, as has been commonly supposed. In the way of compellation, man! and woman! were titles of as much respect among the Hebrews, as sir! and madam! are among us. But why does not Jesus call her mother? Probably because he wished to spare her feelings; he would not mention a name, the very sound of which must have wrung her heart with additional sorrow. It is probable that it was because the keeping of the blessed virgin was entrusted to John, that he was the only disciple of our Lord who died a natural death, God having preserved him for the sake of the person whom he gave him in charge. It is very likely that Joseph was dead previously to this; and that this was the reason why the desolate virgin is committed to the care of the beloved disciple.

Verse 28. I thirst.] The scripture that referred to his drinking the vinegar is Ps. lxxix. 21.

Verse 29. A vessel full of vinegar] This was probably that tart small wine which we are assured was the common drink of the Roman soldiers. This vinegar must not be confounded with the vinegar and gall mentioned Matt. xxvii.

26 When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and * the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, ^b Woman, behold thy son!

27 Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her ^c unto his own home.

28 After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, ^d that the scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst.

29 Now there was set a vessel full of vinegar: and ^e they filled a sponge with vinegar, and put it upon hyssop, and put it to his mouth.

30 When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, ^f It is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost.

31 The Jews therefore ^g because it was the preparation, ^h that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath day, (ⁱ for that sabbath day was an high day,) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away.

32 Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with him.

—^a Ch. ii. 4.—Ch. i. 11. xvi. 32.—^b Ps. lxxix. 21.—^c Matt. xxvii. 48.—^d Ch. xvii. 4.—^e Ver. 42. Mark xv. 42.—^f Deut. xxi. 23.—^g Lev. xxiii. 11, 15. Num. xxviii. 17, 18. Isa. i. 13, 15.

34, and Mark xv. 23. That, being a stupifying potion, intended to alleviate his pain, he refused to drink; but of this he took a little, and then expired, ver. 30.

And put it upon hyssop] Or, according to others, putting hyssop about it. It is possible that the hyssop might grow to such a size in Judea as that a stalk of it might answer the end of a reed or cane, as mentioned by Matthew and Mark; but still it appears to me more natural to suppose that the reed was a distinct thing, and that the hyssop was used only to bind the sponge fast to the reed; unless we may suppose it was added for some mystical purpose, as we find it frequently used in the Old Testament in rites of purification. [The stalk of the hyssop was quite long enough for the purpose supposed.]

Verse 30. It is finished] An awful, yet a glorious finish. Through this tragical death God is reconciled to man, and the kingdom of heaven opened to every believing soul.

Verse 31. It was the preparation] Every sabbath had a preparation which began at the ninth hour (that is, three o'clock) the preceding evening.

That the bodies should not remain] For the law, Deut. xxi. 22, 23, ordered that the bodies of criminals should not hang all night; and they did not wish to have the sabbath profaned by either taking them down on that day, or letting them hang to disturb the joy of that holy time. Probably their consciences began to sting them for what they had done, and they wished to remove the victim of their malice out of their sight.

For that sabbath day was an high day] 1. Because it was the sabbath. 2. Because it was the day on which all the people presented themselves in the temple according to the command, Exod. xxiii. 17. 3. Because that was the day on which the sheaf of the first-fruits was offered, according to the command, Lev. xxiii. 10, 11. So that upon this day there happened to be three solemnities in one.

Their legs might be broken] It was a common custom to break the legs or other bones of criminals upon the cross; and this appears to have been a kind of coup de grace, the sooner to put them out of pain.

Verse 34. With a spear pierced his side] Whether it was the right or the left side of Christ that was pierced has been a matter of serious discussion among divines and physicians; and on this subject they are not yet agreed. That it is of no importance we are sure, because the Holy Ghost has not revealed it.

Blood and water.] It may be naturally supposed that the spear went through the pericardium and pierced the heart; that the water proceeded from the former, and the blood from the latter.

Verse 35. He that saw it] Most probably John himself, who must have been pretty near the cross to have been able 33 But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs :

34 But one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came thereout blood and water.

35 And he that saw it bare record, and his record is true : and he knoweth that he saith true, that ye might believe.

36 For these things were done, ^b that the scripture should be fulfilled, A bone of him shall not be broken.

37 And again another scripture saith, ^c They shall look on him whom they pierced.

38 ^a And after this, Joseph of Arimathea, being a disciple of Jesus, but secretly ^a for fear of the Jews, besought Pilate that he might take away the body to distinguish between the blood and the water, as they issued from the side of our blessed Lord.

And he knoweth] This appears to be an appeal to the Lord Jesus, for the truth of the testimony which he had now delivered. But why such a solemn appeal, unless there was something miraculous in this matter? It might appear to him necessary : 1. Because the other Evangelists had not noticed it. 2. Because it contained the most decisive proof of the death of Christ : as a wound such as this was could not have been inflicted (though other causes had been wanting) without occasioning the death of the person. And, 3. Because two important prophecies were fulfilled by this very circumstance, both of which designated more particularly the person of the Messiah, Exod. xii. 46 ; Num. ix. 12 ; Ps. xxxiv. 20 ; they pierced, Zech. xii. 10 ; Ps. xxii. 16.

Verse 39. Myrrh and aloes] Which drugs were used to preserve bodies from putrefaction.

of Jesus : and Pilate gave him leave. He came therefore, and took the body of Jesus.

39 And there came also ' Nicodemus, which at the first came to Jesus by night, and brought a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about a hundred pound weight.

40 Then took they the body of Jesus, and ^a wound it in linen clothes with the spices, as the manner of the Jews is to bury.

41 Now in the place where he was crucified there was a garden ; and in the garden a new sepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid.

42 ^b There laid they Jesus therefore, ¹ because of the Jews' preparation day ; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand :

— ^a Matt. xxvii. 57. Mark xv. 42. Luke xxiii. 50. — ^b Ch. ix. 22. xii. 42. — ¹ Ch. iii. 1, 2. vii. 50. — ^s Acts v. 6. — ^h Isa. liii. 9. — ¹ Ver. 31.

Some have objected that a hundred pounds' weight of myrrh and aloes was enough to embalm two hundred dead bodies. But great quantities of spices were used for embalming dead bodies, when they intended to show peculiar marks of respect to the deceased.

Verse 41. There was a garden] It was an ancient custom for particular families to have burying-places in their gardens.

Verse 42. Because of the Jews' preparation] From this it may be conjectured that they had designed to have put him in a more magnificent tomb ; or, that they intended to make one expressly for him after the passover ; or, that they had designed to have put him somewhere else, but could not do it for want of time ; and that they put him here because the tomb was nigh.

CHAPTER XX.

Mary Magdalene, coming early to the sepulchre, finds it empty, and runs and tells Peter. 1, 2. Peter and John run to the tomb, and find all as Mary had reported, 3-10. Mary sees a vision of angels in the tomb, 11-13. Jesus himself appears to her, and sends her with a message to the disciples, 14-18. He appears to the disciples, gives the fullest proof of the reality of his resurrection, and communicates to them a measure of the Holy Spirit, 19-23. The determined incredulity of Thomas, 24, 25. Eight days after, Jesus appears again to the disciples, Thomas being present, to whom he gives the proofs he had desired, 26, 27. Thomas is convinced, and makes a noble confession, 28. Our Lord's reflections on his case, 29. Various signs done by Christ, not circumstantially related, 30. Why others are recorded, 31.

THE ^a first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

2 Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the ^b other disciple whom Jesus loved, and ^a Matt. xxviii. 1. Mark xvi. 1. Luke xxiv. 1.

Verse 1. The first day of the week] On what we call Sunday morning, the morning after the Jewish sabbath. As Christ had been buried in haste, these holy women had bought aromatics, Mark xvi. 1 ; Luke xxiv. 1, to embalm him afresh, and in a more complete manner than it could have been done by Joseph and Nicodemus. John only mentions Mary of Magdala, because he appears to wish to give a more detailed history of her conduct than of any of the rest ; but the other Evangelists speak of three persons who went saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3 ^c Peter therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.

4 So they ran both together : and the other dis-together to the tomb, viz., Mary of Magdala, Mary the mother of James, and Salome, Matt. xxviii. 1 ; Mark xvi. 1.

Verse 2. Then she runneth] This was after the women had seen the angels, who said he was risen from the dead, Luke xxiv. 4.

Verse 4. Outrun Peter] Not because he had a greater desire to see into the truth of these things ; but because he was younger, and lighter of foot.

Verse 5. Went he not in.] Why ? Because he was fully ciple did outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5 And he stooping down, and looking in, saw ^a the linen clothes lying; yet went he not in.

6 Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie,

7 And ^b the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

8 Then went in also that other disciple, which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed.

9 For as yet they knew not the ^c scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

10 Then the disciples went away again unto their own home.

11 ^d But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre, 12 And seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.

13 And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14 ^e And when she had thus said, she turned satisfied that the body was not there. But why did he not seize upon the linen clothes, and keep them as a most precious relic? Because he had too much religion and too much sense; and the time of superstition and nonsense was not yet arrived, in which, bits of rotten wood, rags of rotten cloth, decayed bones (to whom originally belonging no one knows), and bramble bushes, should become objects of religious adoration.

Verse 7. Wrapped together in a place by itself.] If the body had been stolen away, those who took it would not have stopped to strip the clothes from it, and to wrap them up, and lay them by in separate places.

Verse 8. That other disciple] John. And believed.] That it had been taken away, as Mary had said; but he did not believe that he was risen from the dead.

Verse 9. They knew not the scripture] Viz. Ps. xvi. 9, 10. It was certainly a reproach to the disciples that they had not understood this prophecy, when our Lord had given them often the most direct information concerning it. However, this ingenuous confession of John, in a matter so dishonourable to himself, is a full proof of his sincerity, and of the truth of his narration.

Verse 10. Unto their own home.] Either to their own houses, if they still had any; or to those of their friends, or to those where they had a hired lodging, and where they met together for religious purposes.

Verse 11. But Mary stood without] She remained some time after Peter and John had returned to their own homes.

Verse 12. Seeth two angels] She knew these to be angels by their white and glistering robes. Matthew and Mark mention but one angel—probably that one only that spoke, ver. 13.

One at the head, and the other at the feet] So were the cherubim placed at each end of the mercy-seat, Exod. xxv. 18, 19.

Verse 13. They have taken away my Lord] This removal she probably attributed to some of our Lord's disciples, or to some of his friends.

Verse 14. Knew not that it was Jesus] Mary was so absorbed in grief that she paid but little attention to the person of our Lord, and therefore did not at first discern it to be him; nor could she imagine such an appearance possible, as she had no conception of his resurrection from the dead. She was therefore every way unprepared to recognise the person of our Lord.

Verse 15. Supposing him to be the gardener] The person herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and 'knew not that it was Jesus.

15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.

17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to ^a my brethren, and say unto them, ^b I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to ^c my God, and your God.

18 ^d Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

19 ^e Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

20 And when he had so said, he shewed unto them his hands and his side. ^f Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord.

21 Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto who had the charge of the workmen, and the care of the produce of the garden; and who rendered account to the owner.

And I will take him away.] How true is the proverb, Love feels no load! Jesus was in the prime of life when he was crucified, and had a hundred pounds' weight of spices added to his body; and yet Mary thinks of nothing less than carrying him away with her, if she can but find where he is laid!

Verse 16. Mary.] This word was no doubt spoken with uncommon emphasis; and the usual sound of Christ's voice accompanied it, so as immediately to prove that it must be Jesus. What transports of joy must have filled this woman's heart! Let it be remarked that Mary Magdalene sought Jesus more fervently, and continued more affectionately attached to him, than any of the rest; therefore to her first Jesus is pleased to show himself, and she is made the first herald of the gospel of a risen Saviour.

Verse 17. Touch me not] Cling not to me. From Matt. xxviii. 9, it appears that some of the women held him by the feet, and worshipped him.

Verse 18. Told the disciples—that he had spoken these things] They seem to have considered it as an effect of her troubled imagination.

Verse 19. The doors were shut—for fear of the Jews] We do not find that the Jews designed to molest the disciples; but, as they had proceeded so far as to put Christ to death, the faith of the disciples not being very strong, they were led to think that they should be the next victims if found. It is quite possible that no miraculous influence is here intended. The doors might be shut for fear of the Jews; and Jesus might open them, and enter in the ordinary way.

Peace be unto you.] His usual salutation and benediction. May every blessing of heaven and earth which you need be granted unto you!

Verse 20. He shewed unto them his hands and his side.] So it appears that his body bore the marks of the nails and the spear; and these marks were preserved that the disciples might be the more fully convinced of the reality of his resurrection.

Verse 21. Even so send I you.] As I was sent to proclaim the truth of the Most High, and to convert sinners to God, I send you for the very same purpose, clothed with the very same authority, and influenced by the very same Spirit.

Verse 22. He breathed on them] In this breathing he evidently alluded to the first creation of man, when God breathed into him the breath of life, and he became a living you: 'as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.

22 And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost:

23 ^b Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained.

24 But Thomas, one of the twelve, ^c called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came.

25 The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, ^d and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.

26 And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, soul: the breath or Spirit of God being the grand principle and cause of his spiritual and divine life.

Receive ye the Holy Ghost] From this act of our Lord, the influences of the Holy Spirit on the souls of men have been termed inspiration; from in, into, and spiro, I breathe. Every word of Christ which is received in the heart by faith comes accompanied by this divine breathing; and, without this, there is neither light nor life. To every private Christian this is essentially requisite; and no man ever did or ever can preach the gospel of God, so as to convince and convert sinners, without it.

Verse 23. Whose soever sins ye remit] It is certain God alone can forgive sins; and it would not only be blasphemous, but grossly absurd, to say that any creature could remit the guilt of a transgression which had been committed against the Creator. The apostles received from the Lord the doctrine of reconciliation, and the doctrine of condemnation. They who believed on the Son of God, in consequence of their preaching, had their sins remitted; and they who would not believe were declared to lie under condemnation.

Verse 24. Was not with them] And, by absenting himself from the company of the disciples, he lost this precious opportunity of seeing and hearing Christ; and of receiving (at this time) the inestimable blessing of the Holy Ghost.

Verse 26. After eight days] It seems likely that this was precisely on that day *se'n*ight, on which Christ had appeared to them before: and from this we may learn that this was the weekly meeting of the apostles; and, though Thomas was not found at the former meeting, he was determined not to be absent from this.

Verse 27. Then saith he to Thomas] Through his infinite compassion, he addressed him in a particular manner; condescending in this case to accommodate himself to the the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you.

27 Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and ^e reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing.

28 And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God.

29 Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: 'blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

30 ^a And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book:

31 ^b But these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; ^c and that believing ye might have life through his name.

34.—^a Luke xxiv. 39. 1 John i. 1.—^b 2 Cor. v. 7. 1 Pet. i. 8.—

prejudices of an obstinate, though sincere, disciple. Reach hither thy finger, &c.] And it is very probable that Thomas did so; for his unbelief was too deeply rooted to be easily cured.

Verse 28. Thomas answered, &c.] Thomas was the first who gave the title of God to Jesus; and, by this glorious confession, made some amends for his former obstinate incredulity. It is worthy of remark, that from this time forward the whole of the disciples treated our Lord with the most supreme respect, never using the familiarity towards him which they had often used before. The resurrection from the dead gave them the fullest proof of the divinity of Christ. And this, indeed, is the use which St. John makes of this manifestation of Christ. I would ask, could Jesus be jealous of the honour of the true God—could he be a prophet—could he be even an honest man, to permit his disciple to indulge in a mistake so monstrous and destructive, if it had been one?

Verse 29. Blessed are they, &c.] From this we learn that to believe in Jesus, on the testimony of his apostles, will put a man into the possession of the very same blessedness which they themselves enjoyed. And so has God constituted the whole economy of grace that a believer, at eighteen hundred years' distance from the time of the resurrection, suffers no loss because he has not seen Christ in the flesh.

Verse 30. Many other signs truly did Jesus, &c.] The other miracles which our Lord did, and which are not related here, were such as were necessary to the disciples only, and therefore not revealed to mankind at large.

Verse 31. That ye might believe] What is here recorded is to give a full proof of the divinity of Christ; that he is the promised Messiah; that he really suffered, and rose again from the dead; and that through him every believer might have eternal life.

CHAPTER XXI.

Jesus shows himself to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias, 1-5. The miraculous draught of fishes, 6-11. He dines with his disciples, 12-14. Questions Peter concerning his love to him, and gives him commission to feed his sheep, 15-17. Foretells the manner of Peter's death, 18, 19. Peter inquires concerning John, and receives an answer that was afterwards misunderstood, 20-23. John's concluding testimony concerning the authenticity of his Gospel, and the end for which it was written, 24, 26.

AFTER these things Jesus shewed himself again to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias; and on this wise shewed he himself.

2 There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and * Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and ^b the sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples.

3 Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing.

4 But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore; but the disciples ^c knew not that it was Jesus.

5 Then ^d Jesus saith unto them, ^e Children, have ye any meat? They answered him, No.

6 And he said unto them, ^f Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.

7 Therefore ^g that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, It is the Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked,) and did cast himself into the sea.

* Ch. i. 45.—^b Matt. iv. 21.—^c Ch. xx. 14.—^d Luke xxiv. 41.—
^e Or, Sirs.

Verse 1. Jesus shewed himself again] This was the seventh appearance of our Lord after the resurrection. Matt. chap. xviii. 16, has but just mentioned it: of it the rest of the Evangelists say nothing, and this is the reason why John gives it so particularly.

Verse 3. Peter saith—I go a fishing.] Previously to the crucifixion of our Lord, the temporal necessities of himself and his disciples appear to have been supplied by the charity of individuals, Luke viii. 3. As it is probable that the scandal of the cross had now shut up this source of support, the disciples, not fully knowing how they were to be employed, returned to their former occupation of fishing, in order to gain a livelihood.

That night they caught nothing.] God had so ordered it, that they might be the more struck with the miracle which he afterwards wrought.

Verse 4. Knew not that it was Jesus.] Probably because it was either not light enough, or he was at too great a distance, or he had assumed another form, as in Mark xvi. 12.

Verse 5. Children.] A term of familiarity and affectionate kindness.

Any meat?] The word evidently means any kind of fish; and our Lord seems to have appeared at first in the character of a person who wished to purchase a part of what they had caught.

Verse 6. For the multitude of fishes.] This was intended as an emblem of the immense number of souls which should be converted to God by their ministry, according to the promise of Christ, Matt. iv. 19.

Verse 7. His fisher's coat.] Or, his upper coat. He was naked.] He was only in his vest. The word naked is often used to signify the absence of this upper garment only.

Cast himself into the sea.] It is likely that they were in very shallow water; and, as they were only two hundred cubits from the land (about one hundred and thirty-two English yards), it is possible that Peter only stepped into the water that he might assist them to draw the boat to land, which was now heavily laden.

Verse 8. Dragging the net.] It is probable that this was that species of fishing in which the net was stretched from the shore out into the sea; the persons who were in the boat, and who shot the net, fetched a compass, and bringing in a hawser, which was attached to the other end of the net, those who were on shore helped them to drag it in.

Verse 9. They saw a fire, &c.] This appears to have been a new miracle.

Verse 12. Come and dine.] Though this is the literal translation of the word, yet it must be observed that it was not dinner-time, being as yet early in the morning, ver. 4; the original word is used to signify breakfast, or any early meal, as well as what we term dinner.

8 And the other disciples came in a little ship; (for they were not far from land; but as it were two hundred cubits,) dragging the net with fishes.

9 As soon as they were come to land, they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread.

10 Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish which ye have now caught.

11 Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes, an hundred and fifty and three: and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

12 Jesus saith unto them, ^h Come and dine. And none of the disciples durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord.

13 Jesus then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise.

14 This is now ⁱ the third time that Jesus shewed himself to his disciples, after that he was risen from the dead.

15 So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs.

16 He saith to him again the second time, Simon.

^j Luke v. 4, 6, 7.—^k Ch. xiii. 23. xx. 2.—^l Acts x. 41.—
^m See ch. xx. 19, 26.

Durst ask him] Ever since the confession of Thomas, a proper awe of the Deity of Christ had possessed their minds. Verse 13. And giveth them] Eating likewise with them, as Luke expressly says: chap. xxiv. 43.

Verse 14. This is now the third time] That is, this was the third time he appeared unto the apostles, when all or most of them were together. There appear to have been eleven occasions in which he distinctly manifested himself after his resurrection. But there might have been many other manifestations, which the Evangelists have not thought proper to enumerate, as not being connected with any thing of singular weight or importance.

Verse 15. Simon—lovest thou me] Peter had thrice denied his Lord, and now Christ gave him an opportunity in some measure to repair his fault by a triple confession.

More than these?] This was a kind of reproach to Peter: he had professed a more affectionate attachment to Christ than the rest; he had been more forward in making professions of friendship and love than any of the others; and no one (Judas excepted) had treated his Lord so basely. Peter made the most modest reply—Thou knowest I love thee, but no longer dwells on the strength of his love, nor compares himself with even the meanest of his brethren. He had before cast the very unkind reflection on his brethren, Though all be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended, Matt. xxvi. 33. But he had now learned, by dreadful experience, that he who trusteth his own heart is a fool; and that a man's sufficiency for good is of the Lord alone.

It is remarkable that in these three questions our Lord uses a verb which signifies to love affectionately, ardently, supremely, perfectly—see the note on Matt. xxi. 37; and that Peter always replies, using another verb which signifies to love, to like, to regard, to feel friendship for another. As if our Lord had said, "Peter dost thou love me ardently and supremely?" To which he answers, "Lord, I feel an affection for thee—I do esteem thee—but dare, at present, say no more."

There is another remarkable change of terms in this place. In ver. 15, and 17, our Lord uses the verb to feed, and in ver. 16 he uses a word which signifies to tend a flock, not only to feed, but to take care of, guide, govern, defend, &c., by which he seems to intimate that it is not sufficient merely to offer the bread of life to the congregation of the Lord, but he must take care that the sheep be properly collected, attended to, regulated, guided, &c.

Verse 17. Peter was grieved] Fearing, says St. Chrysostom, lest Christ saw something in his heart which he saw not himself, and which might lead to another fall; and that Christ was about to tell him of it, as he had before predicted his denial.

Verse 18. Thou shalt stretch forth thy hands] It was a son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. ^aHe saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

17 He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, ^bthou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

18 ^cVerily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest: but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not.

19 This spake he, signifying ^dby what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, Follow me.

20 Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple

^a Acts xx. 28. Heb. xiii. 2^b. 1 Pet. ii. 25. v. 2, 4.—^b Ch. ii. 24, 26. xvi. 30.—^c Ch. xiii. 36. Acts xii. 3, 4.—^d 2 Pet. i. 14.—^e Ch. xiii. 23, 25. xx. 2.—^f Matt. xvi. 27, 28. xxv. 31. 1 Cor. iv. 5. xi. 26.

custom at Rome to put the necks of those who were to be crucified into a yoke, and to stretch out their hands and fasten them to the end of it; and having thus led them through the city, they were carried out to be crucified. Thus then Peter was girded, chained, and carried whither he would not—not that he was unwilling to die for Christ; but he was a man—he did not love death; but he loved his life less than he loved his God. [The reference is rather to the actual stretching on the cross.]

Verse 19. Should glorify God.] Ancient writers state that, about thirty-four years after this, Peter was crucified; and that he deemed it so glorious a thing to die for Christ that he begged to be crucified with his head downwards, not considering himself worthy to die in the same posture in which his Lord did.

Follow me.] Whether our Lord meant by these words that Peter was to walk with him a little way for a private interview, or whether he meant that he was to imitate his example, or be conformed to him in the manner of his death, is very uncertain.

Verse 22. If I will that he tarry till I come] 1. Some have concluded from these words that John should never die. 2. Others thought that our Lord intimated that John should live till Christ came to judge and destroy Jerusalem. 3. Others understood the passage thus: If I will that he remain till I come and take him away by a natural death, what is that to thee? follow thou me to thy crucifixion. 4. Others imagine that our Lord was only now taking Peter aside to speak something to him in private, and that Peter, seeing John following, wished to know whether he should

* whom Jesus loved, following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?

21 Peter seeing him, saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do?

22 Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me.

23 Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?

24 This is the disciple which testifieth of these things, and wrote these things: and ^ewe know that his testimony is true.

25 ^bAnd there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, ⁱI suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written. Amen.

Rev. ii. 25. iii. 11. xxii. 7, 20.—^a Ch. xix. 26. 3 John 12.—^b Ch. xx. 30.—^c Amos vii. 10.

come along with them; and that our Lord's answer stated that John should remain in that place till Christ and Peter returned to him. I rather lean to the fourth opinion.

Verse 24. This is the disciple] It is, I think, very likely that these two verses were added by some of the believers at that time, as a testimony to the truth of the preceding narration.

We know] Instead of we know, some have written, I know indeed; but this is mere conjecture, and is worthy of no regard.

Verse 25. Even the world itself, &c.] This is a very strong eastern expression, to represent the number of miracles which Jesus wrought. But, however strong and strange this expression may seem to us of the western world, we find sacred and other authors using hyperboles of the like kind and signification. See Num. xiii. 33; and Dan. iv. 11.

We may define hyperbole thus: it is a figure of speech where more seems to be said than is intended; and it is well known that the Asiatic nations abound in these. When John, therefore, wrote, the world itself could not contain the books, &c., what would every Jew understand by it? Why, that if every thing which Christ had done and said were to be written, the books would be more in number than had ever been written concerning any one person or subject: i. e., there would be an immense number of books. And so there would be; for it is not possible that the ten thousandth part of the words and actions of such a life as our Lord's was could be contained in the compass of one or all of these gospels.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

CHAPTER I

St. Luke's prologue, containing a repetition of Christ's history from his passion till his ascension, 1-9. Remarkable circumstances in the ascension, 10, 11. The return of the disciples to Jerusalem, and their employment there, 12-14. Peter's discourse concerning the death of Judas Iscariot, 15-20, and the necessity of choosing another apostle in his place, 21, 22. Barnabas and Matthias being set apart by prayer, the apostles having given their votes, Matthias is chosen to succeed Judas, 23-26.

THE former treatise have I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and teach,

2 ^a Until the day in which he was taken up, after that he, through the Holy Ghost, ^c had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen :

3 ^d To whom also he shewed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God :

4 ^e And, 'being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, ^f which, saith he, ye have heard of me.

5 ^g For John truly baptized with water ; ^h but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

6 When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, ' Lord, wilt thou at this time ⁱ restore again the kingdom to Israel ?

7 And he said unto them, ' It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power :

8 ^j But ye shall receive ^k power, ^l after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you : and ^m ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

9 ⁿ And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, ^o he was taken up ; and a cloud received him out of their sight.

10 And while they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them ^p in white apparel ;

11 Which also said, ' Ye men of Galilee, why

Verse 1. The former treatise] The Gospel according to Luke, which is here most evidently intended.

O Theophilus] See the note on Luke i. 3.

Verse 2. After that he, through the Holy Ghost, &c.] There were many things which the apostles said, did, and decreed, for which they had no verbal instructions from our Lord, at least, none that are recorded in the Gospels ; we may therefore conclude that these were suggested to them by that Holy Spirit which now became resident in them, and that it is to this that St. Luke refers in this verse.

Verse 3. To whom—he shewed himself alive—by many infallible proofs] The proofs were such as these : 1. Appearing to several different persons at different times. 2. His eating and drinking with them. 3. His meeting them in Galilee according to his own appointment. 4. His subjecting his body to be touched and handled by them. 5. His instructing them in the nature and doctrines of his kingdom. 6. His appearing to upwards of five hundred persons at once, 1 Cor. xv. 6. And, 7. Continuing these public manifestations of himself for forty days.

Pertaining to the kingdom of God] Whatever concerned the doctrine, discipline, and establishment of the Christian Church.

Verse 4. And, being assembled together] See the margin. But probably the common reading is to be preferred ; and the meeting on a mountain of Galilee is what is here meant.

The promise of the Father] The HOLY SPIRIT, which indeed was the grand promise of the New Testament, as JESUS CHRIST was of the Old. And as Christ was the grand promise of the Old Testament, during the whole continuance of the Old Covenant ; so is the Holy Ghost, during the whole continuance of the New.

Ye have heard of me.] It is likely that our Lord alludes more particularly to the conversation he had with them on one of the mountains of Galilee.

Verse 5. Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.] This must refer to some conversation that is not distinctly related by the evangelists ; as these identical words do not occur in any of the preceding histories. John baptized with water, which was a sign of stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.

12 Then returned they unto Jerusalem, from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey.

13 And when they were come in, they went up into an upper room, where abode both Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James.

14 These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren.

15 And in those days Peter stood up in the midst penitence, in reference to the remission of sin; but Christ baptizes with the Holy Ghost, for the destruction of sin, the illumination of the mind, and the consolation of the heart.

Verse 6. When they therefore were come together] It is very likely that this is to be understood of their assembling on one of the mountains of Galilee, and there meeting our Lord.

At this time restore again the kingdom] The disciples, in common with the Jews, expected the Messiah's kingdom to be at least in part secular. In this opinion they continued less or more till the day of pentecost; when the mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit taught them the spiritual nature of the kingdom of Christ. The object of the disciples' question seems to have been this: to gain information from their all-knowing Master, whether the time was now fully come, in which the Romans should be thrust out, and Israel made, as formerly, an independent kingdom.

Verse 7. The times or the seasons] Times here may signify any large portion of a period, era, or century—such as an Olympiad, lustrum, or year; and seasons, the particular part, season, or opportunity in that period, &c., in which it might be proper to do any particular work. God has not only fixed the great periods in which he will bring about those great revolutions which his wisdom, justice, and mercy have designed, but he leaves himself at full liberty to choose those particular portions of such periods as may be best for the accomplishment of those purposes. Thus God is no necessary agent—everything is put in his own power, under his control and authority; nor will he form decrees of which he must become the necessary executor.

Verse 8. But ye shall receive power] We must not understand the word which we translate power in this verse, as we do the Greek original, translated by the same word in the preceding verse. In the one, God's infinite authority over all times and seasons, and his uncompellable liberty of acting or not acting, in any given case, are particularly pointed out: in the other, the energy communicated by him to his disciples, through which they were enabled to work miracles, is particularly intended; the latter word in general, signifies such power, and is sometimes put for that of which it is the cause, viz., a miracle.

Ye shall be witnesses—in all Judea, &c.] Though the word earth is often used to denote Judea alone, yet here, it is probable, it is to be taken in its largest extent.

Verse 9. He was taken up] He was speaking face to face with them, and while they beheld he was taken up; he began to ascend to heaven, and they continued to look after him till a cloud received him out of their sight—till he had ascended above the region of the clouds, by the density of which all farther distinct vision was prevented. These circumstances are very remarkable, and should be carefully noted.

Verse 10. Looked stedfastly] Keeping their eyes intensely fixed on their ascending Lord.

Two men stood by them] Doubtless, angels in human shape. In white apparel] As emblematical of their purity, happiness, and glory.

Verse 11. This same Jesus] Clothed in human nature, shall so come in like manner—with the same body, descending of the disciples, and said (the number of the names together were about an hundred and twenty), 16 Men and brethren, this scripture must needs have been fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before concerning Judas, which was guide to them that took Jesus.

17 For he was numbered with us, and had obtained part of this ministry.

18 Now this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out.

19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch as that field is called in their proper tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood.

from heaven by his sovereign and all-controlling power, as ye have seen him go into heaven. Thus shall he come again to judge the quick and the dead.

Verse 12. A sabbath day's journey] A sabbath day's journey was seven furlongs and a half. Olivet was but five furlongs from Jerusalem; and Bethany was fifteen. The first region or tract of mount Olivet, which was called Bethany, was distant from the city a sabbath day's journey, or seven furlongs and a half; and the same distance did that tract called Bethphage extend from the city. When, therefore, our Lord came to the place where these two tracts touched each other, he there ascended, which place was distant from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey, as St. Luke here remarks.

Verse 13. They went up into an upper room] This was either a room in the temple, or in the house of one of the disciples, where this holy company was accustomed to meet. Upper rooms in private houses were used for the purpose of reading the law, and conferring together on religious matters; and as the room here mentioned seems to have been the place where all the apostles lodged, it was most probably a private house.

Verse 14. These—continued—in prayer and supplication] Waiting for the promise of the Father, according to the direction of our Lord, Luke xxiv. 49.

With the women] Probably those who had been witnesses of his resurrection, with the immediate relatives of the apostles.

Verse 15. In the midst of the disciples] Brethren is the reading of the best MSS., and it is to be preferred because of what immediately follows; for it was not among the disciples merely that he stood, but among the whole company, which amounted to one hundred and twenty. This was the number which the Jews required to form a council in any city; and it is likely that in reference to this the disciples gathered together, with themselves, the number of one hundred and twenty, chosen out of the many who had been already converted by the ministry of our Lord, who thus formed a complete council, in presence of which the important business of electing a person in the place of Judas was to be transacted.

Verse 16. The Holy Ghost, by the mouth of David] This is a strong attestation to the divine inspiration of the Book of Psalms.

Verse 17. Obtained part of this ministry] He obtained the lot of this ministry—not that he, or any of the twelve apostles, was chosen to this ministry by lot: but as lot signifies the portion a man has in life, what comes to him in the course of the divine providence, or as an especial gift of God's goodness, it is used here, as in many other parts of the sacred writings, to signify office or station.

Verse 18. Purchased a field with the reward of iniquity] Probably Judas did not purchase the field himself, but the money for which he sold his Lord was thus applied, see Matt. xxvii. 6-8; for, in ordinary conversation, we often attribute to a man what is the consequence of his own actions, though such consequence was never designed nor wished for by himself.

And falling headlong, he burst asunder] It is very likely that the 18th and 19th verses are not the words of Peter, but of the historian, St. Luke, and should be read in parenthesis, and then the 17th and 20th verses will make a connected sense. [It has not been thought desirable to retain Dr. Clarke's lengthy note on the manner of the death of Judas. By an ingenious line of argument he endeavours to prove that death was the result of a violent dysentery, brought on by remorse. This curious suggestion has not met with much critical favour.]

Verse 19. It was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem] The repentance of Judas, his dying testimony in behalf of our Lord's innocence, and his tragical death, were publicly known; as was also the transaction about the purchase of the field; and hence arose the name by which it was publicly known.

That field is called in their proper tongue, Aeldama] This proper tongue was not the Hebrew; it was a sort of Chaldaeo-Syriac which was commonly spoken.

Verse 20. For it is written in the book of Psalms] The places usually referred to are Ps. lxxix. 25, and Ps. cix. 8. The Hebrew original means overseership or superintendence. This the Septuagint translate by the word episcopos, which was corrupted by our Saxon ancestors into biscop, and by us into bishop; literally it signifies an overseer or superintendent.

Verse 21. Which have companied with us] They judged it necessary to fill up this blank in the apostolate by a person who had been an eye-witness of the acts of our Lord.

Went in and out] A phrase which includes all the actions of life.

Verse 22. Beginning from the baptism of John] From the time that Christ was baptized by John in Jordan. [The original will scarcely bear this sense.]

Must one be ordained] This translation misleads every reader who cannot examine the original text. There is no term for ordained in the Greek; to be, is the only word in the verse to which this interpretation can be applied.

Verse 23. They appointed two] It is likely that the disciples themselves were divided in opinion which of these two was the most proper person, and therefore laid the sabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias. 24 And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, ^a which knowest the hearts of all men, shew whether of these two thou hast chosen, 25 ^b That he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place.

26 And they gave forth their ^c lots, and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.

1 Chron. xxviii. 9. xxix. 17. Jer. xi. 20. xvii. 10. Ch. xv. 8. Rev. ii. 23.—^b Ver. 17.—^c Lev. xvi. 8, 9. Josh. xiv. 2.

matter before God, that he might decide it by the lot. Verse 24. Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts] The original word, the searcher of hearts, seems to be used here as an attribute of God.

Verse 25. That he might go to his own place] Some suppose that these words are spoken of Judas, and his punishment in hell, which they say must be the own place of such a person as Judas. Others refer them to the purchase of the field, made by the thirty pieces of silver for which he had sold our Lord. Others, with more seeming propriety, state that his own place means his own house, or former occupation: he left this ministry and apostleship that he might resume his former employment in conjunction with his family, &c. This is primarily the meaning of it in Num. xxiv. 25. Others think it simply means the state of the dead in general, independently of either rewards or punishments; as is probably meant by Eccles. iii. 20. But some of the best critics assert that the words belong to Matthias—his own place being the office to which he was about to be elected. [In an elaborate note at the end of this chapter, in the unabridged edition, Dr. Clarke contends with an earnestness which does honour to his Christian charity, that there is no possible evidence of the final damnation of Judas in the sacred text.]

Verse 26. They gave forth their lots] In what manner this or any other question was decided by lot, we cannot precisely say. The most simple form was to put two stones, pieces of board, metal, or slips of parchment, with the names of the persons inscribed on them, into an urn; and after prayer, sacrifice, &c., to put in the hand and draw out one of the lots, and then the case was decided.

He was numbered with the eleven apostles] Thus the number twelve was made up, that these might be the foundations, under God, of the whole Christian Church, as the twelve sons of Jacob had been of the Jewish Church. For it had already been remarked that our Lord formed his church on the model of the Jewish. How long it was found necessary to keep up the number twelve, we are not informed: the original number was soon broken by persecution and death.

CHAPTER II.

The day of Pentecost being arrived, and the disciples assembled, the Holy Spirit descended as a mighty rushing wind, and in the likeness of fiery tongues sat upon them; in consequence of which, they were all enabled to speak different languages, which they had never learned, 1-4. An account of persons from various countries who were present, and were astonished to hear the apostles declare the wonderful works of God in their respective languages, 5-12. Some cavil, 13, and are confounded by Peter, who asserts that this work is of God; and that thereby a most important prophecy was fulfilled, 14-21. He takes occasion from this to preach Jesus to them, as the true Lord and only Messiah, 22-36. The people are alarmed and convinced, and inquire what they shall do, 37. He exhorts them to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus, that they may receive remission of sins and the gift of the Holy Spirit, 38-40. They gladly receive his word, about three thousand are baptized and added to the church in one day; they continue steadfast in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, 41-42. The apostles work many miracles; and the disciples have all things in common, and live in a state of great happiness and Christian fellowship, 43-47.

AND when ^athe day of Pentecost was fully come, ^bthey were all with one accord in one place.

2 And suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and ^cit filled all the house where they were sitting.

3 And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

4 And ^dthey were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began ^eto speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

5 And there were dwelling at Jerusalem, Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

6 Now ^fwhen this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were ^gconfounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

Verse 1. When the day of Pentecost was fully come] The feast of Pentecost was celebrated fifty days after the passover, and has its name from the Greek word for fifty. It commenced on the fiftieth day, reckoned from the first day of unleavened bread, i. e., on the morrow after the paschal lamb was offered. It was instituted in commemoration of the giving of the law on Mount Sinai; and is therefore called by the Jews, shimchath torah, the joy of the law, and frequently the feast of weeks.

They were all with one accord in one place.] It is probable that the ALL here mentioned means the 120 spoken of, chap. i. 15, who were all together at the election of Matthias. There was no person uninterested—none unconcerned—none lukewarm; all were in earnest; and the Spirit of God came down to meet their united faith and prayer. When any assembly of God's people meet in the same spirit they may expect every blessing they need.

In one place.] It was probably in the temple, as seems to be intimated in ver. 46. [But it is unlikely that so large a number of the known disciples of our Lord would have been permitted to gather in any room of the Temple.]

Verse 2. A sound from heaven] Probably thunder is meant, which is the harbinger of the divine presence.

Rushing mighty wind] The passage of a large portion of electrical fluid over that place would not only occasion the sound, or thunder, but also the rushing mighty wind; as the air would rush suddenly and strongly into the vacuum occasioned by the rarefaction of the atmosphere in that place, through the sudden passage of the electrical fluid; and the wind would follow the direction of the fire. [But it is better to suppose that the phenomenon was entirely supernatural. The sound was "as of" a mighty rushing wind.]

Verse 3. Cloven tongues like as of fire] The tongues were the emblem of the languages they were to speak. The cloven tongues pointed out the diversity of these languages; and the fire seemed to intimate that the whole would be a spiritual gift, and be the means of bringing light and life to the souls who should hear them preach the everlasting gospel in those languages.

Sat upon each of them.] Scintillations, cornuscations, or flashes of fire were probably at first frequent through every part of the room where they were sitting; at last these flashes became defined, had a lambent flame, in the form of a cloven tongue, became stationary on the head of each disciple; a proof that the Spirit of God had made each his temple or residence. That unusual appearances of fire were considered emblems of the presence and influence of God, both the Scriptures and the Jewish writings amply prove.

The Greek and Roman heathens had similar notions of the manner in which divine communications were given.

A flame of fire seen upon the head of any person was considered as an omen from their gods that the person was under the peculiar care of a supernatural power, and destined to some extraordinary employment.

It may be necessary to observe that tongue of fire may be a Hebraism; for in Isa. v. 24, leshon esh, which we render simply fire, is literally a tongue of fire, as the margin very properly has it. The Hebrews gave the name of tongue to most things which terminate in a blunt point. [This is far more likely than that the tongue-like shape of the flame was an emblem of the gift of tongues.]

It sat upon each] That is, one of those tongues, like flames, sat upon the head of each disciple; and the continuance of the appearance, which is indicated by the word sat, shows that there could be no illusion in the case. I still think that in all this case the agent was natural, but supernaturally employed.

Verse 4. To speak with other tongues] At the building of Babel the language of the people was confounded; and, in consequence of this, they became scattered over the face of the earth: at this foundation of the Christian Church, the gift of various languages was given to the apostles, that the scattered nations might be gathered, and united under one shepherd and superintendent of all souls.

As the Spirit gave them utterance.] The word seems to imply such utterance as proceeded from immediate inspiration, and included oracular communications.

Verse 5. Devout men, out of every nation] At this time there was scarcely a commercial nation under heaven where the Jews had not been scattered for the purpose of trade, merchandize, &c., and from all these nations, it is said, there were persons now present at Jerusalem.

Verse 6. Every man heard them speak in his own language.] We may naturally suppose that, as soon as any person presented himself to one of these disciples, he, the disciple, was immediately enabled to address him in his own language, however various this had been from the Jewish or Galilean dialects.

Verse 7. Are not all these—Galileans?] Persons wholly uneducated, and, consequently, naturally ignorant of those languages which they now speak so fluently.

Verse 8. How hear we every man in our own tongue] Some have supposed that, although the disciples spoke their own tongue, yet every man so understood what was spoken as if it had been spoken in the language in which he was born. But that the gift of tongues was actually given to the apostles, we have the fullest proof; as we find particular ordinances laid down by those very apostles for the regulation of the exercise of this gift, see 1 Cor. xiv. 1, &c.

Verse 9. Parthians] Parthia anciently included the northern part of modern Persia: it was situated between the Caspian Sea and Persian Gulf, rather to the eastward of both.

Medes] Media was a country lying in the vicinity of the Caspian Sea; having Parthia on the east, Assyria on the south, and Mesopotamia on the west.

Elamites] Probably inhabitants of that country now called Persia: both the Medes and Elamites were a neighbouring people, dwelling beyond the Tigris.

Mesopotamia] Situated between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates; having Assyria on the east, Arabia Deserta with Babylonia on the south, Syria on the west, and Armenia on the north.

Judea] This word has exceedingly puzzled commentators and critics: and most suspect that it is not the true reading. If it be considered the genuine reading, we may account for it thus: the men who were speaking were known to be Galileans; now the Galilean dialect was certainly different 14 But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words :

16 But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel :

17 ^b And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, ' I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh : and your sons and ' your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams :

from that spoken in Judea—the surprise was occasioned by a Jew being able to comprehend the speech of a Galilean without any interpreter and without difficulty ; and yet it is not easy to suppose that there was such a difference between the two dialects as to render these people wholly unintelligible to each other. [The reference is possibly to foreigners dwelling in Judea.]

CAPPADOCIA] Was an ancient kingdom of Asia, comprehending all that country that lies between Mount Taurus and the Euxine Sea.

PONTUS] Was anciently a very powerful kingdom of Asia, originally a part of Cappadocia ; bounded on the east by Colchis ; on the west by the river Halys ; on the north by the Black Sea ; and on the south by Armenia Minor.

ASIA] Meaning probably Asia Minor ; it was that part of Turkey in Asia now called Natolia.

Verse 10. PHRYGIA] A country in Asia Minor, southward of Pontus.

PAMPHYLIA] The ancient name of the country of Natolia near the Mediterranean Sea.

EGYPT] A very extensive country of Africa, bounded by the Mediterranean on the north ; by the Red Sea on the east ; by the Isthmus of Suez, which divide it from Arabia, on the east ; by Abyssinia or Ethiopia on the south ; and by the deserts of Barca and Nubia on the West.

LIBYA] In a general way, among the Greeks, signified Africa ; but the northern part, in the vicinity of Cyrene, is here meant.

CYRENE] A country in Africa on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, southward of the most western point of the Island of Crete.

Strangers of Rome] Persons dwelling at Rome, and speaking the Latin language, partly consisting of regularly descended Jews and proselytes to the Jewish religion.

Verse 11. Cretes] Natives of Crete, a large and noted island in the Levant, or eastern part of the Mediterranean Sea ; now called Candia.

Arabians] Natives of Arabia, a well-known country of Asia, having the Red Sea on the west ; the Persian Gulf on the east ; Judea on the north ; and the Indian Ocean on the south.

The wonderful works of God.] From this one circumstance we may learn that all the people enumerated above were either Jews or proselytes ; and that there were probably none that could be, strictly speaking, called heathens among them.

It was wisely ordered that the miraculous descent of the Holy Ghost should take place at this time, when so many from various nations were present to bear witness to what was done, and to be themselves subjects of his mighty working.

Verse 18. These men are full of new wine.] Rather, sweet wine, as there could be no new wine in Judea so early as pentecost.

Verse 14. Peter, standing up with the eleven] They probably spoke by turns, not altogether ; but Peter began the discourse.

All ye that dwell at Jerusalem] Better translated by the word sojourn, because these were not inhabitants of Judea, and signs in the earth beneath ; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke :

21 And it shall come to pass, that ^b whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words : Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you ^c by miracles, and wonders, and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know :

23 Him, ^d being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ^e ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain :

but the strangers mentioned in verses 9, 10, and 11, who had come up to the feast.

Verse 15. But the third hour of the day] That is, about nine o'clock in the morning, previously to which the Jews scarcely ever ate or drank, for that hour was the hour of prayer.

Verse 17. In the last days] The time of the Messiah ; and so the phrase was understood among the Jews.

Your sons and your daughters shall prophesy] The word prophesy signifies here to teach and proclaim the great truths of God, especially those which concerned redemption by Jesus Christ.

Your young men shall see visions, &c.] These were two of the various ways in which God revealed himself under the Old Testament.

Verse 18. On my servants and on my handmaidens] This properly means persons of the lowest condition, such as male and female slaves.

Verse 19. I will shew wonders] It is likely that both the prophet and the apostle refer to the calamities that fell upon the Jews at the destruction of Jerusalem, and the fearful signs and portents that preceded those calamities.

Verse 20. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood] These are figurative representations of eclipses, intended most probably to point out the fall of the civil and ecclesiastical state in Judea, see the notes on Matt. xxiv. 29.

Verse 21. Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.] And that none but the Christians did escape, when God poured out these judgments, is well known ; and that ALL the Christians did escape, stands attested by the most respectable authority.

Verse 22. A man approved of God] The sense of the verse seems to be this : Jesus of Nazareth, a man sent of God, and celebrated among you by miracles, wonders, and signs ; and all these done in such profusion as had never been done by the best of your most accredited prophets.

Verse 23. By the determinate counsel] That counsel of God which defined the time, place, and circumstance, according to his foreknowledge, which always saw what was the most proper time and place for the manifestation and crucifixion of his Son ; so that there was nothing casual in these things, God having determined that the salvation of a lost world should be brought about in this way ; and neither the Jews nor Romans had any power here, but what was given to them from above.

By wicked hands have crucified and slain] I think this refers to the Romans, and not to the Jews ; the former being the agents to execute the evil purposes of the latter.

Verse 24. Whom God hath raised up] For, as God alone gave him up to death, so God alone raised him up from death.

Having loosed the pains of death] It is sufficiently proved that the original phrase signifies rather to REMOVE the pains or sufferings of death. That Christ did suffer the pains and sorrows of death in his passion is sufficiently evident ; but that these were all removed, previously to his crucifixion, 25 For David speaketh concerning him, * I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved :

26 Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope :

27 Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.

29 Men and brethren, ^b let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.

is fully seen in that calm manner in which he met it, with all its attendant terrors.

Verse 25. For David speaketh concerning him] The quotation here is made from Ps. xvi.

Verse 26. And my tongue was glad] "And my glory was glad." And what is to be understood by glory here? Why the soul, certainly, and not the tongue; and so some of the best critics interpret the phrase.

Verse 27. Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell] In Hades, that is, the state of separate spirits, or the state of the dead.

To see corruption.] Jesus, being conceived without sin, neither partook of human corruption, nor was involved in the condemnation of fallen human nature; consequently, it was impossible for his body to see corruption; and it could not have undergone the temporary death, to which it was not naturally liable, had it not been for the purpose of making an atonement.

Verse 28. Thou hast made known to me the ways of life] So that I shall resume the same body, and live the same kind of life, as I had before I gave up my life for the sin of the world.

Verse 30. According to the flesh, he would raise up Christ] This whole clause is wanting in many MSS. and is variously entered in others.

Verse 31. That his soul was not left in hell] The passage may be thus read: "He spake of the resurrection of Christ, that he was not left in Hades, neither did his flesh see corruption."

Verse 32. Whereof we all are witnesses.] That is, the whole 120 saw him after he rose from the dead, and were all ready, in the face of persecution and death, to attest this great truth.

Verse 33. By the right hand of God exalted] Raised by omnipotence to the highest dignity in the realms of glory, to sit at the right hand of God, and administer the laws of both worlds.

The promise of the Holy Ghost] This was the promise that he had made to them a little before he suffered, as may be seen in John xiv. and xvi., and after he had risen from the dead, Luke xxiv. 49, and which, as the apostles says, was now shed forth.

Verse 34. David is not ascended] Consequently, he has not sent forth this extraordinary gift; but it comes from his Lord, of whom he said, The Lord said unto my Lord, &c.

Verse 35. Until I make thy foes thy footstool.] It was usual with conquerors to put their feet on the necks of vanquished leaders, as emblematical of the state of subjection to which they were reduced, and the total extinction of their power.

Verse 36. Both Lord and Christ.] Not only the Messiah but the Supreme governor of all things and all persons, Jews and Gentiles, angels and men.

Verse 37. When they heard this, they were pricked in their heart] This powerful, intelligent, consecutive, and interesting discourse, supported everywhere by prophecies and cor-

31 He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ, * that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption.

32 * This Jesus hath God raised up, 'whereof we all are witnesses.

33 Therefore ^b being by the right hand of God exalted, and ^c having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he ^d hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear.

34 For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, ^e The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 35 Until I make thy foes thy footstool.

36 Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God ^f hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

37 Now when they heard this, ^g they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?

responding facts, left them without reply and without excuse.

What shall we do?] How shall we escape those judgments which we now see hanging over our heads?

Verse 38. Peter said unto them, Repent] Humble yourselves before God, and deeply deplore the sins you have committed; pray earnestly for mercy, and deprecate the displeasure of incensed justice.

And be baptized every one of you] Take on you the public profession of the religion of Christ, by being baptized in his name; and thus acknowledge yourselves to be his disciples and servants.

For the remission of sins] In reference to the remission or removal of sins: baptism pointing out the purifying influences of the Holy Spirit; and it is in reference to that purification that it is administered, and should in consideration never be separated from it. For baptism itself purifies not the conscience; it only points out the grace by which this is to be done.

Ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.] If ye faithfully use the sign, ye shall get the substance.

Verse 39. For the promise is unto you] Jews of the land of Judea.

To all that are afar off] To the Jews wherever dispersed, and to all the Gentile nations; for, though St. Peter had not as yet a formal knowledge of the calling of the Gentiles, yet the Spirit of God, by which he spoke, had undoubtedly this in view; and therefore the words are added, even as many as the Lord our God shall call, i. e., all to whom, in the course of his providence and grace, he shall send the preaching of Christ crucified.

Verse 40. Save yourselves from this untoward generation.] Separate yourselves from them.

Verse 41. They that gladly received his word] The word implies that they approved of the doctrine delivered; that they were glad to hear of this way of salvation; and that they began immediately to act according to its dictates.

Were baptized] That is, in the name of Jesus, ver. 38, for this was the criterion of a Jew's conversion; and when a Jew had received baptism in this name he was excluded from all communication with his countrymen; and no man would have forfeited such privileges but on the fullest and clearest conviction.

Were added—three thousand souls.] The Greek writers make use of this verb to signify that act by which cities, towns, or provinces changed their masters, and put themselves under another government.

These 3000 were not converted under one discourse, nor in one place, nor by one person. All the apostles preached, some in one language, and some in another; and not in one house—for where was there one at that time that could hold such a multitude of people?

Verse 42. They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine.] They received it, retained it, and acted on its principles.

38 Then Peter said unto them, * Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

39 For the promise is unto you, and ^b to your children, and ^c to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

40 And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.

41 Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls.

42 ^d And they continued stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread and in prayers.

43 And fear came upon every soul; and * many wonders and signs were done by the apostles.

44 And all that believed were together, and ^e had all things common;

45 And sold their possessions and goods, and ^f parted them to all men, as every man had need.

46 ^g And they, continuing daily with one accord ^h in the temple, and ⁱ breaking bread ^j from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, 47 Praising God, and ^k having favour with all the people. And ^l the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.

* Luke xxiv. 47. Ch. iii. 19.—^a Joel ii. 28. Ch. iii. 25.—^b Ch. x. xi. 15, 18. xiv. 27. xv. 3, 8, 14. Eph. ii. 13, 17.—^c Ver. 46. Ch. i. 14. Rom. xii. 12. Eph. vi. 18. Col. iv. 2. Heb. x. 25.—^d Mark xvi. 17. Ch. iv. 33. v. 12.—^e Ch. iv. 32, 34.—^f Isa. lvi. 17. 7.

And fellowship] Meaning association for religious and spiritual purposes. The community of goods cannot be meant; for this is mentioned, verses 44, 45, where it is said, they had all things common.

And in breaking of bread] Whither this means the Holy Eucharist, or their common meals, is difficult to say.

And in prayers.] In supplications to God for an increase of grace and life in their own souls; for establishment in the truth which they had received: and for the extension of the kingdom of Christ in the salvation of men.

Verse 43. And fear came upon every soul] For several weeks past they had had a series of the most astonishing miracles wrought before their eyes; they were puzzled and confounded at the manner in which the apostles preached, who charged them home with the deliberate murder of Jesus Christ, and who attested, in the most positive manner, that he was risen from the dead, and that God had sent down that mighty effusion of the Spirit which they now witnessed as a proof of his resurrection and ascension, and that this very person whom they had crucified was appointed by God to be the Judge of quick and dead. They were in consequence stung with remorse, and were apprehensive of the judgments of God; and the wonders and signs continually wrought by the apostles were at once proofs of the celestial origin of their doctrine and mission, and of their own baseness, perfidy, and wickedness.

Verse 44. And all that believed] The believers, i. e., those who conscientiously credited the doctrine concerning the incarnation, crucifixion, resurrection, and ascension of Jesus Christ, and had in consequence, received redemption in his blood.

Were together] These words signify either, in one time, chap. iii. 1; or in one place, chap. ii. 1; or in one thing. The last of these three senses seems to be the most proper here.

And had all things common] This probably means that, as in consequence of this remarkable outpouring of the Spirit of God, and their conversion, they were detained longer at Jerusalem than they had originally intended, they formed a kind of community for the time being, that none might suffer want on the present occasion; as no doubt the unbelieving Jews, who were mockers, ver. 13, would treat these new converts with the most marked disapprobation. That an absolute community of goods never obtained in the church at Jerusalem, unless for a very short time, is evident from the apostolical precept, 1 Cor. xvi. 1, &c., by which collections were ordered to be made for the poor; but, if there had been a community of goods in the church, there could have been no ground for such recommendations as these, as there could have been no such distinctions as rich and poor, if every one on entering the church, gave up all his goods to a common stock.

Verse 46. They, continuing daily with one accord in the temple] They were present at all the times of public worship, and joined together in prayers and praises to God; for it is not to be supposed that they continued to offer any of the sacrifices prescribed by the law.

Breaking bread from house to house] The words which we translate from house to house are repeatedly used by the Greek writers for home, at home, for though they had all things in common, each person lived at his own table. Breaking bread is used to express the act of taking their meals.

With gladness and singleness of heart] A true picture of genuine Christian fellowship. They ate their bread: they had no severe fasts; the Holy Spirit had done in their souls, by his refining influence, what others vainly expect from bodily austerities. It may be said also, that, if they had no severe fasts, they had no splendid feasts; all was moderation, and all was contentment.

Verse 47. Having favour with all the people.] Every honest, upright Jew would naturally esteem these for the simplicity, purity, and charity of their lives.

And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.] Though many approved of the life and manners of these primitive Christians, yet they did not become members of this holy church; God permitting none to be added to it but those who were saved from their sins and prejudices. The church of Christ was made up of saints; sinners were not permitted to incorporate themselves with it.

CHAPTER III.

Peter and John go to the temple at the hour of prayer, and heal a man who had been lame from his mother's womb, 1-8. The people are astonished, and the apostles inform them that it was not by their own power they had healed the man, but through the power of Jesus of Nazareth, whom they had crucified, 9-16. Peter both excuses and reproves them, and exhorts them to repentance, 17-21. Shows that in Jesus Christ the prophecy of Moses was fulfilled; and that all the prophets testified of Jesus and his salvation, 22-24; and that, in him, the covenant made with Abraham is fulfilled; and that Christ came to bless them by turning them away from their iniquities, 25, 26.

NOW Peter and John went up together ^a into the temple at the hour of prayer, ^b beginning the ninth hour.

2 And ^c a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, ^d to ask alms of them that entered into the temple;

3 Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple, asked an alms.

4 And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us.

5 And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.

6 Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: ^e In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk.

7 And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ancle-bones received strength;

8 And he, ^f leaping up, stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God.

Verse 1. Peter and John went up together] The words which we translate together, and which are the first words in this chapter in the Greek text, are added by several MSS. and Versions to the last verse of the preceding chapter. But they do not make so good a sense there as they do here; and should be translated, not together, which really makes no sense here, but at that time; intimating that this transaction occurred nearly about the same time that those took place which are mentioned at the close of the former chapter. [There is good ground for attaching them to the previous chapter.]

At the hour of prayer] Our three o'clock in the afternoon. The third hour, which was the other grand time of public prayer among the Jews, answered, in a general way, to our nine in the morning.

Verse 2. A—man lame from his mother's womb] It appears that he had no power to walk, and was what we term a cripple, for he was carried to the gate of the temple, and laid there in order to excite compassion.

The gate—which is called Beautiful] There are different opinions concerning this gate. The temple had nine gates, which were on every side covered with gold and silver; but there was one gate which was without the holy house, and was of Corinthian brass, and greatly excelled those which were only covered with gold and silver. The magnitudes of the other gates were equal one to another; but that of the Corinthian gate, which opened on the east, over against the gate of the holy house itself, was much larger. This last was probably the gate which is here called Beautiful; because it was on the outside of the temple, to which there was an easy access, and because it was evidently the most costly. [No further light has been shed on this difficulty.]

Verse 4. Look on us.] He wished to excite and engage his attention, that he might see what was done to produce his miraculous cure, and, it is likely, took this occasion to direct his faithful to Jesus Christ.

Verse 5. Expecting to receive something of them.] Because it was a constant custom for all who entered the temple to carry money with them to give to the treasury, or to the poor, or to both. It was on this ground that the friends of the lame man laid him at the gate of the temple, as this was the most likely place to receive alms.

Verse 6. Silver and gold have I none] Though it was customary for all those who entered the temple to carry some money with them, for the purposes mentioned above, yet so poor were the apostles that they had nothing to give, either to the treasury, or to the distressed. The Popish writers are very dexterous at forming analogies between St. Peter and the Pope; but it is worthy of note that they have not attempted any here.

Verse 7. Immediately his feet and ancle-bones received strength] The suddenness of the cure was the proof of the miracle: his walking and leaping were the evidences of it.

9 ^a And all the people saw him walking and praising God:

10 And they knew that it was he which ^b sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.

11 And as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in the porch ^c that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.

12 And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?

13 ^d The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, ^e hath glorified his Son Jesus; whom ye ^f delivered up, and ^g denied him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go.

14 But ye denied ^h the Holy One ⁱ and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you;

xxvii. 2.—^a Matt. xxvii. 20. Mark xv. 11. Luke xliii. 18, 20, 21. John xviii. 40. xix. 15. Ch. xiii. 28.—^b Ps. xvi. 10. Mark i. 24. Luke i. 35. Ch. ii. 27. iv. 27.—^c Ch. vii. 52. xxi. 14.

Verse 8. Walking, and leaping, and praising God.] He walked, in obedience to the command of the apostle, rise up and walk: he leaped, to try the strength of his limbs, and to be convinced of the reality of the cure: he praised God as a testimony of the gratitude he felt for the cure he had received.

Verse 9. And all the people saw him] The miracle was wrought in the most public manner, and in the most public place, and in a place where the best judgment could be formed of it; for, as it was a divine operation, the priests, &c., were the most proper persons to judge of it; and under their notice it was now wrought.

Verse 11. Held Peter and John] He felt the strongest affection for them, as the instruments by which the divine influence was conveyed to his diseased body.

Verse 12. As though by our own power] Miraculous energy.

Or holiness] Meaning religious attachment to the worship of God.

Verse 13. The God of Abraham, &c.] This was wisely introduced, to show them that He whom they called their God had acknowledged Jesus Christ for his Son, and wrought this miracle in his name; and, by thus honouring Jesus whom they slew, he had charged home the guilt of that murder upon them.

Denied him in the presence of Pilate] Ye have renounced him as your king, and denounced him to death as a malefactor, when Pilate, convinced of his perfect innocence, judged it proper and just to let him go.

Verse 14. Ye denied the HOLY ONE] A manifest reference to Ps. xvi. 10.

And desired a murderer] Barabbas: the case must have been fresh in their own remembrance.

Verse 15. And killed the Prince of life] The author of this life; not only implying that all life proceeds from Jesus Christ as its source, but that the life-giving influence of that religion which they were now proclaiming came all through him.

Verse 16. And his name] JESUS, the Saviour: through faith in his name, as the Saviour, and author of life, and all its concomitant blessings, such as health, &c. It is not quite clear whether the apostles refer to their own faith in Jesus, or to the faith of the lame man. However the faith may be understood, it was only the means to receive the blessing which the apostles most positively attribute, not to their power or holiness, but to Jesus Christ alone. Faith always receives; never gives.

Verse 17. I wot] I know. Wot is from the Anglo-Saxon. Through ignorance ye did it] This is a very tender excuse for them; and one which seems to be necessary, in order to show them that their state was not utterly desperate; for if all that they did to Christ had been through absolute malice (they well knowing who he was), if any sin could be 15 And killed the 'Prince of life, 'whom God hath raised from the dead; 'whereof we are witnesses.

16 'And his name, through faith in his name, hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know; yea, the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all.

17 And now, brethren, I wot that 'through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers.

18 But 'those things, which God before had 'shewed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled.

19 'Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord;

20 And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you.

21 'Whom the heaven must receive until the times of 'restitution of all things, 'which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets, since the world began.

22 For Moses truly said unto the fathers, 'A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you.

23 And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.

24 Yea, and all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days.

25 'Ye are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with our fathers, saying unto Abraham, 'And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed.

26 'Unto you first, God, having raised up his Son Jesus, 'sent him to bless you, 'in turning away every one of you from his iniquities.

supposed to be unpardonable, it must have been theirs. Verse 18. But those things—he hath so fulfilled.] Your ignorance and malice have been overruled by the sovereign wisdom and power of God, and have become the instruments of fulfilling the divine purpose, that Christ must suffer, in order to make an atonement for the sin of the world.

Verse 19. And be converted] Turn to God through this Christ, deeply deploring your transgressions, and believing on his name; that your sins may be blotted out, which are not only recorded against you, but for which you are condemned by the justice of God. The blotting out of sins may refer to the ceremony of the waters of jealousy, where the curse that was written in the book was to be blotted out with the bitter water.

When the times of refreshing shall come] THAT the times of refreshing MAY come. The original word signifies a breathing time, or respite, and may be here applied to the space that elapsed from this time till the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. Taking the word in the sense of refreshment in general, it may mean the whole reign of the kingdom of grace, and the blessings which God gives here below to all genuine believers, peace, love, joy, and communion with himself.

Verse 20. Which before was preached unto you] Instead of before preached, many MSS. have before designed, or appointed; and this is without doubt the true reading. Christ crucified was the person whom God had from the beginning appointed or designed for the Jewish people.

Verse 21. The times of restitution of all things] This must mean the accomplishment of all the prophecies and promises contained in the Old Testament relative to the kingdom of Christ upon earth; the whole reign of grace, from the ascension of our Lord till his coming again, for of all these things have the holy prophets spoken; and, as the grace of the gospel was intended to destroy the reign of sin, its energetic influence is represented as restoring all things, destroying the bad state, and establishing the good. When such a work becomes universal, as the scriptures seem to intimate that it will, then all things will be restored in the fullest sense of the term.

Since the world began.] As the original word signifies complete and ever-during existence or eternity, it is sometimes applied, by way of accommodation, to denote the whole course of any one period, such as the Mosaic dispensation. It may therefore here refer to that state of things from the giving of the law; and as Moses is mentioned in the next verse, and none before him, it is probable that the phrase should be so understood here. But, if we apply it to the commencement of time, the sense is still good.

Verse 22. Moses truly said unto the fathers] From this appeal to Moses it is evident that Peter wished them to understand that Jesus Christ was come, not as an ordinary prophet, to exhort to repentance and amendment, but as a legislator, who was to give them a new law, and whose commands and precepts they were to obey, on pain of endless destruction.

Verse 25. Ye are the children of the prophets] As ye are the children or disciples of the prophets, ye are bound to believe their predictions, and obey their precepts; and not only so, but ye are entitled to their promises. Your duty and your interest go hand in hand; and there is not a blessing contained in the covenant which was made with your fathers but belongs to you.

Verse 26. Unto you first, God, having raised up] As you are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant, the first offers of salvation belong to you, and God thus makes them to you.

CHAPTER IV.

The priests and Sadducees are incensed at the apostles' teaching, and put them in prison, 1-8. The number of those who believed, 4. The rulers, elders, and scribes call the apostles before them, and question them concerning their authority to teach, 5-7. Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, answers, and proclaims Jesus, 8-12. They are confounded at his discourse and the miracle wrought on the lame man, yet command them not to preach in the name of Jesus, 13-18. Peter and John refuse to obey, 19, 20. They are farther threatened and dismissed, 21, 22. They return to their own company, who all join in praise and prayer to God, 23-30. God answers, and fills them with the Holy Spirit, 31. The blessed state of the primitive disciples, 32-35. The case of Joses, who sells his estate, and brought the money to the common stock, 36, 37.

AND as they spake unto the people, the priests, and the captain of the temple, and the Sadducees, came upon them,
 2^b Being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.

3 And they laid hands on them, and put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now eventide.

4 Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand.

5 And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and elders, and scribes,

6 And Annas the high-priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high-priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

7 And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, 'By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?

8 'Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

9 If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

10 Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, 'that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

11 'This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner.

12 'Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.

13 Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.

14 And beholding the man which was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it.

15 But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they conferred among themselves, 16 Saying, 'What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it.

17 But that it spread no further among the people, let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name.

18 'And they called them, and commanded them

Verse 1. The priests] These persons had evidenced the most implacable enmity against Christ from the beginning.

The captain of the temple] See on Luke xxii. 4.

The Sadducees] Whose whole system was now in danger by the preaching of the resurrection of Christ; for they believed not in the immortality of the soul, nor in any future world.

Verse 2. Being grieved] They were thoroughly fatigued with the continuance of this preaching; their minds suffered more labour, through vexation at the success of the apostles, than the bodies of the apostles did in their fatiguing exercise of preaching during the whole day.

Verse 4. The number—was about five thousand.] That is, as I understand the passage, the 120 which were converted before pentecost, the 3000 converted at pentecost, and 1880 converted since, making in the whole 5000, or about that number.

Verse 5. Their rulers, and elders, and scribes] Those with the high priest Annas formed the sanhedrin, or grand council of the Jews.

Verse 6. Annas] Though this man was not now actually in the office of high priest, yet he had possessed it for eleven years, bore the title all his life, and had the honour of seeing five of his sons fill that eminent place after him—an honour that never happened to any other person from the commencement of the Mosaic institution.

And Caiaphas] He was son-in-law to Annas, John xviii. 13, was now high priest, and the same who a short time before condemned Christ to be crucified.

And John] Dr. Lightfoot conjectures, with great probability, that this was Jochanan ben Zaccai, who was very famous at that time in the Jewish nation. [Jochanan, however, was not of the high priestly race.]

And Alexander] This was probably Alexander Lysimachus, one of the richest Jews of his time, brother to the famous Philo Judæus, and father of Alexander Tiberius, who married Berenice, the daughter of Agrippa the elder, and was governor of Judea after Cuspius Fadus. [This is very improbable; he was at this time Alabarch of Alexandria.]

Of the kindred of the high priest] Luke distinctly mentions all these, to show how formidable the enemies were against whom the infant church of Christ had to contend.

Verse 7. By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?] It is very likely that they believed the whole to be the effect of magic; and, as all intercourse with familiar spirits, and all spells, charms, &c., were unlawful, they probably hoped that, by the exorcism, this business would come out, and that then these disturbers of their peace would be put to death. Some think the words should be thus understood: Who gave you authority to teach publicly? This belongs to the sanhedrin.

Verse 8. Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost] Which guided him into all the truth, and raised him far above the fear of man; placing him in a widely different state of mind to that in which he was found when, in the hall of Caiaphas, he denied his Master through fear of a servant girl.

Verse 9. The good deed done] The benefit he has received in being restored to perfect soundness.

Verse 10. By the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth] This was a very bold declaration in the presence of such an assembly; but he felt he stood on good ground.

Verse 11. This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders] By your rejection and crucifixion of Jesus Christ, you have fulfilled one of your own prophecies, Ps. cxviii. 22: and, as one part of this prophecy is now so literally fulfilled, ye may rest assured, so shall the other; and this rejected stone shall speedily become the head stone of the corner.

Verse 12. Neither is there salvation in any other] No kind of healing, whether for body or soul, can come through any but him who is called JESUS.]

For there is none other name] Not only no other person, but no name except that divinely appointed one, Matt. i. 21, by which salvation from sin can be expected—none given under heaven—no other means ever devised by God himself for the salvation of a lost world.

Verse 13. The boldness of Peter and John] The freedom and fluency with which they spoke; for they spoke now from the immediate influence of the Holy Ghost, and their word was with power.

That they were unlearned and ignorant men] Persons not brought up in or given to literary pursuits—and ignorant persons in private life, brought up in its occupations alone. It does not mean ignorance in the common acceptance of the term; and all the apostles seem to have been men of good, sound, strong, common sense.

They took knowledge of them] The word may imply that they got information that they had been disciples of Christ, and probably they might have seen them in our Lord's company. [Recollected is the true sense of the original.]

That they had been with Jesus.] He who is taught in the school of Christ will ever speak to the point, and intelligibly too; though his words may not have that polish with which they who prefer sound to sense are often carried away.

not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus.

19 But Peter and John answered and said unto them, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye.

20 "For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.

21 So when they had further threatened them, they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, "because of the people: for all men glorified God for "that which was done.

22 For the man was above forty years old, on whom this miracle of healing was shewed.

23 And being let go, "they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.

24 And when they heard that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, "thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is:

25 Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, "Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?

26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord and against his Christ.

Verse 14. They could say nothing against it. If the doctrine be false, the man cannot have been miraculously healed: if the man be miraculously healed, then the doctrine must be true that it is by the name of Jesus of Nazareth that he has been healed.

Verse 17. But that it spread no further. Not the news of the miraculous healing of the lame man, but the doctrine and influence which these men preach and exert.

Let us straitly threaten them. Let us threaten them with threatening, a Hebraism, and a proof that St. Luke has translated the words of the council into Greek, just as they were spoken.

That they speak—to no man in this name. Nothing so ominous to them as the name of Christ crucified, because they themselves had been his crucifiers.

Verse 18. Not to speak—nor teach in the name of Jesus. Any other doctrine, and any other name, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites and infidels will bear, but the doctrine which is according to godliness, proclaiming salvation through the blood of Christ crucified, they will not bear.

Verse 19. Whether it be right in the sight of God. Your own consciences testify that we should be sinners against our heavenly King, were we to act according to your orders; and the conclusion is, that we cannot but speak what we have seen and heard.

Verse 21. When they had further threatened them. When they had added to their former threatenings, repeating the former menaces, and adding new penalties.

Finding nothing how they might punish them. Or, not finding a cause why they might punish them. This reading is supported by the Syriac and Arabic.

Because of the people. The converts were now so numerous that the sanhedrin was afraid to proceed to any extremities, lest an insurrection should be the consequence.

Verse 23. The man was above forty years old. All difficulties, small or great, yield equally to the sovereign power of God. It is as easy with God to convert a sinner of forty or fourscore, as one of ten years old.

Verse 24. Lord, thou art God. Thou God art the sovereign Lord.

28 "For to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done.

29 And now, Lord, behold their threatenings; and grant unto thy servants, "that with all boldness they may speak thy word, 30 By stretching forth thine hand to heal; "and that signs and wonders may be done "by the name of "thy holy child Jesus.

31 And when they had prayed, "the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, "and they spake the word of God with boldness.

32 And the multitude of them that believed "were of one heart and of one soul: "neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.

33 And with "great power gave the apostles "witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and "great grace was upon them all.

34 Neither was there any among them that lacked: "for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold,

35 "and laid them down at the apostles' feet: "and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

36 And Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus, 37 "Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

Verse 25. By the mouth of thy servant David hast said. Thus we find that David spoke by the inspiration of God; and that the second Psalm relates to Jesus Christ, and predicts the vain attempts made by Jewish and heathen powers to suppress Christianity.

Verse 26. Against the Lord and against his Christ. Against his ANOINTED.

Verse 27. There is a parenthesis in this verse that is not sufficiently noticed: it should be read in connexion with ver. 28, thus: For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed (for to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done), both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles and people of Israel, were gathered together. [There is no sufficient authority for this reading, and it is out of harmony with the spirit of the passage.]

Verse 29. And now, Lord, behold their threatenings. It is not against us, but against thee, that they conspire: the whole of their enmity is against thee.

Verse 30. Thy holy child Jesus. Thy holy SERVANT, as in ver. 24: the word is the same in both places.

Verse 31. The place was shaken. This earthquake was an evidence of the presence of God, and a most direct answer to their prayer, as far as that prayer concerned themselves.

And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost. Though these disciples had received the Holy Spirit on the day of pentecost, yet they were capable of larger communications; and what they had then received did not preclude the necessity of frequent supplies, on emergent occasions. God gives grace for the time being, but no stock for futurity, because he will keep all his followers continually dependent on himself.

Verse 32. The multitude of them that believed. The whole 5000, mentioned verse 4, and probably many others who had been converted by the ministry of the other apostles since that time.

Were of one heart and of one soul. Were in a state of the most perfect friendship and affection.

They had all things common. See the notes on chap. ii. 44, where this subject is examined.

Verse 33. With great power gave the apostles witness] The Holy Spirit enabled them, with striking miracles, to give proof of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus; for this is the point that was particularly to be proved: that he was slain and buried, all knew: that he rose again from the dead, many knew; but it was necessary to give such proofs as should convince and confound all.

Great grace was upon them all.] They all received much of the favour or grace of God; and they had much favour with all who feared God. In both these ways this clause may be understood; for the word means favour, whether that be evidenced by benevolence or beneficence, or by both.

Verse 34. Neither was there any among them that lacked] It was customary with the Jews to call the poor together, to eat of the sacrifices; but as the priests, &c., were incensed against Christ and Christianity, the Christian poor could have no advantage of this kind; therefore, by making a common stock for the present necessity, the poor were supplied.

Verse 35. Laid down at the apostles' feet] To show how cordially and entirely they parted with them. And they entrusted the management of the whole to those men to whom they found God had entrusted the gifts of his Holy Spirit, and the doctrine of the kingdom of heaven.

Verse 36. The son of consolation] The word signifies exhortation, as well as consolation, and is indeed distinguished from the latter, 1 Cor. xiv. 8; the original name was probably Bar-naba, or Bar-nebia, which signifies the son of prophecy or exhortation; and this is certainly one sense which prophecy has in the New Testament; and in this way Barnabas distinguished himself among the apostles. See chap. xi. 23.

A Levite and of the country of Cyprus] Cyprus is an island in the Mediterranean Sea, off Cilicia, and not very distant from the Jewish coast. The Levites, as a tribe, had no land in Israel; but the individuals certainly might make purchases anywhere in the country.

CHAPTER V.

The hypocrisy of Ananias and his wife Sapphira, and their awful death, 1-11. The apostles work many miracles, and the church of God is increased, 12-16. The high priest and the Sadducees, being incensed against the apostles, seize and put them in prison, 17, 18. The angel of God delivers them, and commands them to go to the temple, and proclaim the gospel, 19, 20. The high-priest, having gathered the council together in the morning, sends to the prison to have the apostles brought before him, 21. The officers return, and report that they found the prison shut, and the watch set, but that the men had got out, 22, 23. A messenger arrives in the meanwhile, and says that the apostles are preaching in the temple, 24, 25. The captain and officers go and bring them before the council, who expostulate with them, 26-28. The apostles defend themselves, and charge the council with the murder of Christ; and assert his resurrection from the dead and ascension to the right hand of God, 29-32. The council are confounded, and purpose to slay the apostles, 33. Gamaliel gives them reasonable and prudent advice, 34-39. The council agree to it, but, before they discharge the apostles, beat them, and command them not to teach in the name of Jesus, 40. They depart rejoicing in their persecution, and continue to preach Jesus Christ, 41, 42.

BUT a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession,

2 And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

3 ^b But Peter said, Ananias, why hath ^c Satan filled thine heart ^d to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?

4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.

5 And Ananias hearing these words ^e fell down, and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things.

6 And the young men arose, ^f wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him.

7 And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in.

8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.

9 Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together ^g to tempt the Spirit of the Verse 1. But a certain man named Ananias] Of these unhappy people we have no farther account than what is recorded here.

Verse 2. Kept back part of the price] Not being willing to trust entirely to the bounty of providence, as the others did; thinking, probably, that, as the whole was their own, they had a right to do with it as they pleased. And so they had: they were under no necessity to sell their possession; but the act of selling it, for the ostensible purpose of bringing it into the common stock, left them no farther control over it, and their pretence, that the money which they brought was the whole produce of the sale, was a direct lie in itself, and an attempt to deceive the Holy Spirit, under whose influence they pretended to act.

Verse 3. Why hath Satan filled thine heart] The verb which we translate to fill, may signify, to instigate, excite, impel, &c., and it was a common belief, as well among the heathens as among the Jews and Christians, that, when a man did evil, he was excited to it by the influence and malice of an evil spirit.

To lie to the Holy Ghost] Lying against the Holy Ghost is in the next verse said to be lying against God; therefore the Holy Ghost is GOD.

To keep back part of the price] The verb is used by the Greek writers to signify purling part of the public money, peculation. The word is used here with great propriety, as the money for which the estate was sold was public property; as it was for this purpose alone that the sale was made.

Lord? behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out.

10 *Then fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11 ^b And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things.

12 And ^c by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (^d and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.

13 And ^e of the rest durst no man join himself to them: ^f but the people magnified them.

15 Inasmuch that they brought forth the sick ^g into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, ^h that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.

16 There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing ⁱ sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one.

17 ^j Then the high-priest rose up, and all they that were with him, (which is the sect of the Sadducees,) and were filled with ^k indignation.

18 ^l And laid their hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison.

19 But ^m the angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors, and brought them forth, and said, 20 Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people ⁿ all the words of this life.

21 And when they heard that, they entered into the temple early in the morning, and taught. ^o But the high-priest came, and they that were with him, and called the council together, and all the senate of the children of Israel, and sent to the prison to have them brought.

22 But when the officers came, and found them not in the prison, they returned, and told,

Verse 5. Fell down, and gave up the ghost] Falling down, he expired, breathed his last: "Gave up the ghost" is a very improper translation here. See the note on Gen. xv. 8, and on Matt. xxvii. 50.

Verse 6. The young men arose] Some of the stout young men belonging to the disciples then present, who were the fittest to undertake a work of this kind, which required considerable bodily exertion.

Buried him.] This was on the same day in which he died. It was a clear case that he was dead, and dead by a judgment of God that would not be revoked.

Verse 9. To tempt the Spirit of the Lord?] So the Holy Ghost, God, and the Spirit of the Lord, are the same person.

Verse 10. Yielded up the ghost] See ver. 5. It was not by Peter's words, nor through Peter's prayers, nor through shame, nor through remorse, that this guilty pair died, but by an immediate judgment of God. I think their sin was what the apostle, 1 John, v. 16, calls a sin unto death; a sin which must be punished with temporal death, or the death of the body, while mercy was extended to the soul. That hypocrisy may be afraid to show her face, God makes these two an example of his justice; but, because they had not the ordinary respite, we may presume that God extended mercy to them, though cut off almost in the act of sin. Their case, however, cannot become a precedent, allowing them to have received mercy.

Verse 11. Great fear came upon all the church] This judgment answered the end for which it was inflicted; a deeply religious fear occupied every mind, and hypocrisy and deception were banished from this holy assembly.

Verse 12. By the hands of the apostles] This verse should be read with the 15th, to which it properly belongs.

Verse 13. And of the rest, durst no man join himself to them] Calmet observes, that the Jewish nation was then divided into many different sects; and none of these dared to join themselves to them; neither Pharisees, Sadducees, nor Herodians, as such, were found in this simple holy church. [The passage is obscure, and little light is thrown on it by Calmet's note.]

Verse 14. And believers were the more added to the Lord] Those who credited the divine mission of Christ.

Verse 15. Inasmuch that they brought forth the sick] This verse is a continuation of the subject begun in the 12th.

That—the shadow of Peter passing by] But it does not appear that the persons who thus thought and acted were of the number of those converts already made to the faith of Christ; nor does it appear that any person was healed in this way. The sacred penman simply relates the impression made on the people's minds; and how they acted in consequence of this impression.

Verse 18. Sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits] Here it is evident that sick people are distinguished from those who were vexed with unclean spirits; and therefore they were not one and the same thing.

Verse 17. The high priest—and—the sect of the Sadducees]

The heresy of the Sadducees. In this place, as well as in several others, the word heresy has no evil meaning in itself; it is a word of distinction, and may receive either a good or bad colouring from the persons or opinions designated by it. In its first acceptation it signifies simply a choice: afterwards it was applied to designate all those persons who made the same choice; and hence the word sect and it became synonymous: in process of time it was applied to those professing Christianity, who made, in some cases, a different choice as to some article of faith, or form of worship, from those which had obtained in that part of the church with which they had been before connected.

Were filled with indignation.] With zeal. Its meaning in this place is easily discerned; and not improperly translated indignation, in our version.

Verse 18. Put them in the common prison.] It being too late in the evening to bring them to a hearing.

Verse 19. But the angel of the Lord—opened the prison doors] This was done: 1. to increase the confidence of the apostles, by showing them that they were under the continual care of God; and, 2. to show the Jewish rulers that they were fighting against him while persecuting his followers, and attempting to prevent them from preaching the gospel.

Verse 20. All the words of this life.] All the doctrines of life eternal, founded on the word, death, and resurrection of Christ Jesus. This is another periphrasis for gospel.

Verse 23. The prison truly found we shut] The doors were not broken open, the guards were properly posted; there was no man within!

Verse 26. Brought them without violence] They felt it their duty to obey every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, and so cheerfully went with them, trusting in the Lord their God.

Verse 28. Did not we straitly command you] With commanding did we not command you; a Hebraism—another proof of the accuracy and fidelity of St. Luke, who seems always to give every man's speech as he delivered it; not the substance, but the very words.

Not teach in this name?] That is, of JESUS as the Christ or Messiah. His saving name, and the doctrines connected with it, were the only theme and substance of their discourses.

Intend to bring this man's blood upon us.] You speak in such a way of him as to persuade the people that we have crucified an innocent man.

Verse 29. We ought to obey God rather than men.] We have received our commission from GOD; we dare not lay it down at the desire or command of men.

Verse 30. The God of our fathers raised up Jesus] It was well to introduce this, that the council might at once see that they preached no strange God.

Whom ye slew] They charge them again with the murder of Christ, as they had done before.

Verse 31. Him hath God exalted with his right hand] By a supereminent display of his almighty power, for so the right hand of God often means; he has raised him from the dead, all safety, and the keepers standing without before the doors: but when we had opened, we found no man within.

24 Now when the high-priest and * the captain of the temple and the chief priests heard these things, they doubted of them whereunto this would grow.

25 Then came one and told them, saying, Behold, the men whom ye put in prison are standing in the temple, and teaching the people.

26 Then went the captain with the officers, and brought them without violence: * for they feared the people, lest they should have been stoned.

27 And when they had brought them, they set them before the council: and the high-priest asked them, 28 Saying, * Did not we straitly command you that ye should not teach in this name? and, behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, * and intend to bring this man's * blood upon us.

29 Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, * We ought to obey God rather than men.

30 * The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and * hanged on a tree.

31 * Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be * a Prince and * a Saviour, * for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins.

32 And * we are his witnesses of these things; and so is also the Holy Ghost, * whom God hath given to them that obey him.

33 * When they heard that, they were cut to the heart, and took counsel to slay them.

and raised his human nature to the throne of his glory. A Prince] The leader or director in the way.

And a Saviour] A deliverer or preserver. Jesus and SAVIOUR are nearly of the same import.

Forgiveness of sins.] The taking away of sins. This is not to be restrained to the mere act of justification; it implies the removal of sin, whether its power, guilt, or impurity be considered.

The two words in Italics, in this text, to be, are impertinently introduced; it reads much better without them.

Verse 32. Of these things] Of these transactions: i. e., of Christ's life and miracles, and of your murderous proceedings against him.

And so is also the Holy Ghost] In the gift of tongues lately communicated; and by his power and influence on our souls, by which we are enabled to give irresistible witness of our Lord's resurrection.

To them that obey him.] The Spirit of God is given to the obedient: in proportion as a man who has received the first influences of it is obedient to those influences, in the same proportion the gifts and graces, the light, life, and power, of the Holy Spirit, are increased in his soul.

Verse 33. They were cut to the heart] Literally, they were sawn through. They were stung to the heart, not with compunction nor remorse, but with spite, malice, and revenge.

Verse 34. A Pharisee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law] He was president of the council after the death of his own father, Rabbân Simeon, who was the son of Hillel. He was St. Paul's master, and the 35th receiver of the traditions, and on this account might not be improperly termed a doctor of the law, because he was one that kept and handed down the Cabala received from Mount Sinai. He died eighteen years before the destruction of Jerusalem, his son Simeon succeeding him in the chair, who perished in the ruins of the city.

Verse 35. What ye intend to do] What ye are about to do: they had already intended to destroy them; and they were now about to do it.

Verse 36. Rose up Theudas] Dr. Lightfoot thinks that the Theudas mentioned by Josephus in the Ant. lib. xx. cap.

34 Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named * Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space;

35 And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men.

36 For before these days rose up Theudas, boasting himself to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as * obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought.

37 After this man rose up Judas of Galilee in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: he also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed.

38 And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone: * for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought:

39 * But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even * to fight against God.

40 And to him they agreed; and when they had * called the apostles, * and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go.

4, sect. 1, is the person referred to in the text, a mistake of ten years having been made in the date by the historian. I confess the matter does not appear to me of much consequence; it is mentioned by Gamaliel in a careless way, and St. Luke, as we have already seen, scrupulously gives the words of every speaker. The story was no doubt well known, and there were no doubts formed on it by the Jewish council.

Boasting himself to be somebody] Saying that he was a great personage, i. e., according to the supposition of Bishop Pearce, setting himself up to be King of the Jews.

Verse 37. Judas of Galilee] Josephus mentions the insurrection made by Judas of Galilee, Ant. lib. xviii. cap. 1, and says it was when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.

Verse 38. Refrain from these men] Do not molest them, leave them to God; whatever pretends to be done in the name of God, but is not of him, will have his curse and not his blessing.

Verse 39. But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it] Because his counsel cannot fail; and his work cannot be counteracted.

Verse 40. To him they agreed] That is, not to slay the apostles, nor to attempt any farther to imprison them; but their malevolence could not be thus easily satisfied; and therefore they beat them—probably gave each of them thirty-nine stripes; and, having commanded them not to speak in the name of Jesus, they let them go. It was of Jesus they were afraid: not of the apostles.

Verse 41. Rejoicing that they were counted worthy, &c.] The whole verse may be read thus: But they departed rejoicing from the presence of the sanhedrim, because they were deemed worthy to be dishonoured on account of THE NAME. THE NAME, probably, by this time, distinguished both the author of salvation and the sacred system of doctrine which the apostles preached.

Verse 42. Daily in the temple] That is, at the hours of morning and evening prayer; for they felt it their duty to worship God in public, and to help others to make a profitable use of the practice.

They ceased not to teach and preach Jesus] How little must these men have regarded their lives, who in the midst of such danger could pursue a line of conduct which, to all human views, must terminate in their ruin. They loved their Master, they loved his work, they loved their thankless countrymen, they loved their present wages—persecution and stripes, and hated nothing but their own lives! These men were proper persons to be employed in converting the world.

CHAPTER VI

The Hellenistic Jews complain against the Hebrews, that their widows were neglected in the daily ministration, 1. To remedy the evil complained of, the apostles appoint seven deacons to superintend the temporal affairs of the church, 2-6. The progress of the word of God in Jerusalem, 7. Stephen, one of the deacons, becomes very eminent, and confounds various Jews of the synagogues of the Libertines, &c. 8-10. They suborn false witnesses against him, to get him put to death, 11-14. He appears before the council with an angelic countenance, 15.

AND in those days, * when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the ^b Grecians against the Hebrews, becausetheir widows were neglected ^c in the daily ministration.

2 Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, ^d It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.

3 Wherefore, brethren, ^e look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

* Ch. ii. 41. iv. 4. v. 14. Ver. 7.—^b Ch. ix. 29. xi. 20.—^c Ch. iv. 35.—^d Exod. xviii. 17.—^e Deut. i. 13. Ch. i. 21. xvi. 2. 1 Tim. iii. 7.—^f Ch. ii. 42.—^g Ch. xi. 24.—^h Ch. viii. 5, 26. xxi. 8.—1 Rev. ii.

Verse 1. A murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews] Those who are here termed Grecians, or Hellenists, were Jews who sojourned now at Jerusalem, but lived in countries where the Greek language was spoken, and probably in general knew no other. They are distinguished here from those called Hebrews, by which we are to understand native Jews, who spoke what was then termed the Hebrew language, a sort of Chaldeo-Syriac.

The cause of the murmuring mentioned here seems to have been this: When all the disciples had put their property into a common stock, it was intended that out of it each should have his quantum of supply. The foreign or Hellenistic Jews began to be jealous, that their widows were neglected in the daily ministration, that they either had not the proportion, or were not duly served; the Palestine Jews being partial to those of their own country. This shows that the community of goods could never have been designed to become general. Indeed, it was no ordinance of God; and, in any state of society, must be in general impracticable.

Verse 2. It is not reason] It is not pleasing, proper, or fitting.

And serve tables.] Become providers of daily bread for your widows and poor: others can do this, to whom our important office is not intrusted.

Verse 3. Wherefore—look ye out among you seven men] Though seven was a sacred number among the Jews, yet there does not appear to be any mystery intended here. Probably the seven men were to take each his day of service; and then there would be a superintendent for these widows, &c., for each day of the week.

Of honest report] Persons to whose character there is authentic testimony, well known and accredited.

Full of the Holy Ghost] Saved into the Spirit of the gospel dispensation.

And wisdom] Prudence, discretion, and economy; for mere piety and uprightness could not be sufficient, where so 4 But we ^f will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

5 And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, ^g a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and ^h Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and ⁱ Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch:

many must be pleased, and where frugality, impartiality, and liberality, must ever walk hand in hand.

Verse 4. We will give ourselves continually to prayer] We will steadfastly and invariably attend, we will carefully keep our hearts to this work. The word is very emphatic.

To prayer] Even apostles could not live without prayer; they had no independent graces; what they had could not be retained without an increase; and for this increase they must make prayer and supplication, depending continually on their God.

Ministry of the word.] The *deacons*hip of the word; the continual proclamation of the gospel of their Lord.

Verse 5. Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost] A person every way properly fitted for his work; and thus qualified to be the first martyr of the Christian church.

Nicolas, a proselyte of Antioch] A heathen Greek who had not only believed in the God of Israel, but had also received circumcision, and consequently was a proselyte of the covenant; for, had he been only a proselyte of the gate, the Jews could not have associated with him. From this Nicolas, it is supposed that the sect called Niccolaitans, mentioned Rev. ii. 6, 15, derive their origin. [There is no foundation for this.]

Verse 6. And when they had prayed] It plainly appears that the choice of the church was not sufficient: nor did the church think it sufficient; but, as they knew their own members best, the apostles directed them, ver. 3, to choose those persons whom they deemed best qualified, according to the criterion laid down by the apostles themselves, that they should be of honest report, and full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom. The apostles, receiving them from the hands of the church, consecrated them to God by prayer, imploring his blessing on them and their labour; and when this was done, they laid their hands upon them in the presence of the disciples, and thus appointed them to this sacred and impor-

8 And Stephen, ^b full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

9 Then there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the ^c Libertines, and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia and of Asia, disputing with Stephen.

10 And ^d they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.

11 ^e Then they suborned men which said, We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses, and against God.

tant work; for it is evident they did not get their commission merely to serve tables, but to proclaim, in conjunction with and under the direction of the apostles, the word of life.

Verse 7. The word of God increased] God will ever bless his own word, when ministered by those whom he has qualified to proclaim it.

A great company of the priests were obedient to the faith.] This was one of the greatest miracles wrought by the grace of Christ: that persons so intent on the destruction of Christ, his apostles, and his doctrine, should at last espouse that doctrine, is astonishing; and that they who had withstood the evidence of the miracles of Christ should have yielded to the doctrine of his death and resurrection, is worthy of note.

Verse 8. Stephen, full of faith and power] Instead of faith, grace is the reading of several MSS., Versions, and Fathers. Stephen was full of grace; and, in consequence, he was full of power, of the divine energy by which he was enabled to work great wonders and miracles among the people.

Verse 9. The synagogue—of the Libertines, &c.] The persons mentioned here were foreign Jews, who appear to have had a synagogue peculiar to themselves at Jerusalem, in which they were accustomed to worship when they came to the public festivals.

It is commonly thought that the Libertines were the sons of such Jews as had been slaves, and obtained their freedom by the favour of their masters; but it is to be observed that with these Libertines the Cyrenians and Alexandrians are here joined, as having one and the same synagogue for their

12 And they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council,

13 And set up false witnesses, which said, This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law:

14 ^f For we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall ^g destroy this place, and shall change the ^h customs which Moses delivered us.

15 And all that sat in the council, looking stedfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel.

public worship. There was in Libya, the district in or near which the Cyrenians and Alexandrians lived, a town or district called Libertina, whose inhabitants bore the name of Libertines, when Christianity prevailed there. And it seems probable that the town or district, and the people, existed in the time of which Luke is here speaking.

Verse 10. They were not able to resist the wisdom, &c.] He was wise, well exercised and experienced, in divine things; and, as appears by his defence, in the following chapter, well versed in the Jewish history. The spirit by which he spoke was the Holy Spirit, and its power was irresistible.

Verse 11. Then they suborned men] They made underhand work; got associated to themselves profligate persons, who for money would swear anything.

Blasphemous words against Moses, and against God] This was the most deadly charge they could bring against him.

Verse 13. Against this holy place] The temple, that it shall be destroyed.

Verse 15. Saw his face, as it had been the face of an angel.] Sayings like this are frequent among the Jewish writers, who represent God as distinguishing eminent men by causing a glory to shine from their faces.

It appears that the light and power of God which dwelt in his soul shone through his face, and God gave them this proof of the falsity of the testimony which was now before them.

CHAPTER VII.

Stephen being permitted to answer for himself relative to the charge of blasphemy brought against him by his accusers, gives a circumstantial relation of the call of Abraham, when he dwelt in Mesopotamia, in Charran, &c. 1-8. The history of Jacob and Joseph, 9-17. The persecution of their fathers in Egypt, 18, 19. The history of Moses and his acts till the Exodus from Egypt, 20-37. The rebellion and idolatry of the Israelites in the wilderness, 38-43. The erection of the tabernacle of witness, which continued till the time of David, 44-46. Of the temple built by Solomon for that God who cannot be confined to temples built by hands, 47-50. Being probably interrupted in the prosecution of his discourse, he urges home the charge of rebellion against God, persecution of his prophets, the murder of Christ, and neglect of their own law, against them, 51-53. They are filled with indignation, and proceed to violence, 54. He sees the glory of God, and Christ at the right hand of the Father; and declares the glorious vision, 55, 56. They rush upon him, drag him out of the city, and stone him, 57, 58. He invokes the Lord Jesus, prays for his murderers, and expires, 59, 60.

THEN said the high-priest, "Are these things so?"

2 And he said, "Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken; "The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran,

3 And said unto him, "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall shew thee.

4 Then "came he out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.

5 And he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: "yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

6 And God spake on this wise, "That his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil "four hundred years.

7 And the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth, and "serve me in this place.

8 "And he gave him the covenant of circumcision: "and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day: "and Isaac begat Jacob; and "Jacob begat the twelve patriarchs.

Verse 1. Are these things so? Hast thou predicted the destruction of the temple? And hast thou said that Jesus of Nazareth shall change our customs, abolish our religious rites and temple-service? Hast thou spoken these blasphemous things against Moses, and against God? Here was some colour of justice; for Stephen was permitted to defend himself.

Verse 2. Men, brethren, and fathers] By translating as we do, men, brethren, and fathers, and putting a comma after men, we make Stephen address three classes, when in fact there were but two: the elders and scribes, whom he addressed as fathers; and the common people, whom he calls brethren.

The God of glory appeared, &c.] Stephen shows that he had uttered no blasphemy either against God, Moses, or the temple; but states that his accusers, and the Jews in general were guilty of the faults with which they charged him: that they had from the beginning rejected and despised Moses, and had always violated his laws. He proceeds to state that there is no blasphemy in saying that the temple shall be destroyed: they had been without a temple till the days of David; nor does God ever confine himself to temples built by hands, seeing he fills both heaven and earth: that Jesus is the prophet of whom Moses spoke, and whom they had persecuted, condemned, and at last put to death: that they were wicked and uncircumcised in heart and in ears, and always resisted the Holy Ghost as their fathers did.

Was in Mesopotamia] In that part of it where Ur of the Chaldees was situated.

Before he dwelt in Charran] This is called Haran in our translation of Gen. xi. 31; this place also belonged to Mesopotamia, as well as Ur, but is placed west of it on the maps.

Verse 5. Gave him none inheritance] As Abraham was obliged to buy a burying-place in Canaan, Gen. xxiii., it is obvious he had no inheritance there.

Verse 6. Four hundred years.] Moses says, Exod. xii. 40, that the sojourning of the children of Israel in Egypt—was 430 years. St. Stephen uses the round number of 400, leaving out the odd tens, a thing very common, not only in the sacred writers, but in all others.

Verse 7. Will I judge] I will punish, for in this sense the Greek word is frequently taken. The Egyptians, to whom the Israelites were in bondage, were punished by the ten plagues described Exod. vii., viii., ix., x., xi., xii.

9 "And the patriarchs, moved with envy, sold Joseph into Egypt: "but God was with him,

10 And delivered him out of all his afflictions, "and gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt and all his house.

11 "Now there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Chanaan, and great affliction: and our fathers found no sustenance.

12 "But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first:

13 "And at the second time Joseph was made known to his brethren; and Joseph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.

14 "Then sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and "all his kindred, threescore and fifteen souls.

15 "So Jacob went down into Egypt, "and died, he, and our fathers, 16 And "were carried over into Sychem, and laid in "the sepulchre that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor the father of Sychem.

17 But when "the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, "the people grew and multiplied in Egypt, 18 Till another king arose, which knew not Joseph.

19 The same dealt subtilly with our kindred, and evil entreated our fathers, "so that they cast out

Verse 8. He gave him the covenant of circumcision] That is, he instituted the rite of circumcision, as a sign of that covenant which he had made with him and his posterity.

And so Abraham begat Isaac] And thus, in this covenant, he begat Isaac; and as a proof that he was born under this covenant, was a true son of Abraham and inheritor of the promises, he circumcised him the eighth day.

Verse 9. And the patriarchs] The twelve sons of Jacob, thus called because each was chief or head of his respective family or tribe.

Moved with envy] We translate the original variously: zeal or fervent affection, whether its object be good or bad, is its general meaning; and the verb signifies to be indignant, envious, &c.

Verse 14. Threescore and fifteen souls.] There are several difficulties here, which the reader will find satisfactorily removed in the note on Gen. xlii. 20.

Verse 16. And were carried over into Sychem] We have the uniform consent of the Jewish writers that all the patriarchs were brought out of Egypt, and buried in Canaan, but none, except Stephen, mentions their being buried in Sychem. As Sychem belonged to the Samaritans, probably the Jews thought it too great an honour for that people to possess the bones of the patriarchs; and therefore have carefully avoided making any mention of it.

That Abraham bought for a sum of money] Two accounts seem here to be confounded; 1. The purchase made by Abraham of the cave and field of Ephron, which was in the field of Machpelah, Gen. xxiii. 8, 10, 17. 2. The purchase made by Jacob, from the sons of Hamor or Emmor, of a sepulchre in which the bones of Joseph were laid: this was in Sychem or Shechem, Gen. xxxiii. 19; Josh. xiv. 82. The word Abraham, therefore, in this place, is certainly a mistake; and the word Jacob, which some have supplied is doubtless more proper.

Verse 18. Which knew not Joseph.] That is, did not approve of him, of his mode of governing the kingdom, nor of his people, nor of his God.

Verse 19. The same dealt subtilly] A word borrowed from the Septuagint, who thus translate the Hebrew let us deal wisely with it, i. e., with cunning and deceit, as the Greek word implies; and which is evidently intended by the Hebrew. For this cunning the Egyptians were so remarkable their young children, to the end they might not live.

23 ^f And when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart to visit his brethren the children of Israel.

24 And seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppressed, and smote the Egyptian :

25 ^g For he supposed his brethren would have understood how that God by his hand would deliver them : but they understood not.

26 ^h And the next day he shewed himself unto them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, ye are brethren ; why do ye wrong one to another ?

27 But he that did his neighbour wrong thrust him away, saying, ⁱ Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us ?

28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou didest the Egyptian yesterday ?

29 ^j Then fled Moses at this saying, and was a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons.

Verse 22. In all the wisdom of the Egyptians] Who were at that time the most intelligent and best instructed people in the universe.

Was mighty in words and in deeds.] This may refer to the glorious doctrines he taught, and the miracles he wrought in Egypt.

Verse 23. To visit his brethren] Probably on the ground of trying to deliver them from their oppressive bondage. This desire seems to have been early infused into his mind by the Spirit of God.

Verse 25. He supposed his brethren would have understood, &c.] He probably imagined that, as he felt from the divine influence he was appointed to be their deliverer, they would have his divine appointment signified to them in a similar way.

Verse 26. He brought them out, after that he had shewed wonders, &c.] Does not St. Stephen plainly say by this that the very person, Jesus Christ, whom they had rejected and delivered up into the hands of Pilate to be crucified was the person alone by whom they could be delivered out of their spiritual bondage, and made partakers of the inheritance among the saints in light ?

Verse 27. That is that Moses, which said—A prophet, &c.] This very Moses announced that very prophet whom ye have lately put to death.

Verse 28. With the angel which spake to him] Moses received the law by the ministry of angels ; and he was only a mediator between the angel of God and them.

The lively oracles] The living oracles. The Greek word, which we translate oracles, signifies a divine revelation, a communication from God himself, and is here applied to the Mosaic law ; to the Old Testament in general, Rom. iii. 2 ; Heb. v. 12 ; and to divine revelation in general, 1. Pet. iv. 11.

Verse 29. In their hearts turned back again into Egypt] Became idolaters, and preferred their Egyptian bondage and their idolatry to the promised land and the pure worship of God.

Verse 43. Then God turned, and gave them up, &c.] He 30 ^a And when forty years were expired, there appeared to him in the wilderness of mount Sinai an angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a bush.

31 When Moses saw it, he wondered at the sight : and as he drew near to behold it, the voice of the Lord came unto him, 32 Saying, ^b I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. Then Moses trembled, and durst not behold.

33 ^c Then said the Lord to him, Put off thy shoes from thy feet : for the place where thou standest is holy ground.

left them to themselves, and then they deified and worshipped the sun, moon, planets, and principal stars.

In the book of the prophets] By the book of the prophets is meant the twelve minor prophets, which, in the ancient Jewish division of the sacred writings, formed only one book.

Have ye offered to me slain beasts] It is certain that the Israelites did offer various sacrifices to God, while in the wilderness ; and it is as certain that they scarcely ever did it with an upright heart.

Verse 43. Ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch, &c.] This is a literal translation of the place, as it stands in the Septuagint ; but in the Hebrew text it is somewhat different. Moloch is generally understood to mean the sun ; and Remphan or Raiphan is the planet Saturn.

I will carry you away beyond Babylon.] You have carried your idolatrous images about ; and I will carry you into captivity, and see if the gods in whom ye have trusted can deliver you from my hands.

Verse 44. Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness] That is, the tabernacle in which the two tables of stone, written by the finger of God, were laid up, as a testimony that he had delivered these laws to the people, and that they had promised to obey them. In these verses, Stephen proves that neither tabernacle or temple are essentially requisite for the true worship of the true God.

Verse 45. Brought in with Jesus] That is, with JOSHUA, whom the Greek version, quoted by St. Stephen, always writes JESUS.

Possession of the Gentiles] Of the heathens, whom Joshua conquered, and gave their land to the children of Israel.

Verse 46. Desired to find a tabernacle] This was in David's heart, but as he had been a man of war, and had shed much blood, God would not permit him to build the temple ; but he laid the plan and made provision for it, and Solomon executed the design.

Verse 48. The Most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands] Here St. Stephen evidently refers to Solomon's speech, 1 Kings viii. 27.

Verse 50. Hath not my hand made all these things ?] Stephen certainly had not finished his discourse, nor drawn his inferences from the facts already stated ; but it is likely that, as they perceived he was about to draw conclusions un-the mount Sina, and with our fathers: * who received the lively ^b oracles to give unto us:

39 To whom our fathers would not obey, but thrust him from them, and in their hearts turned back again into Egypt, 40 * Saying unto Aaron, Make us gods to go before us: for as for this Moses, which brought us out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

41 * And they made a calf in those days, and offered a sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands.

42 Then * God turned, and gave them up to worship ^c the host of heaven; as it is written in the book of the prophets, * O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to me slain beasts and sacrifices by the space of forty years in the wilderness?

43 Yea, ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your god Remphan, figures which ye made to worship them: and I will carry you away beyond Babylon.

44 Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, ^d speaking unto Moses, ^e that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen.

45 ^f Which also our fathers ^g that came after brought in with Jesus into the possession of the Gentiles, ^h whom God drave out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David;

46 * Who found favour before God, and ⁱ desired to find a tabernacle for the God of Jacob.

47 * But Solomon built him a house.

favourable to the temple and its ritual, they immediately raised up a clamour against him, which was the cause of the following very cutting address.

Verse 51. Ye stiff-necked] A metaphor taken from untoward oen, who cannot be broken into the yoke; and whose strong necks cannot be bent to the right or the left.

Uncircumcised in heart and ears] This was a Jewish mode of speech, often used by the prophets.

As your fathers did, so do ye.] This whole people, as well as this test, are fearful proofs that the Holy Spirit, the almighty energy of the living God, may be resisted and rendered of none effect. It is trifling with the sacred text to say that resisting the Holy Ghost here means resisting the laws of Moses, the exhortations, threatenings, and promises of the prophets, &c. These, it is true, the uncircumcised ear may resist; but the uncircumcised heart is that alone to which the Spirit that gave the laws, exhortations, promises, &c., speaks; and, as matter resists matter, so spirit resists spirit.

Verse 52 They have slain them, &c.] Isaiah, who showed before of the coming of Christ, the Jews report, was sawn asunder at the command of Manasseh.

The coming of the Just One] Meaning Jesus Christ; emphatically called the just or righteous person, not only because of the unspotted integrity of his heart and life, but because of his plenary acquittal when tried at the tribunal of Pilate; I find no fault at all in him.

The betrayers and murderers] Ye first delivered him up into the hands of the Romans, hoping they would have put him to death: but, when they acquitted him, then, in opposition to the declaration of his innocence, and in outrage to every form of justice ye took and murdered him.

Verse 53. By the disposition of angels] After all that 49 * Heaven is my throne, and earth is my footstool: what house will ye build me? saith the Lord: or what is the place of my rest?

50 Hath not my hand made all these things?

51 Ye * stiff-necked and * uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye.

52 * Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the * Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers:

53 * Who have received the law by the disposition of angels, and have not kept it.

54 * When they heard these things, they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth.

55 But he, * being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up stedfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God, 56 And said, Behold, * I see the heavens opened, and the * Son of man standing on the right hand of God.

57 Then they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord, 58 And ^a cast him out of the city, ^b and stoned him: and ^c the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul.

59 And they stoned Stephen, ^d calling upon God, and saying, Lord Jesus, * receive my spirit.

60 And he ^e kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, ^f Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep.

has been said on this difficult passage, perhaps the simple meaning is, that there were ranks of angels attending on the Divine Majesty when he gave the law. It was not then by the mouths nor by the hands of angels, as prime agents, that Moses, and through him the people, received the law; but God himself gave it, accompanied with many thousands of those glorious beings. [The expression is one of considerable difficulty. Perhaps the best solution is that suggested by Alford: at the injunction (the announcement) of angels.]

Verse 54. They were cut to the heart] They were sawn through.

Verse 55. Saw the glory of God] The Shekinah, the splendour or manifestation of the divine Majesty.

And Jesus standing on the right hand of God] In his official character, as Mediator between God and man.

Verse 57. They—stopped their ears] As a proof that he had uttered blasphemy, because he said, He saw Jesus standing at the right hand of God.

Verse 58. Cast him out of the city, and stoned him] They did not however wait for any sentence to be pronounced upon him.

Verse 59. And they stoned Stephen, calling upon God] The word God is not found in any MS. or Version, nor in any of the primitive Fathers except Chrysostom. The whole sentence literally reads thus: And they stoned Stephen, invoking and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my Spirit! Here is a most manifest proof that prayer is offered to Jesus Christ; and that in the most solemn circumstances in which it could be offered, viz., when a man was breathing his last. This is, properly speaking, one of the highest acts of worship which can be offered to God; and, if Stephen had not conceived Jesus Christ to be God, could he have committed his soul into his hands?

Verse 60. He kneeled down] That he might die as the subject of his heavenly MASTER—acting and suffering in the deepest submission to his divine will and permissive providence.

Lay not this sin to their charge.] That is, do not impute it to them so as to exact punishment. In what a beautiful light does this place the spirit of the Christian religion! Christ had given what some have supposed to be an impossible command, Love your enemies; pray for them that de- spitefully use and persecute you. And Stephen shows here, in his own person, how practicable the grace of his Master had made this sublime precept.

He fell asleep.] This was a common expression among the Jews to signify death, and especially the death of good men.

The first clause of the next chapter should come in here, And Saul was consenting unto his death.

CHAPTER VIII.

A general persecution is raised against the church, 1. Stephen's burial, 2. Saul greatly oppresses the followers of Christ, 3, 4. Philip the deacon goes to Samaria, preaches, works many miracles, converts many persons, and baptizes Simon the sorcerer, 5-13. Peter and John are sent by the apostles to Samaria; they confirm the disciples, and by prayer and imposition of hands they confer the Holy Spirit, 14-17. Simon the sorcerer, seeing this, offers them money, to enable him to confer the Holy Spirit, 18, 19. He is sharply reprov'd by Peter, and exhorted to repent, 20-23. He appears to be convinced of his sin, and implores an interest in the apostles' prayers, 24. Peter and John, having preached the gospel in the villages of Samaria, return to Jerusalem, 25. An angel of the Lord commands Philip to go towards Gaza, to meet an Ethiopian eunuch, 26. He goes, meets and converses with the eunuch, preaches the gospel to him, and baptizes him, 27-38. The Spirit of God carries Philip to Azotus, passing through which, he preaches in all the cities till he comes to Cæsarea, 39, 40.

AND ^aSaul was consenting unto his death. And at that time there was a great persecution against the church which was at Jerusalem; and ^bthey were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the apostles.

²And devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and ^cmade great lamentation over him.

³As for Saul, ^dhe made havoc of the church, entering into every house, and haling men and women, committed them to prison.

⁴Therefore ^ethey that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the word.

⁵Then ^fPhilip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them.

⁶And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did.

Verse 1. Saul was consenting unto his death] The word signifies gladly consenting, being pleased with his murderous work! How dangerous is a party spirit; and how destructive may zeal even for the true worship of God prove, if not inspired and regulated by the spirit of Christ!

They were all scattered abroad—except the apostles.] Their Lord had commanded them, when persecuted in one city, to flee to another; this they did, but, wherever they went, they proclaimed the same doctrines, though at the risk and hazard of their lives.

That the apostles were not also exiled is a very remarkable fact: they continued in Jerusalem, to found and organize the infant church; and it is marvellous that the hand of persecution was not permitted to touch them.

Verse 2. Devout men carried Stephen to his burial] The Greek word signifies not only to carry, or rather to gather up, but also to do everything necessary for the interment of the dead.

Made great lamentation over him.] This was never done over any condemned by the Sanhedrin—they only bemoaned ⁷For ^gunclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them: and many taken with palsies, and that were lame, were healed.

⁸And there was great joy in that city.

⁹But there was a certain man, called Simon, which beforetime in the same city ^hused sorcery, and bewitched the people of Samaria, ⁱgiving out, that himself was some great one:

¹⁰To whom they all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God.

¹¹And to him they had regard, because that of long time he had bewitched them with sorceries.

¹²But when they believed Philip preaching the things ^jconcerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.

such privately. Stephen was not condemned by the sanhedrin; he probably fell a sacrifice to the fury of the bigoted, incensed mob.

Verse 3. Saul made havoc of the church] The word signifies the act of ferocious animals, such as bears, wolves, and the like, in seeking and devouring their prey.

Haling men and women.] Neither sparing age nor sex in the professors of Christianity.

Committed them to prison.] For, as the Romans alone had the power of life and death, the sanhedrin, by whom Saul was employed, chap. xvi. 10, could do no more than arrest and imprison, in order to inflict any punishment short of death.

Verse 4. They that were scattered—went every where preaching] Thus the very means devised by Satan to destroy the church became the very instruments of its diffusion and establishment.

Verse 5. Then Philip] One of the seven deacons, chap. vi. 5, called afterwards, Philip the Evangelist, chap. xxi. 8. The city of Samaria] At this time there was no city of 13 Then Simon himself believed also : and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the * miracles and signs which were done.

14 Now, when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John ;

15 Who, when they were come down, prayed for them, * that they might receive the Holy Ghost.

16 For * as yet he was fallen upon none of them ; only * they were baptized in * the name of the Lord Jesus.

17 Then * laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost.

18 And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, 19 Saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost.

20 But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because * thou hast thought that * the gift of God may be purchased with money.

Samaria existing. Hyrcanus had so utterly demolished it as to leave no vestige of it remaining.

As Sychem was the very heart and seat of the Samaritan religion, and Mount Gerizim the cathedral church of that sect, it is more likely that it should be intended than any other.

Verse 7. For unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed] Hence it is evident that these unclean spirits were not a species of diseases ; as they are here distinguished from the paralytic and the lame.

Verse 9. A certain man called Simon] In ancient ecclesiastical writers, we have the strangest account of this man. All that we know to be certain is, that he used sorcery, that he bewitched the people, and that he gave out himself to be some great one.

The Greek word which we translate used sorcery, signifies practising the rites or science of the Magi.

And bewitched the people of Samaria] Astonishing, amazing, or confounding the judgment of the people, a word that expresses precisely the same effect which the tricks or legerdemain of a juggler produce in the minds of the common people who behold his feats.

That himself was some great one] That the feats which he performed sufficiently proved that he possessed a most powerful supernatural agency, and could do whatsoever he pleased.

Verse 10. This man is the great power of God.] That is, he is invested with it, and can command and use it.

Verse 12. But when they believed Philip] So it is evident that Philip's word came with greater power than that of Simon ; and that his miracles stood the test in such a way as the feats of Simon could not.

Verse 13. Simon himself believed also] He was struck with the doctrine and miracles of Philip—he saw that these were real ; he knew his own to be fictitious.

Continued with Philip, and wondered] He was as much astonished and confounded at the miracles of Philip as the people of Samaria were at his legerdemain. [The term is identical in meaning with that used in verses 9-11.]

Verse 14. The word of God] The doctrine of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Verse 15. When they were come down] This is a mode of speech which is used to designate a royal or imperial city.

Prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost.] This was the prerogative of the apostles, and they were only instruments ; but they were those alone by which the Lord chose to work. But for what purpose was the Holy Spirit given ? Certainly not for the sanctification of the souls of the people : this they had on believing in Christ Jesus ; and this the apostles never dispensed. It was the miraculous gifts of the Spirit which were thus communicated ; the speaking with different tongues, and those extraordinary qualifications which were necessary for the successful preach-

21 Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter : for thy heart is not right in the sight of God.

22 Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, * if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee.

23 For I perceive that thou art in * the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity.

24 Then answered Simon, and said, * Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me.

25 And they, when they had testified and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans.

26 And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south, unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert.

27 And he arose and went : and, behold, * a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and * had come to Jerusalem, for to worship, ing of the gospel ; and doubtless many, if not all, of those on whom the apostles laid their hands, were employed more or less in the public work of the church.

Verse 17. Then laid they their hands on them] They did not lay hands on all ; for certainly no hands in this way were laid on Simon.

Verse 18. He offered them money] Supposing that the dispensing this Spirit belonged to them—that they could give it to whomsoever they pleased ; and imagining that, as he saw them to be poor men, they would not object to take money for their gift.

Verse 20. Thy money perish with thee] This is an awful declaration ; and imports thus much, that if he did not repent, he and his ill-gotten goods would perish together ; his money should be dissipated, and his soul go into perdition.

Verse 21. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter] Thou hast no part among the faithful, and no lot in this ministry.

Thy heart is not right] It is not through motives of purity, benevolence, or love to the souls of men, that thou desirest to be enabled to confer the Holy Ghost ; it is through pride, vain glory, and love of money.

Verse 22. Repent therefore of this thy wickedness] St. Peter did not suppose his case to be utterly hopeless ; though his sin, considered in its motives and objects, was of the most heinous kind.

Verse 23. The gall of bitterness] A Hebraism for excessive bitterness.

Bond of iniquity.] An allusion to the mode in which the Romans secured their prisoners, chaining the right hand of the prisoner to the left hand of the soldier who guarded him.

Verse 24. Pray ye to the Lord for me] The words of Peter certainly made a deep impression on Simon's mind ; and he must have had a high opinion of the apostles' sanctity and influence with God, when he thus commended himself to their prayers.

Verse 25. And they, when they had—preached—returned to Jerusalem] That is, Peter and John returned, after they had borne testimony to and confirmed the work which Philip had wrought.

Verse 26. Arise, and go toward the south] The road which he is to take is marked out ; but what he is to do in that road, or how far he is to proceed, he is not told ! It is GOD who employs him, and requires of him implicit obedience. If he do his will, according to the present direction, he shall know, by the issue, that God hath sent him on an errand worthy of his wisdom and goodness.

Gaza, which is desert.] This is the desert, or, this is in the desert. Gaza was a town about two miles and a half from the sea-side ; it was the last town which a traveller

28 Was returning, and sitting in his chariot
* read Esaias the prophet.

29 Then ^b the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot.

30 And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him
* read the prophet Esaias, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest?

31 And he said, ^c How can I, except some man should guide me? And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him.

32 The place of the scripture which he read was this, ^e He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth:

33 In his humiliation his judgment was taken away: and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth.

34 And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?

passed through, when he went from Phœnicia to Egypt, and was at the entrance into a wilderness.

Some think that desert should be referred, not to Gaza, but to the way; and that it signifies a road that was less frequented.

Verse 27. An eunuch] The term eunuch was given to persons in authority at court, to whom its literal meaning did not apply.

Of great authority] A prefect, lord-chamberlain of the royal household; or, rather, her treasurer.

The Ethiopians mentioned here are those who inhabited the isle or peninsula of Meroë, above and southward of Egypt.
Strabo mentions a queen in this very district named Candace, and though this could not have been the Candace mentioned in the text, yet it establishes the fact that a queen of this name did reign in this place; and we learn from others that it was a name common to the queens of Ethiopia.

Had come to Jerusalem for to worship] Which is a proof that he was a worshipper of the God of Israel; but how came he acquainted with the Jewish religion? It has been long credited by the Abyssinians that the queen of Sheba was not only instructed by Solomon in the Jewish religion, but also established it in her own empire on her return; and, from that time till the present, they have preserved the Jewish religion. This being granted, we may at once see that the eunuch in question was a descendant of those Jews; or that he was a proselyte in his own country to the Jewish faith, and was now come up at the great feast to worship God at Jerusalem.

Verse 28. Sitting in his chariot, read Esaias the prophet.] He had gone to Jerusalem to worship: he had profited by his religious exercises; and, even in travelling, he is improving his time. Many, after having done their duty, as they call it, in attending a place of worship, forget the errand that brought them thither, and spend their time, on their return, rather in idle conversation than in reading or conversing about the word of God. It is no wonder that such should be always learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.

Verse 29. Then the Spirit said unto Philip] It is likely that what the Spirit did in this case was by a strong impression on his mind, which left him no doubt of its being from God.

Verse 30. Heard him read the prophet Esaias] The eunuch, it seems, was reading aloud, and apparently in Greek, for that was the common language in Egypt; and, indeed, almost in every place it was understood.

Verse 31. How can I, except some man should guide me?] How could he know anything of the gospel dispensation, to which this scripture referred? That dispensation had not yet been proclaimed to him; he knew nothing about Jesus.
But where that dispensation has been published, where the four Gospels and the apostolic epistles are at hand, everything relative to the salvation of the soul may be clearly apprehended by any simple, upright person.

35 Then Philip opened his mouth, ^f and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus.

36 And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; ^g what doth hinder me to be baptized?

37 And Philip said, ^h If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, ⁱ I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

38 And he commanded the chariot to stand still:
and they went down both into the water, both
Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him.

39 And when they were come up out of the water, ^j the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way rejoicing.

40 But Philip was found at Azotus: and passing through he preached in all the cities till he came to Cæsarea.

That he would come up, and sit with him.] So earnestly desirous was he to receive instruction relative to those things which concerned the welfare of his soul.

Verse 32. The place of the scripture] The section, or paragraph.

Verse 33. Who shall declare his generation?] Answering to the Hebrew doro, which Bp. Lowth understands as implying his manner of life. It was the custom among the Jews, when they were taking away any criminal from judg- ment to execution, to inquire whether there was any person who could appear in behalf of the character of the criminal —any who, from intimate acquaintance with his manner of life, could say anything in his favour? In our Lord's case, this benevolent inquiry does not appear to have been made;
and perhaps to this breach of justice, as well as of custom, the prophet refers.

Verse 35. Began at the same scripture] He made this his text, and showed, from the general tenor of the sacred writings, that Jesus was the Christ, or Messiah; and that in his person, birth, life, doctrine, miracles, passion, death, and resurrection, the scriptures of the Old Testament were fulfilled.

Verse 36. See, here is water] He was not willing to omit the first opportunity that presented itself of his taking upon himself the profession of the gospel.

Verse 37. I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.] He believed that Jesus, whom Philip preached to him, was THE CHRIST or Messiah, and consequently the Son of God.

Verse 38. And they went down] They alighted from the chariot into the water. While Philip was instructing him, and as he professed his faith in Christ, he probably plunged himself under the water, as this was the plan which appears to have been generally followed among the Jews in their baptisms.

Verse 39. The Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip] Perhaps this means no more than that the Holy Spirit suggested to the mind of Philip that he should withdraw abruptly from the eunuch, and thus leave him to pursue his journey, reflecting on the important incidents which had taken place.

Verse 40. Philip was found at Azotus] From the time he left the eunuch, he was not heard of till he got to Azotus, which was about 34 miles from Gaza, and probably it was near Gaza that Philip met the eunuch. The Azotus of the New Testament is the Ashdod of the Old, Josh. xv. 47.

Preached in all the cities, till he came to Cæsarea.] This was Cæsarea in Palestine, formerly called Strato's Tower, built by Herod the Great in honour of Augustus. There was an excellent harbour here made by Herod; and, after the destruction of Jerusalem, it became the capitol of the whole land of Judea. It must be always distinguished from Cæsarea Philippi, which was an inland town not far from the springs of Jordan. Whenever the word Cæsarea occurs without Philippi, the former is intended.

CHAPTER IX.

Saul, bent on the destruction of the Christians, obtains letters from the high-priest, authorizing him to seize those whom he should find at Damascus, and bring them bound to Jerusalem, 1, 2. On his way to Damascus, he has a divine vision, is convinced of his sin and folly, is struck blind, and remains three days without sight, and neither eats nor drinks, 3-9. Ananias, a disciple, is commanded in a vision to go and speak to Saul, and restore his sight, 10-16. Ananias goes and lays his hands on him, and he receives his sight, and is baptized, 17-19. Saul, having spent a few days with the Christians at Damascus, goes to the synagogues, proclaims Christ, and confounds the Jews, 20-22. The Jews lay wait to kill him, but the disciples let him down over the walls of the city in a basket, by night, and he escapes to Jerusalem, 23-25. Having wished to associate with the disciples there, they avoid him; but Barnabas takes and brings him to the apostles, and declares his conversion, 26, 27. He continues in Jerusalem preaching Christ, and arguing with the Hellenistic Jews, who endeavour to slay him; but the disciples take him to Cæsarea, and send him thence to his own city Tarsus, 28-30. About this time, the churches being freed from persecution, are edified and multiplied, 31. Peter heals Eneas at Lydda, who had been afflicted with the palsy eight years: in consequence of which miracle, all the people of Lydda and Saron are converted, 32-35. Account of the sickness and death of a Christian woman named Tabitha, who dwelt at Joppa; and her miraculous restoration to life by the ministry of Peter, 36-41. Gracious effects produced among the inhabitants of Lydda by this miracle, 42, 43.

AND * Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high-priest,

2 And desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that if he found any ^b of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

3 And ^c as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven:

4 And ^d he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, ^e why persecutest thou me?

5 And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: ^f it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

6 And he trembling and astonished said, Lord, ^g what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do.

7 And ^h the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man.

Verse 1. Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter] The original text is very emphatic, and points out how determined Saul was to pursue and accomplish his fell purpose of totally destroying the infant church of Christ. St. Luke, who was master of the Greek tongue, chose such terms as best expressed a heart desperately and incessantly bent on accomplishing the destruction of the objects of its resentment. Such at this time was the heart of Saul of Tarsus; and it had already given full proof of its malignity, see chap. viii. 3. Went unto the high priest] The high priest was the proper organ through whom this business might be negotiated.

Verse 2. Letters to Damascus to the synagogues] Damascus, anciently called Damask, and Darmask, was once the metropolis of all Syria. It was situated at fifty miles' distance from the sea; from which it is separated by lofty mountains. It is washed by two rivers, Amara or Abara which ran through it, and Pharpar, called by the Greeks Chrysorrhoeas, the golden stream, which ran on the outside of its walls. It is one of the most ancient cities in the world, for it existed in the time of Abraham, Gen. xiv. 15; and how long before is not known.

And of this way] That is, this religion, for so derec, in Hebrew, and hodos, in Hellenistic Greek, are often to be understood.

Verse 3. Suddenly there shined round about him] This might have been an extraordinary flash of the electric fluid, accompanied with thunder, with which God chose to astonish and confound Saul and his company; but so modified it as to prevent it from striking them dead.

8 And Saul arose from the earth; and when his eyes were opened, he saw no man; but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damascus.

9 And he was three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.

10 And there was a certain disciple at Damascus ^a named Ananias; and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias. And he said, Behold, I am here, Lord.

11 And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and inquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul ^b of Tarsus; for, behold, he prayeth, 12 And hath seen in a vision ^c a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight.

13 Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, ^d how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem:

14 And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all ^e that call on thy name.

15 But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for Verse 4. And he fell to the earth] Being struck down with the lightning: many persons suppose he was on horseback, and painters thus represent him; but this is utterly without foundation. Painters are, in almost every case, wretched commentators.

Verse 5. Who art thou, Lord?] Who art thou, SIR? He had no knowledge who it was that addressed him, and would only use the term as any Roman or Greek would, merely as a term of civil respect.

I am Jesus whom thou persecutest] "Thy enmity is against me and my religion; and the injuries which thou dost to my followers I consider as done to myself."

The following words, making twenty in the original, and thirty in our version, are found in no Greek MS.

It is hard for thee, &c.] This is a proverbial expression, which exists, not only in substance, but even in so many words, both in the Greek and Latin writers. Kentron signifies an ox goad, a piece of pointed iron stuck in the end of a stick, with which the ox is urged on when drawing the plough.

Verse 6. Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?] The word Lord, is here to be understood in its proper sense, as expressing authority and dominion: in the 5th verse it appears to be equivalent to our word Sir.

Go into the city, and it shall be told thee, &c.] Jesus could have informed him at once what was his will concerning him; but he chose to make one of those very disciples whom he was going to bring in bonds to Jerusalem the means of his salvation.

* he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before ^b the Gentiles, and ^c kings, and the children of Israel;

16 For ^d I will shew him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake.

17 * And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and ^e putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and ^f be filled with the Holy Ghost.

18 And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized.

19 And when he had received meat, he was strengthened. ^h Then was Saul certain days with the disciples which were at Damascus.

20 And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, ⁱ that he is the Son of God.

22 But Saul increased the more in strength, ^k and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ.

23 And after that many days were fulfilled, ^l the Jews took counsel to kill him:

24 ^m But their laying await was known of Saul. And they watched the gates day and night to kill him.

25 Then the disciples took him by night, and ⁿ let him down by the wall in a basket.

any kind of instrument, or the means by which an act is done.

This mode of speech was common also among the Greek and Roman writers.

Chosen vessel.—A Hebraism, for an excellent or well-adapted instrument. Whoever considers the character of St. Paul, his education, attainments in natural knowledge, the distinguished part he took—first against Christianity, and afterwards, on the fullest conviction, in its favour—will at once perceive how well he was qualified for the great work to which God had called him.

To bear my name before the Gentiles. Hence he was emphatically called, the Apostle of the Gentiles, 1 Tim. ii. 7; 2 Tim. i. 11.

Verse 16. How great things he must suffer. Some think that the words, I will shew him, &c., refer to a visionary representation, which Christ was immediately to give Saul, of the trials and difficulties which he should have to encounter; as also of that death by which he should seal his testimony to the truth. [There is no authority for this.]

Verse 17. Brother Saul. As he found that the Head of the church had adopted Saul into the heavenly family, he made no scruple to give him the right hand of fellowship, and therefore said, Brother Saul.

The Lord, even Jesus. Of what use is this intrusive word even here? It injures the sense. St. Luke never wrote it; and our translators should not have inserted it.

And be filled with the Holy Ghost. So it appears that the Holy Spirit was given to him at this time, and probably by the imposition of the hands of Ananias. But who was the instrument is a matter of little importance; as the apostleship, and the grace by which it was to be fulfilled, came immediately from Jesus Christ himself. Nor has there ever been an apostle, nor a legitimate successor of an apostle, that was not made such by Christ himself.

Verse 18. There fell from his eyes as it had been scales. This was real: he had been so dazzled with the brightness of the light that we may suppose the globe of the eye, and particularly the cornea, had suffered considerable injury.

And arose, and was baptized. As baptism implied, in an adult, the public profession of that faith into which he was baptized, this baptism of Saul proved, at once, his own sincerity, and the deep and thorough conviction he had of the truth of Christianity.

Verse 19. When he had received meat, he was strengthened. His mind must have been greatly worn down under his three days' conviction of sin, and the awful uncertainty he was in concerning his state; but when he was baptized, and had received the Holy Ghost, his soul was divinely invigorated; and now, by taking food, his body strength, greatly exhausted by three days' fasting, was renewed also.

Then was Saul certain days with the disciples. Doubtless under instructions, relative to the doctrines of Christianity; which he must learn particularly, in order to preach them successfully. His miraculous conversion did not im-

Verse 7. Stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man.] The men were stupefied, hearing the voice or thunder but not distinguishing the words, which were addressed to Saul alone; and which were spoken out of the thunder, or in a small still voice, after the peal had ceased. This consideration amply reconciles the passage in the text with that in chap. xlii. 9. It has been a question among divines, whether Jesus Christ did really appear to Saul on this occasion. Ananias, it seems, was informed that there had been a real appearance, for, in addressing Saul, ver. 17, he says, The Lord Jesus that APPEARED unto THEE in the way as thou camest, &c. But St. Paul's own words, 1 Cor. ix. 1, put the subject out of dispute.

Verse 8. When his eyes were opened, he saw no man.] He not only saw no man, but he saw nothing, being quite blind; and therefore was led by the hand to Damascus, being without sight.

Verse 9. Neither did eat nor drink.] The anxiety of his mind and anguish of his heart were so great.

Verse 10. A certain disciple—named Ananias. A general opinion has prevailed in the Greek church that this Ananias was one of the seventy-two disciples, and that he was martyred; and they celebrate his martyrdom on the first of October.

To him said the Lord in a vision.] It is very probable that the whole took place in a dream.

Verse 11. Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight.] Tarsus was a city of Cilicia, seated on the Cydanus, and now called Tarassos. It was, at one period, the capital of all Cilicia, and became a rival to Alexandria and Athens in the arts and sciences. The inhabitants, in the time of Julius Cæsar, having shown themselves friendly to the Romans, were endowed with all the privileges of Roman citizens; and it was on this account that St. Paul claimed the rights of a Roman citizen; a circumstance which, on different occasions, was to him, and the cause in which he was engaged, of considerable service.

Behold, he prayeth.] He is earnestly seeking to know my will, and to find the salvation of his soul; therefore, go speedily, and direct him.

Verse 12. Hath seen in a vision.] While God prepares Ananias, by a vision, to go and minister to Saul, he at the same time prepares Saul, by another vision, to profit by this ministry.

Verse 13. Lord, I have heard by many of this man.] This was all done in a dream, else this sort of reasoning with his Maker would have been intolerable in Ananias.

Thy saints.] That is, the Christians, or followers of Christ.

Verse 14. And here he hath authority, &c.] Ananias had undoubtedly heard of Saul's coming, and the commission he had received from the chief priests.

Verse 15. Go thy way.] He was thus prevented from going farther in his reasoning on this subject.

He is a chosen vessel unto me.] The word is Greek, though literally signifying a vessel, is also used to signify 27 *But Barnabas took him, and brought him to the apostles, and declared unto them how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to him, ^b and how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus.

28 And ^c he was with them, coming in and going out, at Jerusalem.

29 And he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed against the ^d Grecians: *but they went about to slay him.

30 Which when the brethren knew, they brought him down to Cæsarea, and sent him forth to Tarsus.

31 *Then had the churches rest throughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria, and were edified: and walking in the fear of the Lord, ^e and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, were multiplied.

32 And it came to pass, as Peter passed ^f throughout all quarters, he came down also to the saints which dwelt at Lydda.

ply that he must then have a consummate knowledge of every Christian doctrine.

Verse 20. Preached Christ in the synagogues] The first offers of the grace of the gospel were uniformly made to the Jews. Saul did not at first offer Jesus to the heathens at Damascus; but to the synagogues of the Jews.

Verse 21. Is not this he that destroyed them] The verb has three acceptations in the Greek writers: 1. To treat one as an enemy, to spoil him of his goods. 2. To lead away captive, to imprison. 3. To slay. Paul was properly a destroyer, in all these senses.

Verse 22. Confounded the Jews] Overwhelmed them so with his arguments that they were obliged to blush for the weakness of their own cause.

Proving that this] This person, viz., JESUS, is very Christ; is THE CHRIST, or Messiah.

Verse 23. And after that many days were fulfilled] What follows relates to transactions which took place about three years after his conversion, when he had come a second time to Damascus, after having been in Arabia. See Gal. i. 17, 18.

Verse 24. They watched the gates day and night to kill him.] At this time Damascus was under the government of Aretas, king of Arabia, who was now at war with Herod, his son-in-law, who had put away his daughter in order to marry Herodias, his brother Philip's wife.

Verse 25. Let him down by the wall] Favoured, probably, by a house built against or upon the wall, through the window of which they could lower him in a basket.

Verse 26. He assayed to join himself to the disciples] He endeavoured to get closely united to them, to be in religious fellowship with them.

Believed not that he was a disciple.] They did not suppose it possible that such a person could be converted to the faith of Christ.

Verse 27. Barnabas—brought him to the apostles] That is, to Peter and James; for other of the apostles he saw none, Gal. i. 19. It appears that he went up at this time to Jerusalem merely to see Peter, with whom he abode fifteen days, Gal. i. 18. How it came that the apostles and church at Jerusalem had not heard of Saul's conversion, which had taken place three years before, is not easy to be accounted for.

Verse 28. He was with them, coming in and going out] Freely conversing and associating with them; but this seems to have continued only fifteen days. See Gal. i. 18.

Verse 29. Disputed against the Grecians] That is, the Hellenistic Jews, viz., those who lived in Grecian cities, spoke the Greek language, and used the Septuagint Version for their scriptures.

Verse 30. They brought him down to Cæsarea] Calmet contends that this was Cæsarea of Palestine, and not Cæsarea Philippi.

Sent him forth to Tarsus.] This was his own city; and it was right that he should proclaim to his own countrymen and relatives that gospel through which he was become wise to salvation.

Verse 31. Then had the churches rest] Instead of the churches, several MSS. and Versions have the church. Every 33 And there he found a certain man named Eneas, which had kept his bed eight years, and was sick of the palsy.

34 And Peter said unto him, Eneas, 'Jesus Christ maketh thee whole: arise, and make thy bed. And he arose immediately.

35 And all that dwelt in Lydda and 'Saron saw him, and ^a turned to the Lord.

36 Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called 'Dorcas: this woman was full ^b of good works and almsdeeds which she did.

37 And it came to pass in those days, that she was sick, and died: whom when they had washed, they laid her in ^c an upper chamber.

38 And forasmuch as Lydda was nigh to Joppa, and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent unto him two men, desiring him that he would not ^d delay to come to them.

assembly of God's people was a church; the aggregate of these assemblies was THE CHURCH. The word which we translate rest, and which literally signifies peace, evidently means, in this place, prosperity; and in this sense both it and the Hebrew shalom are repeatedly used.

Were edified.] A metaphor taken from a building. This figure frequently occurs in the sacred writings, especially in the New Testament. It has its reason in the original creation of man: God made the first human being as a shrine or temple, in which himself might dwell. Sin entered, and the heavenly building was destroyed. The materials, however, though all dislocated, and covered with rubbish and every way defiled, yet exist; no essential power or faculty of the soul having been lost. The work of redemption consists in building up this house as it was in the beginning, and rendering it a proper habitation for God. The various powers, faculties, and passions, are all to be purified and refined by the power of the Holy Spirit, and order and harmony restored to the whole soul.

Walking in the fear of the Lord] Keeping a continually tender conscience; abhorring all sin; having respect to every divine precept; dreading to offend him from whom the soul has derived its being and its blessings.

In the comfort of the Holy Ghost] In a consciousness of their acceptance and union with God, through his Spirit, by which solid peace and happiness are brought into the soul.

Were multiplied.] No wonder that the church of God increased, when such lights as these shone among men.

Verse 32. As Peter passed throughout all quarters] The churches having rest, the apostles made use of this interval of quiet to visit the different congregations, in order to build them up on their most holy faith.

To the saints] The Jews, who had been converted to Christianity.

Which dwelt at Lydda.] A town in the tribe of Ephraim, almost on the border of Judea, and nigh unto Joppa: it was about ten leagues from Jerusalem, and was afterwards known by the name of Diospolis, or the city of Jupiter.

Verse 34. Jesus Christ maketh thee whole] Not Peter, for he had no power but what was given him from above.

Arise, and make thy bed.] He was at home, and therefore was not commended, as the paralytic person, to take up his bed; but he was ordered to make it—strew it afresh, that all might see that the cure was perfect.

Verse 35. All that dwelt in Lydda and Saron saw him] Saron was that campaign country that lay between Joppa and Lydda. The long affliction of this man had been well known; and his cure, consequently, became a subject of general examination: it was found to be real.

Verse 36. Now there was at Joppa] This was a sea-port town on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, about a day's journey from Jerusalem. It is at present called Jaffa, and is still a place of considerable note.

A certain disciple named Tabitha] This word is more properly Syriac than Hebrew. The word has the same meaning as the Hebrew tsedai, and the Greek Dorcas, and signifies the gazelle or antelope; and it is still customary in 39 Then Peter arose and went with them. When he was come, they brought him into the upper chamber : and all the widows stood by him weeping, and shewing the coats and garments which Dorcas made, while she was with them.

40 But Peter ^aput them all forth, and ^bkneeled down, and prayed; and turning him to the body ^csaid, Tabitha, arise. And she opened the East to give the names of beautiful animals to young women.

This woman was full of good works] Her soul was full of love to God and man; and her whole time was filled up with works of piety and mercy.

Verse 37. She was sick and died] Even her holiness and usefulness could not prevent her from sickness and death.

Whom when they had washed] Having the fullest proof that she was dead, they prepared for her interment.

Verse 38. Sent unto him—desiring—that he would not delay to come] It is not likely that they had any expectation that he should raise her from the dead; for none of the apostles had as yet raised any; and if God did not choose to restore Stephen to life, this favour could not be reasonably expected in behalf of inferior persons. However, they might hope that he who cured Eneas at Lydda might cure Dorcas; for it is probable that they had sent for Peter before she died; and in this sense we might understand the text.

Verse 39. Shewing the coats and garments] The outer and inner garments.

Verse 40. Peter put them all forth, and kneeled down, and prayed] It was not even known to Peter that God would work this miracle: therefore he put all the people out, that he might seek the will of God by fervent prayer, and during his supplications be liable neither to distraction nor interruption, which he must have experienced had he permitted this company of weeping widows to remain in the chamber.

And turning—to the body] The lifeless body, for the spirit had already departed.

Said, Tabitha, arise.] During his wrestling with God, he her eyes; and when she saw Peter, she sat up. 41 And he gave her his hand, and lifted her up, and when he had called the saints and widows, he presented her alive.

42 And it was known throughout all Joppa; ^aand many believed in the Lord.

43 And it came to pass, that he tarried many days in Joppa, with one ^aSimon a tanner.

had, undoubtedly, received confidence that she would be raised at his word.

And when she saw Peter, she sat up.] As Dorcas was a woman so eminently holy, her happy soul had doubtless gone to the paradise of God. Must she not therefore be filled with regret to find herself thus called back to earth again? No: for, 1. As a saint of God, her Maker's will must be hers; because she knew that this will must be ever best. 2. It is very likely that, in the case of the revivescence of saint or sinner, God mercifully draws a veil over all they have seen or known, so that they have no recollection of what they have either seen or heard. Even St. Paul found it impossible to tell what he had heard in the third heaven, though he was probably not in the state of the dead. Of the economy of the invisible world God will reveal nothing. We walk here by faith, and not by sight.

Verse 41. Saints and widows] In primitive times the widows formed a distinct part of the Christian Church.

Verse 42. Many believed in the Lord.] That is, in Christ Jesus, in whose name, and through whose power, they understood this miracle to be wrought.

Verse 43. He tarried many days in Joppa] Taking advantage of the good impression made on the people's minds by the miracle.

Simon a tanner.] The person who dealt in the hides, whether of clean or unclean animals, could not be in high repute among the Jews. Even in Joppa, the trade appears to have been reputed unclean; and therefore this Simon had his house by the sea-side.

CHAPTER X.

An angel appears to Cornelius, a centurion, and directs him to send to Joppa, for Peter, to instruct him in the way of salvation, 1-6. He sends accordingly, 7, 8. While the messengers are on their way to Joppa, Peter has a remarkable vision, by which he is taught how he should treat the Gentiles, 9-16. The messengers arrive at the house of Simon the tanner, and deliver their message, 17-22. They lodge there that night, and on the morrow Peter accompanies them to Cæsarea, where they find Cornelius and his friends assembled, waiting the coming of Peter, 23, 24. Peter makes an apology for his coming, and inquires for what purpose Cornelius had sent for him, 25-29. Cornelius answers, 30-33. And Peter preaches unto him Jesus, as the Saviour of the world, and the Judge of quick and dead, 34-43. While he speaks, the Holy Ghost descends on Cornelius and his company; and they speak with new tongues, and magnify God, 44-46. Peter commands them to be baptized in the name of the Lord, 47, 48.

THERE was a certain man in Cæsarea called Cornelius, a centurion of the band called the Italian band,

2 ^a A devout man, and one that ^b feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God alway.

3 ^c He saw in a vision evidently, about the ninth hour of the day, an angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius.

4 And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and said, What is it, Lord? And he said unto him, Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God.

5 And now send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whose surname is Peter:

6 He lodgeth with one ^d Simon a tanner, whose house is by the sea side: ^e he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do.

7 And when the angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his household servants, and a devout soldier of them that waited on him continually;

8 And when he had declared all these things unto them, he sent them to Joppa.

Verse 1. There was a certain man in Cæsarea] This was Cæsarea of Palestine, called also Strato's Tower, and the residence of the Roman procurator.

A centurion] The chief or captain of 100 men, as both the Greek and Latin words imply.

The band called the Italian band] The word which we translate band, signifies the same as cohort or regiment.

Verse 2. A devout man] A person who worships the true God, and is no idolater.

One that feared God] One who was acquainted with the true God, by means of his word and laws; who respected these laws, and would not dare to offend his Maker and his Judge.

Gave much alms] His love to God led him to love men; and his love proved its sincerity by acts of beneficence and charity.

Prayed to God alway] Felt himself a dependent creature; knew he had no good but what he had received; and considered God to be the fountain whence he was to derive all his blessings. He prayed to God alway: was ever in the spirit of prayer, and frequently in the act.

Verse 3. He saw in a vision evidently] The text is as plain as it can be, that an angel of God did appear to Cornelius. This was in a vision, i. e., a supernatural representation; and it was manifestly, evidently made; and at such a time too as precluded the possibility of his being asleep; for it was about the ninth hour of the day, answering to our three o'clock in the afternoon, the time of public prayer, according to the custom of the Jews, and while Peter was engaged in that sacred duty.

Verse 4. Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial] This is a manifest allusion to the meat-offering, which, in Lev. ii. 16, is said to be azkerah, a memorial (speaking after the manner of men), to put God in remembrance that such a person was his worshipper, and needed his protection and help.

Verse 6. What thou oughtest to do] From this it appears that matters of great moment had occupied the mind of Cornelius. He was not satisfied with the state of his own soul, nor with the degree he possessed of religious knowledge; and he set apart a particular time for extraordinary fasting and prayer, that God might farther reveal to him the knowledge of his will.

Verse 7. And a devout soldier] We do not find that it was then, even among the Romans, considered a disgrace for a military officer to teach his men lessons of morality, and piety towards God, whatever it may be in some Christian countries in the present time.

Verse 9. On the morrow, as they went on their journey] From Joppa to Cæsarea was about twelve or fifteen leagues; the messengers could not have left the house of Cornelius till 9 On the morrow, as they went on their journey, and drew nigh unto the city, ^f Peter went up upon the house-top to pray about the sixth hour:

10 And he became very hungry, and would have eaten: but while they made ready, he fell into a trance,

11 ^g And saw heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending unto him, as it had been a great sheet knit at the four corners, and let down to the earth:

12 Wherein were all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

13 And there came a voice to him, Rise, Peter; kill, and eat.

14 But Peter said, Not so, Lord; ^h for I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean.

15 And the voice spake unto him again the second time, ⁱ What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

16 This was done thrice: and the vessel was received up again into heaven.

17 Now while Peter doubted in himself what this vision which he had seen should mean, behold, the men which were sent from Cornelius had made en-about two hours before sunset; therefore, they must have travelled a part of the night, in order to arrive at Joppa the next day, towards noon.

Peter went up upon the house-top to pray] The house-top was the place of retirement; and thither Peter went for the purpose of praying to God.

Verse 10. He became very hungry] It seems that this happened about dinner-time; for it appears that they were making ready, dressing the victuals for the family. The dinner among the ancients was a very slight meal; and they had no breakfast: their supper was their principal meal.

He fell into a trance] An ecstasy fell upon him. Being earnestly engaged with God, all natural appetites became absorbed in the intense application of his soul to his Maker. While every passion and appetite was under this divine influence, and the soul, without let or hindrance, freely conversing with God, then the visionary and symbolical representation mentioned here took place.

Verse 11. And saw heaven opened] His mind now entirely spiritualized, and absorbed in heavenly contemplation, was capable of discoveries of the spiritual world; a world which, with its plenitude of inhabitants, surrounds us at all times; but which we are incapable of seeing through the dense medium of flesh and blood, and their necessarily concomitant earthly passions.

A great sheet knit at the four corners] Perhaps intended to be an emblem of the universe, and its various nations, to the four corners of which the gospel was to extend.

Verse 12. All manner of four-footed beasts, &c.] Every species of quadrupeds, whether wild or domestic; all reptiles, and all fowls. Consequently, both the clean and unclean were present in this visionary representation.

Verse 13. Rise, Peter; kill and eat] Sacrifice and eat. Though this verb is sometimes used to signify the slaying of animals for food, yet, as the proper notion is to slay for the purpose of sacrifice, it appears to me to be better to preserve that meaning here. The Jews and Gentiles are certainly represented by the clean and unclean animals in this large vessel: these, by the ministry of the gospel, were to be offered up a spiritual sacrifice to God. Peter was to be a prime instrument in this work; he was to offer them to God, and rejoice in the work of his hands.

Verse 14. Common or unclean] By common, whatever was in general use among the Gentiles is to be understood; by unclean, everything that was forbidden by the Mosaic law. However, the one word may be considered as explanatory of the other.

Verse 15. What God hath cleansed] God, who made at first the distinction between Jews and Gentiles, has a right to remove it, whenever and by whatever means he pleases: he, therefore, who made the distinction, for wise purposes, quyry for Simon's house, and stood before the gate, 18 And called, and asked whether Simon, which was surnamed Peter, were lodged there.

19 While Peter thought on the vision, * the Spirit said unto him, Behold, three men seek thee.

20 ^b Arise therefore, and get thee down, and go with them, doubting nothing : for I have sent them.

21 Then Peter went down to the men which were sent unto him from Cornelius ; and said, Behold, I am he whom ye seek : what is the cause wherefore ye are come ?

22 And they said, * Cornelius the centurion, a just man, and one that feareth God, and ^a of good report among all the nation of the Jews, was warned from God by an holy angel, to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee.

23 Then called he them in, and lodged them. And on the morrow Peter went away with them, * and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

24 And the morrow after they entered into Cæsarea. And Cornelius waited for them, and had called together his kinsmen and near friends.

25 And as Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him, and fell down at his feet, and worshipped him.

26 But Peter took him up, saying, ' Stand up ; I myself also am a man.

27 And as he talked with him, he went in, and found many that were come together.

28 And he said unto them, Ye know how ^a that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation ; between the clean and the unclean, now pronounces all to be clean.

Verse 16. This was done thrice] For the greater certainty, and to make the deeper impression on the apostle's mind.

Verse 17. While Peter doubted—the men—stood before the gate] How exactly does everything in the conduct of Providence occur ; and how completely is everything adapted to time, place, and occasion ! Those simple occurrences which men snatch at, and press into the service of their own wishes, and call them providential openings, may, indeed, be links of a providential chain, in reference to some other matter ; but unless they be found to speak the same language in all their parts, occurrence corresponding with occurrence, they are not to be construed as indications of the Divine will in reference to the claimants.

Verse 22. Cornelius the centurion, &c.] They gave him the simple relation which they had received from their master.

Verse 23. Then called he them in, &c.] They had already walked a long journey in a short time, and needed refreshment ; and it was thought expedient they should rest that night with Simon the tanner.

Certain brethren from Joppa] They were six in number, as we learn from chap. xi. 12.

Verse 24. His kinsmen and near friends.] His relatives, and necessary friends. It appears that he had collected the whole circle of his intimate acquaintance, that they also might profit by a revelation which he expected to come immediately from heaven.

Verse 25. Fell down at his feet, and worshipped him.] As Peter's coming was announced by an angel, Cornelius might have supposed that Peter himself was an angel ; it was, probably, in consequence of this thought that he prostrated himself before Peter, offering him the highest act of civil respect ; for there was nothing in the act, as performed by Cornelius, which belonged to the worship of the true God.

Verse 26. I myself also am a man.] " I am not an angel ; I am come to you simply, on the part of God, to deliver to you the doctrine of eternal life."

Verse 27. And as he talked with him] Cornelius had met but ^a God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean.

29 Therefore came I unto you without gainsaying, as soon as I was sent for : I ask therefore, for what intent ye have sent for me ?

30 And Cornelius said, Four days ago I was fasting until this hour ; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and, behold, ^a a man stood before me ⁱ in bright clothing, 31 And said, Cornelius, ^b thy prayer is heard, ⁱ and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God.

32 Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter ; he is lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner by the sea side ; who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee.

33 Immediately therefore I sent to thee ; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God.

34 Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, ^m Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons :

35 But ^a in every nation, he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

36 The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, ^a preaching peace by Jesus Christ : (^a he is Lord of all :)

Peter at some short distance from his house, and they conversed together till they went in.

Verse 28. Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing &c.] He addressed the whole company, among whom it appears, there were persons well acquainted with Jewish customs ; probably some of them were Jewish proselytes.

But God hath shewed me, &c.] He now began to understand the import of the vision which he saw at Joppa.

Verse 30. Four days ago I was fasting until this hour] It was then about three o'clock in the afternoon ; and it appears that Cornelius had continued his fasts from three o'clock the preceding day to three o'clock the day following ; not that he had fasted four days together, as some suppose, for, even if he did fast four days consecutively, he ate one meal on each day.

Verse 31. Thy prayer is heard] Cornelius prayed, fasted, and gave alms. It was in this way he looked for salvation ; not to purchase it : but these were the means he used to get his soul brought to the knowledge of the truth.

Verse 33. Are we all here present before God] The people were all waiting for the preacher, and every heart was filled with expectation ; they waited as before God, from whose messenger they were about to hear the words of life.

Verse 34. God is no respecter of persons] It was a long and deeply rooted opinion among the Jews, that God never would extend his favour to the Gentiles ; and that the descendants of Jacob only should enjoy his peculiar favour and benediction. Of this opinion was St. Peter, previously to the heavenly vision mentioned in this chapter.

Verse 35. But in every nation he that feareth him, &c.] In every nation he who, according to his light and privileges, fears God, worships him alone (for this is the true meaning of the word), and worketh righteousness, abstains from all evil, gives to all their due, injures neither the body, soul, nor reputation of his neighbour, is accepted with him. It is not therefore the nation, kindred, profession, mode or form of worship, that the just God regards ; but the character, the state of heart, and the moral deportment.

Verse 36. The word which God sent, &c.] Few verses in the New Testament have perplexed critics and divines more 38 How ^a God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; ^b for God was with him.

39 And ^c we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; ^d whom they slew and hanged on a tree:

40 Him ^e God raised up the third day, and shewed him openly;

41 ^f Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, ^g who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.

42 And ^h he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify ⁱ that it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of ^j quick and dead.

43 ^k To him give all the prophets witness, that than this. The ancient copyists seem also to have been puzzled with it; as the great variety in the different MSS. sufficiently proves.

All exhortations proclaim this truth, which the apostle laboured to establish, namely, that God intended the salvation of all men by Jesus Christ; and therefore proclaimed reconciliation to all, by him who is Lord, maker, preserver, redeemer, and judge of all. And of this the apostle was now more convinced by the late vision; and his mission from him who is Lord of all to Cornelius, a heathen, was a full illustration of the heavenly truth; for the very meeting of Peter, once a prejudiced Jew, and Cornelius, once an unenlightened Gentile, was a sort of first-fruits of this general reconciliation, and a proof that Jesus was LORD of ALL.

Verse 37. That word—ye know] This account of Jesus of Nazareth ye cannot be unacquainted with; because it has been proclaimed throughout all Judea and Galilee, from the time that John began to preach.

Verse 38. God anointed Jesus of Nazareth] Here, as Messiah signifies the anointed one, and Christ has the same signification in Greek, Peter proclaims Jesus as the Messiah, and refers to the miracles which he wrought as the proof of it. This delicate, but forcible allusion is lost by most readers.

Verse 39. We are witnesses of all] In this speech St. Peter may refer, not only to the twelve apostles, but to the six brethren whom he had brought with him.

Verse 41. Not to all the people] In the order of divine providence, the public were to be no longer instructed by Jesus Christ personally; but it was necessary that those, who were to preach redemption in his name should be thoroughly furnished to this good and great work; therefore, the time he spent on earth, after his resurrection, was devoted to the instruction of his disciples.

Witnesses chosen before of God] That is, God chose such men to attest this fact as were every way best qualified to give evidence on the subject; persons who were always to be found; who might at all times be confronted with those, if any such should offer themselves, who could pretend to prove that there was any imposture in this case; and persons who, from the very circumstances in which they were placed, must appear to have an absolute conviction of the truth of all they attested.

But why was not Christ, after his resurrection, shown to all the people? 1. Because it was impossible that such a thing could be done without mob and tumult. 2. God chose such witnesses whose testimony should be unimpeach-through his name, ^l whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins.

44 While Peter yet spake these words, ^m the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.

45 ⁿ And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, ^o because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost.

46 For they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God. Then answered Peter, 47 Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost ^p as well as we?

48 ^q And he commanded them to be baptized ^r in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.

able; the men who knew him best, and who by their depositions in proof of the fact should evidently risk their lives. And 3, as multitudes are never called to witness any fact, but a few selected from the rest, whose knowledge is most accurate, and whose veracity is unquestionable, therefore, God showed not Christ risen from the dead to all the people, but to witnesses chosen by himself.

Verse 42. The Judge of quick and dead.] The word quick we retain from our ancient mother tongue, the Saxon.

Verse 43. To him give all the prophets witness] See Isa. ix. 6, lii. 7, liii. 5, 6, lix. 20; Jer. xxxi. 34; Dan. ix. 24; Mic. vii. 18, &c.; and Zech. xiii. 1.

Remission of sins.] The phrase means simply the taking away of sins; and this does not refer to the guilt of sin merely, but also to its power, nature, and consequences.

Verse 44. While Peter yet spake] In what manner this gift was bestowed we cannot tell; probably it was in the same way in which it had been given on the day of pentecost; for as they spake with tongues, which was the effect of the descent of the Spirit as flaming tongues on the heads of the disciples on the day of pentecost, it is very likely that the same appearance now took place.

Verse 45. They of the circumcision—were astonished.] Because it was a maxim with them that the Shechinah or divine influence could not be revealed to any person who dwelt beyond the precincts of the promised land.

Verse 46. And magnify God.] They had got new hearts as well as new tongues.

Verse 47. Can any man forbid water] These had evidently received the Holy Ghost, and consequently were become members of the mystical body of Christ; and yet St. Peter requires that they shall receive baptism by water, that they might become members of the Christian Church. Therefore the baptism of the Spirit did not supersede the baptism by water; nor indeed can it; as baptism, as well as the supper of our Lord, were intended, not only to be means of grace, but standing, irrefragable proofs of the truth of Christianity.

Verse 48. To be baptized in the name of the Lord.] Which implied their taking upon them the public profession of Christianity, and believing on Christ Jesus as their saviour and sovereign; for, as they were baptized in his name, they professed thereby to be his disciples and followers.

Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.] They felt the necessity of farther instruction, and prayed him to continue his ministry a little longer among them; and to this he no doubt consented.

CHAPTER XI.

Peter returns to Jerusalem, and is accused of having associated with the Gentiles, 1-3. He defends himself, by relating at large the whole business concerning Cornelius, 4-17. His defence is accepted, and the whole church glorifies God for having granted unto the Gentiles repentance unto life, 18. An account of the proceedings of those who were scattered abroad by the persecution that was raised about Stephen; and how they had spread the gospel among the circumcision, in Phœnicie, Cyprus, and Antioch, 19-21. The church at Jerusalem, hearing of this, sends Barnabas to confirm them in the faith, 22, 23. His character, 24. He goes to Tarsus to seek Saul, whom he brings to Antioch, where the disciples are first called CHRISTIANS, 25, 26. Certain prophets foretel the dearth which afterwards took place in the reign of the Emperor Claudius, 27, 28. The disciples send relief to their poor brethren in Judea, by the hands of Barnabas and Saul, 29, 30.

AND the apostles and brethren that were in Judea heard that the Gentiles had also received the word of God.

2 And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they that were of the circumcision contended with him,

3 Saying, ^bThou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them.

4 But Peter rehearsed the matter from the beginning, and expounded it ^aby order unto them, saying,

5 ^cI was in the city of Joppa praying: and in a trance I saw a vision, A certain vessel descend, as it had been a great sheet, let down from heaven by four corners; and it came even to me:

6 Upon the which when I had fastened mine eyes, I considered, and saw four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

7 And I heard a voice saying unto me, Arise, Peter; slay and eat.

^a Ch. x. 45. Gal. ii. 12.—^b Ch. x. 28.—^c Gal. ii. 12.—^d Luke i. 3.—^e Ch. x. 9, &c.

Verse 2. Contended with him] A manifest proof this that the primitive church at Jerusalem had no conception of St. Peter's supremacy, or of his being prince of the apostles.

Verse 3. Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised] In a Jew, this was no small offence; and, as they did not know the reason of St. Peter's conduct, it is no wonder they should call him to account for it, as they considered it to be a positive transgression of the law and custom of the Jews.

Verse 12. These six brethren] Probably pointing to them, being present, as proper persons to confirm the truth of what he was delivering.

Verse 14. Thou and all thy house shall be saved] This is an additional circumstance: before, it was said, chap. x. 6, Peter shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do; and, in ver. 38, who when he cometh shall speak unto thee.

Verse 16. Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost] The words of our Lord, as quoted chap. i. 5, to which St. Peter refers here, have been supposed by many to be referred to the apostles alone; but here it is evident that St. Peter believed they were a promise made to all Christians, i. e., to all, whether Jews or Gentiles, who should believe on Jesus Christ.

Verse 17. God gave them the like gift, &c.] Viz., the Holy Spirit, and his various gifts and graces, in the same way and in the same measure in which he gave them to us Jews.

Verse 18. They held their peace] Their prejudices were confounded; they considered the subject, and saw that it was from God: then they glorified him because they saw that he had granted unto the Gentiles repentance unto life.

Verse 19. The persecution that arose about Stephen] That is, those who were obliged to flee from Jerusalem, at the time of that persecution in which Stephen lost his life.

Phœnicie] Phœnicia, a country between Galilee and Syria, along the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, including Tyre, Sidon, &c.

Cyprus] An island of the Mediterranean Sea, over against Syria.

8 But I said, Not so, Lord: for nothing common or unclean hath at any time entered into my mouth.

9 But the voice answered me again from heaven, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

10 And this was done three times: and all were drawn up again into heaven.

11 And, behold, immediately there were three men already come unto the house where I was, sent from Cæsarea unto me.

12 And ^athe Spirit bade me go with them, nothing doubting. Moreover, ^bthese six brethren accompanied me, and we entered into the man's house.

13 And ^bhe shewed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter;

14 Who shall tell thee these words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved.

15 And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, ^aas on us at the beginning.

16 Then remembered I the word of the Lord,

^a John xvi. 13. Ch. x. 19. xv. 7.—^b Ch. x. 23.—^c Ch. x. 30.—^d Ch. ii. 4.

Antioch] A city of Syria, built by Antiochus Seleucus, near the river Orontes; at that time one of the most celebrated cities of the east.

Unto the Jews only] For they knew nothing of the vision of St. Peter; and did not believe that God would open the door of faith to the Gentiles.

Verse 20. Men of—Cyrene] The metropolis of the Cyrenaica; a country of Africa, bounded on the east by Marmarica, on the west by the Regio Syrtica, on the north by the Mediterranean, and on the south by the Sahara. Cyrene is now called Cairoan.

Spoke unto the Grecians] The Hellenists, Jews living in Greek cities, and speaking the Greek language.

Verse 21. The hand of the Lord was with them] By the hand, arm, and finger of God, in the scripture, different displays or exertions of his power are intended. Here it means that the energy of God accompanied them, and applied their preaching to the souls of all attentive hearers.

A great number believed] That Jesus was the Christ; and that he had died for their offences, and risen again for their justification.

Verse 22. The church which was in Jerusalem] This was the original, the mother church of Christianity; not the Church of Rome.

They sent forth Barnabas] It seems, then, that the church collectively had power to commission and send forth any of its own members, whom it saw God had qualified for a particular work.

Verse 23. Had seen the grace of God] That is, had seen the effects produced by the grace of God. Barnabas saw that these people were objects of the divine approbation; that they were abundantly blessed and edified together as a Christian Church; and that they had received especial influences from God, by his indwelling Spirit, which were to them incentives to faith, hope, and love, and also principles of conduct.

Was glad] Not envious because God had blessed the labours of others of his Master's servants; but rejoiced to how that he said, * John indeed baptized with water; but ^b ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.

17 ^c Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ; ^d what was I, that I could withstand God?

18 When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, * Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life.

19 ^e Now they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen travelled as far as Phœnice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the word to none but unto the Jews only.

20 And some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, which, when they were come to Antioch, spake unto ^f the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus.

21 And ^g the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and ^h turned unto the Lord.

22 Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem: and they sent forth ⁱ Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch:

23 Who, when he came, and had seen the grace of God, was glad, and ^k exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord.

24 For he was a good man, and ^l full of the Holy Ghost and of faith: ^m and much people was added unto the Lord.

25 Then departed Barnabas to ⁿ Tarsus, for to seek Saul:

26 And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass, that a whole year they assembled ^o themselves with the church, and taught much people; and the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch.

27 And in these days came ^p prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch.

28 And there stood up one of them named ^q Agabus, and signified by the Spirit that there should be great dearth throughout all the world: which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cæsar.

29 Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined to send ^r relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea:

30 ^s Which also they did, and sent it to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

and that the work of salvation was carried on by such instruments as God chose, and condescended to use.

With purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord. Barnabas well knew that they must have the grace of God in them to enable them to do any good; but he knew, also, that its being in them did not necessarily imply that it must continue there. To be a Christian is to be united to Christ, to be of one spirit with him: to continue to be a Christian is to continue in that union. There is no perseverance but in cleaving to the Lord; he who in his works denies him does not cleave to him.

Verse 24. For he was a good man. Here is a proper character of a minister of the gospel.

Much people was added unto the Lord. No wonder, when they had such a minister, preaching, by the power of the Holy Ghost, such a gospel as that of Jesus Christ.

Verse 25. To Tarsus, for to seek Saul. The persecution raised against him obliged him to take refuge in his own city, where, as a Roman citizen, his person was in safety.

Verse 26. He brought him unto Antioch. As this city was the metropolis of Syria, Barnabas might think it expedient to have for his assistant a person of such eminent talents as Saul; and who was especially appointed by Christ to proclaim the gospel to the Gentiles. Saul appears also to have been a thorough master of the Greek tongue, and, consequently, the better qualified to explain the gospel to the Greek philosophers, and to defend it against their cavils.

And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch. It is evident they had the name Christians from CHRIST their master; as the Platonists and Pythagoreans had their name from their masters, Plato and Pythagoras. It has been a question, by whom was this name given to the disciples? Some think they assumed it; others, that the inhabitants of Antioch gave it them; and others, that it was given by Saul and Barnabas.

The word which we translate were called, signifies, in the New Testament, to appoint, warn, or nominate, by divine direction. In this sense, the word is used, Matt. ii. 12; Luke ii. 26; and in the preceding chapter of this book, ver. 22. If therefore the name was given by divine appointment, it is most likely that Saul and Barnabas were directed to give it; and that therefore, the name Christian is from God, as well as that grace and holiness which are so essentially required and implied in the character.

Verse 27. Came prophets from Jerusalem. Though the term prophet is used in the New Testament simply to signify a teacher, yet here it evidently means also such as were under divine inspiration, and foretold future events.

Verse 28. Agabus. This prophet, of whom we know nothing, is once more mentioned, chap. xxi. 10. He was probably a Jew, but whether converted now to Christianity we cannot tell.

Great dearth throughout all the world. The words probably here mean the land of Judea; though sometimes by this phrase the whole Roman Empire is intended. In the former sense the disciples appear to have understood it, as the next verse informs us; for they determined to send relief to their brethren in Judea, which they could not have done had the famine been general. It is well known from history that there were several famines in the reign of Claudius. Most learned men are of opinion that the famine of which Agabus prophesied was one which took place in the fourth year of the emperor Claudius, A. D. 47. This famine is particularly mentioned by Josephus, Ant. lib. xx. cap. 2, sect. 5.

Verse 29. Then the disciples—determined to send relief. The community of goods had for some time ceased.

Verse 30. And sent it to the elders. It is likely the deacons are meant, whose office it was to take care of the poor.

CHAPTER XII

Herod persecutes the Christians, 1. Kills James, 2. And casts Peter into prison, 3, 4. The church makes incessant prayer for his deliverance, 5. An angel of God opens the prison doors and leads him out, 6-10. Peter rejoices, and comes to the house of Mary, where many were praying, and declares how he was delivered, 11-17. The soldiers who kept the prison are examined by Herod, and he commands them to be put to death, 18, 19. Herod is enraged against the people of Tyre, but is appeased by their submission, 20. He makes an oration to the people, receives idolatrous praises, and an angel of the Lord smites him, and he dies a miserable death, 21-23. The word of God increases, 24. Barnabas and Saul, having fulfilled their ministry, return from Jerusalem accompanied by John Mark, 25.

NOW about that time Herod the king stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the church.

2 And he killed James the brother of John with the sword.

3 And because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded further to take Peter also. Then were the days of unleavened bread.

4 And when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers to keep him; intending after Easter to bring him forth to the people.

5 Peter therefore was kept in prison; but prayer was made without ceasing, of the church unto God for him.

6 And when Herod would have brought him forth, the same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains; and the keepers before the door kept the prison.

7 And, behold, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison: and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands.

8 And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals. And so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

9 And he went out, and followed him; and he wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision.

Verse 1. Herod the king] This was Herod Agrippa, the son of Aristobolus, and grandson of Herod the Great; he was nephew to Herod Antipas, who beheaded John the Baptist, and brother to Herodias. He was made king by the emperor Caligula, and was put in possession of all the territories formerly held by his uncle Philip, and by Lysanias; viz., Iturea, Trachonitis, Abilene, with Gaulonitis, Batanea, and Penuas. To these the emperor Claudius afterwards added Judea and Samaria; which were nearly all the dominions possessed by his grandfather, Herod the Great.

Verse 2. He killed James the brother of John with the sword.] This was James the greater, son of Zebedee, and must be distinguished from James the less, son of Alphaeus. This latter was put to death by Ananias the high priest, during the reign of Nero. By the death of James, the number of the apostles was reduced to eleven; and we do not find that it ever was filled up. The apostles never had any successors: God has continued their doctrine, but not their order.

Killing with the sword, or beheading, was the punishment which, according to the Talmud, was inflicted on those who drew away the people to any strange worship.

Verse 3. He proceeded—to take Peter also.] He supposed that if these two pillars were removed, the building must necessarily come down.

The days of unleavened bread.] About the latter end of March or beginning of April.

Verse 4. Four quaternions of soldiers] That is, sixteen, or four companies of four men each, who had the care of the prison, each company taking in turn one of the four watches of the night.

Intending after Easter to bring him forth] After the passover. The term Easter, inserted here by our translators, they borrowed from the ancient Anglo-Saxon service-books, or from the Version of the Gospels, which always translates the Greek by this word, which is the name of the goddess

10 When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; which opened to them of his own accord: and they went out, and passed on through one street; and forthwith the angel departed from him.

11 And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, that the Lord hath sent his angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

12 And when he had considered the thing, he came to the house of Mary, the mother of John, whose surname was Mark; where many were gathered together praying.

13 And as Peter knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came to hearken, named Rhoda.

14 And when she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for gladness; but ran in, and told how Peter stood before the gate.

15 And they said unto her, Thou art mad. But she constantly affirmed that it was even so. Then said they, It is his angel.

16 But Peter continued knocking: and when they had opened the door, and saw him, they were astonished.

17 But he, beckoning unto them with the hand to hold their peace, declared unto them how the Lord had brought him out of the prison. And he said, Go, shew these things unto James, and to the Easter, whose festival was celebrated by our Pagan forefathers in the month of April.

Verse 5. Prayer was made without ceasing] The Greek word signifies both fervour and earnestness, as well as perseverance.

Verse 6. Sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains] Two soldiers guarded his person; his right hand being bound to the left hand of one, and his left hand bound to the right hand of the other.

Verse 8. Gird thyself] It seems Peter had put off the principal part of his clothes that he might sleep with more comfort. His resuming all that he had thrown off was a proof that everything had been done leisurely. It appears that the two soldiers were overwhelmed by a deep sleep, which fell upon them from God.

Verse 9. He wist not] He knew not; from the Anglo-saxon. He supposed himself to be in a dream.

Verse 10. The first and—second ward] It is supposed that ancient Jerusalem was surrounded by three walls: if so, then passing through the gates of these three walls successively is possibly what is meant by the expression in the text.

Iron gate] This was in the innermost wall of the three, and was strongly plated over with iron, for the greater security.

Which opened—of his own accord] Influenced by the unseen power of the angel.

The angel departed from him.] Having brought him into a place in which he no longer needed his assistance. What is proper to God he always does: what is proper to man he requires him to perform.

Verse 11. When Peter was come to himself] Everything he saw astonished him; he could scarcely credit his eyes; he was in a sort of ecstacy; and it was only when the angel left him that he was fully convinced that all was real.

And all the expectation of the—Jews.] It seems they had brethren. And he departed, and went into another place.

18 Now as soon as it was day, there was no small stir among the soldiers, what was become of Peter.

19 And when Herod had sought for him, and found him not, he examined the keepers, and commanded that they should be put to death. And he went down from Judea to Cæsarea, and there abode.

20 And Herod ^a was highly displeased with them of Tyre and Sidon : but they came with one accord to him; and, having made Blastus ^b the king's chamberlain their friend, desired peace; because ^c their country was nourished by the king's country.

built much on the prospect of having him sacrificed, as they already had James.

Verse 12. And when he had considered] When he had weighed everything, and was fully satisfied of the divine interposition.

Verse 13. As Peter knocked] The door was probably shut for fear of the Jews; and, as most of the houses in the East have an area before the door, it might have been at this outer gate that Peter stood knocking.

Verse 15. It is his angel.] It was a common opinion among the Jews that every man has a guardian angel, and in the Popish Church it is an article of faith. It was also an opinion among the Jews, even in the time of the apostles, as appears from Philo, that the departed souls of good men officiated as ministering angels; and it is possible that the disciples at Mary's house might suppose that Peter had been murdered in the prison; and that his spirit was now come to announce this event, or give some particular warning to the church.

Verse 17. Declared—how the Lord had brought him out of the prison.] He still persisted in the belief that his deliverance was purely supernatural.

Show these things unto James, and to the brethren] That is, in one word, show them to the church, at the head of which James undoubtedly was; as we may clearly understand by the part he took in the famous council held at Jerusalem, relative to certain differences between the believing Jews and Gentiles. There is still no supremacy for Peter.

He departed—into another place.] Where he went we know not; but it is probable that he withdrew for the present into a place of privacy, till the heat of the inquiry was over relative to his escape from the prison; for he saw that Herod was intent on his death.

Verse 19. He went down from Judea to Cæsarea] How soon he went down, and how long he staid there, we know not.

Verse 20. Highly displeased with them of Tyre] On what 21 And upon a set day Herod, arrayed in royal apparel, sat upon his throne, and made an oration unto them.

22 And the people gave a shout, saying, It is the voice of a god, and not of a man.

23 And immediately the angel of the Lord ^a smote him, because ^b he gave not God the glory; and he was eaten of worms, and gave up the ghost.

24 But ^c the word of God grew and multiplied.

25 And Barnabas and Saul returned from Jerusalem, when they had fulfilled their ^d ministry, and ^e took with them ^f John, whose surname was Mark.

account Herod was thus displeased is not related by any historian, as far as I have been able to ascertain.

Having made Blastus—their friend] Blastus was probably an eunuch, and had considerable influence over his master Herod; and, to reach the master, it is likely they bribed the chamberlain.

Their country was nourished by the king's country.] That is, they had all their supplies from Galilee; for Tyre and Sidon, being places of trade and commerce, with little territory, were obliged to have all their provisions from the countries under Herod's jurisdiction.

Verse 21. Upon a set day, &c.] A day on which games, &c., were exhibited in honour of the Roman emperor. What this refers to we learn from Josephus, Ant. lib. xix. chap. 8, sect. 2.

Verse 23. The angel of the Lord smote him] His death was most evidently a judgment from God.

Because he gave not God the glory] He did not rebuke his flatterers, but permitted them to give him that honour that was due to God alone.

And gave up the ghost.] That is, he died of the disorder by which he was then seized, after having lingered, in excruciating torments, for five days, as Josephus has stated.

Verse 24. But the word of God] The Christian doctrine preached by the apostles grew and multiplied—became more evident, and had daily accessions.

Verse 25. Returned from Jerusalem] That is, to Antioch after the death of Herod.

When they had fulfilled their ministry] When they had carried the alms of the Christians at Antioch to the poor saints at Jerusalem.

And took with them John, whose surname was Mark.] This was the son of Mary, mentioned ver. 12. He accompanied the apostles to Cyprus, and afterwards in several of their voyages, till they came to Perga in Pamphylia. See the case, chap. xiii. 18, and xv. 37-40.

CHAPTER XIII.

Of the prophets and teachers in the Church of Antioch, 1. By command of the Holy Spirit the church appoints Saul and Barnabas to a particular work, 2, 3. They depart, and travel to Seleucia, Cyprus, and Salamis, preaching in the Jewish synagogues, 4, 5. At Paphos they meet with Bar-Jesus or Elymas, a Jewish sorcerer, who endeavoured to prevent the deputy of the island from receiving the Christian faith, 6-8. Saul, for the first time called Paul, denounces the judgments of God upon him, and he is struck blind, 9-11. The deputy, seeing this, is confirmed in the faith, 12. Paul and his company leave Paphos, and come to Pamphylia, where John Mark leaves them, and returns to Jerusalem, 13. Paul and Barnabas proceed to Antioch; and, coming into a synagogue of the Jews, are requested by the rulers of it to preach to the people, 14, 15. Paul preaches, and proves that Jesus is the Christ, 16-41. The Gentiles desire the sermon to be preached to them the next sabbath, and many of the Jews, and proselytes receive the Christian faith, 42, 43. The next sabbath the whole city attend; and the Jews, filled with envy, contradict and blaspheme, 44, 45. Paul and Barnabas with great boldness show that, by the order of God, the gospel was to be preached first to them; but, seeing they had rejected it, it should now be taken from them, and sent to the Gentiles, 46, 47. The Gentiles rejoice and receive the truth, 48, 49. The Jews raise a persecution against the apostles, and expel them, 50. They come to Iconium, full of joy and the Holy Ghost, 51, 52.

NOW there were * in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers; as ^b Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and ^c Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, ^d which had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul.

2 As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, * Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work 'whereunto I have called them.

3 And * when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.

4 So they, being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia; and from thence they sailed to ^b Cyprus.

5 And when they were at Salamis, ¹ they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews: and they had also ¹ John to their minister.

6 And when they had gone through the isle unto Paphos, they found a ¹ certain sorcerer, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Bar-Jesus:

7 Which was the deputy of the country,

* Ch. xi. 27. xiv. 26. xv. 35.—^b Ch. xi. 22-26.—^c Rom. xvi. 21.—^d Or, Herod's foster brother.—Num. viii. 14. Ch. ix. 15. xxii. 21. Rom. i. 1. Gal. i. 15. ii. 9.—^e Matt. ix. 38. Ch. xiv. 26. Rom. x. 15. Eph. iii. 7, 8. 1 Tim. ii. 7. 2 Tim. i. 11. Heb. v. 4.—^f Ch.

Verse 1. Certain prophets and teachers] It is probable that these were not distinct offices: both might be vested in the same persons. By prophets we are to understand, when the word is taken simply, persons who were frequently inspired to predict future events; and by teachers, persons whose ordinary office was to instruct the people in the Christian doctrine.

Simeon—Niger] Or Simeon the Black, either because of his complexion, or his hair. Of this Simeon nothing farther is known.

Manaen, which had been brought up with Herod] The proper meaning of the original word is a foster-brother. Jewish writers say that a man of this name, who was in the court of Herod, had the gift of prophecy, and that he told Herod, when he was but a child, that he would be king. It might have been the Son of this Manaen, or Menahem of whom St. Luke here speaks.

Verse 2. As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted] The Greek word signifies performing the office of praying, supplicating, rendering thanks, &c.; it is identical with liturgy, the work of prayer.

The Holy Ghost said] A revelation of the divine will was made to some person then present.

Separate me Barnabas and Saul] Consecrate, or set them apart, for the particular work whereunto I have called them.

Verse 3. And when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them] But was it by this fasting, praying, and imposition of hands that these men were qualified for this work? No. God had already called them to it, and he who called them had qualified them; but he chose that they should have also the sanction of that church of which they had been members. The ordination of elders among the Jews was by three persons; and here we find three, Simeon, Lucius, and Manaen, ordaining two others, Barnabas and Saul. But how did the Jews ordain? It is remarkable that the imposition of hands in the ordaining of elders was not used among the ancient Jews; probably never under the first temple; and rarely, if ever, under the second. The church at Antioch, however, departed from this custom.

Verse 4. Being sent forth by the Holy Ghost] By his influence, authority, and under his continual direction.

Departed unto Seleucia] This is generally understood to be Seleucia of Pieria, the first city on the coast of Syria, coming from Cilicia; near the place where the river Orontes pours itself into the sea.

They sailed to Cyprus] A well-known island in the Mediterranean Sea.

Verse 5. Salamis] The capital of the island of Cyprus; afterwards called Constantia, and now Salina, situated in the eastern part of the island.

They preached the word of God] The doctrine of God, the Christian religion, emphatically so called.

They had also John to their minister] This was John Sergius Paulus, a prudent man; who called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired to hear the word of God.

8 But ¹ Elymas, the sorcerer, (for so is his name by interpretation,) withstood them, seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith.

9 Then Saul, (who also is called Paul,) * filled with the Holy Ghost, set his eyes on him,

10 And said, O full of all subtilty and all mischief, ^a thou child of the devil, ^a thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?

11 And now, behold, ^a the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. And immediately there fell on him a mist and a darkness; and he went about seeking some to lead him by the hand.

12 Then the deputy, when he saw what was done, believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord.

13 Now when Paul and his company loosed from Mark, who assisted them in minor offices, as deacon or servant, that they might give themselves wholly to the doctrine of the Lord.

Verse 6. Unto Paphos] This town, next in importance to Salamis, was situated in the western part of the isle. There was probably no town in the universe more dissolute than Paphos. Here Venus had a superb temple: and from this place she was named the Paphian Venus, the Queen of Paphos, &c. This temple and whole city were destroyed by an earthquake; so that a vestige of either does not now remain.

A certain sorcerer] A magician, one who used magical arts, and pretended to have commerce with supernatural agents.

A false prophet] A deceiver, one who pretended to have a divine commission; a fortune-teller.

Bar-Jesus] That is, the son of Jesus or Joshua; as Bar-Jonah is the son of Jonah; Bar-tholomew, the son of Thalmai, &c.

Verse 7. The deputy of the country] The pro-consul. To those of the provinces which were Cæsarean or imperial, the Romans sent propraetors; to those which belonged to the senate and people of Rome, they sent proconsuls. Cyprus had formerly been an imperial province; but Augustus, who made the distinction, had given it to the people, whence it was governed by a proconsul.

Sergius Paulus] This proconsul is not mentioned anywhere else: he became a Christian, had his name written in the book of life, and, probably on that very account, blotted out of the Fasti Consulares.

A prudent man] A man of good sense, of a sound understanding, and therefore wished to hear the doctrine taught by these apostles.

Verse 8. But Elymas, the sorcerer, (for so is his name by interpretation)] That is, Elymas is the interpretation of the word magus or sorcerer; not of the word Bar-Jesus, as some have imagined.

Verse 9. Saul, who also is—Paul] This is the first time the name Paul occurs, and the last time in which this apostle is called Saul, as his common or general name. Saul signifies asked, sought, from shaal, he asked, enquired, &c.

Paul, Paulus, if derived from the Latin, signifies little, dwarfish: but if from the Hebrew, pala, it signifies extraordinary, wonderful. The Latin original is the most probable. It is well known that the Jews in the apostolic age had frequently two names; one Hebrew, the other Greek or Roman. Saul was born of Jewish parents, a Hebrew of the Hebrews; he had therefore his first name from that language, Shaal, asked or begged; as it is possible he might have been a child for whom his parents had addressed their fervent petitions to God. As he was born in Tarsus, in Cilicia, he was consequently born a free Roman citizen; and hence his parents would naturally give him, for cognomen, some name borrowed from the Latin tongue; and Paulus, which signifies little, might indicate that he was at his birth a small or diminutive child.

Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia: and * John departing from them returned to Jerusalem.

14 But when they departed from Perga, they came to Antioch in Pisidia, and * went into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and sat down.

15 And * after the reading of the law and the prophets, the rulers of the synagogue sent unto them, saying, Ye men and brethren, if ye have * any word of exhortation for the people, say on.

16 Then Paul stood up, and * beckoning with his hand said, Men of Israel, and * ye that fear God, give audience.

17 The God of this people of Israel * chose our fathers, and exalted the people * when they dwelt as strangers in the land of Egypt, * and with an high arm brought he them out of it.

18 And * about the time of forty years * suffered he their manners in the wilderness.

19 And when * he had destroyed seven nations in the land of Chanaan, * he divided their land to them by lot.

Verses 10. O full of all subtilty] Deceit, pretending to supernatural powers without possessing any, and having only cunning and deceit as their substitutes.

And—mischief] The original word excellently defines a juggler, one who is expert at sleight of hand; though it is often employed to signify an abandoned and accomplished villain.

Child of the devil] Son of the devil, possessing his nature; filled with his cunning; and, in consequence, practising deceit.

Enemy of all righteousness] Opposed in thy heart to all that is just, true, and good.

Wilt thou not cease to pervert, &c.] He had probably laboured in this bad work from the beginning of Paul's ministry in the place; and God in his mercy had borne with him; and no doubt the apostle had warned him, for thus much seems implied in the reproof.

The right ways of the Lord] This saying is very emphatical. The ways of Elymas were crooked and perverse; the ways of the Lord, the doctrine taught by him, plain and straight.

Verses 11. Thou shalt be blind] Every word here proves the immediate inspiration of Paul. By the light of the Spirit he discerned and exposed the real character of Elymas; and, by the prophetic influence of that same Spirit, he predicted the calamity that was about to fall upon him, while as yet there was no sign of his blindness!

Not seeing the sun for a season.] In the midst of judgment God remembers mercy. This blindness was not to be perpetual: it was intended to be the means of awakening and softening the hard heart of this poor sinner.

There fell on him a mist and a darkness] Achlys is a disordered state of the eye, in which the patient sees through a thick mist. This thick mist, or perturbed state of the eye, took place first: it increased, and thick, positive darkness, was the issue.

He went about] Not knowing how to take a right step, he groped about in great uncertainty; and, not being able to find his way, he sought for some persons to lead him by the hand.

Verses 12. Being astonished] Being struck with astonishment, as Elymas was struck with blindness. Thus the word of God is a two-edged sword: it smites the sinner with judgment or compunction; and the sincere inquirer after truth, with conviction of its own worth and excellence.

Verses 13. Paul and his company loosed from Paphos] They sailed away from this island, leaving, it may be presumed, Elymas a sincere and deeply humbled penitent; and Sergius Paul, a thorough and happy believer in the doctrine of Christ.

20 And after that * he gave unto them judges about the space of four hundred and fifty years, * until Samuel the prophet.

21 * And afterward they desired a king; and God gave unto them Saul the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, by the space of forty years.

22 And * when * he had removed him, he raised up unto them David to be their king; to whom also he gave testimony, and said, * I have found David the son of Jesse, * a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will.

They came to Perga in Pamphylia] As Perga was not a maritime town, it is conjectured that the apostles sailed up the river Cestrus, in order to come to this place, which, according to Strabo, was situated about sixty leagues up this river.

And John departing from them] It certainly was not with the approbation of Paul that he left them, as we learn from chap. xv. 38. It does not appear that he was under any obligation to accompany them any longer or any farther than he pleased. He seems to have been little else than their servant, and certainly was not divinely appointed to this work, as they were; and consequently might leave them innocently, though not kindly, if they could not readily supply his place.

Verses 14. They came to Antioch in Pisidia] This place is mentioned thus to distinguish it from Antioch in Syria, with which it had nothing in common but the name.

Into the synagogue on the sabbath-day] Though Paul was now on a special mission to the Gentiles, yet he availed himself of every opportunity, in every place, of making the first offer of salvation to the Jews.

Verses 15. After the reading of the law and the prophets] A certain portion of the law, and another of the prophets, was read every sabbath; and the law was so divided as to be read over once every year.

The rulers of the synagogue] These were the persons whose business it was to read the appointed sections, to take care of the synagogue and its concerns, and to see that all was done decently and in order.

Sent unto them] Seeing them to be Jews, they wished them to give some suitable address to the people, i. e., to the Jews who were then engaged in divine worship.

Ye men and brethren] Men brethren, a Hebraism for, "Ye men who are our brethren," i. e., Jews, as we ourselves are.

If ye have any word of exhortation] If ye have any subject of consolation, any word of comfort to us, who are sojourners in this strange land, speak it. The Consolation of Israel was an epithet of the Messiah among the Jews; and it is probable that it was in reference to him that the rulers of the synagogue spoke.

Verses 16. Men of Israel] Ye that are Jews by birth; and ye that fear God—ye that are proselytes to the Jewish religion.

Verses 17. Exalted the people] Even when they were strangers in the land, and greatly oppressed, God exalted them; made them a terror to their enemies, and multiplied them greatly.

With a high arm] A literal translation of the Hebrew phrase. The meaning of the phrase is, a manifest display of the divine power.

Verses 18. Suffered he their manners] He dealt in.

dulently with them: howsoever they behaved towards him, he mercifully bore with, and kindly treated them. But some MSS. and versions read, he nourished and fed them or bore them about in his arms as a tender nurse does her child. This reading confirms the marginal conjecture, and agrees excellently with the scope of the place, and is a reading at least of equal value with that in the commonly received text.

Verse 19. Destroyed seven nations] The Canaanites, Hittites, Girgashites, Amorites, Hivites, Peresites, and Jebusites.

Verse 20. And after that he gave unto them judges about the space of four hundred and fifty years] The apostle seems here to contradict the account in 1 Kings vi. 1. [Alford pronounces all attempts to reconcile the two passages, "arbitrary and forced."]

Verse 21. Saul the Son of Cis] Kish, was the name of this king's father, and so we spell it in the Old Testament, and yet have transformed it into Cis in the New, where the orthography is almost entirely lost.

The space of forty years.] Reckoning from the time of his anointing by Samuel to the time of his death, from A.M. 2909 to 2949.

Verse 22. David—a man after mine own heart] That is, a man who would rule the kingdom according to God's will.

Verse 23. Of this man's seed hath God—raised—a Saviour] That Jesus Christ came in a direct and indisputable line from David, according to both promise and prophecy, may be seen in Matt. i. 1, &c., and particularly in Luke iii.

Verse 25. As John fulfilled his course] As John was fulfilling his race, he said, &c. It has been supposed that the word course or race is used here to point out the short duration of the Baptist's ministry, and the fervent zeal with which he performed it. It signifies properly his ministry, or life.

Verse 26. Men and brethren] This should have been translated brethren simply.

The word of this salvation] The doctrine that contains the promise of deliverance from sin, and the means by which it is brought about; all which is founded on Jesus, of the stock of David, dying and rising again for the salvation of Jews and Gentiles.

Verse 27. Because they knew him not] A gentle excuse for the persecuting high-priests, &c.

Verse 28. They found no cause of death in him] No reason why he should be condemned. And yet, in opposition to all justice and equity, they desired Pilate to put him to death! This paints their perfidy in the strongest light.

Verse 29. They took him down from the tree] The apostle passes rapidly over several circumstances of his death, that he might establish the fact of his resurrection.

Verse 30. But God raised him from the dead] And thus gave the fullest proof of his innocence.

children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second Psalm, "Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee."

34 And as concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, "I will give you the sure mercies of David."

35 Wherefore he saith also in another Psalm, "Thou shalt not suffer thine Holy One to see corruption."

36 For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption:

37 But he, whom God raised again, saw no corruption.

38 Be it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins:

Verse 31. He was seen many days, &c.] The thing was done but a very short time since; and many of the witnesses are still alive, and ready to attest the fact of this resurrection in the most unequivocal manner.

Verse 32. We declare unto you glad tidings] We proclaim that gospel to you which is the fulfilment of the promise made unto the fathers.

Verse 33. Thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee.] It has been disputed whether this text should be understood of the incarnation or of the resurrection of our Lord. If understood of his incarnation, it can mean no more than this, that the human nature of our blessed Lord was begotten by the energy of the Holy Spirit in the womb of the blessed Virgin; for as to his divine nature, which is allowed to be God, it could neither be created nor begotten. [But see the supplemental note on the passage in the Psalms, as also on Heb. i.]

If the passage in question be understood of the resurrection of Christ, it points out that the human nature, which was produced by the power of God in the womb of the Virgin, and which was the Son of God, could see no corruption; and therefore, though it died for sin, must be raised from the dead before it saw corruption.

Verse 34. No more to return to corruption] To the grave, to death, the place and state of corruption; for so we should understand the word in the text.

The sure mercies of David.] From this application of the words, it is evident that the apostle considered the word David as signifying the Messiah; and then the sure or faithful mercies, being such as relate to the new covenant, and the various blessings promised in it, are evidently those which are sealed and confirmed to mankind by the resurrection of Christ; and it is in this way that the apostle applies them.

Verse 36. David—fell on sleep—and saw corruption] Therefore, David cannot be the person spoken of here: the words are true of some other person; and they can be applied to Jesus Christ only; and in him they are most exactly fulfilled.

Verse 38. Be it known unto you, therefore] This is the legitimate conclusion: Jesus the Christ must be the very person in whom all the predictions are fulfilled, and the person through whom all the blessings of the covenant must come.

Through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins] Remission of sins, the removal of the power, guilt, and pollution of sin, comes alone through this man, whom ye crucified, and who is risen from the dead.

Verse 39. And by him] On his account, and through him, all that believe in his divine mission, and the end for which he has been manifested, namely, to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself, are justified from all things, from the guilt of all transgressions committed against God; from which ye from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses.

40 Beware, therefore, lest that come upon you, which is spoken of * in the prophets;

41 Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish :
* for I work a work in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you.

42 And when the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the Gentiles besought that these words might be preached to them * the next sabbath.

43 Now when the congregation was broken up, many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas : who, speaking to them, * persuaded them to continue in * the grace of God.

44 And the next sabbath-day came almost the whole city together to hear the word of God.

45 But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy, and * spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming.

46 Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and could not be justified by the law of Moses ; because it is impossible that the blood of bulls and goats, and the ashes of a heifer sprinkling the unclean, or any other rite or service of this kind, could take away sin from the soul, cancel its guilt in the conscience, or make an atonement to the divine justice ; but this is the sacrifice which God has required ; this is every way suited to the end for which it has been instituted ; and this is the sacrifice alone which God can accept.

Verse 40. Beware—lest that come upon you, &c. St. Paul refers to Hab. i. 5-10 ; and in these verses the desolation by the Chaldeans is foretold. Never was there a prophecy more correctly and pointedly applied.

Verse 41. Behold, ye despisers]. There is a remarkable difference here between the Hebrew text in Habakkuk, and that in the Septuagint, which is a little abridged here by St. Paul. The Hebrew reads : Behold, ye among the heathen (nations), and regard, and be astonished ; be astonished, for I am working a work in your days, which, when it shall be told, ye will not credit.

It may be necessary to inquire how St. Luke and the Septuagint should substitute ye despisers, for ye among the heathen, in the Hebrew text ?

My opinion is, that the prophet, instead of bagoyim, among the heathen, wrote bagadim, despisers, or transgressors : a word which differs only in a single letter, daleth, for vau ; the latter of which might easily be mistaken by a transcriber for the other.

The word which we translate perish, signifies more properly disappear, or hide yourselves ; as people, astonished and alarmed at some coming evil, betake themselves to flight, and hide themselves in order to avoid it.

Verse 42. When the Jews were gone out]. On this verse there is a great number of various readings. Several MSS. of great repute, with all the Syriac, the Coptic, Ethiopic, Armenian, Vulgate, and Itala, read, As they were going out, they entreated that these words should be preached unto them in the course of the week, or the next sabbath. The most eminent critics approve of this reading ; indeed it stands on such authority as to render it almost indubitable.

Verse 43. Many of the Jews]. Direct descendants from some of the twelve tribes ; and religious proselytes, heathens who had been converted to Judaism.

Verse 44. Almost the whole city]. Jews, proselytes, and Gentiles, came together to hear this doctrine of God, this divine teaching, by which so many of their kindred and acquaintance had become so wise and happy.

Verse 45. The Jews—were filled with envy]. These could not bear the Gentiles, who believed in Christ, to be equal with them ; and yet, according to the gospel, it was really the case.

Contradicting]. The arguments and statements brought forward by the disciples ; and blaspheming, speaking impiously and injuriously of Jesus Christ.

said, * It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you : but * seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, * we turn to the Gentiles :

47 For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, * I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.

48 And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord : * and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed.

49 And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region.

50 But the Jews stirred up the devout and honourable women, and the chief men of the city, and * raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts.

51 * But they shook off the dust of their feet against them, and came unto Iconium.

52 And the disciples * were filled with joy, and with the Holy Ghost.

Verse 46. Waxed bold]. Having great liberty of speech ; a strong, persuasive, and overpowering eloquence. They had eternal truth for the basis of this discourse ; a multitude of incontestable facts to support it ; and an all-persuading eloquence to illustrate and maintain what they had asserted.

Should first have been spoken to you]. When our Lord gave his apostles their commission to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, he told them they must begin first at Jerusalem, Mark xvi. 15 ; Luke xxiv. 47. Ye put it from you]. Ye disdain this doctrine, and consider it contemptible : so the word is frequently used.

And judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life]. Was this meant as a strong irony ? Or did the apostle mean that, by their words and conduct on this occasion, they had passed sentence on themselves, and, in effect, had decided that they were unworthy of the grace of the gospel ; and God now ratifies that judgment by removing those blessings from them, and sending them to the Gentiles ?

Verse 47. For so hath the Lord commanded us]. The apostles could quote a pertinent scripture for everything they did ; because the outlines of the whole gospel dispensation are founded in the law and the prophets ; and they were now building the church of God according to the pattern shown them in the Mount.

I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles]. This quotation is from Isa. xlix. 6, and was most fully in point.

For salvation unto the ends of the earth.]. The very name of the Messiah, viz., Jesus, announced the design and end of his mission.

Verse 48. As many as were ordained to eternal life believed.]. This text has been most pitifully misunderstood. Many suppose that it simply means that those in that assembly who were fore-ordained, or predestinated by God's decree to eternal life, believed, under the influence of that decree. The word we translate ordained, includes no idea of pre-ordination, or pre-destination of any kind. And, if it even did, it would be rather hazardous to say that all those who believed at this time were such as actually persevered unto the end, and were saved unto eternal life. But, leaving all these precarious matters, what does the word mean ? The verb signifies to place, set, order, appoint, dispose ; hence it has been considered here as implying the disposition or readiness of mind of several persons in the congregation. The Jews contradicted and blasphemed ; the religious proselytes heard attentively, and received the word of life : the one party were utterly indisposed, through their own stubbornness, to receive the gospel ; the others, destitute of prejudice and prepossession, were glad to hear that, in the order of God, the Gentiles were included in the covenant of salvation through Christ Jesus ; they, therefore, in this good state and order of mind, believed.

Verse 50. Devout and honourable women]. It is likely that these were heathen matrons, who had become proselytes to the Jewish religion; and, as they were persons of affluence and respectability, they had considerable influence with the civil magistracy of the place; probably their husbands were of this order.

Verse 51. They shook off the dust of their feet against them] This was a very significant rite. The Jews, when travelling in heathen countries, took care, when they came to the borders of their own, to shake off the dust of their feet, lest any of the unhallowed ground should defile the sacred land of Israel.

Came unto Iconium.] According to Strabo, Iconium was a small fortified town, the capital of Lycaonia, at present called Cogni.

Verse 52. The disciples were filled with joy, and with the Holy Ghost.] Though in the world they had tribulation, yet in Christ they had peace; and, while engaged in their Master's work, they always had their Master's wages.

CHAPTER XIV.

Paul and Barnabas, having preached at Iconium with great success, are persecuted, and obliged to flee to Lystra and Derbe, 1-6. Here they preach, and heal a cripple; on which, the people, supposing them to be gods, are about to offer them sacrifices, and are with difficulty prevented by these apostles, 7-18. Certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, coming thither, induce the people to stone Paul; who, being dragged out of the city as dead, while the disciples stand around him, rises up suddenly, and returns to the city, and the next day departs to Derbe, 19, 20. Having preached here, he and Barnabas return to Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch, confirming the disciples, and ordaining elders in every church, 21-23. They pass through Pisidia and Pamphylia, 24. Through Perga and Attalia, 25; and sail to Antioch in Syria, 26. When, having called the disciples together, they inform them of the door of faith opened to the Gentiles, and there abode a long time with the church, 27, 28.

AND it came to pass in Iconium, that they went both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks, believed.

2 But the unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evil affected against the brethren.

3 Long time therefore abode they speaking boldly in the Lord, * which gave testimony unto the word of his grace, and granted signs and wonders to be done by their hands.

4 But the multitude of the city was divided:

* Matt. xvi. 20. Heb. ii. 4.—* Ch. xiii. 3.

Verse 1. So spake] With such power and demonstration of the Spirit, that a great multitude both of the Jews, genuine descendants of one or other of the twelve tribes, and also of the Greeks, probably such as were proselytes of the gate, believed, received the Christian religion as a revelation from God, and confided in its Author for salvation, according to the apostles' preaching.

Verse 2. Stirred up the Gentiles] Such as were mere heathens, and thus distinguished from the Jews, and the Greeks, who were proselytes.

Evil affected] Irritated or exasperated their minds against the brethren, the disciples of Christ.

Verse 3. Speaking boldly] Having great liberty of speech, a copious and commanding eloquence, springing from a consciousness of the truth which they preached.

And granted signs and wonders to be done] For no apostle could work a miracle by himself; nor was any sign or wonder wrought even by the greatest apostle, but by an especial grant or dispensation of God. This power was not resident in them at all times; it was only now and then communicated, when a miracle was necessary for the confirmation of the truth preached.

Verse 4. An assault made] A desperate attempt was made by their rulers, i. e., by the heathen rulers of the people, and the rulers of the synagogue.

To use them despitefully] To expose them, bring them into contempt, and make them appear as monsters, or movers and part held with the Jews, and part with the apostles.

5 And when there was an assault made both of the Gentiles, and also of the Jews with their rulers, * to use them despitefully, and to stone them,

6 They were ware of it, and * fled unto Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and unto the region that lieth round about:

7 And there they preached the gospel.

8 * And there sat a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, being a cripple from his mother's womb, who never had walked:

9 The same heard Paul speak: who stedfastly of sedition; and then to stone them for this falsely alleged crime.

* 2 Tim. iii. 11.—* Matt. x. 23.—* Ch. iii. 2.

Verse 6. They were ware of it] They were informed of the scheme, and fled unto Lystra and Derbe; they did not leave the province of Lycaonia, but went to other towns and cities. Lystra lay to the south and Derbe to the north of Iconium, according to the general opinion.

Verse 7. And there they preached the gospel.] Wherever they went, they were always employed in their Master's work.

Verse 8. Impotent in his feet] He had no muscular power, and probably his ancle-bones were dislocated; or he had what is commonly termed club-feet; this is the more likely, as he is said to have been lame from his mother's womb, and to have never walked.

Verse 9. That he had faith to be healed] How did this faith come to this poor heathen? Why, by hearing the word of God preached: for it is said, the same heard Paul speak.

Verse 10. He leaped and walked.] Giving the fullest proof of his restoration: his leaping, however, might have been through joy of having received his cure.

Verse 11. Saying, in the speech of Lycaonia] What this language was has puzzled the learned not a little. That it was no dialect of the Greek, must be evident from the circumstance of its being here distinguished from it.

The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men.] The heathen imagined that celestial beings often assumed human forms to visit men, in order to punish the evil and reward beholding him, and *perceiving that he had faith to be healed,

10 Said with a loud voice, ^bStand upright on thy feet. And he leaped, and walked.

11 And when the people saw what Paul had done, they lifted up their voices, saying, in the speech of Lycaonia, "The gods are come down to us" in the likeness of men.

12 And they called Barnabas, Jupiter; and Paul, Mercurius, because he was the chief speaker.

13 Then the priest of Jupiter, which was before their city, brought oxen and garlands unto the gates, and would have done sacrifice with the people.

14 Which when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul heard of, ^cthey rent their clothes, and ran in among the people, crying out, the good. The Metamorphoses of Ovid are full of such visitations; and so are Homer, Virgil, and other poets. The angels visiting Abraham, Jacob, Lot, &c., might have been the foundation on which most of these heathen fictions were built.

Verse 12. They called Barnabas, Jupiter; and Paul, Mercurius] Jupiter was the supreme god of the heathens; and Mercury was by them considered the god of eloquence.

As the ancients usually represented Jupiter as rather an aged man, large, noble, and majestic; and Mercury young, light, and active, the conjecture of Chrysostom is very probable that Barnabas was a large noble, well-made man, and probably in years; and St. Paul, young, active, and eloquent; on which account, they termed the former Jupiter, and the latter Mercury.

Verse 13. Then the priest of Jupiter, which was before their city] Lystra, it appears, was under the guardianship of Jupiter Propulsius, which St. Luke translates, the Jupiter that was before the city, which is another term for Jupiter Custos, or Jupiter the guardian. All these deities, according to the attributes they sustained, had their peculiar priests, rites, and sacrifices; and each a peculiar service and priest for the office he bore; so that Jupiter Brontes, Jupiter the thunderer, had a different service from Jupiter Custos, Jove the guardian.

Oxen and garlands] That is, oxen adorned with flowers, their horns gilded, and neck bound about with fillets, as was the custom in sacrificial rites.

Verse 15. We also are men of like passions with you] The expression means no more than, "we are truly human beings, with the same powers and appetites as your own; need food and raiment as you do; and are all mortal like yourselves."

That ye should turn from these vanities] That is, from these idols and false gods. A bold saying in the presence of a heathen mob, intent on performing an act of their superstitious worship, in which they no doubt thought the safety of the state was concerned.

The living God] Widely different from those stocks and stones which were objects of their worship.

Which made heaven and earth] And as all things were made by his power, so all subsist by his providence; and to him alone all worship, honour, and glory are due.

Verse 16. Who in times past suffered all nations, &c.] The words which we here translate, all nations, should be rendered, all the Gentiles, merely to distinguish them from the Jewish people, who, having a revelation, were not left to walk in their own ways; but the heathens, who had not a revelation, were suffered to form their creed, and mode of worship, according to their own caprice.

Verse 17. He left not himself without witness] Though he gave the Gentiles no revelation of his will, yet he continued to govern them by his gracious providence.

Filling our hearts with food] Giving as much food as could reasonably be wished, so that gladness, or general happiness, was the result.

vanities ^junto the living God, ^kwhich made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein:

16 ^lWho in times past suffered all nations to walk in their own ways.

17 ^mNevertheless he left not himself without witness, in that he did good, and ⁿgave us rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness.

18 And with these sayings scarce restrained they the people, that they had not done sacrifice unto them.

19 ^oAnd there came thither certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, who persuaded the people; ^pand, having stoned Paul, drew him out of the city, supposing he had been dead.

20 Howbeit, as the disciples stood round about him, he rose up, and came into the city: and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe.
